(d) For example, if a certificate provides for payment 5 years after date of issue with interest at a rate of 2½ percent, but also provides for earlier payment after 90 days' written notice with interest at a rate of 2 percent, such a certificate complies with the requirements of this part. Similarly, such a five-year certificate providing for earlier withdrawal after 30 days' written notice with interest at a rate of one percent would meet the requirements of this part.

§ 217.106 Rate of interest on loan secured by time deposit.

(a) An inquiry has been received by the Board concerning the permissible rate of interest under § 217.4(e) on a loan by a member bank to its depositor "upon the security of" his time certificate of deposit. The paragraph provides that the rate of interest on such a loan "shall be not less than 2 percent per annum in excess of the rate of interest on" the deposit.

(b) Briefly, the certificate in question provides for payment 3 years after date of issue with interest at a rate of 2½ percent per annum, but provides for earlier withdrawal of the deposit after 90 days' written notice during either of three successive intervals with interest at a rate progressing from 1 to 1½ to 2 percent per annum, respectively.

(c) As indicated by the interpretation contained in § 217.105, such a certificate complies with the provisions of Part 217. The rate of interest payable to the depositor under the terms of the certificate depends upon which of the withdrawal privileges may be elected by him. Accordingly, the Board is of the view that the rate of interest on a loan upon the security of such a certificate of deposit should be no less than 2 percent per annum in excess of the rate of interest to which the depositor would be entitled if he should exercise the particular withdrawal privilege of the certificate available to him at the time of the maturity of the loan.

§ 217.107 Time deposit, open account, with alternate maturities.

(a) An inquiry has been received by the Board as to whether the principle stated in § 217.105 relating to "time certificates with alternate maturities" is applicable also in the case of a "time deposit, open account" as defined in § 217.1(d).

(b) By way of illustration, the inquiry cited a case in which, by the terms of the contract, the deposit would be payable at a stated maturity of 6 months from the date thereof with interest at a rate of 2½ percent, but with an option on the part of the depositor to withdraw all or part of the deposit at an earlier date either after 30 days' written notice with interest at a rate of 1 percent, or after 90 days' written notice with interest at a rate of 2 percent.

(c) It is the Board's view that such a deposit could properly be classified as a "time deposit, open account" and that the principle stated in § 217.105 with respect to time certificates of deposit would also be applicable to such a time deposit, open account; in other words, that the maximum permissible rate of interest would depend upon which of the alternate withdrawal privileges is elected by the depositor and the rate applicable under this part in the circumstances of the withdrawal privilege so elected. The application of this principle is not affected by the fact that the contract of deposit provides contemporaneous, alternative provisions for withdrawal prior to the stated maturity, either of which the depositor might exercise at his option.

(d) The Board is of the view also that, should the depositor withdraw only a part of the deposit pursuant to exercise of either the 30 days' or the 90 days' written notice provision, it would be permissible for the remainder of the original deposit to bear interest at the 2½ percent rate for the specified maturity of 6 months.

§ 217.108 Payroll deduction savings plan.

(a) The Board of Governors has been requested by a member bank to consider the question whether accounts accepted by the bank under a payroll deduction savings plan, proposed to be established for approximately 2,500 employees of a company, may be classified as "savings deposits" under § 217.1(e).

(b) Under the proposed plan, the company would withhold a specified amount from the weekly pay of each employee participating in the plan and deposit such amount to the credit of the employee in the member bank. Thus, on each weekly pay day the participating employee of the company would receive with his pay check a "savings account card" which would show on its face his name, the account number, date of issue of the card, columns for the entry of deposits and withdrawals, the current account balance, and the following inscriptions:

PASSBOOK

SAVINGS DEPARTMENT

—— Bank and Trust Company, ——, ——

This card must be brought to the bank whenever a deposit is made or money withdrawn. Cards for this account bearing a prior date are hereby cancelled.

Savings account rules and regulations which ordinarily appear on the inside cover of the conventional-type passbook would be printed on the reverse side of the card.

(c) It was explained further that the "savings account cards" would be intended to serve the participating employee-depositors as "savings passbooks" until the following weekly pay day when new cards would be issued; that deposits or withdrawals by an employee-depositor between pay days would be permissible and would be entered by a savings teller on the then current card; that the account balance at the end of each weekly period would be carried over to the new card; and that interest payments and taxes would be computed and posted quarterly. Thus, any particular card would show only the deposits and withdrawals made during the current week, and issuance of a new card would automatically cancel cards previously issued. It appears that the proposed plan has been devised so as to permit the bank to use its IBM punch card equipment for the processing of the deposits.

(d) The definition of the term "savings deposit" in § 217.1(e) requires that the deposit shall be "evidenced by a passbook" which must be presented in connection with each withdrawal, except where payment is made to the depositor himself. The regulation also requires that every withdrawal shall be entered in the passbook. Furthermore, the Board has indicated previously that the term "passbook" as used in this part means an account book in which deposits and withdrawals are entered and that such a book should be a continuing record of the transactions in the account.

(e) The 1933 amendments to section 19 of the Federal Reserve Act prohibited the payment of interest on demand deposits and the payment of time deposits before maturity but did not make those restrictions applicable to savings deposits. Accordingly, savings deposits were made a favored class of deposits in that they became the only type of deposit with respect to which member banks were given the privilege of making payment on demand with interest and, at the same time, of carrying reserves less than those required against demand deposits. The versions of this part immediately following the 1933 amendments stated that a "savings deposit", among other things, was a deposit evidenced by a "passbook or other form of receipt". This was similar to the language already in use in Part 204 of this chapter relating to reserves of member banks. However, these definitions proved inadequate to prevent the favored status of savings deposits from leading to certain abuses, including the classification of checking accounts as savings deposits. It was to prevent such abuses and confusion between classes of deposits that both Part 204 of this chapter and this part were amended in 1936 to provide that a deposit may not be regarded as a savings deposit unless "evidenced by a passbook". These amendments to the regulations recognized that a workable distinction between savings accounts and checking accounts could not be maintained unless the regulatory language was such as to prevent various arrangements which would eliminate the use of passbooks of the kind traditionally a distinguishing mark of savings deposits.

(f) The "savings account card" under consideration appears to differ materially from a passbook as it is generally understood and, accordingly, the Board does not regard such a card as constituting a "passbook" within the meaning of § 217.1(e). Therefore, the accounts as proposed under the plan would not be eligible for classification as "savings deposits".

In two recent cases, the Board was presented with questions as to whether an adjustment in the interest rate charged by a member bank on a loan to its customer involved a payment of interest on a demand deposit in violation of section 19 of the Federal Reserve Act and § 217.2(a). Although somewhat similar superficially, the two cases differed factually and the Board reached different conclusions. The two cases are as follows:

(a) Interest charged borrower on net withdrawable credit. (1) In the first case considered by the Board, it appeared to be contemplated that a member bank would extend credit to a certain Corporation on the basis of certain installment paper received by the bank from the Corporation and that, in calculating the amount of interest payable by the Corporation to the bank, there would first be deducted from the principal amount of the credit the amount of a cash margin or reserve which would be set aside in a demand deposit account with the bank by the Corporation but which apparently would not be subject to withdrawal. For example, if the credit amounted to $100,000, and a cash margin or reserve of $7,500 were set aside, interest at the rate of 4½ percent would be computed on the basis of $92,500.

(2) In its reply, the Board referred to the fact that it has been the Board's general policy for many years not to pass upon the question whether particular practices involve a payment of interest in violation of this part, except after consideration of all the facts and circumstances of a specific case as developed by examinations of the member bank involved, but to rely instead upon the cooperation and good faith of member banks in adapting their practices to conform to the spirit and purpose of the law and the Board's regulation. This policy has proved to be the most feasible basis for dealing with questions of this kind. However, the Board stated that, as it understood the facts in this case, interest is charged by the bank at the agreed rate on the net amount of the credit available for withdrawal, and no interest is charged on that part of the proceeds which is retained by the bank as a "reserve" and set up as a nonwithdrawable deposit. The Board stated, therefore, that this view of the matter, if factually correct, suggested that the proposed arrangement would involve no question as to a payment of interest on the deposit.

(b) Amount paid to borrower for account of depositor. (1) In the other case recently considered by the Board, it appeared that a certain Mortgage Company on the West Coast is engaged in originating and servicing real estate mortgage loans in a given area. After the mortgage loans are in "final form", they are sold by the Mortgage Company to insurance companies, including a certain Life Insurance Company. In most cases, the loans are held by the Mortgage Company from two months to twelve months before they are sold to an insurance company. In order to provide this interim financing, the Mortgage Company borrows continuously from a local national bank through demand notes secured by the real estate loans "in process of completion". The amount of such borrowing was in excess of $1,000,000 from September 1950 to August 1953, and at times has been in the neighborhood of $3,000,000.

(2) The Mortgage Company also services real estate loans for the aforementioned Life Insurance Company. This arrangement involves the collection of interest and principal payments from mortgagors and the accumulation of such collections for periodic transfer to the Life Insurance Company. Prior to 1953, the Mortgage Company from time to time would transfer the balances in its several collection accounts to the Life Insurance Company in New York. Early in 1953, pursuant to its policy of leaving funds on deposit in the localities in which they originate, the Life Insurance Company instructed the Mortgage Company to make the transfers from the collection accounts into a demand account in the above-mentioned national bank in the name of the Life Insurance Company, and this procedure has been followed for the past year or more. A memorandum in the credit files of the national bank dated February 9, 1953, mentions that, under the new arrangement just described, the balance in the Life Insurance Company's account with the bank "will be allowed to build up; and for this reason * * * it has been agreed that we will continue to charge the [Mortgage Company] * * * an interest rate of 4¼ percent but that twice each year—probably July and in January—we will compute the increase in average balance maintained with us by the [Life Insurance Company] and adjust the interest rate paid by the [Mortgage Company] * * * by marking rebate to the latter." A notation in the national bank's credit files dated August 3, 1953, refers to the memorandum just quoted and reiterates that the bank had "agreed to make the [Mortgage Company] * * * a ½ of 1 percent interest adjustment upon net loanable funds derived from additional balances placed with us by the * * * Life Insurance Company." This notation, which is followed by a computation by which the national bank ascertained that the average "Additional Loanable Funds" in the Life Insurance Company's account during the first six months of 1953 amounted to $82,930.67, also stated that "Based upon the above, adjustment of ½ of 1 percent for the six-month period would amount to $207.33, which amount was remitted to the [Mortgage Company] * * * August 11, 1953." The information submitted also showed that in all probability the "refund" for the last six months of 1953 would exceed the amount for the first six months in that year. Although the national bank makes the payment to the Mortgage Company, the Life Insurance Company benefits from the arrangement to the extent that it permits the Mortgage Company, which is producing real estate loans on behalf of the Life Insurance Company, "to continue to function profitably and obtain the required bank credit."

(3) Summarizing the foregoing facts, it appears that the national bank, in consideration of the Life Insurance Company's maintaining an increased demand deposit balance with the bank, has paid to the Mortgage Company ½ percent per annum of the average "Additional Loanable Funds" so maintained on deposit by the Life Insurance Company. In August 1953 such payment was made by the national bank through an actual remittance to the Mortgage Company.

(4) Based on these facts, the Board of Governors expressed the view that the arrangement involves a payment by the national bank for the account of its depositor, the Life Insurance Company, as compensation for the use of funds constituting a demand deposit, and therefore constitutes the payment of interest on a demand deposit by a member bank in violation of section 19 of the Federal Reserve Act and § 217.2(a).

For text of this interpretation, see § 204.105 of this subchapter.

§ 217.111 Savings deposits without passbook.

(a) The Board has received an inquiry as to whether the proposed use by a national bank of a particular form of "Savings Deposit Receipt" complies with the definition of "savings deposit" contained in paragraph (e) of § 217.1, as amended effective May 16, 1955 (20 FR 3305).

(b) The purpose of the May 16, 1955, amendment was to permit member banks, at their option, to classify deposits as "savings deposits," although not evidenced by a passbook. However, any such deposit must be evidenced by a written receipt or agreement, and the deposit must be one in respect to which the depositor is required, or may at any time be required, by the bank to give notice in writing of an intended withdrawal not less than 30 days before such withdrawal is made, and withdrawals are permitted only through payment to the depositor himself but not to any other person whether or not acting for the depositor. Furthermore, the amendment made no change in the classes of persons whose deposits may be classified as "savings deposits".

(c) The "Savings Deposit Receipt" in question certifies that a certain sum has been deposited with the bank by a named depositor. It recites that payment of such amount "will be made to the named depositor" plus interest at 2½ percent per annum from date of the deposit, upon surrender of the receipt; that, upon request, interest will be paid and endorsed upon the receipt every six months; and that the bank shall have the option of redeeming the receipt at any time upon six months' written notice to the depositor. The receipt then states that "The bank reserves the right to require thirty days' prior notice in writing before paying this savings deposit receipt." Finally, the receipt states that it is "non-negotiable." It appears that the receipt constitutes the deposit contract between the bank and the named depositor.

(d) The inquiry explained that the national bank intended to use the savings deposit receipt "only in connection with deposits of school districts and any other savings deposits that might qualify under Regulation Q." The Board has indicated in earlier interpretations that deposits of "school districts" may be classified as "savings deposits."

(e) In the circumstances as outlined in this section, including the specific limitation in the savings deposit receipt that "Payment will be made to the named depositor," the Board is of the view that a deposit represented by the receipt described may be classified as a "savings deposit" under this part.

§ 217.112 Interest on time deposits with alternate maturities.

(a) The Board was asked recently whether four forms of time deposit contracts complied with the requirements of this part. The first was evidenced by a certificate which provided for a maturity 6 months after date of deposit with an option on the part of the depositor to withdraw part or all of the funds, without notice, on the 30th day after the date of deposit, or on the 90th day after the date of deposit, and which provided that funds withdrawn on the 20th day would bear interest at a rate of 1 percent, funds withdrawn on the 90th day would bear interest at a rate of 2 percent, and funds withdrawn at the end of 6 months would bear interest at a rate of 2½ percent.

(b) With respect to the form of certificate in paragraph (a) of this section, the Board referred to its interpretation published as § 217.105 which expressed the view that if a time certificate permits withdrawal either at a specified maturity or prior to such time after a specified period of written notice the maximum rate of interest will depend upon which of such withdrawal privileges is elected by the depositor and the maximum rate applicable under the regulation in the circumstances of the withdrawal privilege so elected. For example, a certificate providing for payment 5 years after date with interest at 2½ percent, but providing also for earlier payment after 90 days' written notice with interest at 2 percent, would comply with the regulation. Such certificate has a single fixed maturity but provides that an earlier maturity may be fixed at the option of the depositor with a resulting reduction in the rate of interest payable.

(c) The Board pointed out that, by contrast, the certificate described in paragraph (a) of this section had several fixed maturities, the first of which was 30 days after date of deposit, so that the deposit when established was payable 30 days after date. Section 217.6 provides that no member bank shall pay interest at a rate in excess of 1 percent per annum on a time deposit having a maturity date less than 90 days after the date of deposit or payable upon written notice of less than 90 days. The Board said that, consequently, the 2 percent and 2½ percent rates of interest provided for under the form of time certificate described in paragraph (a) of this section would be in excess of the maximum rates prescribed by this part.

(d) The second deposit contract on which the Board's views were requested was a 6 months' time deposit with interest at a rate of 2¼ percent but with an alternate fixed maturity of 90 days after date with interest at 2 percent. The third contract represented a deposit payable 11 months after date with interest at a rate of 2⅜ percent but with alternate fixed maturities of 90 days, 4 months, and 5 months, with interest at 2 percent; 6, 7, and 8 months, with interest at 2¼ percent; and 9 and 10 months with interest at 2⅜ percent. The Board stated that the foregoing views expressed with respect to the form of deposit contract described in paragraph (a) of this section were applicable also to the second and third forms of contracts described in this paragraph.

(e) The fourth form of contract represented a time deposit having a fixed maturity dated 6 months after the date of deposit but with an option on the part of the depositor to withdraw a part or all of the funds either on 90 days' advance written notice at a rate of 2 percent, or on 30 days' advance written notice at a rate of 1 percent if withdrawn during the first 90 days or at a rate of 2 percent if withdrawn after the 90th day following the date of deposit. The Board said that such a contract providing for payment of interest at a rate of 2 percent on a deposit withdrawn after 30 days' written notice would not comply with this part.

(f) The Board said that in connection with all four of the forms of deposit contracts described in this section, it is important to bear in mind that the maximum permissible interest rate does not depend upon the length of time the deposit is left with the bank. Where the deposit contract provides a fixed maturity but with an option on the part of the depositor to withdraw after a prescribed period of notice, the maturity is that named in the certificate unless and until the depositor exercises his option to change that maturity, and in that event the maximum interest rate payable will be the rate applicable under the regulation with respect to the period of such notice of withdrawal given by the depositor. Where the certificate itself names alternate fixed maturities, as in three of the certificates discussed in this section, without provision for withdrawal after notice upon the option of the depositor, the certificate must be regarded as maturing at the earliest fixed maturity and, if not withdrawn at that time or at any subsequent fixed maturity, as being automatically renewed until the date of the next following fixed maturity; and the maximum interest rate payable upon withdrawal at any fixed maturity would be the maximum rate applicable under the regulation to the period from the previous automatic renewal to the date of such withdrawal.

§ 217.113 Time certificate of deposit with automatic renewal.

(a) The Board of Governors has been asked to consider whether a proposed certificate which recites that the deposit evidenced thereby would be payable to the depositor on return of the certificate 12 months after date with interest at a certain per cent per annum payable semi-annually, but which contains a legend on the face thereof which states that it is "continuous," that "no renewal is necessary," and refers to the reverse side of the certificate for "further provisions," complies with the provisions of this part.

(b) The reverse side of the certificate recites that it "shall be considered renewed automatically for an additional period of 6 months beyond its original term and thereafter for additional periods each of 6 months; unless presented for redemption within 10 days after the end of the original term or any subsequent term provided for herein, or unless the depositor shall have given written notice to the bank of his desire to redeem this Certificate 30 days prior to the original or any subsequent maturity date." It is recited further that the bank retains the right to redeem the certificate on the original or any subsequent maturity date upon 30 days' prior written notice, and reserves the right to change the interest rate for any subsequent renewal period from time to time upon 30 days' written notice prior to the beginning of such renewal.

(c) The Board would have no objection to the classification of the proposed certificate as a "time certificate of deposit" merely because it would be labeled as a "Savings Certificate." However, for a certificate to be classified as a "time certificate of deposit", § 217.1(c) requires that the provisions of the certificate relating to the manner and terms of payment appear "on its face". The provisions which appears on the reverse side of the certificate with respect to automatic renewal and redemption are of a kind that should appear on the face of the certificate. Otherwise, the Board believes a certificate in the form proposed would be properly classifiable as a "time certificate of deposit" under this part.

(d) Such certificate in no event is payable prior to the expiration of the original 12 months' period or one of the successive renewal periods of 6 months each. Therefore, under the principle applicable to time certificates of deposit with alternate fixed maturities stated in § 217.112, it would be permissible for the certificate in question to bear interest at a rate not to exceed 3 percent per annum. This conclusion would not be affected by the fact that either the bank or the depositor may prevent automatic renewal of the certificate by giving written notice of intended withdrawal or redemption 30 days prior to an automatic renewal date.

(e) The additional fact that the depositor may prevent automatic renewal by presenting the certificate for payment within 10 days after the end of the original term or any subsequent renewal period, would not, in the Board's opinion, be objectionable in view of the principle established by the interpretation published at 1936 Federal Reserve Bulletin 419. Of course, payment of the certificate pursuant to presentment within such 10-day period would preclude the bank from paying interest for any part of such period.

§ 217.114 Grace period for receipt of savings deposits ending on holiday.

(a) The Board's advice has been requested as to whether the 10-calendar-day grace period now permitted by § 217.3(d) in computing the maximum rate of interest on savings deposits, extends to the following business day in the event that the 10th calendar day of the month falls on Saturday, Sunday, or a legal holiday.

(b) This provision was recently liberalized so as to allow a grace period of 10 calendar days rather than 5 business days in every calendar month. It was recognized that the amendment would have a slightly restrictive effect in the case of months commencing a regular quarterly or semi-annual interest period in which deposits formerly could be received through the 10th business day, but, as stated above, the general effect was of a liberalizing nature. The Board believes that 10 calendar days is sufficient time to permit a customer to make a deposit in a savings account and receive interest at the maximum rate for the entire month. Therefore, the Board does not believe that further days of grace should be allowed when the 10th calendar day falls on Saturday, Sunday, or a legal holiday.

§ 217.115 Time of receipt of savings deposit for grace period purposes.

(a) Paragraph (d) of § 217.3 provides that a member bank may pay interest on a savings deposit received during the first 10 calendar days of any calendar month at the applicable maximum rate prescribed by the Regulation from the first day of such calendar month until such deposit is withdrawn or ceases to constitute a savings deposit, whichever shall first occur. The opinion of the Board of Governors has been requested as to whether deposits received under the following circumstances will be eligible to receive interest from the first of the month:

(1) Mail deposits postmarked the 10th or earlier;

(2) Deposits received in the "drop box" located in the bank lobby and opened the morning of the 11th;

(3) Deposits received in the night depository and opened the morning of the 11th;

(4) Collections outstanding until the 11th or a subsequent date;

(5) Auto bank deposits not received in the savings department until the morning of the 11th;

(6) Transfers from branches received at the Main Office on the 11th;

(7) Inter-department credits held over until the 11th due to late hour business.

(b) As to the first situation, it is the Board's opinion that the postmark does not determine when the deposit is delivered to the bank; that is, received by it. The customer adopts the post office as his agent and, therefore, must rely upon such agent making the deposit within the first 10 calendar days.

(c) In the second and third situations, deposit in the drop box or night depository during the first 10 calendar days amounts to receipt by the bank and the day the bank opens the drop box or night depository does not change this. An extreme situation would be when the 10th day is Saturday and the drop box or night depository is not opened until Monday, the 12th. Although a deposit may possibly have been made on the 11th, the bank might reasonably assume that the deposit was made within the 10 calendar days.

(d) As to the fourth situation, items received for collection on or before the 10th calendar day may be included although final credit is not given until after the 10th day.

(e) In situations five, six, and seven, if the deposit is delivered to the bank, branch, or any office thereof by the 10th calendar day, interest may be credited from the 1st day of the month regardless of when the item is processed and credit is given.

§ 217.116 Monthly payment by check of interest on deposits.

(a) The Board has recently considered the question whether a member bank's plan for payment of interest on a one-year time certificate of deposit conforms with the requirements of Part 217. Under this plan the bank would pay interest monthly by means of check in an amount equal to one-twelfth of the amount that would have been paid for the year if the bank had compounded interest quarterly at the maximum permissible rate of 3 percent.

(b) Section 217.6 prohibits a member bank from paying interest on a savings deposit or on a time deposit having a maturity of 6 months or more "at a rate in excess of 3 percent per annum, compounded quarterly, regardless of the basis upon which such interest may be computed." A footnote states that this limitation "is not to be interpreted as preventing the compounding of interest at other than quarterly intervals, provided that the aggregate amount of such interest so compounded does not exceed the aggregate amount of interest at the rate above prescribed when compounded quarterly."

(c) These provisions in effect permit a member bank to pay interest in an amount somewhat greater than that paid on a straight 3 percent basis if the bank's practice is to compound interest, provided that on whatever basis interest is compounded the amount "so compounded" does not exceed the amount that would have been paid at the maximum rate when compounded quarterly. The regulation does not prevent a member bank from paying interest monthly by check instead of compounding interest. However, the regulation does not contemplate payment of interest in excess of a straight or simple rate of 3 percent except where it is paid on interest left in the account, that is, where interest is compounded. Accordingly, a plan under which monthly payments are made by check in an amount equal to one-twelfth of the amount that would have been paid for a year if the bank had compounded interest quarterly at a rate of 3 percent would not be in accordance with the regulation.

(d) The same principles would, of course, apply to monthly payments of interest by check on a time deposit having a maturity of less than 6 months and on which the maximum permissible rate would be 2½ percent or 1 percent. They would equally apply to monthly payments of interest on savings deposits.

§ 217.117 Absorption of exchange charged as payment of interest.

(a) The Board has had occasion to consider whether certain practices involving the absorption of exchange charges constitute the payment by a Federal Reserve member bank of interest on demand deposits in violation of this Part 217 and section 19 of the Federal Reserve Act.

(b) One question was whether such absorption would constitute the payment of interest on demand deposits when the amounts absorbed by a member bank are claimed to be less than the cost of collecting them from depositors. Another question was whether a member bank would be paying interest on demand deposits if it maintained balances with another bank or banks in return for which such other bank or banks directly or indirectly would absorb for it exchange charges made by the drawee banks.

(c) Upon a careful review of the subject, the Board has concluded that both these practices should be deemed to be the payment of interest on demand deposits in violation of this Part 217 and section 19 of the Federal Reserve Act. In other words, the payment of interest includes any direct or indirect payment or absorption of exchange charges by any device whatsoever, regardless of whether such payment or absorption is made directly by a member bank or indirectly through any other bank for a member bank or a depositor of such member bank. This principle will be applied hereafter by examiners for the Federal Reserve Banks in their examinations of State member banks and the Comptroller of the Currency has advised that it will be applied by national bank examiners in their examinations of national banks.

(d) In reaching this conclusion the Board has carefully reexamined earlier interpretations on the subject, and this interpretation supersedes all such earlier interpretations, including those published in the 1944 Federal Reserve Bulletin, p. 339, and 1945 Federal Reserve Bulletin, p. 564.

§ 217.118 Absorption of intangible personal property tax on bank deposits.

(a) The Board of Governors has been asked to consider the question whether the payment, by banks in a certain State that are members of the Federal Reserve System, of the State's intangible personal property tax on bank deposits would be an indirect payment of interest on such deposits within the purview of section 19 of the Federal Reserve Act.

(b) The Board has heretofore considered other State laws which specifically require all banks to pay such taxes in the first instance, although the banks may, if they wish, obtain reimbursement from the depositors. In those cases, the Board has taken the position that payment of the tax by a member bank would not constitute an indirect payment of interest on deposits.

(c) The State statute under consideration does not require, or apparently even contemplate, that banks will pay these taxes and, therefore, may not seem closely analogous to the statutes considered previously. However, there is very little difference between a bank being required to pay the tax but not demanding reimbursement and a bank voluntarily paying the tax and also not seeking reimbursement. Therefore, for the sake of uniformity and to avoid individual decisions based upon the wording of particular State laws, the Board has concluded that the absorption by a member bank of intangible personal property tax upon a bank deposit should not be considered a payment of interest on such deposit within the meaning of section 19 of the Federal Reserve Act regardless of whether the tax is levied against the bank or the depositor.

§ 217.119 Associated Hospital Service ineligible to maintain savings account.

(a) The Board of Governors has been requested to give its opinion on the question whether Associated Hospital Service of a particular city is eligible to maintain a savings account. It is understood that the Association is a nonprofit corporation that operates a plan whereby hospitalization is provided for subscribers to such plan by any hospital with which the Association has a contract.

(b) A savings deposit is defined in § 217.1(e) as a fund deposited to the credit of one or more individuals, or of a corporation, association, or other organization operated primarily for religious, philanthropic, charitable, educational, fraternal, or other similar purposes and not operated for profit.

(c) It is urged that the Association is eligible to maintain a savings account since it is a nonprofit organization and the statute under which it is organized provides that such corporations are "hereby declared to be charitable and benevolent institutions, and all of their funds and investments shall be exempt from taxation by the Commonwealth and its political subdivisions."

(d) There is no indication that the Association is operated for charitable purposes even though the organic Act declares it to be a charitable institution. A plan for hospital insurance and medical and surgical benefits is provided for subscribers thereto and no element of charity is present. The insurance risk in such plans is usually determined on an actuarial basis and payments by subscribers are based upon disbursements by the Association computed upon such basis and past experience. Therefore, the Board is of the opinion that Associated Hospital Service is similar to other mutual insurance plans which the Board has held to be ineligible to maintain savings accounts in member banks.

(a) In an interpretation of August 4, 1960, published at 25 FR 7620, the Board expressed the opinion that any absorption by member banks of exchange charges would constitute the payment of interest on demand deposits, including an arrangement whereby a member bank maintained a balance with another bank in return for which such other bank directly or indirectly absorbed for it exchange charges made by drawee banks.

(b) The Board has been asked to reconsider the application of the interpretation in certain situations said to involve relatively small amounts of exchange charges and those where the cost of collection is said to exceed the amount of the charges. The Board of Governors, the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation have decided to undertake a study to obtain additional information. In connection therewith, a survey will be made of a number of institutions in each Federal Reserve District on a spot-check basis.

(c) Further consideration will be given the subject in the light of the findings of the survey. In the meantime, and as a tentative authorization, to be applicable only during the pendency of the study and the reaching of a final determination, member banks are authorized to absorb exchange charges in amounts aggregating not more than $2 for any one depositor in any calendar month or any regularly established period of 30 days.

(d) Member banks, both State and national, will be expected to conform to the August 4, 1960, interpretation as herein modified.

(a) Regulation Q, Payment of Interest on Deposits, permits a member bank to classify as "savings deposits" funds of individuals and certain types of corporations that are held by the bank, evidenced only by a written receipt or agreement, provided "withdrawals are permitted only through payment to the depositor himself but not to any other person whether or not acting for the depositor." The purpose of this prohibition is to eliminate the so-called "agency privilege." The reason for this is that withdrawal by an agent of the depositor merely by presenting a "written receipt or agreement" for a specific amount deposited with the bank could result in the use of such deposits, in effect, as checking accounts.

(b) For example, in lieu of taking one "receipt" for his deposit of, say, $100, the depositor could request 20 receipts for $5 each. Then, when he wished to pay a bill, he could hand his creditor sufficient receipts and the latter, as his "agent", could present them for payment. This procedure is possible with a savings deposit evidenced by a pass book, but the cumbersome procedure of turning the pass book over to a third party is a deterrent to the use of such savings accounts for checking purposes. At least not more than one so-called check could be outstanding against the savings account at any time, because the depositor would have to regain the pass book before turning it over to another person for a second withdrawal of funds.

§ 217.124 Rate of interest on interest compounded quarterly at maximum rate.

(a) The views of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System have been requested as to whether, in paying interest on a savings account at 4 percent, compounded quarterly, interest paid on interest may be computed at the 4-percent rate since the basic interest credited to the account quarterly will, of course, not have been on deposit for 12 months.

(b) It is provided in § 217.6 that "No member bank shall pay interest accruing at a rate in excess of 4 percent perannum, compounded quarterly, regardless of the basis upon which such interest may be computed", on that portion of the deposit that has remained on deposit for not less than 12 months. This permits a member bank, under certain circumstances, to pay interest at a rate of 4 percent, compounded quarterly. Therefore when a member bank, pursuant to this authority, agrees to pay interest on a 12-month deposit at a rate of 4 percent, compounded quarterly, the bank is obligated to compute the interest on the interest at 4 percent.

(c) In compounding interest, the interest being credited to the account quarterly is not treated the same as a new deposit; on such a deposit, interest would be restricted to a rate of 3½ percent until the funds have remained on deposit for 12 months at which time they become eligible for the so-called retroactive bonus of ½ percent. It has been recognized (§ 217.116) that in compounding interest, a bank is permitted to pay interest in an amount slightly greater than that paid on a straight yearly percentage basis.

§ 217.131 Exchange of 12-month certificate of deposit for 90-day certificate.

The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System has been requested for an opinion on whether outstanding time certificates of deposit with maturities of 12 months or more and paying interest at the rate of 4 percent per annum, may be exchanged for new certificates having maturities of 90 days or more and bearing interest at the 4 percent rate now permitted on deposits of such maturities. In the Board's opinion, the exchange of an outstanding time certificate with a maturity of 12 months or more for a certificate having a maturity of 90 days or more that would mature prior to the maturity date of the original certificate, would constitute the payment of a time deposit before maturity in violation of section 19 of the Federal Reserve Act and Regulation Q, as it would, in effect, permit the depositor to withdraw his initial deposit before 12 months have elapsed.

(a) The opinion of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System has been requested as to whether the authority under section 19 of the Federal Reserve Act to define "savings deposits" and the definition of that term, as contained in this part, which limits savings deposits to individuals and certain types of organizations, are affected by Pub. L. 88-16 of May 8, 1963, which amended section 47 of the Bankruptcy Act (11 U.S.C. 75(a)(2)) so as to authorize trustees in bankruptcy to "deposit all money received by them in designated depositories initially in demand deposits; and subsequently, if authorized by the court, in interest-bearing savings deposits, time certificates of deposit, or time deposits-open account;".

(b) Prior to this amendment to the Bankruptcy Act, trustees in bankruptcy were required by judicial decisions to obtain creditors' consent to make other than demand deposits. There is nothing in the legislative history of this amendment to indicate that its purpose was more than to eliminate the need for creditors' consent for deposits in interest-bearing savings or time deposits. In the absence of any evidence of intent to modify section 19 of the Federal Reserve Act and the Board's authority thereunder, it is the opinion of the Board that the definition of savings deposits in Part 217 has not been affected by this amendment to the Bankruptcy Act.

(c) Under paragraph (1)(i) of § 217.1 (e), a "savings deposit" must be (1) a deposit to the credit of one or more individuals or certain types of organizations or (2) a deposit as to which the "entire beneficial interest" is held by individuals or such organizations. A trustee in bankruptcy holds the assets of the bankrupt estate for the benefit of the bankrupt's creditors. Accordingly, it is the Board's opinion that a deposit by a trustee in bankruptcy may not be classified as a savings deposit under Part 217 except in those rare instances in which all of the bankrupt's creditors are individuals or organizations of the types described in the regulatory definition of a "savings deposit."

(d) It would be permissible, of course, for funds of a trustee in bankruptcy to be classified as time deposits under Part 217. In this connection, it may be noted that, as a result of the action taken by the Board of Governors and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation on July 17, 1963, member and nonmember insured banks could now pay interest at a rate up to 4 percent on a time deposit of a trustee in bankruptcy having a maturity of not less than 90 days.

(a) The opinion of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System has been requested as to whether a member bank may permit the immediate withdrawal of time or savings deposits when the bank has absorbed another bank by merger and depositors common to both banks have such accounts in the resulting bank in excess of $10,000, the amount covered by deposit insurance.

(b) If such accounts are represented by time certificates, it is questionable whether the circumstances described would constitute an "emergency" under § 217.4(d) where payment before maturity would be necessary to prevent "great hardship" to the depositor. However, in view of the equities of the situation, the Board would not object to a liberal interpretation of this provision of the regulation. Attention is called to the fact that in connection with such a withdrawal the depositor must forfeit up to three months of accrued and unpaid interest. Thus, in the case presented, the depositor would have the choice of allowing funds in excess of $10,000 to remain on deposit without the benefit of insurance, or withdrawing the funds at a sacrifice of some interest.

(c) If the two accounts are in the form of savings deposits, and if the bank permits the withdrawal of savings deposits without requiring advance written notice, the customer could withdraw any part of his savings deposit at any time and the bank, if it wishes, could pay accrued interest up to the time of the withdrawal.

§ 217.134 Interest on time certificate falling due on holiday.

(a) The opinion of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System has been requested on the question whether an extra day's interest may be paid by a member bank on a time certificate of deposit which falls due on a day declared by State law to be a legal holiday.

(b) It is provided in § 217.3(f) that after the date of "maturity" of any time deposit such deposit is a demand deposit and no interest may be paid thereon for any period subsequent to the date of maturity.

(c) The date on which an obligation is due and payable is, of course, determined by the terms of the contract subject to State law, and in most jurisdictions an obligation falling due on a Sunday or a holiday comes due on the next succeeding business day. As far as this Part 217 is concerned, the "maturity" of a time certificate is the day it is legally due and payable; and the funds represented thereby do not become a demand deposit until after that date. Accordingly, where a certificate by its terms falls due on a Sunday or a holiday and under State law is due and payable on the next succeeding business day, this Part 217 would not preclude payment of interest on the deposit until and including the day on which it is so payable.

§ 217.135 Savings accounts by corporations operated for profit prohibited.

(a) The Board of Governors has received inquiries regarding an interpretation issued by the Comptroller of the Currency under date of December 19, 1963, to the effect that "a national bank may * * * accept savings accounts without regard to whether the funds deposited are to the credit of one or more individuals or of a corporation, association, or other organization, whether operated for profit or otherwise."

(b) As members of the Federal Reserve System, national banks are subject to the provisions of section 19 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 371a, 371b) which prohibit member banks from paying interest, directly or indirectly, on any demand deposit and which require the Board of Governors to limit the rate of interest that may be paid by such banks on time and savings deposits. To this end, it is necessary to define the terms "demand deposits" and "savings deposits"; and the law (12 U.S.C. 461) expresaly authorizes the Board of Governors to define such terms and to prescribe regulations to effectuate the purposes of the statute and prevent evasions.

(c) This Part 217 defines a "savings deposit" in a manner that permits such deposits to be made only by individuals or by corporations, associations, and other organizations which are not operated for profit but for religious, philanthropic, charitable, educational, fraternal, or similar purposes. This definition has been in effect since 1936.

(d) Accordingly a deposit by a corporation operated for profit may not be classified by any member bank, including a national bank, as a savings deposit. Unless such a deposit comes within the definition of a "time deposit" it would constitute a demand deposit under this Part 217 and payment of interest on such deposit by a national bank would violate the prohibition of the law against payment of interest on demand deposits.

(e) Failure of a national bank to comply with provisions of the Federal Reserve Act constitutes grounds for instituting legal proceedings to close the bank. The law also provides that any director of a national bank participating in or assenting to a violation shall be personally liable for any damages that may be sustained by the bank, its shareholders, or any other persons in consequence of the violation.

(f) In addition, Part 204 of this subchapter, relating to reserves required to be maintained by member banks in the Federal Reserve System, contains a definition of savings deposits identical to that of this Part 217. No deposit of a business corporation in a member bank may be classified as a savings deposit for reserve purposes and, unless it falls within the definition of a time deposit, a national bank must maintain against such a deposit the reserves applicable to demand deposits (16½ percent for reserve city banks and 12 percent for other member banks), rather than those applicable to time and savings deposits (4 percent for all member banks). Classification of such a deposit as a savings deposit would violate Part 204 of this subchapter and subject the member bank to a penalty for any resulting reserve deficiency.

[29 FR 398, Jan. 16, 1964]

§ 217.136 Deposit contract providing for three months' maturity with option to withdraw on ninety days' notice.

(a) The Board of Governors has recently considered an inquiry as to whether a deposit contract of the following nature complies with this part.

(b) The contract provides in effect that each deposit will mature 3 months after deposit, except that the whole or any part of the deposit may be withdrawn "before such maturity" at the expiration of either 90 days' or 30 days' written notice; that any part not withdrawn at maturity or pursuant to notice of withdrawal will be deemed to be redeposited for an additional 3-month period dating from the end of the original period, subject to the same terms and conditions; and that, if not withdrawn, the deposit will be similarly renewed for successive 3-month periods up to an aggregate period of 2 years. Interest would be paid at a rate of 4 percent (the maximum rate currently permitted by this part in the case of time deposits maturing in 90 days or more), except that, if withdrawn pursuant to 30 days' notice, the rate would be one percent per annum (the maximum rate in the case of time deposits maturing in less than 90 days) from the beginning of the "renewal period" in which the deposit is withdrawn.

(c) Where a time deposit contract provides for payment on a specified maturity date and also affords the depositor the alternative of withdrawing the deposit pursuant to a notice of withdrawal, the two withdrawal privileges are incompatible if the depositor gives a notice of withdrawal that would expire after the specified maturity date, unless the giving of such notice is regarded as equivalent to an extension of the specified maturity and as supplanting that maturity. In other words, as applied to the form of deposit contract above described, if the deposit is initially made on January 1 to mature on March 31 (that is, after 90 days), and if on March 1 the depositor gives 90 days' notice of withdrawal, so that the period of such notice would expire after the original maturity date, the March 1 notice of withdrawal would not be revocable but must be construed as extending the maturity of the deposit from March 31 to May 29. Any other construction of such a contract would have the effect of permitting a member bank to agree to pay interest at a rate of 4 percent on a deposit that could be withdrawn within less than 90 days.

§ 217.137 Member bank participation in "Federal funds" market.

(a) Since the adoption of § 217.1(f) in 1966, an exemption from Regulation Q has existed for member bank obligations in nondeposit form to another bank. As used in such exemption, "bank" includes a member bank, a nonmember commercial bank, a savings bank (mutual or stock), a building or savings and loan association or cooperative bank, the Export-Import Bank of the United States, Minbanc Capital Corp., a foreign bank, or a credit union. It also includes bank subsidiaries that engage in business in which their parents are authorized to engage and subsidiaries the stock of which is by statute explicitly eligible for purchase by national banks. These institutions are considered to be "banks" also for the purposes of Regulation D (12 CFR Part 204).

(b) To assure that the exemption for liabilities to banks is not used as a means by which nonbanks may arrange through a bank to "sell" Federal funds to a member bank that are not subject to Regulations D and Q, obligations within the exemption must be issued to another bank for its own account. In view of this requirement, a member bank that "purchases" Federal funds should take such action as may be necessary to ascertain the character (not necessarily the identity) of the actual "seller" in order to justify classification of its liability on the transaction as "Federal funds purchased" rather than as a deposit. Any bank that has given general assurance to a member bank that sales by it of Federal funds ordinarily will be for its own account and thereafter executes such transactions for the account of others, should disclose the nature of the actual lender with respect to each such transaction. If it fails to do so, the selling bank would be deemed by the Board as indirectly violating section 19 of the Federal Reserve Act and Regulation Q.

(c) Also to assure the effectiveness of the limitations on persons who sell Federal funds to member banks, the amended § 217.1(f) applies to nondocumentary obligations undertaken by a member bank to obtain funds for use in its banking business, as well as to documentary obligations. In recent months a number of banks have made the Federal funds market available to business corporations. In some cases this has been on the basis of book entries, in which no instrument is involved. Under the amendment, a bank's liability under informal arrangements as well as those formally embodied in a document are within the coverage of § 217.1(f).

(d) The expansion of § 217.1(f) to nondocumentary obligations does not mean that every bank liability on a transaction that results in the bank obtaining funds is a deposit. An indorser's or conditional liability such as arises when a bank sells a loan with recourse need not be classified as a deposit liability. Also, a bank's liability on an acceptance that it sells in the market is not a deposit liability under the amendment.

(e) It should also be noted that when a member bank issues an obligation principally for a purpose other than as a means of obtaining funds to be used in its banking business—such as usually would be the case with respect to a due bill issued to evidence the bank's liability to deliver securities or foreign exchange sold—it need not classify its liability thereon as a deposit. However, the circumstances surrounding an obligation issued ostensibly for a purpose other than obtaining funds for use in the ordinary course of business may cause an obligation to become subject to Regulation Q—for example, if the bank's liability on a due bill extended beyond a period exceeding that necessary to complete the securities sale, or if the bank paid interest to the customer in excess of the amount that accrued on the securities sold during the delay in delivery.

§ 217.138 Nonbank participation in "Federal funds" market.

(a) The Board has recently considered whether the use of "interbank loan participations" ("IBLPs"), which involves participation by nonbank third parties in Federal funds transactions, comes within the exemption from "deposit" classification for certain obligations between banks contained in § 204.1(f) of Regulation D and § 217.1(f) of Regulation Q. An IBLP transaction is one through which a bank that has sold Federal funds to another bank, subsequently "sells" or participates out its loan contract to a nonbank third party without notifying the bank that has "purchased" its funds.

(b) The Board's 1970 interpretation regarding Federal funds transactions (§ 217.137) clarifies the meaning of "bank" as that term is used in the exemption for liabilities to banks. Paragraph (b) of that interpretation states that the purpose of requiring that interbank transactions be issued to another bank for its own account, in order to come within the nondeposit exemption, is "to assure that the exemption for liabilities to banks is not used as a means by which nonbanks may arrange through a bank to 'sell' Federal funds to a member bank that are not subject to Regulations D and Q". The Board regards transactions which result in third parties gaining access to the Federal funds interbank loan market as contrary to the interbank exemption contained in § 217.1(f) of Regulation Q, and § 204.1(f) of Regulation D regardless of whether the nonbank third party is a party to the initial interbank transaction or thereafter becomes a participant in the transaction through purchase of all or part of the obligation held by "selling" bank.

(c) The Board regards the notice requirements set out in § 217.137 as applicable to IBLP-type transactions as described herein so that a bank "selling" Federal funds must provide to the purchasing bank (1) notice of its intention, at the time of the initial transaction, to sell or participate out its loan contract to a nonbank third party, and (2) full and prompt notice whenever it (the "selling" bank) subsequently sells or participates out its loan contract to a non-bank third party.

§ 217.139 Explanatory statement regarding maximum interest rates on deposits.

(a) The following comments are intended to answer certain questions in connection with changes in the maximum permissible rates of interest that member banks may pay on time and savings deposits under the revision of § 217.6 (Supplement to Regulation Q) that became effective November 24, 1964.

(b) Time certificates of deposit issued prior to November 24, 1964, may be amended by a member bank, if desired, to bear interest up to the new applicable increased maximum rates for any period subsequent to that date. For example, a certificate dated July 1, 1964, maturing July 1, 1965, may be amended to bear interest up to a rate of 4½ percent for any period subsequent to November 24, 1964. (As hereafter noted, the rate would be subject to any restrictions imposed by applicable State law.)

(c) While the revised § 217.6, like the section previously in effect, fixes a maximum rate of interest that may be paid on any time deposit having a maturity of less than 90 days, the section must, of course, be read in connection with the other provisions of this part. A deposit with a maturity of less than 30 days would not constitute a "time deposit" within the meaning of the provisions of § 217.1 and, unless it met the definition of a savings deposit, the deposit would constitute a demand deposit upon which the payment of interest would not be permissible.

(d) The new maximum rates are not retroactive. Consequently, a savings deposit that has remained on deposit for less than 12 months prior to November 24, 1964, may bear interest at a rate up to not more than 4 percent for any period beginning with such date but may not bear interest at a rate in excess of 3½ percent for any period prior to such date, except that, if and when a savings deposit, which was in the bank prior to November 24, 1964, has remained in the bank for a full 12-month period, interest may then be adjusted to provide a yield of not more than 4 percent from the date of the deposit.

(e) It should be borne in mind that State member banks are subject also to any provisions of State law or regulations thereunder that prescribe maximum rates of interest that they may pay on time and savings deposits, and in some cases State-prescribed rates may be less than the maximum rates prescribed by the Board. In addition, under section 24 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 371), national banks may not pay interest on time or savings deposits at a rate in excess of the highest rate authorized by State law to be paid upon such deposits by State banks or trust companies.

(f) It should be emphasized that § 217.6 prescribes only maximum rates of interest that member banks may pay on time and savings deposits. Member banks are free, of course, to pay lower interest rates if they so desire.

[29 FR 16317, Dec. 5, 1964]

§ 217.140 Reduction in rate of interest on time deposit during period of loan made on security of such deposit.

(a) The opinion of the Board of Governors has been requested with respect to loans by a member bank secured by time deposits in such bank. It is stated that many banks are now paying interest on time deposits at the maximum rate of 4½ percent, and the legal rate of interest in some States for ordinary bank loans is fixed by statute at 6 percent. The specific question is whether the bank may make the loan as § 217.4(e) requires a member bank to charge a rate of interest not less than 2 percent in excess of the rate of interest paid on its time deposit when such deposit is used as security for a loan.

(b) Section 19 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 371b) prohibits member banks from paying any time deposit before its maturity, except upon such conditions and in accordance with such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Board. The above-mentioned § 217.4 (e) is intended to implement the law and prevent evasion thereof. The specified 2 percent penalty is designed to discourage loans on time deposits that would, in effect, enable the depositor to obtain his funds before maturity. For this reason, retention of the 2 percent differential seems desirable.

(c) Since banks in some States are prohibited from charging more than 6 percent on loans, a member bank in such States that pays 4½ percent on a time deposit may not make a loan on such deposit without violating this part. However, there is nothing in the regulation to prevent a bank and its customer from agreeing to the payment of a lesser rate of interest on the deposit while a loan on the deposit is outstanding. Therefore, by agreement, the rate of interest paid on the deposit could be reduced to 4 percent during the period of the loan, with interest on the loan fixed at 6 percent. This would not be a circumvention of this part as the customer would still be paying 2 percent more interest on the loan than he would receive on the deposit. The rate of interest that the bank could pay on the deposit before and after the loan would not be affected.

§ 217.141 Maximum interest rates on multiple maturity time deposits.

The Board has considered the following questions regarding the interpretation of § 217.6 (the Supplement to Regulation Q), as revised July 20, 1966, relating to maximum rates of interest payable to member banks on time and saving deposits:

(a) Under § 217.6, a member bank may pay interest at a rate not exceeding 5 percent on a multiple maturity time deposit made on or after July 20 which is payable only 90 days or more after the date of deposit or 90 days or more after the last preceding date on which it might have been paid; and it may pay interest at a rate not exceeding 4 percent on a multiple maturity deposit which is payable less than 90 days after the date of deposit or less than 90 days after the last preceding date on which it might have been paid. Accordingly, if a deposit is payable, at the depositor's option, either after 90 days' notice or after 30 days' notice, the maximum interest rate permitted under § 217.6 is 4 percent, whether the deposit is paid after 90 days' or 30 days' notice. In this respect, revised § 217.6 makes inapplicable previous interpretations of the Board (e.g., § 217.105) to the effect that, if a deposit has alternative maturities, the maximum interest rate depends upon the alternative actually elected by the depositor.

(b) Question has been raised as to the applicability of revised § 217.6 to time deposits, open account, under contracts entered into prior to July 20, 1966. As stated in revised § 217.6, the 5 percent and 4 percent maximum rates apply to multiple maturity time deposits received on or after July 20, 1966. If, as is usually the case, a contract evidencing a time deposit, open account, provides that the contract may be canceled or terminated by the bank or that the rate of interest is subject to change by the bank on its own initiative or in order to comply with regulations of the Board, the bank must take action as soon as possible to bring the contract within the requirements of revised § 217.6 with respect to deposits received on or after July 20, 1966. In this connection, attention is called to § 217.3(b), which provides that "every member bank shall take such action as may be necessary, as soon as possible consistently with its contractual obligations, to bring all of its outstanding certificates of deposit or other contracts into conformity with the provisions" of this Part 217. Only in the rare case in which a contract entered into prior to July 20, 1966, obligates the bank to accept deposits in the account and pay a specified rate of interest thereon, without any right to modify such obligations, may the bank pay the contract rate of interest on deposits received after that date if such rate is higher than the maximum rate prescribed by § 217.6 for the particular type of multiple maturity deposit.

(c) Question has been raised as to whether a certificate of deposit issued prior to July 20, 1966, providing for automatic renewal every 90 days and specifying a 5 percent interest rate, may be amended after that date to provide for an interest rate in excess of 5 percent. With respect to deposits received before July 20, 1966, § 217.6 permits continued payment of interest at the rate being paid on that date, but it precludes any increase in the rate on such deposits above the maximum prescribed for deposits received on or after that date. Accordingly, the bank could not, under revised § 217.6, pay interest at a rate in excess of 5 percent on or after July 20. (This principle applies also to time deposits, open account.)

(d) Interest credited after July 20, 1956, on multiple maturity time deposits received before that date need not be regarded as a "deposit" received on or after that date but may be assimilated into the underlying pre-July 20 deposits on which the bank may continue to pay the rate of interest specified in the contract.

(a) Interest at the rate of 5 percent. From time to time the Board of Governors receives inquiries relating to the payment of interest of 5 percent per annum on "multiple maturity time deposits" as defined in § 217.1(g) of Regulation Q. In view of the variety of deposit contracts that have come into use in recent years, the Board considers it advisable to clarify, for banks and their depositors, certain limitations on the authority of a member bank to pay 5 percent interest on funds deposited with it. The underlying principle is that a member bank may pay interest on a multiple maturity time deposit at the rate of 5 percent only if the deposit is payable at intervals of at least 90 days.

(b) 90-day certificate of deposit. One major category of multiple maturity time deposits is certificates of deposit that (1) mature on a series of specified dates or (2) are automatically renewed at maturity without any action by the depositor. Certificates that mature at specified dates that are 90 days apart and certificates that mature 90 days after the date of issuance and are automatically renewable for successive 90-day periods until the depositor withdraws his funds constitute multiple maturity time deposits in certificate form with the shortest intervals between payment dates that are permissible if interest thereon is to be paid at a rate of 5 percent.

(c) 90-day notice account. (1) Another major category of multiple maturity time deposits is deposits that are payable only after written notice of withdrawal. Such deposits may be in the form of a passbook or otherwise. Funds may be added to the account either at specified times or whenever the depositor wishes, depending on the terms of the contract.

(2) A member bank may pay interest at the rate of 5 percent on funds in such an account, on two conditions. The first is that funds must not be withdrawable within 90 days of the date they are deposited. The second is that funds must not be withdrawable less than 90 days after the date of written notice of intention to withdraw. In other words, a member bank may pay 5 percent only on deposits that are payable solely at intervals of at least 90 days.

(3) If a depositor gives 90-days' notice of intention to withdraw and then decides that he will not need the funds at the specified date, he may cancel his notice, either explicitly, or impliedly by a new 90-day notice. He may not, however, retain his right to withdraw at the expiration of the first notice while giving a simultaneous or subsequent notice, unless the latter expires at a date at least 90 days after the expiration of the first.

(d) 90-day notice account coupled with provision for automatic renewal. (1) Recently, a few banks have offered a 5 percent multiple maturity time deposit contract that authorizes withdrawal by the depositor on more than one basis. For example, the contract may provide that funds received on or before January 1 may be withdrawn March 31 and, with respect to funds not withdrawn on that date, the deposit will be automatically renewed until June 30, and so forth. The contract also provides that funds may be withdrawn on 90 days' notice in writing. In such event, to be consistent with the principle that the depositor may not have access to a 5 percent multiple maturity deposit at intervals of less than 90 days, such a contract should inform the depositor that, when notice is given with respect to all or a portion of the funds on deposit, such notice automatically cancels any other provision for withdrawal that is inconsistent with said principle.

(2) Consequently, if the depositor gives notice on March 1 of his intention to withdraw $1,000 from his account on June 1, the contract should make clear that this automatically cancels his right to withdraw such amount on March 31, since such amount would otherwise be payable at intervals of less than 90 days. Also, his right under the specified maturity (or automatic-renewal maturity) provision to withdraw such amount on June 30 should be suspended, for the same reason. The latter right might be reinstated by the depositor revoking before April 1 his notice of intention to withdraw, since that would be at least 90 days before the specified June 30 maturity. However, the right to withdraw on March 31 could not be reinstated. If it could, the depositor would be in a position to acquire access to the amount involved at intervals of less than 90 days.

(3) As in a "straight" 90-day notice account, the depositor may supersede his notice of intention to withdraw by a subsequent 90-day notice. Again, such notice would have the effect of canceling any other right to withdraw that is inconsistent with the 90-day interval principle.

(e) Withdrawal "grace period". There is one exception to the rule that a member bank may not pay 5 percent interest on multiple maturity deposits that are payable at intervals of less than 90 days. A bank may permit a depositor to withdraw his funds within 10 days after a specified maturity even if there is a provision for automatic renewal for 90 days if not withdrawn at said maturity. If he does so no interest may be paid for the period from the maturity date to the date of withdrawal, for during that time the deposit is a "demand deposit", on which payment of interest is prohibited by law. If he does not so withdraw the deposit remains a time deposit with a term running from the maturity date until a subsequent specified date or for a specified number o days.[1]

(f) "Emergency" withdrawal. In accordance with § 217.4(d) of Regulation Q, a bank may pay a time deposi before maturity where that is "necessary to prevent great hardship to the depositor", but in that case the depositor forfeits accrued and unpaid (uncredited) interest. Occasions for such withdrawals are exceptional. Unless the depositor is confronted with an actual emergency, a bank may not permit withdrawal of funds before maturity of the deposit or termination of the specified period of notice. If the depositor simply has a need for funds, the bank may extend credit to him on the security of his time deposit, but the rate of interest on such loan must be at least 2 percent per annum in excess of the rate of interest paid on the time deposit.

[1] A single maturity time deposit also ma be renewed by action of the deposito within 10 days after maturity. In suc event, as in the case of the multiple matur ty time deposit, a member bank may pay interest on the deposit between the maturit date and renewal thereof at the applicabl maximum rate.

(g) Advertising time deposits. (1) Some recent advertisements by member banks might be interpreted as offering withdrawal privileges from a 5 percent multiple maturity time deposit at intervals of less than 90 days.

(2) In December 1966, the Board was joined by the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in a statement of principles directed against misleading advertising practices in the solicitation of deposits. The third principle states that "If an advertised rate is payable only on investments or deposits that meet fixed time or amount requirements, such requirements should be stated." An advertisement by a member bank that permits the reader to infer that the bank will pay interest at the rate of 5 percent on funds that may be withdrawn at intervals of less than 90 days is inconsistent with that principle and is regarded by the Board as misleading.

(3) The Board heretofore has refrained, in the definition of "time deposit" in Regulation Q, from prescribing permissible designations for such deposits, and has not objected to banks offering time deposit contracts that are called "savings certificates" or "savings bonds."

However, use of such designations without explanation might have a misleading tendency, because of the public's impression that "savings" in a bank will be paid at any time. Consequently, the greater the possibility that the name given to an account may mislead, the more imperative is the bank's obligation to direct the depositor's attention to the withdrawal restrictions that govern the particular account offered.

§ 217.148 Information regarding computation of interest on deposits.

Section 217.6(f) of the Board's Regulation Q, relating to payment of interest on deposits, provides:

> (f) Accuracy of advertising. No member bank shall make any advertisement, announcement, or solicitation relating to the interest paid on deposits that is inaccurate or misleading or that misrepresents its deposit contracts.

Within the spirit of this provision and in order to avoid misunderstandings on the part of its customers, every member bank should inform the holder of a time or savings account at the time of the opening of such account as to the method that will be used in computing and paying interest on the account, including any provision for nonpayment of interest on deposits made after the beginning of an interest-payment period or withdrawn before the end of such period. In addition, if the bank subsequently makes a change in such method that will be less favorable to a depositor than the previous method, notice of such change should be mailed to each depositor at his last known address.

§ 217.150 Rate payable when higher rate is payable only on short-term deposits.

The Board of Governors considers that the change in the Supplement to Regulation Q, effective June 24, 1970, which permits the payment of interest at any rate on single maturity time deposits of $100,000 or more with maturities of 30 to 89 days (while retaining the existing limitations on interest rates for such deposits maturing in 90 days or more), should be applied as follows:

(a) A member bank may amend the rate paid on a $100,000 certificate with an original maturity of 30 to 89 days issued before June 24, 1970, to pay any interest rate for the period subsequent to that date.

(b) A member bank may not amend the rate paid on a $100,000 certificate with an original maturity of 90 days or more to pay interest thereon for any period at a rate in excess of that specified in the Supplement for such a deposit with the particular maturity. Since such a deposit is not a 30- to 89-day deposit—the only kind of deposit free from interest rate control—it is not affected by the change in the regulation.

(c) A member bank may extend the maturity of a $100,000 certificate which originally provided for a maturity of 30 to 89 days, and pay interest at any rate during the extended term, if the new maturity and is (1) later than the original maturity (2) 30 to 89 days from the date of the extension.

(d) A member bank may not extend the term of a certificate originally issued for 90 days or more and pay interest on the deposit at a rate in excess of that applicable to the original deposit, even if the new maturity meets the conditions in the preceding paragraph. This does not apply, of course, to extension or renewal at maturity.

(e) A member bank may pay interest at any rate on a certificate originally issued in an amount less than $100,000 to which the depositor adds sufficient funds to increase the deposit to $100,000 or more, if and only if (1) the original maturity of the certificate is 30 to 89 days, and (2) the maturity date is 30 to 89 days after the date of the addition of such funds.

(f) Member banks may not make use of contracts for future deposits to permit a depositor to commit his funds for more than 89 days and obtain interest at a rate in excess of that applicable to a deposit with a longer maturity. For example, a bank and its depositor might agree on August 1, 1970, that the depositor will deposit, on that date and again on October 20 (80 days later), $100,000 for 80 days, on which the bank will pay interest at the rate of 10 percent. Such an arrangement would be an effort to evade the purposes of the regulation, which permits payment of rates of interest without legal restriction only on deposits of 30 to 89 days. The Board considers that the substance of such a transaction would be a deposit for 160 days. (If the depositor has an option, by contract or understanding, to withdraw funds at the end of the first 80 days or to leave them on deposit for the second 80 days, the deposit would be subject to the limitations of the Supplement to Regulation Q applicable to multiple maturity deposits payable at intervals of less than 90 days.) The Board's view would be the same even though the agreements—formal or informal—were entered into at different times, if they were so related as to be, in reality, a single arrangement that commits the bank and its depositor for 90 days or longer.

[35 FR 11780, July 23, 1970]

§ 217.151 Payment and computation of interest on time and savings deposits.

The Board has expressed the following views relating to the payment and computation of interest on deposits.

(a) The maximum rate of simple interest that a member bank may pay on a deposit is established by § 217.7 of Regulation Q. In January 1970, the Board established certain rates on deposits with a maturity of "1 year or more". To qualify for a rate that may be paid on such a deposit, the deposit must not mature before 1 full year—365 or 366 days as the case may be—from the date of deposit.[1]

[1] In the area of consumer time deposits (deposits in denominations of less than $100,000), under § 217.7 in effect in December, 1970, a member bank may pay 5 per cent interest on a deposit that matures 3 months from the date of deposit. If the date of deposit is in February, such deposit will mature in 89 days. The Board regards this de minimis departure from the 90-day inter-

Continued

(b) The formula for the computation of simple interest is $A=P\ (1+RT)$ where A is the final amount, P is the amount on which interest is computed, R is the annual rate of simple interest and T is the time period. Effective January 1, 1971, § 217.3(e) of Regulation Q was amended to authorize the use of 360 or 365 (or 366 in a leap year) as the denominator of a fraction in which the numerator is the actual number of days the deposit earns interest. For example, a bank would be permitted to consider the time factor on a 295-day deposit as $^{295}/_{365}$ or $^{295}/_{360}$. On a 360-day deposit, the fraction could be $^{360}/_{365}$ or $^{360}/_{360}$; it could not be $^{365}/_{360}$. Additionally, § 217.3(e) authorizes in the numerator of the time fraction the use of 30 days (or multiples thereof) for deposits of 1 month (or corresponding multiples thereof). For example, on a deposit made February 1 for 1 month, the time fraction could be stated as $^{30}/_{360}$ or $^{30}/_{365}$, or $^{28}/_{360}$ or $^{28}/_{365}$.

(c) Section 217.3(a) provides that the effects of compounding may be disregarded in determining whether a member bank is paying interest in excess of the rates established in § 217.7. The formula for continuous compounding is $A=Pe^{RT}$ where A is the final amount, P is the amount on which interest is compounded, e is the base for Napierian or natural logarithms, R is the annual rate of simple interest, and T is the time period. T may be expressed as a fraction in which the numerator is the actual number of days the funds earn interest and the denominator may be either 360, or 365, or, in the case of a leap year, 366. As is permitted in simple interest calculations, a bank may consider each month as having 30 days.

(d) The formula for other than continuous compounding is $A=P(1+R/M)^N$ where A is the final amount, P is the amount on which interest is compounded, R is the annual rate of simple interest, M is the number of compounding periods in a year, and N is the actual number of periods for which interest is compounded. When compounding interest quarterly, $M=4$; compounding monthly, $M=12$; and compounding daily, $M=360$, 365, or 366. For example, a bank may compound 5 percent interest daily on a $10,000 deposit for 91 days in accordance with either of the following:

$A=$10,000[1+(.05/360)]^{91}$ or $10,127.18; or
$A=$10,000[1+(.05/365)]^{91}$ or $10,125.43.

§ 217.152 Withdrawals of savings deposits by telephone.

(a) The Board of Governors has been asked to reconsider its view, adopted in 1936, that a member bank may not permit a depositor to withdraw funds from his savings account by means of a telephone or other oral order (1936 Fed. Res. Bulletin 624). That position was based upon the Board's concern for member bank security and also upon its concern that unrestricted telephone access to savings accounts might lead depositors to treat such accounts as extensions of their checking accounts and destroy the distinction between the accounts.

(b) The Board has studied the telephone withdrawal systems currently being developed by several member banks and feels that the security and record-keeping devices made possible by new technology and incorporated into these systems will keep errors and unauthorized use to a minimum.

(c) The Board recognizes that the telephone has become an accepted medium for transmitting financial data and that the telephone merely provides the customer with an additional method of communicating instructions regarding his account to his bank. In fact, numerous other depository institutions including nonmember commercial banks and savings and loan associations have for some time been permitted to offer telephone withdrawal services.

Therefore, the Board withdraws its policy against the offering of telephone withdrawal services while advising member banks to safeguard such § 217.155 Pooling of funds to obtain higher interest rates.

(a) The Board of Governors has reviewed its previous rulings concerning acceptance of pooled funds by member banks. Under these rulings, the Board had expressed the view that a member bank that paid a higher rate on a deposit that it knew or had reason to know resulted from funds aggregated (pooled) principally for the purpose of obtaining a higher rate of interest would be acting contrary to the spirit of Regulation Q. This interpretation replaces these prior Board rulings that had been issued in the form of letter opinions in 1968 and 1970.

(b) The Board has determined that member banks accepting and paying higher rates of interest on pooled deposits from depositors who themselves have pooled their funds whether or not the bank knows or has reason to know that such funds have been pooled would not be violating Regulation Q. However, member banks are not permitted to solicit, advise or encourage depositors to pool funds for the purpose of paying higher interest rates. In addition, member banks are not permitted to solicit deposits from customers on the basis that the funds will be pooled by the bank for the purpose of paying higher interest rates. The Board believes that participation by member banks in encouraging or establishing pooling arrangements constitutes a device to avoid interest rate limitations. The Board further believes that adopting this new policy will facilitate the administration of Regulation Q interest rate ceilings.

(c) The Board would regard any advertisement, announcement or solicitation by a member bank indicating that it will accept pooled funds or that funds can be pooled to obtain higher rates as a violation of Regulation Q. For example, printed and broadcast advertisements stating that depositors can achieve higher interest rates by pooling their funds with others and depositing them in the bank would be inappropriate. In addition, in responding to inquiries from depositors concerning available deposit instruments and rates, member banks are not permitted to suggest the practice of pooling as a means of meeting minimum denomination requirements. Similarly, any advertisement, announcement or solicitation, written or oral, by a member bank discussing a policy, practice, program, or procedure for accepting pooled deposits would not be permitted. If, for example, two depositors come into a member bank on their own with checks of $5,000 each seeking to purchase jointly one $10,000 minimum denomination money market time deposit, the bank is permitted to accept such funds in the form of a money market time deposit and to pay the ceiling rate on such deposits. However, a member bank could not arrange to introduce, directly or indirectly, separate depositors that are seeking to pool their funds.

(d) This interpretation is not intended to affect other well-established practices which involve pooling of funds such as money market mutual funds, trust department aggregation of temporarily idle balances of bona fide fiduciary accounts, or combination of funds held in escrow by a person acting in a fiduciary or custodial capacity. In addition, member banks are expected to report interest earned by depositors on pooled funds in accordance with the regulations of the Internal Revenue Service.

§ 217.156 Application of Regulation Q to fixed rate obligations issued by the parent bank holding company of a member bank.

(a) The Board has received a request for an interpretation that §§ 217.1(h) and 217.7(h) of Regulation Q (12 CFR 217.1(h) and 217.7(h)) do not apply to small denomination fixed rate obligations with limited redemption features issued by bank holding companies.

The obligations in question generally have a stated maturity of from 10 to 25 years, but are redeemable at the option of the holder subject to limitations as to the amount that any holder may redeem in any year (usually $25,000) and as to the aggregate amount that may be redeemed in any year (usually 5 per cent of the original principal amount of the issue).

(b) Sections 217.1(h) and 217.7(h) were adopted by the Board effective March 14, 1980, and apply Regulation Q interest rate ceilings to certain obligations issued by a member bank's parent bank holding company. Section 217.1(h) specifically provides that the "deposits" of a member bank includes an obligation that is: (1) Issued in a denomination of less than $100,000; (2) required to be registered with the SEC; (3) issued or guaranteed in whole or in part by the member bank's parent which is a bank holding company (regardless of the use of the proceeds); and (4) issued with an original maturity or redemption period of four years or less. Section 217.7(h) specifies the ceiling rates of interest payable on such obligations.

Sections 217.1(h) and 217.7(h) were adopted in view of the Board's concern of the potential adverse impact the widespread issuance by bank holding companies of principally floating rate notes with a redemption feature aimed at the retail market was likely to have on deposit flows among depository institutions. The Board's concern was based on its belief that such obligations, which typically are issued at rates substantially in excess of Regulation Q ceiling rates payable on time deposits of comparable maturity, were competitive with consumer deposits issued by depository institutions.

(c) The Board believes that the obligations in question are distinguished from those that were the subject of the Board's principal concerns in two ways. First, they carry a fixed rate of interest; second, the amount that may be redeemed in any year is limited to 5 per cent. The Board regards this limited redemption feature as having an effect similar to a sinking fund which ensures that repayments are not concentrated, while at the same time preserving the long-term nature of the obligation. In view of these considerations, the Board does not believe that such obligations would be a major source of competition for deposits issued by depository institutions.

(d) Accordingly, the Board has determined that obligations issued by a member bank's parent which is a bank holding company will not be regarded as having a redemption period of four years or less under § 217.1(h) and, thus, will not be subject to the interest rate limitations specified in § 217.7(h), if they have the following characteristics: (1) The obligations possess a fixed rate of interest that does not change during the life of the obligation; (2) no more than 5 per cent of the original principal amount of the issue may be redeemed at the option of the holders in any one year; (3) no more than $25,000 per holder may be redeemed in any one year; and (4) the obligations possess a minimum stated maturity of five years or more. The five year minimum maturity requirement (i.e., 25 per cent higher than the current more than four year requirement) offsets the possible 25 per cent maximum reduction (5 per cent per year for five years) in the amount outstanding after five years and is regarded as necessary to preserve the objective of the four year minimum maturity requirement in § 217.1(h). The Board also believes that in order to ensure that potential purchasers are aware of the limited nature of the redemption feature, those limitations should be prominently disclosed in any materials or solicitations concerning such obligations.

§ 217.157 Eligibility for NOW Accounts.

(a) Background. (1) Effective December 31, 1980, the Consumer Checking Account Equity Act of 1980 (Title III of the Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980; Pub. L. 96-221; 94 Stat. 146) ("Act") authorizes depository institutions nationwide to offer interest-bearing checking (NOW) accounts to depositors where the "entire beneficial interest is held by one or more individuals or by an organization which is operated primarily for religious, philanthropic, charitable, educational, or other similar purposes and which is not operated for profit." (12 U.S.C. 1832(a)(2)). The purpose of the Act is to extend the availability of NOW accounts throughout the nation. Previously, as an experiment, NOW accounts were authorized to be offered by depository institutions only in New England, New York, and New Jersey.

(2)(i) The NOW account experiment established by Congress in 1973 did not specify the types of customers that could maintain NOW accounts. As a result, the rules of the Federal Reserve and Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation specified the types of depositors eligible to maintain NOW accounts at member and insured nonmember banks. In enacting the NOW account provision in 1980, Congress adopted virtually the same language concerning NOW account eligibility that previously had been adopted by the Board and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation with regard to the types of customers permitted to maintain NOW accounts in institutions located in the NOW account experiment region. (12 CFR 217.1(e)(3) and 12 CFR 329.1(e)(2)). This definition was based upon long-standing regulatory provisions concerning eligibility criteria for savings deposits.

(ii) Effective October 15, 1982, section 706 of the Garn-St Germain Depository Institutions Act of 1982 (Pub. L. 97-320; 96 Stat. 1540) specifically extended NOW account eligibility to funds deposited by governmental units.

(3) In response to many requests for rulings since the new law was enacted, the Board has determined to clarify the types of entities that may maintain NOW accounts at member banks.

(b) Individuals. (1) Any individual may maintain a NOW account regardless of the purposes that the funds will serve. Deposits of an individual used in his or her business may be held in a NOW account, since it is impracticable to distinguish between funds used by an individual in his or her business and funds used for personal purposes. However, other entities organized or operated to make a profit may not maintain NOW accounts regardless of whether they are corporations, partnerships, associations, business trusts, or other organizations.

(2) Under current provisions, funds held in a fiduciary capacity (either by an individual fiduciary or by a corporate fiduciary such as a bank trust department), including those awaiting distribution or investment, may be held in the form of NOW accounts if the beneficiaries are individuals. The Board believes that such a classification should continue since fiduciaries are required to invest even temporarily idle balances to the greatest extent feasible in order to responsibly carry out their fiduciary duties. The availability of NOW accounts provides a convenient vehicle for providing a short-term return on temporarily idle trust funds of individuals.

(3) Pension funds, escrow accounts, security deposits, and other funds held under various agency agreements may also be classified as NOW accounts if the entire beneficial interest is held by individuals. The Board believes that these accounts are similar in nature to trust accounts and should be accorded identical treatment. Therefore, such funds may be regarded as eligible for classification as NOW accounts.

(c) Nonprofit organizations. (1) Under the Act, a nonprofit organization that is operated primarily for religious, philanthropic, charitable, educational, or other similar purposes may maintain a NOW account. The Board regards the following kinds of organizations as eligible for NOW accounts under this standard if they are not operated for profit:

(i) Organizations described in section 501(c) (3) through (13), and (19) of the Internal Revenue Code (26 U.S.C. (I.R.C. 1954) section 501(c) (3) through (13) and (19)); and

(ii) Homeowners and condominium owners associations described in section 528 of the Internal Revenue Code (26 U.S.C. (I.R.C. 1954) section 528), including housing cooperative associations that perform similar functions.

(2) All organizations that are operated for profit are not eligible to maintain NOW accounts at member banks.

(3) The following types of organizations described in the cited provisions of the Internal Revenue Code are among those not eligible to maintain NOW accounts:

(i) Credit unions and other mutual depository institutions described in section 501(c)(14);

(ii) Mutual insurance companies described in section 501(c)(15);

NOW accounts may consists of funds in which the entire beneficial interest is held by the United States, any State of the United States, county, municipality, or political subdivision thereof, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, American Samoa, Guam, any territory or possession of the United States, or any political subdivision thereof.

(e) Grandfather provision. In order to avoid unduly disrupting account relationships, a NOW account established at a member bank on or before August 31, 1981, that represents funds of a nonqualifying entity that previously qualified to maintain a NOW account may continue to be maintained.

§ 217.159 Member bank participation in the secondary market for its own time deposits.

(a) Effective May 1, 1982, the Depository Institutions Deregulation Committee ("DIDC") authorized depository institutions, including member banks, to issue 3½ year or more time deposits not subject to an interest rate ceiling and 91-day, $7,500 time deposits with an interest rate ceiling tied to the most recent 91-day Treasury bill rate. Such deposits may be issued in negotiable form, thereby facilitating the ability of depositors to liquidate the deposit through sales on the secondary market. Member banks have asked the extent to which they may participate in, or facilitate, the secondary market for such time deposits that they have issued.

(b) The Board of Governors believes that a fundamental principle behind the penalty for payment of a time deposit prior to maturity is to distinguish time deposits from demand deposits. Under section 19(i) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 371a), member banks are prohibited from paying interest on demand deposits. In addition, the early withdrawal penalty is intended to discourage depositors from withdrawing time deposit funds prior to maturity, thereby enabling member banks to better plan their asset and liability structures. The question of participation by a member bank in secondary market transactions involving its own time deposits raises the issue of whether such activity would circumvent the purposes intended to be served by the early withdrawal penalty.

(c) Direct participation. (1) The Board has concluded that if a member bank or one of its affiliates purchases a time deposit issued by the bank, the member bank should be regarded as having paid the deposit prior to maturity. The effect of the transaction is that the member bank has cancelled a liability as opposed to having acquired an asset for its portfolio. Thus, the member bank is required to impose the early withdrawal penalty on the party from whom it purchases the instrument. With respect to an affiliate making the purchase, the effect of the penalty rule could be easily circumvented by redemption of the time deposit by the affiliate at the member bank. Even if an early withdrawal penalty is imposed, because of the affiliate relationship, there likely would be no impact on the consolidated earnings of the entity comprising the member bank and the affiliate redeeming the deposit. Consequently, the Board believes that the purchase of a time deposit issued by a member bank by the bank itself or by one of its affiliates constitutes a payment of a deposit prior to maturity.

(2) Many member banks engage in secondary market activities in negotiable time certificates of deposit of $100,000 or more ("CDs"). In many instances, sales and purchases of these CDs are negotiated primarily by rate and maturity and without regard to the specific identity of the issuing bank. In some cases a member bank might purchase a block of CDs of various obligors and later discover one of the CDs purchased to be its own. Since this situation appears to be one in which the member bank has inadvertently purchased its own deposit, the Board believes that the member bank should not be required to impose an early withdrawal penalty; however, it must sell the CD in the secondary market as soon as possible after it has been received.

(d) Participation as a "broker." (1) The Board believes that it is permissible for a member bank to facilitate the secondary market for its own small denomination time deposits by arranging to find a purchaser for a time deposit that a customer is trying to sell. In such instances, the bank will not be paying out any of its own funds and the depositor does not have a guarantee that the member bank will actually be able to find a buyer. Member banks may establish and advertise arrangements whereby an unaffiliated third party agrees in advance to purchase time deposits issued by the bank. Such transactions would not be inconsistent with the purposes that the early withdrawal penalty is intended to serve. However, the Board believes that an arrangement established wherein a member bank pays a fee to a third party that purchases negotiable time deposits from the bank's depositors constitutes a device to avoid the early withdrawal penalty, and, thus, is prohibited. In addition any interim financing provided to such a third party by a member bank in connection with its secondary market activity involving the bank's small denomination time deposits must be made substantially on the same terms, including interest rates and collateral, as those prevailing at the same time for comparable transactions with other similarly situated persons and may not involve more than the normal risk of repayment or present other unfavorable features.

(2) A member bank may enter into an arrangement with an unaffiliated third party wherein the third party agrees to stand ready to purchase time deposits held by the member bank's customers. However, the Board is of the opinion that a member bank may not establish reciprocal arrangements with another depository institution for purchases of each other's time deposits of less than $100,000 held by customers. The Board believes that arrangements with such parties present serious potential for circumvention of the early withdrawal penalty rule and the purposes that it is designed to serve. In this regard, arrangements entered into with another depository institution to purchase time deposits of the other institution's customers could give rise to significant contingent liabilities for the entities agreeing to purchase the deposits. While the institution issuing the deposit might not be impaired in planning its asset and liability structure, the institution agreeing to purchase deposits from the customers of the issuing institution could be so affected. Such arrangements could have an adverse effect on the safety and soundness of member banks and other depository institutions.

§ 217.160 Loan upon the security of a time deposit.

(a) Section 217.4(f) of Regulation Q (12 CFR 217.4(f)) provides that a member bank may make a loan to a depositor upon the security of his or her time deposit as long as the rate of interest on the loan is at least 1 percentage point above the rate being paid on the deposit. The purpose of this provision is to ensure that the rules regarding the maintenance of interest rate ceilings are not violated, including rules that require penalties for early withdrawals of time deposits.

(b) Effective October 5, 1982, the Board amended Regulation D—Reserve Requirements of Depository Institutions (12 CFR Part 204) to define as transaction accounts, time deposits issued in connection with an arrangement that permits the depositor to obtain credit, directly or indirectly, through the drawing of a check, draft or similar device that can be used for the purpose of making payments or transfers to third persons or others. (47 FR 44992) In considering this amendment, the Board concluded that some of these arrangements are structured using a loan secured by a time deposit with terms providing for interest on the loan to be charged at 1 percentage point over the annual simple rate being paid on the deposit when the effective rate on the deposit is higher due to the effects of compounding. For example, after daily compounding on a 365/360 basis, a 12 per cent annual simple rate being paid on a deposit results in an annual effective rate of 12.935 per cent. This result has the effect of minimizing the impact of the required 1 percentage point differential. In order to preserve the effectiveness of § 217.4(f) of Regulation Q, the Board believes the interest rate charged (on an annual basis) on a loan secured by a time deposit must be at least 1 percentage point above the annual effective rate paid on the time deposit, taking into account the effects of compounding of the interest on the deposit. Thus, in the example, provided above, the minimum annual rate that may be charged on a loan secured by the time deposit would be 13.935 per cent, which is 1 percentage point above the 12.935 annual effective rate being paid on the deposit. The Board has been advised that a similar position has been adopted by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

(c) In order not to disadvantage depositors who currently have such loans outstanding or agreements for such loans, this interpretation is applicable to loans secured by a time deposit that are made, extended or renewed on or after October 18, 1982, or agreements for such loans entered into on or after October 18, 1982.

§ 217.161 Repurchase agreements involving shares of a money market mutual fund whose portfolio consists wholly of United States Treasury and Federal agency securities.

(a) The Federal Reserve Act, as amended by the Monetary Control Act of 1980 (Title I of Pub. L. 96-221) imposes federal reserve requirements on transaction accounts and nonpersonal time deposits held by depository institutions. The Board is empowered under the Act to determine what types of obligations shall be deemed a deposit (12 U.S.C. 461). Regulation D—Reserve Requirements of Depository Institutions exempts from the definition of "deposit" those obligations of a depository institution that arise from a transfer of direct obligations of, or obligations that are fully guaranteed as to principal and interest by, the United States government or any agency thereof that the depository institution is obligated to repurchase (12 CFR 204.2(a)(1)(vii)(B)). A parallel exemption in Regulation Q—Interest on Deposits exempts from the definition of "deposit" obligations that evidence an indebtedness arising from a transfer of direct obligations of, or obligations that are fully guaranteed as to principal and interest by, the United States or any agency thereof that the bank is obligated to repurchase (12 CFR 217.1(f)(2)).

(b) The National Bank Act provides that a national bank may purchase for its own account investment securities under limitations and restrictions as the Comptroller may prescribe (12 U.S.C. 24, ¶ 7). The statute defines investment securities to mean marketable obligations evidencing indebtedness of any person in the form of bonds, notes, and debentures. The Act further limits a national bank's holdings of any one security to no more than an amount equal to 10 percent of the bank's capital stock and surplus. However, these limitations do not apply to obligations issued by the United States, general obligations of any state and certain obligations of federal agencies. In addition, generally a national bank is not permitted to purchase for its own account stock of any corporation. These restrictions also apply to state member banks (12 U.S.C. 335).

(c) The Comptroller of the Currency has permitted national banks to purchase for their own accounts shares of open-end investment companies that are purchased and sold at par (i.e., money market mutual funds) provided the portfolios of such companies consist solely of securities that a national bank may purchase directly (Banking Bulletin B-83-58). The Board of Governors has permitted state member banks to purchase, to the extent permitted under applicable state law, shares of money market mutual funds ("MMMF") whose portfolios consist solely of securities that the state member bank may purchase directly (12 CFR 208.123).

(d) The Board has determined that an obligation arising from a repurchase agreement involving shares of a MMMF whose portfolio consists wholly of securities of the United States government or any agency thereof[3] would not be a "deposit" for purposes of Regulations D and Q. The Board believes that a repurchase agreement involving shares of such a MMMF is the functional equivalent of a repurchase agreement directly involving United States government or agency obligations. A purchaser of shares of a MMMF obtains an interest in a pro rata portion of the assets that comprise the MMMF's portfolio. Accordingly, regardless of whether the repurchase agreement involves United States government or agency obligations directly or shares in a MMMF whose portfolio consists entirely of United States government or agency obligations, an equitable and undivided interest in United States and agency government obligations is being transferred. Moreover, the Board believes that this interpretation will further the purpose of the exemption in Regulations D and Q for repurchase agreements involving United States government or federal obligations by enhancing the market for such obligations.

Under section 32 of the Banking Act of 1933 (49 Stat. 709; 12 U.S.C. 78), except as stated in § 218.2, no officer, director, or employee of any corporation or unincorporated association, no partner or employee of any partnership, and no individual, primarily engaged in the issue, flotation, under writing, public sale, or distribution, at wholesale or retail, or through syndicate participation, of stocks, bonds, or other similar securities, can legally be at the same time an officer, director, or employee of any member bank of the Federal Reserve System.[1]

§ 218.2 Exemptions.

Pursuant to the authority vested in it by section 32, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System hereby grants permission[2] for any officer, director, or employee of any member bank of the Federal Reserve System, unless otherwise prohibited,[3] to be at the same time an officer, director, or employee of any corporation or unincorporated association, a partner or employee of any partnership, or an individual engaged in the issue, flotation, underwriting, public sale, or distribution, at wholesale or retail, or through syndicate participation, of only such securities as national banks may lawfully underwrite and deal in pursuant to paragraph Seventh of section 5136, Revised Statutes (12 U.S.C. 24).[4]

§ 218.3 Amendments.

The right to alter, amend, or repeal this part, in whole or in part, is expressly reserved.

[Reg. R. Jan. 4, 1936]

[1] Therefore, by its terms, section 32 does not apply—

(a) To a person who is not an officer, director, or employee of a member bank of the Federal Reserve System;

(b) To a person (1) who is not an officer, director, or employee of a corporation or unincorporated association primarily engaged in the issue, flotation, underwriting, public sale, or distribution, at wholesale or retail, or through syndicate participation, of stocks, bonds, or other similar securities, (2) who is not a partner or employee of a partnership primarily so engaged, and (3) who is not, in his individual capacity, primarily so engaged.

A broker who is engaged solely in executing orders for the purchase and sale of securities on behalf of others in the open market is not engaged in the business referred to in section 32.

[2] Under section 32, as amended effective Jan. 1, 1936 (49 Stat. 709; 12 U.S.C. 78), the Board is authorized to except limited classes of relationships from the prohibitions of the statute, under certain conditions; but the Board can make such exceptions only by general regulations and is not authorized to issue individual permits.

[3] Section 8 of the Clayton Act (38 Stat. 732, 49 Stat. 718; 15 U.S.C. 19) is applicable in certain circumstances to interlocking relationships between member banks and private bankers, and other banks, banking associations, savings banks and trust companies. See Part 212 of this chapter.

Section 17(c) of the Public Utility Act of 1935 (49 Stat. 831; 15 U.S.C. 79q (c) is applicable in certain circumstances to interlocking relationships between banks and private bankers (and corporations owned by banks and private bankers), and public utility companies and public utility holding companies. Inquiries regarding this section should be addressed to the Securities and Exchange Commission and not to the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

Section 10(c) of the Investment Company Act of 1940 (54 Stat. 806; 15 U.S.C. 80a-10 (c)) is applicable in certain circumstances to interlocking relationships between banks and registered investment companies. Inquiries regarding this section should be addressed to the Securities and Exchange Commission and not to the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

Section 305(b) of the Federal Power Act (49 Stat. 856; 16 U.S.C. 825d(b) is applicable in certain circumstances to interlocking relationships between public utility companies and banks and bankers that are authorized by law to underwrite or participate in the marketing of securities of a public utility. Inquiries regarding this section should be addressed to the Federal Power Commission and not to the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

[4] Made applicable to State member banks by paragraph 20 of section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 335).

INTERPRETATIONS

§ 218.101 Service of open-end investment company.

An open-end investment company is defined in section 5(a)(1) of the Investment Company Act of 1940 as a company "which is offering for sale or has outstanding any redeemable security of which it is the issuer." Section 2(a)(31) of said act provides that a "redeemable security" means "any security, other than short-term paper, under the terms of which the holder, upon its presentation to the issuer or to a person designated by the issuer, is entitled (whether absolutely or only out of surplus) to receive approximately his proportionate share of the issuer's current net assets, or the cash equivalent thereof."

It is customary for such companies to have but one class of securities, namely, capital stock, and it is apparent that the more or less continued process of redemption of the stock issued by such a company would restrict and contract its activities if it did not continue to issue its stock. Thus, the issuance and sale of its stock is essential to the maintenance of the company's size and to the continuance of operations without substantial contraction, and therefore the issue and sale of its stock constitutes one of the primary activities of such a company.

Accordingly, it is the opinion of the Board that if such a company is issuing or offering its redeemable stock for sale, it is "primarily engaged in the issue * * * public sale, or distribution, * * * of securities" and that section 32 of the Banking Act of 1933, as amended, prohibits an officer, director or employee of any such company from serving at the same time as an officer, director or employee of any member bank. It is the Board's view that this is true even though the shares are sold to the public through independent organizations with the result that the investment company does not derive any direct profit from the sales.

If, however, the company has ceased to issue or offer any of its stock for sale, the company would not be engaged in the issue or distribution of its stock, and, therefore, the prohibition contained in section 32 would be inapplicable unless the company were primarily engaged in the underwriting, public sale or distribution of securities other than its own stock.

§ 218.102 Director serving member bank and closed-end investment company being organized.

(a) The Board has previously expressed the opinion (§ 218.101) that section 32 of the Banking Act of 1933 (12 U.S.C. 78) is applicable to a director of a member bank serving as a director of an open-end investment company, because the more or less continued process of redemption of the stock issued by such company makes the issuance and sale of its stock essential to the maintenance of the company's size and to the continuance of operations, with the result that the issuance and sale of its stock constitutes one of the primary activities of such a company. The Board also stated that if the company had ceased to issue or offer any of its stock for sale, the company would not be engaged in the issuance or distribution of its stock and therefore the prohibitions of section 32 would not be applicable. Subsequently, the Board expressed the opinion that section 32 would not be applicable in the case of a closed-end investment company.

(b) The Board has recently stated that it believed that a closed-end company which was in process of organization and was actively engaged in issuing and selling its shares was in the same position relative to section 32 as an open-end company, and that the section would be applicable while this activity continued.

§ 218.103 Service as officer, director, or employee of licensee corporation under the Small Business Investment Act of 1958.

(a) The Board of Governors has been requested to express an opinion whether § 218.1 would prohibit an officer, director, or employee of a member bank from serving at the same time as an officer, director, or employee of a Licensee corporation under the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 (15 U.S.C. 661 et seq.). It is understood that a Licensee would be authorized to engage only in the activities set forth in the statute, namely, to provide capital and long-term loan funds to small business concerns.

(b) In the opinion of the Board, a corporation engaged exclusively in the enumerated activities would not be "primarily engaged in the issue, flotation, underwriting, public sale, or distribution, at wholesale or retail, or through syndicate participation, of stocks, bonds, or other similar securities." Accordingly, the prohibition of § 218.1 would not apply to serving as an officer, director, or employee of either a small business investment company organized under the Small Business Investment Act of 1958, or an investment company chartered under the laws of a State solely for the purpose of operating under the Small Business Investment Act of 1958.

§ 218.104 Service of member bank and real estate investment company.

(a) The Board recently considered two inquiries regarding the question whether proposed real estate investment companies would be subject to the provisions of sections 20 and 32 of the Banking Act of 1933 (12 U.S.C. 377 and 78). These sections relate to affiliations between member banks and companies engaged principally in the issue, flotation, underwriting, public sale or distribution of stocks, bonds, or similar securities, and interlocking directorates between member banks and companies primarily so engaged. In both instances the companies, after their organization, would engage only in the business of financing real estate development or investing in real estate interests, and not in the type of business described in the statute. However, each of the companies, in the process of its organization, would issue its own stock. In one instance, it appeared that the stock would be issued over a period of from 30 to 60 days; in the other instance it was stated that the stock would be sold by a firm of underwriters and that distribution was expected to be completed in not more than a few days.

(b) On the basis of the facts stated, the Board concluded that the companies involved would not be subject to sections 20 and 32 of the Banking Act of 1933, since they would not be principally or primarily engaged in the business of issuing or distributing securities but would only be issuing their own stock for a period ordinarily required for corporate organization. The Board stated, however, that if either of the companies should subsequently issue additional shares frequently and in substantial amounts relative to the size of the company's capital structure, it would be necessary for the Board to reconsider the matter.

(c) Apart from the legal question, the Board noted that an arrangement of the kind proposed could involve some dangers to an affiliated bank because the relationship might tend to impair the independent judgment that should be exercised by the bank in appraising its credits and might cause the company to be so identified in the minds of the public with the bank that any financial reverses suffered by the company might affect the confidence of the public in the bank.

(d) Because of the foregoing conclusion that the companies would not be subject to sections 20 and 32, it seems advisable to clarify § 218.102, in which the Board took the position that a closed-end investment company which was in process of organization and was actively engaged in issuing and selling its shares was subject to section 32 as long as this activity continued. That interpretation should be regarded as applicable only where the circumstances are such as to indicate that the issuance of the company's stock is a primary or principal activity of the company. For example, such circumstances might exist where the initial stock of a company is actively issued over a period of time longer than that ordinarily required for corporate organization, or where, subsequent to organization, the company issues its own stock frequently and in substantial amounts relative to the total amount of shares outstanding.

§ 218.105 Serving as director of member bank and corporation selling own stock.

(a) The Board recently considered the question whether section 32 of the Banking Act of 1933 (12 U.S.C. 78) would be applicable to the service of a director of a corporation which planned to acquire or organize, as proceeds from the sale of stock became available, subsidiaries to operate in a wide variety of fields, including manufacturing, foreign trade, leasing of heavy equipment, and real estate development. The corporation had a paid-in capital of about $60,000 and planned to sell additional shares at a price totaling $10 million, with the proviso that if less than $3 million worth were sold by March 1962, the funds subscribed would be refunded. It thus appeared to be contemplated that the sale of stock would take at least a year, and there appeared to be no reason for believing that, if the venture proved successful, additional shares would not be offered so that the corporation could continue to expand.

(b) The Board concluded that section 32 would be applicable, stating that although § 218.102, as clarified by § 218.104, related to closed-end investment companies, the rationale of that interpretation is applicable to corporations generally.

§ 218.106 No exception granted a special or limited partner.

(a) The Board has been asked on several occasions whether section 32 of the Banking Act of 1933 (12 U.S.C. 78) is applicable to a director, officer, or employee of a member bank who is a special or limited partner in a firm primarily engaged in the business described in that section.

(b) Since the Board cannot issue an individual permit, it can exempt a limited or special partner only by amending Part 218 (Regulation R). After the statute was amended in 1935 so as to make it applicable to a "partner," the Board carefully considered the desirability of making such an exception. On several subsequent occasions it has reconsidered the question. In each instance the Board has decided that in view of a limited partner's interest in the underwriting and distributing business, it should not make the exception.

§ 218.107 Serving member bank and investment advisor with mutual fund affiliation.

(a) The opinion of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System has been requested with respect to service as vice president of a corporation engaged in supplying investment advice and management services to mutual funds and others ("Manager") and as director of a member bank.

(b) Section 32 of the Banking Act of 1933 (12 U.S.C. 78), forbids any officer, director, or employee of any corporation "primarily engaged in the issue, flotation, underwriting, public sale, or distribution, at wholesale or retail, or through syndicate participation, of stocks, bonds, or other similar securities * * *" to serve at the same time as an officer, director, or employee of a member bank.

(c) Manager has for several years served a number of different open-end or mutual funds, as well as individuals, institutions, and other clients, as an investment advisor and manager. However, it appears that Manager has a close relationship with two of the mutual funds which it serves. A wholly owned subsidiary of Manager ("Distributors"), serves as distributor for the two mutual funds and has no other function. In addition, the chairman and treasurer of Manager, as well as the president, assistant treasurer, and a director of Manager, are officers and directors of Distributors and trustees of both funds. It appears also that a director of Manager is president and director of Distributors, while the clerk of Manager is also clerk of Distributors. Manager, Distributors and both funds are listed at the same address in the local telephone directory.

(d) While the greater part of the total annual income of Manager during the past five years has derived from "individuals, institutions, and other clients", it appears that a substantial portion has been attributable to the involvement with the two funds in question. During each of the last four years, that portion has exceeded a third of the total income of Manager, and in 1962 it reached nearly 40 percent.

(e) The Board has consistently held that an open-end or mutual fund is engaged in the activities described in section 32, so long as it is issuing its securities for sale, since it is apparent that the more or less continued process of redemption of the stock issued by such a company would restrict and contract its activities if it did not continue to issue the stock. Clearly, a corporation that is engaged in underwriting or selling open-end shares, is so engaged.

(f) In connection with incorporated manager-advisors to open-end or mutual funds, the Board has expressed the view in a number of cases that where the corporation served a number of different clients, and the corporate structure was not interlocked with that of mutual fund and underwriter in such a way that it could be regarded as being controlled by or substantially one with them, it should not be held to be "primarily engaged" in section 32 activities. On the other hand, where a manager-advisor was created for the sole purpose of serving a particular fund, and its activities were limited to that function, the Board has regarded the group as a single entity for purposes of section 32.

(g) In the present case, the selling organization is a wholly-owned subsidiary of the advisor-manager, hence subject to the parent's control. Stock of the subsidiary will be voted according to decisions by the parent's board of directors, and presumably will be voted for a board of directors of the subsidiary which is responsive to policy lines laid down by the parent. Financial interests of the parent are obviously best served by an aggressive selling policy, and, in fact, both the share and the absolute amount of the parent's income provided by the two funds have shown a steady increase over recent years. The fact that dividends from Distributors have represented a relatively small proportion of the income of Manager, and that there were, indeed, no dividends in 1961 or 1962, does not support a contrary argument, in view of the steady increase in total income of Manager from the funds and Distributors taken as a whole.

(h) In view of all these facts, the Board has concluded that the separate corporate entities of Manager and Distributors should be disregarded and Distributors viewed as essentially a selling arm of Manager. As a result of this conclusion, section 32 would forbid interlocking service as an officer of Manager and a director of a member bank.

§ 218.108 Interlocking relationship involving securities affiliate of brokerage firm.

(a) The Board of Governors was asked recently whether section 32 of the Banking Act of 1933 ("section 32"), 12 U.S.C. 78, prohibits the interlocking service of X as a director of a member bank of the Federal Reserve System and as a partner in a New York City brokerage firm ("Partnership") having a corporation affiliate ("Corporation") engaged in business of the kinds described in section 32 ("section 32 business").

(b) Section 32, subject to an exception not applicable here, provides that "No officer, director, or employee of any corporation or unincorporated association, no partner or employee of any partnership, and no individual, primarily engaged in the issue, flotation, underwriting, public sale, or distribution, at wholesale or retail, or through syndicate participation, of stocks, bonds, or other similar securities, shall serve the same time as an officer, director, or employee of any member bank * * *".

(c) From the information submitted it appears that Partnership, a member firm of the New York Stock Exchange, is the successor of two prior partnerships, in one of which X had been a partner. This prior partnership had been found not to be "primarily engaged" in section 32 business. The other prior partnership, however, had been so engaged. By arrangement between the two prior firms, Corporation was formed chiefly for the purpose of carrying on the section 32 business of the prior firm that had been "primarily engaged" in that business, which business was transferred to Corporation. The two prior firms were then merged and the stock of Corporation was acquired by all the partners of Partnership, other than X, in proportion to the respective partnership interests of the stockholding partners. The information submitted indicated also that two of the three directors and "some" of the principal officers of Corporation are partners in Partnership, although X is not a director or officer of Corporation.

(d) It is understood that the practice of forming corporate affiliates of brokerage firms, in order that the affiliate may carry on the securities business (such as section 32 business) with limited liability and other advantages, has become rather widespread in recent years. Accordingly, other cases may arise where a partner in such a firm may desire to serve at the same time as director of a member bank.

(e) On the basis of the information presented the Board concluded that X in his capacity as an "individual", was not engaged in section 32 business. However, as that information showed Corporation to be "primarily engaged" in section 32 business, the Board stated that a finding that Partnership and Corporation were one entity for the purposes of the statute would mean that X would be forbidden to serve both the member bank and Partnership, if the one entity were so engaged.

(f) Paragraph .15 of Rule 321 of the New York Stock Exchange governing the formation and conduct of affiliated companies of member organizations states that:

> Since Rule 314 provides that each member and allied member in a member organization must have a fixed interest in its entire business, it follows that the fixed interest of each member and allied member must extend to the member organization's corporate affiliate. When any of the corporate affiliate's participating stock is owned by the members and allied members in the member organization, such holdings must at all times be distributed among such members and allied members in approximately the same proportions as their respective interests in the profits of the member organization. When a member or allied member's interest in the member organization is changed, a corresponding change must be made in his participating interest in the affiliate.

(g) Although it was understood that X had received special permission from the Exchange not to own any of the stock of Corporation, it appeared to the Board that Rule 321.15 would apply to the remaining partners. Moreover, other paragraphs of the rule forbid transfers of the stock, except under certain circumstances to limited classes of persons, such as employees of the organization or estates of decedent partners, without permission of the Exchange.

(h) The information supplied to the Board clearly indicated that Corporation was formed in order to provide Partnership with an "underwriting arm". Under Rule 321 of the Exchange, the partners (other than X) are required to own stock in Corporation because of their partnership interest, would be required to surrender that stock on leaving the partnership, and incoming partners would be required to acquire such stock. Furthermore, Rule 321 speaks of a corporate affiliate, such as Corporation, as a part of the "entire business" of a member organization.

(i) On the basis of the foregoing, the Board concluded that Partnership and Corporation must be regarded as a single entity or enterprise for purposes of section 32.

(j) The remaining question was whether the enterprise, as a whole, should be regarded as "primarily engaged" in section 32 business. The information presented stated that the total dollar volume of section 32 business of Corporation during the first eleven months of its operation was $89 million. The gross income from section 32 business was less than half a million, and represented about 7.9 percent of the income of Partnership. The Board was advised that the relatively low amount of income from section 32 business of Corporation as due to special costs, and to the condition of the market for municipal and State bonds during the past year, a field in which Corporation specializes. Corporation is listed in a standard directory of securities dealers, and holds itself out as having separate departments to deal with the principal underwriting areas in which it functions.

(k) In view of the above information, the Board concluded that the enterprise consisting of Partnership and Corporation was "primarily engaged" in section 32 business. Accordingly, the Board stated that the partners in Partnership, including X, were forbidden by that section and by this Part 218 (Reg. R), issued pursuant to the statute, to serve as officers, directors, or employees of any member banks.

§ 218.109 Short-term negotiable notes of banks not securities under section 32, Banking Act of 1933.

(a) The Board of Governors has been asked whether short-term unsecured negotiable notes of the kinds issued by some of the large banks in this country as a means of obtaining funds are "other similar securities" within the meaning of section 32, Banking Act of 1933 (12 U.S.C. 78) and this part.

(b) Section 32 forbids certain interlocking relationships between banks which are members of the Federal Reserve System and individuals or organizations "primarily engaged in the issue, flotation, underwriting, public sale, or distribution, at wholesale or retail, or through syndicate participation, of stocks, bonds, or other similar securities * * *." Therefore, if such notes are securities similar to stocks or bonds, any dealing therein would be an activity covered in section 32 and would have to be taken into consideration in determining whether the individual or organization involved was "primarily engaged" in such activities.

(c) The Board has concluded that such short-term notes of the kind described above are not "other similar securities" within the meaning of section 32 and this part.

[29 FR 16065, Dec. 2, 1964]

§ 218.110 Investment for own account affects applicability of section 32.

(a) The Board of Governors has been presented with the question whether a certain firm is primarily engaged in the activities described in section 32 of the Banking Act of 1933. If the firm is so engaged, then the prohibitions of section 32 forbids a limited partner to serve as employee of a member bank.

(b) The firm describes the bulk of its business, producing roughly 60 percent of its income, as "investing for its own account." However, it has a seat on the local stock exchange, and acts as specialist and odd-lot dealer on the floor of the exchange, an activity responsible for some 30 percent of its volume and profits. The firm's "off-post trading," apart from the investment account, gives rise to about 5 percent of its total volume and 10 percent of its profits. Gross volume has risen from $4 to $10 million over the past 3 years, but underwriting has accounted for no more than one-half of 1 percent of that amount.

(c) Section 32 provides that "No officer, director, or employee of any corporation or unincorporated association, no partner, or employee of any partnership, and no individual, primarily engaged in the issue, flotation, underwriting, public sale, or distribution, at wholesale, or retail, or through syndicate participation, of stocks, bonds, or other similar securities, shall serve the same time (sic) as an officer, director, or employee of any member bank * * *"

(d) In interpreting this language, the Board has consistently held that underwriting, acting as a dealer, or generally speaking, selling, or distributing securities as a principal, is covered by the section, while acting as broker or agent is not.

(e) In one type of situation, however, although a firm was engaged in selling securities as principal, on its own behalf, the Board held that section 32 did not apply. In these cases, the firm alleged that it bought and sold securities purely for investment purposes. Typically, those cases involved personal holding companies or small family investment companies. Securities had been purchased only for members of a restricted family group, and had been held for relatively long periods of time.

(f) The question now before the Board is whether a similar exception can apply in the case of the investment account of a professional dealer. In order to answer this question, it is necessary to analyze, in the light of applicable principles under the statute, the three main types of activity in which the firm has been engaged, (1) acting as specialist and odd-lot dealer, (2) off-post trading as an ordinary dealer, and (3) investing for its own account.

(g) On several occasions, the Board has held that, to the extent the trading of a specialist or odd-lot dealer is limited to that required for him to perform his function on the floor of the exchange, he is acting essentially in an agency capacity. In a letter of September 13, 1934, the Board held that the business of a specialist was not of the kind described in the (unamended) section on the understanding that "* * * in acting as specialists on the New York Curb Exchange, it is necessary for the firm to buy and sell odd lots and * * * in order to protect its position after such transactions have been made, the firm sells or buys shares in lots of 100 or multiples thereof in order to reduce its position in the stock in question to the smallest amount possible by this method. It appears therefore that, in connection with these transactions, the firm is neither trading in the stock in question or taking a position in it except to the extent made necessary by the fact that it deals in odd lots and cannot complete the transactions by purchases and sales on the floor of the exchange except to the nearest 100 share amount."

(h) While subsequent amendments to section 32 to some extent changed the definition of the kinds of securities business that would be covered by the section, the amendments were designed so far as is relevant to the present question, to embody existing interpretations of the Board. Accordingly, to the extent that the firm's business is described by the above letter of the Board, it should not be considered to be of a kind described in section 32.

(i) Turning to the firm's off-post trading, the Board is inclined to agree with the view that this is sufficient to make the case a borderline one under the statute. In the circumstances, the Board might prefer to postpone making a determination until figures for 1965 could be reviewed, particularly in the light of the recent increase in total volume, if it were not for the third category, the firm's own investment account.

(j) While this question has not been squarely presented to it in the past, the Board is of the opinion that when a firm is doing any significant amount of business as a dealer or underwriter, then investments for the firm's own account should be taken into consideration in determining whether the firm is "primarily engaged" in the activities described in section 32. The division into dealing for one's own account, and dealing with customers, is a highly subjective one, and although a particular firm or individual may be quite scrupulous in separating the two, the opportunity necessarily exists for the kind of abuse at which the statute is directed. The Act is designed to prevent situations from arising in which a bank director, officer, or employee could influence the bank or its customers to invest in securities in which his firm has an interest, regardless of whether he, as an individual, is likely to do so. In the present case, when these activities are added to the firm's "off-post trading", the firm clearly falls within the statutory definition.

(k) For the reasons just discussed, the Board concludes that the firm must be considered to be primarily engaged in activities described in section 32, and that the prohibitions of the section forbid a limited partner in that firm to serve as employee of a member bank.

§ 218.111 Interlocking relationships between bank and its commingled investment account.

(a) The Board of Governors was asked recently whether the establishment of a proposed "Commingled Investment Account" ("Account") by a national bank would involve a violation of section 32 of the Banking Act of 1933 in view of the interlocking relationships that would exist between the bank and Account.

(b) From the information submitted, it was understood that Account would comprise a commingled fund, to be operated under the effective control of the bank, for the collective investment of sums of money that might otherwise be handled individually by the bank as managing agent. It was understood further that the Comptroller of the Currency had taken the position that Account would be an eligible operation for a national bank under his Regulation 9, "Fiduciary Powers of National Banks and Collective Investment Funds" (Part 9 of this title). The bank had advised the Board that the Securities and Exchange Commission was of the view that Account would be a "registered investment company" within the meaning of the Investment Company Act of 1940, and that participating interests in Account would be "securities" subject to the registration requirements of the Securities Act of 1933.

(c) The information submitted showed also that the minimum individual participation that would be permitted in Account would be $10,000, while the maximum acceptable individual investment would be half a million dollars; that there would be no "load" or payment by customers for the privilege of investing in Account; and that: "The availability of the Commingled Account would not be given publicity by the Bank except in connection with the promotion of its fiduciary services in general and the Bank would not advertise or publicize the Commingled Account as such. Participations in the Commingled Account are to be made available only on the premises of the Bank (including its branches), or to persons who are already customers of the Bank in other connections, or in response to unsolicited requests."

(d) Such information indicated further that participations would be received by the bank as agent, under a broad authorization signed by the customer, substantially equivalent to the power of attorney under which customers currently deposit their funds for individual investment, and that the participations would not be received "in trust."

(e) The Board understood that Account would be required to comply with certain requirements of the Federal securities laws not applicable to an ordinary common trust fund operated by a bank. In particular, supervision of Account would be in the hands of a committee to be initially appointed by the bank, but subsequently elected by participants having a majority of the units of participation in Account. At least one member of the committee would be entirely independent of the bank, but the remaining members would be officers in the trust department of the bank.

(f) The committee would make a management agreement with the bank under which the bank would be responsible for managing Account's investments, have custody of its assets, and maintain its books and records. The management agreement would be renewed annually if approved by the committee, including a "majority" of the independent members, or by a vote of participants having a majority of the units of participation. The agreement would be terminable on 60 days' notice by the committee, by such a majority of the participants, or by the bank, and would terminate automatically if assigned by the bank.

(g) It was understood also that the bank would receive as annual compensation for its services one-half of one percent of Account's average net assets. Account would also pay for its own independent professional services, including legal, auditing, and accounting services, as well as the cost of maintaining its registration and qualification under the Federal securities laws.

(h) Initially, the assets of Account would be divided into units of participation of an arbitrary value, and each customer would be credited with a number of units proportionate to his investment. Subsequently, the assets of Account would be valued at regular intervals, and divided by the number of units outstanding. New investors would receive units at their current value, determined in this way, according to the amount invested. Each customer would receive a receipt evidencing the number of units to which he was entitled. The receipts themselves would be nontransferable, but it would be possible for a customer to arrange with Account for the transfer of his units to someone else. A customer could terminate his participation at any time and withdraw the current value of his units.

(i) Section 32 of the Banking Act of 1933 provides in relevant part that: "No officer, director, or employee of any corporation or unincorporated association, no partner or employee of any partnership, and no individual, primarily engaged in the issue, flotation, underwriting, public sale, or distribution, at wholesale or retail, or through syndicate participation, of stocks, bonds, or other similar securities, shall serve [at] the same time as an officer, director, or employee of any member bank * * *."

(j) The Board concluded, based on its understanding of the proposal and on the general principles that have been developed in respect to the application of section 32, that the bank and Account would constitute a single entity for the purposes of section 32, at least so long as the operation of Account conformed to the representations made by the bank and outlined herein. Accordingly, the Board said that section 32 would not forbid officers of the bank to serve on Account's committee, since Account would be regarded as nothing more than an arm or department of the bank.

(k) In conclusion, the Board called attention to section 21 of the Banking Act of 1933 which, briefly, forbids a securities firm or organization to engage in the business of receiving deposits, subject to certain exceptions. However, since section 21 is a criminal statute, the Board has followed the policy of not expressing views as to its meaning. (1934 Federal Reserve Bulletin 41, 543.) The Board, therefore, expressed no position with respect to whether the section might be held applicable to the establishment and operation of the proposed "Commingled Investment Account."

§ 218.112 Interlocking relationships between member bank and variable annuity insurance company.

(a) The Board has recently been asked to consider whether section 32 of the Banking Act of 1933 (12 U.S.C. 78) and this part prohibit interlocking service between member banks and (1) the board of managers of an accumulation fund, registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. 80), that sells variable annuities and (2) the board of directors of the insurance company, of which the accumulation fund is a "separate account," but as to which the insurance company is the sponsor, investment advisor, underwriter, and distributor. Briefly, a variable annuity is one providing for annuity payment varying in accordance with the changing values of a portfolio of securities.

(b) Section 32 provides in relevant part that: "No officer, director, or employee of any corporation or unincorporated association, no partner or employee of any partnership, and no individual, primarily engaged in the issue, flotation, underwriting, public sale, or distribution, at wholesale or retail, or through syndicate participation, of stocks, bonds, or other similar securities, shall serve [at] the same time as an officer, director, or employee of any member bank * * *".

(c) For many years, the Board's position has been that an open-end investment company (or mutual fund) is "primarily engaged in the issue * * * public sale, or distribution * * * of securities" since the issuance and sale of its stock is essential to the maintenance of the company's size and to the continuance of its operations without substantial contraction, and that section 32 of the Banking Act of 1933 prohibits an officer, director, or employee of any such company from serving at the same time as an officer, director, or employee of any member bank. (1951 Federal Reserve Bulletin 645; § 218.101.)

(d) For reasons similar to those stated by the U.S. Supreme Court in Securities and Exchange Commission v. Variable Annuity Life Insurance Company of America, 359 U.S. 65 (1959), the Board concluded that there is no meaningful basis for distinguishing a variable annuity interest from a mutual fund share for section 32 purposes and that, therefore, variable annuity interests should also be regarded as "other similar securities" within the prohibition of the statute and regulation.

(e) The Board concluded also that, since the accumulation fund, like a mutual fund, must continually issue and sell its investment units in order to avoid the inevitable contraction of its activities as it makes annuity payments or redeems variable annuity units, the accumulation fund is "primarily engaged" for section 32 purposes. The Board further concluded that the insurance company was likewise "primarily engaged" for the purposes of the statute since it had no significant revenue producing operations other than as underwriter and distributor of the accumulation fund's units and investment advisor to the fund.

(f) Although it was clear, therefore, that section 32 prohibits any officers, directors, and employees of member banks from serving in any such capacity with the insurance company or accumulation fund, the Board also considered whether members of the board of managers of the accumulation fund are "officers, directors, or employees" within such prohibition. The functions of the board of managers, who are elected by the variable annuity contract owners, are, with the approval of the variable annuity contract owners, to select annually an independent public accountant, execute annually an agreement providing for investment advisory services, and recommend any changes in the fundamental investment policy of the accumulation fund. In addition, the Board of managers has sole authority to execute an agreement providing for sales and administrative services and to authorize all investments of the assets of the accumulation fund in accordance with its fundamental investment policy. In the opinion of the Board of Governors, the board of managers of the accumulation fund performs functions essentially the same as those performed by classes of persons as to whom the prohibition of section 32 was specifically directed and, accordingly, are within the prohibitions of the statute.

§ 218.113 Interlocking relationships between member bank and insurance company-mutual fund complex.

(a) The Board has been asked whether section 32 of the Banking Act of 1933 and this part prohibited interlocking service between member banks and (1) the advisory board of a newly organized open-end investment company (mutual fund), (2) the fund's incorporated investment manager-advisor, (3) the insurance company sponsoring and apparently controlling the fund.

(b) X Fund, Inc. ("Fund"), the mutual fund, was closely related to X Life Insurance Company ("Insurance Company"), as well as to the incorporated manager and investment advisor to Fund ("Advisors"), and the corporation serving as underwriter for Fund ("Underwriters"). The same persons served as principal officers and directors of Insurance Company, Fund, Advisors, and Underwriters. In addition, several directors of member banks served as directors of Insurance Company and of Advisors and as members of the Advisory Board of Fund, and additional directors of member banks had been named only as members of the Advisory Board. All outstanding shares of Advisors and of Underwriters were apparently owned by Insurance Company.

(c) Section 32 provides in relevant part that: "No officer, director, or employee of any corporation * * * primarily engaged in the issue, flotation, underwriting, public sale, or distribution at wholesale or retail, or through syndicate participation, of stocks, bonds, or other similar securities, shall serve [at] the same time as an officer, director, or employee of any member bank * * *".

(d) The Board of Governors reaffirmed its earlier position that an open-end investment company is "primarily engaged" in activities described in section 32 "even though the shares are sold to the public through independent organizations with the result that the investment company does not derive any direct profit from the sales." (1951 Federal Reserve Bulletin 654, § 218.101.) Accordingly, the Board concluded that Fund must be regarded as so engaged, even though its shares were underwritten and distributed by Underwriters.

(e) As directors of the member banks involved in the inquiry were not officers, directors, or employees of either Fund or Underwriters, the relevant questions were whether—

(1) Advisors, and

(2) Insurance Company, should be regarded as being functionally and structurally so closely allied with Fund that they should be treated as one with it in determining the applicability of section 32. An additional question was whether members of the Advisory Board are "officers, directors, or employees" of Fund within the prohibition of the statute.

(f) Interlocking service with Advisory Board: The function of the Advisory Board was merely to make suggestions and to counsel with Fund's Board of Directors in regard to investment policy. The Advisory Board had no authority to make binding recommendations in any area, and it did not serve in any sense as a check on the authority of the Board of Directors. Indeed, the Fund's bylaws provided that the Advisory Board "shall have no power or authority to make any contract or incur any liability whatever or to take any action binding upon the Corporation, the Officers, the Board of Directors or the Stockholders." Members of the Advisory Board were appointed by the Board of Directors of Fund, which could remove any member of the Advisory Board at any time. None of the principal officers of Fund or of Underwriters were members of the Advisory Board; and the compensation of its members was expected to be nominal.

(g) The Board of Governors concluded that members of the Advisory Board need not be regarded as "officers, directors, or employees" of Fund or of Underwriters for purposes of section 32, and that the statute, therefore, did not prohibit officers, directors, or employees of member banks from serving as members of the Advisory Board.

(h) Interlocking service with Advisors: The principal officers and several of the directors of Advisors were identical with both those of Fund and of Underwriters. Entire management and investment responsibility for Fund had been placed, by contract, with Advisors, subject only to a review authority in the Board of Directors of Fund. Advisors also supplied office space for the conduct of Fund's affairs, and compensated members of the Advisory Board who are also officers or directors of Advisors. Moreover, it appeared that Advisors was created for the sole purpose of servicing Fund, and its activities were to be limited to that function.

(i) In the view of the Board of Governors, the structural and functional identity of Fund and Advisors was such that they were to be regarded as a single entity for purposes of section 32, and, accordingly, officers, directors, and employees of member banks were prohibited by section 32 from serving in any such capacity with such entity.

(j) Interlocking service with Insurance Company: It was clear that Insurance Company was not as yet "primarily engaged" in business of a kind described in section 32 with respect to the shares of the newly created Fund sponsored by Insurance Company, since the issue and sale of such shares had not yet commenced. Nor did it appear that Insurance Company would be so engaged in the preliminary stages of Fund's existence, when the disproportion between the insurance business of Insurance Company and the sale of Fund shares would be very great. However, it was also clear that if Fund was successfully launched, its activities would rather quickly reach a stage where a serious question would arise as to the applicability of the section 32 prohibition.

(k) An estimate supplied to the Board indicated that 100,000 shares of Fund might be sold annually to produce, based on then current values, annual gross sales receipts of over $1 million. Insurance Company's total gross income for its last fiscal year was almost $10 million. On this basis, about one-tenth of the annual gross income of the Insurance Company-

Fund complex (more than one-tenth, if income from investments of Insurance Company was eliminated) would be derived from sales of Fund shares. Although total sales of shares of Fund during the first year might not approximate expectations, it was assumed that if the estimate or projection was correct, the annual rate of sale might well rise to that level before the end of the first year of operation.

(l) It appeared that net income of Insurance Company from Fund's operations would be minimal for the foreseeable future. However, it was understood that Insurance Company's chief reason for launching Fund was to provide salesmen for Insurance Company (who were to be the only sellers of shares of Fund, and most of whom, Insurance Company hoped, would qualify to sell those shares), with a "package" of mutual fund shares and life insurance policies that would provide increased competitive strength in a highly competitive field.

(m) The Board concluded that Insurance Company would be "primarily engaged" in issuing or distributing shares of Fund within the meaning of section 32 by not later than the time of realization of the aforementioned estimated annual rate of sale, and possibly before. As indicated in Board of Governors v. Agnew, 329 U.S. 441 at 446, the prohibition of the statute applies if the section 32 business involved is a "substantial" activity of the company.

(n) This, the Board observed, was not to suggest that officers, directors, or employees of Insurance Company who are also directors of member banks would be likely, as individuals, to use their positions with the banks to further sales of Fund's shares. However, as the Supreme Court pointed out in the Agnew case, section 32 is a "preventive or prophylactic measure." The fact that the individuals involved "have been scrupulous in their relationships" to the banks in question "is immaterial."

[33 FR 13001, Sept. 14, 1968]

§ 218.114 Interlocking service between securities companies and bank holding companies.

(a) The Board has recently considered whether section 32 of the Banking Act of 1933 (12 U.S.C. 78) and this part (Regulation R) prohibit a person primarily engaged in securities activities described in section 32, or associated with an organization so engaged, from serving as an officer, director, or employee of a holding company proposed to be organizd by a member bank to own all the stock of such bank.

(b) Section 32 provides in relevant part that: "No officer, director, or employee of any corporation or unincorporated association, no partner or employee of any partnership, and no individual, primarily engaged in the issue, flotation, underwriting, public sale, or distribution, at wholesale or retail, or through syndicate participation, of stocks, bonds, or other similar securities, shall serve [at] the same time as an officer, director, or employee of any member bank * * *."

(c) As the U.S. Supreme Court observed in Board of Governors v. Agnew, 329 U.S. 441 (1946), "Section 32 is directed to the probability or likelihood, based on the experience of the 1920's, that a bank director interested in the underwriting business may use his influence in the bank to involve it or its customers in securities which his underwriting house has in its portfolio or has committed itself to take. * * * It [section 32] is a preventive or prophylactic measure."

(d) In an earlier interpretation, the Board had concluded that section 32 did not prohibit a partner of a securities firm from serving as a director of a long-established holding company, with seven nonbank subsidiaries, that recently had acquired the controlling stock of a member bank. In distinguishing that situation from the present matter, the Board observed that the predominant—in fact, almost the sole—function of the proposed bank holding company would be to hold the stock of the bank. It therefore appeared to the Board that the affairs of the member bank and the holding company would be so closely identified and functionally related that the same possibilities of abuse which section 32 was designed to guard against would be present in the case of a director of the holding company as in the case of a director of the member bank. To give cognizance to the separate corporate entities in such a situation, would, in the Board's opinion, partially frustrate Congressional purpose in enacting the statute.

(e) The Board concluded that where the principal activity of a holding company is the ownership and control of banks, including one or more member banks, the holding company and each member bank subsidiary should be considered as constituting together a single entity for section 32 purposes, so that a person who is primarily engaged in section 32 business or associated with an organization so engaged is prohibited by that law from serving as an officer, director, or employee of such a holding company.

§ 219.1 Authority, purpose and scope.

This part is issued by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System under section 1115 of the Right to Financial Privacy Act of 1978 (the "Act") (12 U.S.C. 3415). It establishes the rates and conditions for reimbursement of reasonably necessary costs directly incurred by financial institutions in assembling or providing customer financial records to a government authority.

For the purposes of this part, the following definitions shall apply:

(a) "Financial institution" means any office of a bank, savings bank, card issuer as defined in section 103 of the Consumers Credit Protection Act (15 U.S.C. 1602(n)), industrial loan company, trust company, savings and loan, building and loan, or homestead association (including cooperative banks), credit union, or consumer finance institution, located in any State or territory of the United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, or the Virgin Islands.

(b) "Financial record" means an original of, a copy of, or information known to have been derived from, any record held by a financial institution pertaining to a customer's relationship with the financial institution.

(c) "Government authority" means any agency or department of the United States, or any officer, employee or agent thereof.

(d) "Person" means an individual or a partnership of five or fewer individuals.

(e) "Customer" means any person or authorized representative of that person who utilized or is utilizing any service of a financial institution, or for whom a financial institution is acting or has acted as a fiduciary, in relation to an account maintained in the person's name. "Customer" does not include corporations or partnerships comprised of more than five persons.

(f) "Directly incurred costs" means costs incurred solely and necessarily as a consequence of searching for, reproducing or transporting books, papers, records, or other data, in order to comply with legal process or a formal written request or a customer's authorization to produce a customer's financial records. The term does not include any allocation of fixed costs (overhead, equipment, depreciation, etc.). If a financial institution has financial records that are stored at an independent storage facility that charges a fee to search for, reproduce, or transport particular records requested, these costs are considered to be directly incurred by the financial institution.

Except as hereinafter provided, a government authority requiring or requesting access to financial records pertaining to a customer shall pay to the financial institution that assembles or provides the financial records a fee for reimbursement of reasonably necessary costs which have been directly incurred according to the following schedule:

(a) Search and processing costs. (1) Reimbursement of search and processing costs shall be the total amount of personnel direct time incurred in locating and retrieving, reproducing, packaging and preparing financial records for shipment.

(2) The rate for search and processing costs is $10 per hour per person, computed on the basis of $2.50 per quarter hour or fraction thereof, and is limited to the total amount of personnel time spent in locating and retrieving documents or information or reproducing or packaging and preparing documents for shipment where required or requested by a government authority. Specific salaries of such persons shall not be included in search costs. In addition, search and processing costs do not include salaries, fees, or similar costs for analysis of material or for managerial or legal advice, expertise, research, or time spent for any of these activities. If itemized separately, search and processing costs may include the actual cost of extracting information stored by computer in the format in which it is normally produced, based on computer time and necessary supplies; however, personnel time for computer search may be paid for only at the rate specified in this paragraph.

(b) Reproduction costs. (1) Reimbursement for reproduction costs shall be for costs incurred in making copies of documents required or requested.

(2) The rate for reproduction costs for making copies of required or requested documents is 15 cents for each page, including copies produced by reader/printer reproduction processes. Photographs, films, and other materials are reimbursed at actual cost.

(c) Transportation costs. Reimbursement for transportation costs shall be for (1) necessary costs, directly incurred, to transport personnel to locate and retrieve the information required or requested; and (2) necessary costs, directly incurred solely by the need to convey the required or requested material to the place of examination.

§ 219.4 Exceptions.

A financial institution is not entitled to reimbursement under the Act for costs incurred in assembling or providing the following financial records or information:

(a) Security interests, bankruptcy claims, debt collection. Any financial records provided as an incident to perfecting a security interest, proving a claim in bankruptcy, or otherwise collecting on a debt owing either to the financial institution itself or in its role as a fiduciary.

(b) Government loan programs. Financial records provided in connection with a government authority's consideration or administration of assistance to a customer in the form of a government loan, loan guaranty, or loan insurance program; or as an incident to processing an application for assistance to a customer in the form of a government loan, loan guaranty, or loan insurance agreement; or as an incident to processing a default on, or administering, a government-guaranteed or insured loan, as necessary to permit a responsible government authority to carry out its responsibilities under the loan, loan guaranty, or loan insurance agreement.

(c) Nonidentifiable information. Financial records that are not identified with or identifiable as being derived from the financial records of a particular customer.

(d) Financial supervisory agencies. Financial records disclosed to a financial supervisory agency in the exercise of its supervisory, regulatory, or monetary functions with respect to a financial institution.

(e) Internal Revenue summons. Financial records disclosed in accordance with procedures authorized by the Internal Revenue Code.

(f) Federally required reports. Financial records required to be reported in accordance with any federal statute or rule promulgated thereunder (such as the Bank Secrecy Act).

(g) Government civil or criminal litigation. Financial records sought by a government authority under the Federal Rules of Civil or Criminal Procedure or comparable rules of other courts in connection with litigation to which the government authority and the customer are parties.

(h) Administrative agency subpoenas. Financial records sought by a government authority pursuant to an administrative subpoena issued by an administrative law judge in an adjudicatory proceeding subject to section 554 of Title 5, United States Code, and to which the government authority and the customer are parties.

(i) Identity of accounts in limited circumstances. Financial information sought by a government authority, in accordance with the Right to Financial Privacy Act procedures and for a legitimate law enforcement inquiry, and limited only to the name, address, account number and type of account of any customer or ascertainable group of customers associated (1) with a financial transaction or class of financial transactions, or (2) with a foreign country or subdivision thereof in the case of a government authority exercising financial controls over foreign accounts in the United States under section 5(b) of the Trading With the Enemy Act (50 U.S.C. App. 5(b)); the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (Title II, Pub. L. 95-223); or section 5 of the United Nations Participation Act (22 U.S.C. 287(c).

(j) Investigation of a financial institution or its noncustomers. Financial records sought by a government authority in connection with a lawful proceeding, investigation, examination, or inspection directed at the financial institution in possession of such records or at a legal entity which is not a customer.

(k) General Accounting Office requests. Financial records sought by the General Accounting Office pursuant to an authorized proceeding, investigation, examination or audit directed at a government authority.

(l) Securities and Exchange Commission requests. Until November 10, 1980, financial records sought by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

§ 219.5 Conditions for payment.

(a) Limitations. Payment for reasonably necessary, directly incurred costs to financial institutions shall be limited to material required or requested.

(b) Separate consideration of component costs. Payment shall be made only for costs that are both directly incurred and reasonably necessary. In determining whether costs are reasonably necessary, search and processing, reproduction, and transportation costs shall be considered separately.

(c) Compliance with legal process, request, or authorization. No payment shall be made until the financial institution satisfactorily complies with the legal process or formal written request, or customer authorization, except that in the case where the legal process or formal written request is withdrawn, or the customer authorization is revoked, or where the customer successfully challenges access by or disclosure to a government authority, the financial institution shall be reimbursed for reasonably necessary costs directly incurred in assembling financial records required or requested to be produced prior to the time that the government authority notifies the institution that the legal process or request is withdrawn or defeated, or that the customer has revoked his or her authorization.

(d) Itemized bill or invoice. No payment shall be made unless the financial institution submits an itemized bill or invoice showing specific details concerning the search and processing, reproduction, and transportation costs.

§ 219.6 Payment procedures.

(a) Notice to submit invoice. Promptly following a government authority's service of legal process or request, the government authority shall notify the financial institution that an itemized bill or invoice must be submitted for payment and shall furnish an office address for this purpose.

(b) Special notice. If a government authority withdraws the legal process or formal written request, or if the customer revokes his or her authorization, or if the legal process or request has been successfully challenged by the customer, the government authority shall promptly notify the financial institution of these facts, and shall also notify the financial institution that the itemized bill or invoice must be submitted for payment of costs incurred prior to the time that the financial institution receives this notice.

§ 220.1 Authority, purpose, and scope.

(a) Authority and purpose. Regulation T (this part) is issued by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (the Board) pursuant to the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (the Act) (15 U.S.C. 78a et seq.). Its principal purpose is to regulate extensions of credit by and to brokers and dealers; it also covers related transactions within the Board's authority under the Act. It imposes, among other obligations, initial margin requirements and payment rules on securities transactions.

(b) Scope. (1) This part provides a margin account and seven special purpose accounts in which to record all financial relations between a customer and a creditor. Any transaction not specifically permitted in a special account shall be recorded in a margin account.

(2) This part does not preclude any exchange, national securities association, or creditor from imposing additional requirements or taking action for its own protection.

The terms used in this part have the meanings given them in section 3(a) of the Act or as defined in this section.

(2) If a nonmargin, nonexempted security is acquired in exchange for a margin security, its retention, withdrawal, or sale within 60 days following its acquisition shall be treated as if the security is a margin security.

(g) Valuing securities. The current market value of a security shall be determined as follows:

(1) Throughout the day of the purchase or sale of a security, the creditor shall use the security's total cost of purchase or the net proceeds of its sale including any commissions charged.

(2) At any other time, the creditor shall use the closing sale price of the security on the preceding business day, as shown by any regularly published reporting or quotation service. If there is no closing price, the creditor may use any reasonable estimate of the market value of the security as of the close of business on the preceding business day.

(h) Innocent mistakes. If any failure to comply with this part results from a mistake made in good faith in executing a transaction or calculating the amount of margin, the creditor shall not be deemed in violation of this part if, promptly after the discovery of the mistake, the creditor takes appropriate corrective action.

(i) Variable annuity contracts issued by insurance companies. Any insurance company that issues or sells variable annuity contracts or engages in a general securities business as a broker or dealer shall be subject to this part only for transactions in connection with those activities. Extensions of credit associated with conventional lending practices of insurance companies are subject to Part 207 of this chapter.

§ 220.4 Margin account.

(a) Margin transactions. (1) All transactions not specifically authorized for inclusion in another account shall be recorded in the margin account.

(2) A creditor may establish separate margin accounts for the same person to:

(i) Clear transactions for other creditors where the transactions are introduced to the clearing creditor by separate creditors; or

(ii) Clear transactions through other creditors if the transactions are effected by separate creditors; or

(iii) Provided one or more accounts over which the creditor or a third party investment adviser has investment discretion.

(b) Required margin. The required margin for each position in securities is set forth in § 220.18 (the Supplement) and is subject to the exceptions and special provisions contained in § 220.5 (Margin Account Exceptions and Special Provisions).

(c) When additional margin is required—(1) Computing deficiency. All transactions on the same day shall be combined to determine whether additional margin is required by the creditor. For the purpose of computing equity in an account, security positions are established or eliminated and a credit or debit created on the trade date of a security transaction. Additional margin is required on any day when the day's transactions create or increase a margin deficiency in the account and shall be for the amount of the margin deficiency so created or increased.

(2) Satisfaction of deficiency. The additional required margin may be satisfied by a transfer from the special memorandum account or by a deposit of cash, margin securities, exempted securities, or any combination thereof.

(3) Time limits. (i) A margin call shall be satisfied within 7 business days after the margin deficiency was created or increased.

(ii) The 7 day period may be extended for one or more limited periods upon application by the creditor to a self-regulatory organization or national securities association unless the organization or association believes that the creditor is not acting in good faith or that the creditor has not sufficiently determined that exceptional circumstances warrant such action. Applications shall be filed and acted upon prior to the end of the 7 day period or the expiration of any subsequent extension. However, applications filed by firms having no direct electronic access to the organization or association may be accepted as timely filed if postmarked by midnight of the last day of the 7 day period or any subsequent extension.

(4) Satisfaction restriction. Any transaction, position, or deposit that is used to satisfy one requirement under this part shall be unavailable to satisfy any other requirement.

(d) Liquidation in lieu of deposit. If any margin call is not met in full within the required time, the creditor shall liquidate securities sufficient to meet the margin call or to eliminate any margin deficiency existing on the day such liquidation is required, whichever is less. If the margin deficiency created or increased is $500 or less, no action need be taken by the creditor.

(e) Withdrawals of cash or securities. (1) Cash or securities may be withdrawn from an account, except if:

(i) Additional cash or securities are required to be deposited into the account for a transaction on the same or a previous day; or

(ii) The withdrawal, together with other transactions, deposits, and withdrawals on the same day, would create or increase a margin deficiency.

(2) Margin excess may be withdrawn or may be transferred to the special memorandum account (§ 220.6) by making a single entry to that account which will represent a debit to the margin account and a credit to the special memorandum account.

(3) If a creditor does not receive a distribution of cash or securities which is payable with respect to any security in a margin account on the day it is payable and withdrawal would not be permitted under this paragraph, a withdrawal transaction shall be deemed to have occurred on the day the distribution is payable.

(f) Interest, service charges, etc. (1) Without regard to the other provisions of this section, the creditor, in its usual practice, may debit the following items to a margin account if they are considered in calculating the balance of such account:

(i) Interest charged on credit maintained in the margin account;

(ii) Premiums on securities borrowed in connection with short sales or to effect delivery;

(iii) Dividends, interest, or other distributions due on borrowed securities;

(iv) Communication or shipping charges with respect to transactions in the margin account; and

(v) Any other service charges which the creditor may impose.

(2) A creditor may permit interest, dividends, or other distributions credited to a margin account to be withdrawn from the account if:

(i) The withdrawal does not create or increase a margin deficiency in the account; or

(ii) The current market value of any securities withdrawn does not exceed 10 percent of the current market value of the security with respect to which they were distributed.

§ 220.5 Margin account exceptions and special provisions.

(a) Unissued securities (1) The required margin on a net long or net short commitment in an unissued security is the margin that would be required if the security were an issued margin security, plus any unrealized loss on the commitment or less any unrealized gain.

(2) Margin is not required on a net short commitment in unissued securities when the account contains the related issued securities, nor for any net short or net long position in unissued exempted securities.

(b) Short sales—(1) The required margin for the short sale of a security shall be the amount set forth in § 220.18 (the Supplement).

(2) A short sale "against the box" shall be treated as a long sale for the purpose of computing the equity and the required margin.

(c) Options—(1) Margin or cover for options on exempted debt securities, certificates of deposit, stock indices, or securities exchange traded options on foreign currencies. The required margin for each transaction involving any short put or short call on an exempted debt security, certificate of deposit, stock index, or foreign currency (if the option is traded on a securities exchange), shall be the amount or positions in lieu of margin set forth in § 220.18 (the Supplement).

(2) Margin for options on equity securities. The required margin for each transaction involving any short put or short call on an equity security shall be the amount set forth in § 220.18 (the Supplement).

(3) Cover or positions in lieu of margin. No margin is required for an option written on an equity security position when the account holds any of the following:

(i) The underlying security in the case of a short call, or a short position in the underlying security in the case of a short put;

(ii) Securities immediately convertible into or exchangeable for the underlying security without the payment of money in the case of a short call, if the right to convert or exchange does not expire on or before the expiration date of the short call;

(iii) An escrow agreement for the underlying security or foreign exhange (in the case of a short call) or cash (in the case of a short put);

(iv) A long call on the same number of shares of the same underlying security if the long call does not expire before the expiration date of the short call, and if the amount (if any), by which the exercise price of the long call exceeds the exercise price of the short call is deposited in the account;

(v) A long put on the same number of shares of the same underlying security if the long put does not expire before the expiration date of the short put, and if the amount (if any), by which the exercise price of the short put exceeds the exercise price of the long put is deposited in the account;

(vi) A warrant to purchase the underlying security, in the case of a short call, if the warrant does not expire on or before the expiration date of the short call, and if the amount (if any), by which the exercise price of the warrant exceeds the exercise price of the short call is deposited in the account. A warrant used in lieu of the required margin under this provision shall contribute no equity to the account.

(4) Adjustments. (i) When a short position held in the account serves in lieu of the required margin for a short put, the amount prescribed by paragraph (c)(2) of this section as the amount to be added to the required margin in respect of short sales shall be increased by any unrealized loss on the position.

(ii) When a security held in the account serves in lieu of the required margin for a short call, the security shall be valued at no greater than the exercise prices of the short call.

(5) Straddles. When both a short put and a short call are in a margin account on the same number of shares of the same underlying security, the required margin shall be the margin on either the short put or the short call, whichever is greater, plus any unrealized loss on the other option.

(6) Exclusive designation. The customer may designate at the time the option order is entered which security position held in the account is to serve in lieu of the required margin, if such service is offered by the creditor; or the customer may have a standing agreement with the creditor as to the method to be used for determining on any given day which security position will be used in lieu of the margin to support an option transaction. Only security held in the account which serves in lieu of the required margin for a short put or a short call shall be unavailable to support any other option transaction in the account.

(d) Accounts of partners. If a partner of the creditor has a margin account with the creditor, the creditor shall disregard the partner's financial relations with the firm (as shown in the partner's capital and ordinary drawing accounts) in calculating the margin or equity of the partner's margin account.

(e) Contribution to joint venture. If a margin account is the account of a joint venture in which the creditor participates, any interest of the creditor in the joint account in excess of the interest which the creditor would have on the basis of its right to share in the profits shall be treated as an extension of credit to the joint account and shall be margined as such.

(f) Transfer of accounts. (1) A margin account that is transferred from one creditor to another may be treated as if it had been maintained by the transferee from the date of its origin, if the transferee accepts, in good faith, a signed statement of the transferor (or, if that is not practicable, of the customer), that any margin call issued under this part has been satisfied.

(2) A margin account that is transferred from one customer to another as part of a transaction, not undertaken to avoid the requirements of this part, may be treated as if it had been maintained for the transferee from the date of its origin, if the creditor accepts in good faith and keeps with the transferee account a signed statement of the transferor describing the circumstances for the transfer.

§ 220.6 Special memorandum account.

(a) A special memorandum account (SMA) may be maintained in conjunction with a margin account. A single entry amount may be used to represent both a credit to the SMA and a debit to the margin account. A transfer between the two accounts may be effected by an increase or reduction in the entry. When computing the equity in a margin account, the single entry amount shall be considered as a debit in the margin account. A payment to the customer or on the customer's behalf or a transfer to any of the customer's other accounts from the SMA reduces the single entry amount.

(b) The SMA may contain the following entries:

(1) Dividend and interest payments;

(2) Cash not required by this part, including cash deposited to meet a maintenance margin call or to meet any requirement of a self-regulatory organization that is not imposed by this part;

(3) Proceeds of a sale of securities or cash no longer required on any expired or liquidated security position that may be withdrawn under § 220.4(e) of this part; and

(4) Margin excess transferred from the margin account under § 220.4(e)(2) of this part.

§ 220.7 Arbitrage account.

In an arbitrage account a creditor may effect and finance for any customer bona fide arbitrage transactions. For the purpose of this section, the term "bona fide arbitrage" means:

(a) A purchase or sale of a security in one market together with an offsetting sale or purchase of the same security in a different market at as nearly the same time as practicable for the purpose of taking advantage of a difference in prices in the two markets, or

(b) A purchase of a security which is, without restriction other then the payment of money, exchangeable or convertible within 90 calendar days of the purchase into a second security together with an offsetting sale of the second security at or about the same time, for the purpose of taking advantage of a concurrent disparity in the prices of the two securities.

§ 220.8 Cash account.

(a) Permissible transactions. In a cash account, a creditor, may:

(1) Buy for or sell to any customer any security if: (i) There are sufficient funds in the accounts; or (ii) the creditor accepts in good faith the customer's agreement that the customer will promptly make full cash payment for the security before selling it and does not contemplate selling it prior to making such payment;

(2) Buy from or sell for any customer any security if: (i) The security is held in the account; or (ii) the creditor accepts in good faith the customer's statement that the security is owned by the customer or the customer's principal, and that it will be promptly deposited in the account;

(3) Issue, endorse, or guarantee an option for any customer if:

(i) In the case of a call option, the underlying security (or a security immediately convertible into the underlying security, without the payment of money) is held in or purchased for the account on the same day, and the option premium is held in the account until cash payment for the underlying or convertible security is received; or

(ii) In the case of a put option, the creditor obtains cash in an amount equal to the exercise price or holds in the account any of the following instruments with a current market value at least equal to the exerecise price and with one year or less to maturity: securities issued or guaranteed by the United States or its agencies, negotiable bank certificates of deposit, or bankers acceptances issued by banking institutions in the United States and payable in the United States.

(4) Use an escrow agreement in lieu of the cash or underlying security position if:

(i) In the case of a call or a put, the creditor is advised by the customer that the required securities or cash are held by a bank and the creditor independently verifies that an appropriate escrow agreement will be delivered by the bank promptly; or

(ii) In the case of a call issued, endorsed, or guaranteed on the same day the underlying security is purchased in the account and the underlying security is to be delivered to a bank, the creditor verifies that an appropiate escrow agreement will be delivered by the bank promptly.

(b) Time periods for payment; cancellation or liquidation—(1) Full cash payment. A creditor shall obtain full cash payment for customer purchases within 7 business days of the date:

(i) Any nonexempted security was purchased;

(ii) Any unissued security was made available by the issuer for delivery to purchasers;

(iii) Any "when distributed" security was distributed under a published plan;

(iv) A security owned by the customer has matured or has been redeemed and a new refunding security of the same issuer has been purchased by the customer, provided:

(A) The customer purchased the new security no more than 35 calendar days prior to the date of maturity or redemption of the old security;

(B) The customer is entitled to the proceeds of the redemption; and

(C) The delayed payment does not exceed 103 percent of the proceeds of the old security.

(2) Delivery against payment. If a creditor purchases for or sells to a customer a security in a delivery against payment transaction, the creditor shall have up to 35 calendar days to obtain payment if delivery of the security is delayed due to the mechanics of the transaction and is not related to the customer's willingness or ability to pay.

(3) Shipment of securities, extension. If any shipment of securities is incidental to consummation of a transaction, a creditor may extend the 7 business day period by the number of days required for shipment, but not by more than 7 business days.

(4) Cancellation; liquidation; minimum amount. A creditor shall promptly cancel or otherwise liquidate a transaction or any part of a transaction for which the customer has not made full cash payment within the required time. A creditor may, at its option, disregard any sum due from the customer not exceeding $500.

(c) 90 day freeze. (1) If a nonexempted security in the account is sold or delivered to another broker or dealer without having been previously paid for in full by the customer, the privilege of delaying payment beyond the trade date shall be withdrawn for 90 calendar days following the date of sale of the security. Cancellation of the transaction other than to correct an error shall constitute a sale.

(2) The 90 day freeze shall not apply if: (i) Within 7 business days of the trade date, full payment is received or any check or draft in payment has cleared and the proceeds from the sale are not withdrawn prior to such payment or check clearance; or (ii) the purchased security was delivered to another broker or dealer for deposit in a cash account which holds sufficient funds to pay for the security. The creditor may rely on a written statement accepted in good faith from the other broker or dealer that sufficient funds are held in the other cash account.

(d) Extension of time periods; transfers. (1) Unless a self-regulatory organization or association believes that the creditor is not acting in good faith or that the creditor has not sufficiently determined that exceptional circumstances warrant such action, it may, upon application by the creditor:

(i) Extend any period specified in paragraph (b) of this section;

(ii) Authorize transfer to another account of any transaction involving the purchase of a margin or exempted security; or

(iii) Grant a waiver from the 90 day freeze.

(2) Applications shall be filed and acted upon prior to the end of the 7 day period or the expiration of any subsequent extension. However, an application filed from firms having no direct electronic access to the exchange or association may be accepted as timely filed if it is postmarked no later than midnight of the last day of the 7 day period or any subsequent extension.

§ 220.9 Nonsecurities credit and employee stock ownership account.

(a) In a nonsecurities credit account a creditor may:

(1) Effect and carry transactions in commodities;

(2) Effect and carry transactions in foreign exchange;

(3) Extend and maintain secured or unsecured nonpurpose credit, subject to the requirements of paragraph (b) of this section.

(4) Extend and maintain credit to employee stock ownership plans without regard to the other sections of this part.

(b) Every extension of credit, except as provided in paragraphs (a) (1) and (2) of this section, shall be deemed to be purpose credit unless, prior to extending the credit, the creditor accepts in good faith from the customer a written statement that it is not purpose credit. The statement shall conform to the requirements established by the Board. To accept the customer's statement in good faith, the creditor shall be aware of the circumstances surrounding the extension of credit and shall be satisfied that the statement is truthful.

§ 220.10 Omnibus account.

(a) In an omnibus account, a creditor may effect and finance transactions for a broker or dealer who is registered with the SEC under section 15 of the Act and who gives the creditor written notice that:

(1) All securities will be for the account of customers of the broker or dealer; and

(2) Any short sales effected will be short sales made on behalf of the customers of the broker or dealer other than partners.

(b) The written notice required by paragraph (a) shall conform to any SEC rule on the hypothecation of customers' securities by brokers or dealers.

§ 220.11 Broker-dealer credit account.

(a) Permissible transactions. In a broker-dealer credit account, a creditor may:

(1) Purchase any security from or sell any security to another creditor under a good faith agreement to promptly deliver the security against full payment of the purchase price.

(2) Effect or finance transactions of any of its owners if the creditor is a clearing and servicing broker or dealer owned jointly or individually by other creditors.

(3) Extend and maintain credit to any partner or stockholder of the creditor for the purpose of making a capital contribution to, or purchasing stock of, the creditor, affiliated corporation or another creditor.

(4) Extend and maintain, with the approval of the appropriate examining authority:

(i) Credit to meet the emergency needs of any creditor; or

(ii) Subordinated credit to another creditor for capital purposes, if the other creditor:

(A) Is an affiliated corporation; or

(B) Will not use the proceeds of the loan to increase the amount of dealing in securities for the account of the creditor, its firm or corporation or an affiliated corporation.

(b) For purposes of paragraphs (a) (3) and (4) of this section "affiliated corporation" means a corporation all the common stock of which is owned directly or indirectly by the firm or general partners and employees of the firm, or by the corporation or holders of the controlling stock and employees of the corporation and the affiliation has been approved by the creditor's examining authority.

§ 220.12 Market functions account.

(a) Requirements. In a market functions account, a creditor may effect or finance the transactions of market participants in accordance with the following provisions. A separate record shall be kept for the transactions specified for each category described in paragraphs (b) through (e) of this section. Any position in a separate record shall not be used to meet the requirements of any other category.

(b) Specialists—(1) Applicability. A creditor may clear or finance specialist transactions for any specialist, or any specialist joint account, in which all participants, or all participants other than the creditor, are registered as specialists on a national securities exchange that requires regular reports on the use of specialist credit from the registered specialists.

(2) Permitted offset positions. A specialist in options may establish, on a share-for-share basis, a long or short position in the securities underlying the options in which the specialist makes a market, and a specialist in securities other than options may purchase or write options overlying the securities in which the specialist makes a market, if the account holds the following permitted offset positions:

(i) A short option position which is "in or at the money" and is not offset by a long or short option position for an equal or greater number of shares of the same underlying security which is "in the money";

(ii) A long option position which is "in or at the money" and is not offset by a long or short option position for an equal or greater number of shares of the same underlying security which is "in the money";

(iii) A short option position against which an exercise notice was tendered;

(iv) A long option position which was exercised;

(v) A net long position in a security (other than an option) in which the specialist makes a market; or

(vi) A net short position in a security (other than an option) in which the specialist makes a market.

(3) Required margin. The required margin for a specialist's transactions shall be:

(i) Good faith margin for any long or short position in a security in which the specialist makes a market;

(ii) Good faith margin for any wholly-owned margin security or exempted security;

(iii) The margin prescribed by § 220.18 (the Supplement) when a security purchased or sold short in the account does not qualify as a specialist or permitted offset position.

(4) Additional margin; restriction on "free-riding." (i) Except as required by paragraph (b)(5) of this section, the creditor shall issue a margin call on any day when additional margin is required as a result of specialist transactions. The creditor may allow the specialist a maximum of 7 business days to satisfy a margin call.

(ii) If a specialist fails to satisfy a margin call within the period specified in this paragraph (and the creditor is required to liquidate securities to satisfy the call), the creditor shall be prohibited for a 15 calendar day period from extending any further credit to the specialist to finance transactions in nonspecialty securities.

(iii) The restriction on "free-riding" shall not apply to:

(A) Any specialist on a national securities exchange that has an SEC-approved rule on "free-riding" by specialists; or (B) the acquisition or liquidation of a permitted offset position.

(5) Deficit status. On any day when a specialist's separate record would liquidate to a deficit, the creditor shall not extend any further specialist credit in the account and shall issue a margin call at least as large as the deficit. If the call is not met by noon of the following business day, the creditor shall liquidate positions in the specialist's account.

(6) Withdrawals. Withdrawals may be permitted to the extent that the equity exceeds the margin requirements specified in paragraph (b)(3) of this section.

(c) Underwritings and distributions. A creditor may effect or finance for any dealer or group of dealers transactions for the purpose of facilitating the underwriting or distribution of all or a part of an issue of securities with a good faith margin.

(d) OTC Marketmakers and Third Marketmakers. (1) A creditor may clear or finance with a good faith margin, marketmaking transactions for an OTC marketmaker or a third marketmaker who:

(i) Is in compliance with any applicable SEC rule, including minimum net capital rules;

(ii) Regularly submits bona fide competitive bid and offer quotations to a recognized inter-dealer quotation system;

(iii) Is ready, willing, and able to effect transactions in reasonable amounts with other brokers and dealers at the quoted prices; and

(iv) Has a reasonable average rate of inventory turnover.

(2) If the credit extended to a marketmaker ceases to be for the purpose of marketmaking, or the dealer ceases to be a marketmaker for an issue of securities for which credit was extended, the credit shall be subject to the margin specified in § 220.18 (the Supplement).

(e) Odd-lot dealers. A creditor may clear and finance odd-lot transactions for any creditor who is registered as an odd-lot dealer on a national securities exchange with a good faith margin.

§ 220.13 Arranging for loans by others.

A creditor may not arrange for the extension or maintenance of credit to or for any customer by any person upon terms and conditions other than those upon which the creditor may itself extend or maintain credit under the provisions of this part, except that this limitation shall not apply to credit arranged for a customer which does not violate parts 207 and 221 of this chapter and results solely from:

(a) Investment banking services, provided by the creditor to the customer, including, but not limited to, underwritings, private placements, and advice and other services in connection with exchange offers, mergers, or acquisitions, except for underwritings that involve the public distribution of an equity security with installment or other deferred payment provisions; or

(b) The sales of nonmargin securities (including securities with installment or other deferred payment provisions) if the sale is exempted from the registration requirements of the Securities Act of 1933 under section 4(2) of section 4(6) of the Act; or

(c) A subsequent loan or advance on a face-amount certificate as permitted under 15 U.S.C. 80a-28(d).

§ 220.14 Clearance of securities.

(a) Credit for clearance of securities. The provisions of this part shall not apply to the extension or maintenance of any credit that is not for more than one day if it is incidental to the clearance of transactions in securities directly between members of a national securities exchange or association or through any clearing agency registered with the SEC.

(b) Deposit of securities with options clearing agency. The provisions of this part shall not apply to the deposit of securities with an options clearing agency for the purpose of meeting its deposit requirements if:

(1) The clearing agency issues options on securities;

(2) The clearing agency is registered with the SEC; and

(3) The deposit consists of any margin security and complies with the rules of the clearing agency which have been approved by the SEC.

§ 220.15 Borrowing by creditors.

(a) Restrictions on borrowing. A creditor may not borrow in the ordinary course of business as a broker or dealer using as collateral any registered nonexempted security, except:

(1) From or through a member bank of the Federal Reserve System; or

(2) From any nonmember bank that has filed with the Board an agreement as prescribed in paragraph (b) of this section, which agreement is still in effect; or

(3) From another creditor if the loan is permissible under this part.

(b) Agreements of nonmember banks. (1) A nonmember bank shall file an agreement that conforms to the requirements of section 8(a) of the Act (See Form F.R. T-2) if:

(i) Its principal place of business is in a territory or insular possession of the United States; or

(ii) It has an office or agency in the United States and its principal place of business is outside the United States.

(2) Any other nonmember bank shall file an agreement that conforms to the requirements of section 8(a) of the Act (See From F.R. T-1).

(3) Any nonmember bank may terminate its agreement if it obtains the written consent of the Board.

§ 220.16 Borrowing and lending securities.

Without regard to the other provisions of this part, a creditor may borrow or lend securities for the purpose of making delivery of the securities in the case of short sales, failure to receive securities required to be delivered, or other similar situations. Each borrowing shall be secured by a deposit of one or more of the following: cash, securities issued or guaranteed by the United States or its agencies, negotiable bank certificates of deposit and bankers acceptances issued by banking institutions in the United States and payable in the United States, or irrevocable letters of credit issued by a bank insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation or a foreign bank that has filed an agreement with the Board on Form F.R. T-2. Such deposit made with the lender of the securities shall have at all times a value at least equal to 100 percent of the market value of the securities borrowed, computed as of the close of the preceding business day.

§ 220.17 Requirements for list of OTC margin stocks.

(a) Requirements for inclusion on the list. Except as provided in paragraph (d) of this section, OTC margin stock shall meet the following requirements:

(1) Four or more dealers stand willing to, and do in fact, make a market in such stock and regularly submit bona fide bids and offers to an automated quotations system for their own accounts;

(2) The minimum average bid price of such stock, as determined by the Board, is at least $5 per share.

(3) The stock is registered under section 12 of the Act, is issued by an insurance company subject to section 12(g)(2)(G) of the Act, is issued by a closed-end investment management company subject to registration pursuant to section 8 of the Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. 80a-8), is an American Depository Receipt (ADR) of a foreign issuer whose securities are registered under section 12 of the Act, or is a stock of an issuer required to file reports under section 15(d) of the Act;

(4) Daily quotations for both bid and asked prices for the stock are continuously available to the general public;

(5) The stock has been publicly traded for at least six months;

(6) The issuer has at least $4 million of capital, surplus, and undivided profits;

(7) There are 400,000 or more shares of such stock outstanding in addition to shares held beneficially by officers, directors or beneficial owners of more than 10 percent of the stock;

(8) There are 1,200 or more holders of record, as defined in SEC Rule 12g5-1 (17 CFR 240.12g5-1), of the stock who are not officers, directors or beneficial owners of 10 percent or more of the stock, or the average daily trading volume of such stock as determined by the Board, is at least 500 shares; and

(9) The issuer or a predecessor in interest has been in existence for at least three years.

(b) Requirements for continued inclusion on the list. Except as provided in paragraph (d) of this section, OTC margin stock shall meet the following requirements:

(1) Three or more dealers stand willing to, and do in fact, make a market in such stock and regularly submit bona fide bids and offers to an automated quotations system for their own accounts;

(2) The minimum average bid price of such stocks, as determined by the Board, is at least $2 per share;

(3) The stock is registered as specified in paragraph (a)(3) of this section;

(4) Daily quotations for both bid and asked prices for the stock are continuously available to the general public;

(5) The issuer has at least $1 million of capital, surplus, and undivided profits;

(6) There are 300,000 or more shares of such stock outstanding in addition to shares held beneficially by officers, directors, or beneficial owners of more than 10 percent of the stock; and

(7) There continue to be 800 or more holders of record, as defined in SEC Rule 12g5-1 (17 CFR 240.12g5-1), of the stock who are not officers, directors, or beneficial owners of 10 percent or more of the stock, or the average daily trading volume of such stock, as determined by the Board, is at least 300 shares.

(c) Removal from the list. The Board shall periodically remove from the list any stock that:

(1) Ceases to exist or of which the issuer ceases to exist, or

(2) No longer substantially meets the provisions of paragraph (b) of this section or § 220.2(s).

(d) Discretionary authority of Board. Without regard to the other paragraphs of this section, the Board may add to, or omit or remove from the OTC margin stock list, any equity security, if in the judgment of the Board, such action is necessary or appropriate in the public interest.

(e) Unlawful representations. It shall be unlawful for any creditor to make, or cause to be made, any representation to the effect that the inclusion of a security on the list of OTC margin stocks is evidence that the Board or the SEC has in any way passed upon the merits of, or given approval to, such security or any transactions therein. Any statement in an advertisement or other similar communication containing a reference to the Board in connection with the list or stocks on that list shall be an unlawful representation.

The required margin for each security position held in a margin account shall be as follows:

(a) Margin equity security, except for an exempted security or a long position in an option: 50 percent of the current market value of the security.

(b) Exempted security, registered nonconvertible debt security or OTC margin bond: The margin required by the creditor in good faith.

(c) Short sale of nonexempted security: 150 percent of the current market value of the security, or 100 percent of the current market value if a security exchangeable or convertible within 90 calendar days without restriction other than the payment of money into the security sold short is held in the account.

(d) Short sale of an exempted security: 100 percent of the current market value of the security plus the margin required by the creditor in good faith.

(e) Nonmargin, nonexempted security or a long position in any option: 100 percent of the current market value.

(f) Short put or short call on a security, certificate of deposit, securities index or foreign currency:

(1) In the case of puts and calls issued by a registered clearing corporation and listed or traded on a registered national securities exchange or a registered securities association, the amount, or other position (except in the case of an option on an equity security), specified by the rules of the registered national securities exchange or the registered securities association authorized to trade the option, provided that all such rules have been approved or amended by the SEC; or

(2) In the case of all other puts and calls, the amount, or other position (except in the case of an option on an equity security), specified by the maintenance rules of the creditor's self-regulatory organization.

INTERPRETATIONS

§ 220.101 Transactions of customers who are brokers or dealers.

The Board has recently considered certain questions regarding transactions of customers who are brokers or dealers.

(a) The first question was whether delivery and payment under § 220.4(f)(3) must be exactly simultaneous (such as in sight draft shipments), or whether it is sufficient if the broker-dealer customer, "as promptly as practicable in accordance with the ordinary usage of the trade," mails or otherwise delivers to the creditor a check in settlement of the transaction, the check being accompanied by instructions for transfer or delivery of the security. The Board ruled that the latter method of setting the transaction is permissible.

(b) The second question was, in effect, whether the limitations of § 220.4(c)(8) apply to the account of a customer who is himself a broker or dealer. The answer is that the provision applies to any "special cash account," regardless of the type of customer.

(c) The third question was, in effect, whether a purchase and a sale of an unissued security under § 220.4(f)(3) may be offset against each other, or whether each must be settled separately by what would amount to delivery of the security to settle one transaction and its redelivery to settle the other. The answer is that it is permissible to offset the transactions against each other without physical delivery and redelivery of the security.

§ 220.103 Borrowing of securities.

(a) The Board of Governors has been asked for a ruling as to whether § 220.6(h), which deals with borrowing and lending of securities, applies to a borrower of securities if the lender is a private individual, as contrasted with a member of a national securities exchange or a broker or dealer.

(b) Section 220.6(h) does not require that the lender of the securities in such a case be a member of a national securities exchange or a broker or dealer. Therefore, a borrowing of securities may be able to qualify under the provision even though the lender is a private individual, and this is true whether the security is registered on a national securities exchange or is unregistered. In borrowing securities from a private individual under § 220.6(h), however, it becomes especially important to bear in mind two limitations that are contained in the section.

(c) The first limitation is that the section applies only if the broker borrows the securities for the purpose specified in the provision, that is, "for the purpose of making delivery of such securities in the case of short sales, failure to receive securities he is required to deliver, or other similar cases". The present language of the provision does not require that the delivery for which the securities are borrowed must be on a transaction which the borrower has himself made, either as agent or as principal; he may borrow under the provision in order to relend to someone else for the latter person to make such a delivery. However, the borrowing must be related to an actual delivery of the type specified—a delivery in connection with a specific transaction that has already occurred or is in immediate prospect. The provision does not authorize a broker to borrow securities (or make the related deposit) merely in order that he or some other broker may have the securities "on hand" or may anticipate some need that may or may not arise in the future.

(d) The ruling in the 1940 Federal Reserve Bulletin, at page 647, is an example of a borrowing which, on the facts as given, did not meet the requirement. There, the broker wished to borrow stocks with the understanding that he "would offer to lend this stock in the 'loan crowd' on a national securities exchange." There was no assurance that the stocks would be used for the purpose specified in § 220.6(h); they might be, or they might merely be held idle while the person lending the stocks had the use of the funds deposited against them. The ruling held in effect that since the borrowing could not qualify under § 220.6(h) it must comply with other applicable provisions of the regulation.

(e) The second requirement is that the deposit of cash against the borrowed securities must be "bona fide." This requirement naturally cannot be spelled out in detail, but it requires at least that the purpose of the broker in making the deposit should be to obtain the securities for the specified purpose, and that he should not use the arrangement as a means of accommodating a customer who is seeking to obtain more funds than he could get in a general account.

(f) The Board recognizes that even with these requirements there is still some possibility that the provision may be misapplied. The Board is reluctant to impose additional burdens on legitimate transactions by tightening the provision. If there should be evidence of abuses developing under the provision, however, it would become necessary to consider making it more restricted.

(a) Section 220.4(c)(8) places a limitation on a special cash account if a security other than an exempted security has been purchased in the account and "without having been previously paid for in full by the customer * * * has been * * * delivered out to any broker or dealer." The limitation is that during the succeeding 90 days the customer may not purchase a security in the account other than an exempted security unless funds sufficient for the purpose are held in the account. In other words, the privilege of delayed payment in such an account is withdrawn during the 90-day period.

(b) The Board recently considered a question as to whether the following situation makes an account subject to the 90-day disqualification: A customer purchases registered security ABC in a special cash account. The broker executes the order in good faith as a bona fide cash transaction, expecting to obtain full cash payment promptly. The next day, the customer sells registered security XYZ in the account, promising to deposit it promptly in the account. The proceeds of the sale are equal to or greater than the cost of security ABC. After both sale and purchase have been made, the customer requests the broker to deliver security ABC to a different broker, to receive security XYZ from that broker at about the same time, and to settle with the other broker—such settlement to be made either by paying the cost of security XYZ to the other broker and receiving from him the cost of security ABC, or by merely settling any difference between these amounts.

(c) The Board expressed the view that the account becomes subject to the 90-day disqualification in § 220.4(c)(8). In the instant case, unlike that described at 1940 Federal Reserve Bulletin 772, the security sold is not held in the account and is not to be deposited in it unconditionally. It is to be obtained only against the delivery to the other broker of the security which had been purchased. Hence payment can not be said to have been made prior to such delivery; the purchased security has been delivered out to a broker without previously having been paid for in full, and the account becomes subject to the 90-day disqualification.

As amended effective July 20, 1949, § 220.4(g) removes the margin requirements applicable to credit for financing the functions of "specialists" on an exchange designated by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

Effective July 20, 1949, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System has designated the New York Stock Exchange pursuant to § 220.4(g), as amended, this designation to be effective until further notice.

§ 220.107 Transactions in undermargined accounts.

(a) In an interpretation published at § 220.104 (13 FR 1791), the Board considered two questions in connection with the rules applicable at that time to withdrawals of cash or securities from an undermargined general account under this part.

(b) One question related to the purchase of an unregistered nonexempted security in the account. The other concerned a case in which a security held in the account was sold, delivery was delayed by borrowing a security rather than delivering the security held in the account, and the security held in the account was used later to settle the short position.

(c) The conclusions on both points were based on the provisions of this part in effect at the time regarding withdrawals from such accounts. Those withdrawal provisions were changed by an amendment, effective May 1, 1949 (§ 220.4(c)(7) and (8)), and the Board has been asked regarding the application of the new withdrawal rules to such situations. It has expressed the following views:

NOTE: Without reference to the preceding language or to paragraph (d) of this section, the amendment of Regulation T at 24 FR 4697 superseded the following subparagraphs (1) and (2):

(1) Unregistered securities cannot be carried on margin and accordingly a deposit equal to the full cost of any unregistered securities purchased in the account must, of course, be obtained. However, a purchase of unregistered securities in the general account may now be treated as a transaction other than a withdrawal, and accordingly the deposit equal to such cost may be obtained within the three-day period specified in § 220.3(b) and (e).

(2) With respect to the case in which a customer wishes to sell a security that is held in the account and to delay delivery by borrowing a security rather than delivering the one held in the account, the present withdrawal rules permit the sale to be treated as a short sale against which margin is not required and permit the transaction to be treated as completed when the security held in the account is delivered later to close out the short position. Accordingly, it is now permissible for an offsetting transaction to take place on the date when the delivery is so made.

(d) This supersedes the ruling referred to above at § 220.104. (That ruling also pointed out that the "good faith loan value" specified for an exempted security means the amount which the broker would customarily lend on the security, and that the figure can not be arbitrarily reduced merely for the purpose of permitting a later substitution of registered securities for exempted securities. That principle is still correct, but is of limited application in view of the provisions now contained in this part for withdrawals and substitutions of securities.)

§ 220.108 International Bank Securities.

(a) Section 2 of the Act of June 29, 1949 (Pub. L. 142—81st Congress), amended the Bretton Woods Agreements Act by adding a new section numbered 15 providing, in part, that "Any securities issued by International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (including any guaranty by the bank, whether or not limited in scope), and any securities guaranteed by the bank as to both principal and interest, shall be deemed to be exempted securities within the meaning of * * * paragraph (a)(12) of section 3 of the [Securities Exchange] Act of June 6, 1934, as amended (15 U.S.C. 78c). * * *".

(b) In response to inquiries with respect to the applicability of the margin requirements of this part to securities issued or guaranteed by the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, the Board has replied that, as a result of this enactment, securities issued by the Bank are now classified as exempted securities under § 220.2(e). Such securities are now in the same category under this part as are United States Government, State and municipal bonds. Accordingly, the specific percentage limitations prescribed by this part with respect to maximum loan value and margin requirements are no longer applicable thereto.

§ 220.109 Arrangement for credit by brokers or dealers.

(a) The Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and this part issued thereunder, provide in substance that any broker or dealer who is subject to this part shall not extend or maintain any credit on unregistered securities (i.e., securities not registered on a national securities exchange). The act (section 7(c)) and § 220.7(a) also provides in substance that any such broker or dealer shall not arrange for any extension or maintenance of credit on unregistered securities. There are certain exceptions to these prohibitions, but they are not relevant to the present question.

(b) The Board has been asked whether there would be a violation of the above-mentioned prohibition against arranging credit on unregistered securities if a broker or dealer who is subject to this Part 220 participated in a certain financing plan which a national bank has under consideration. The proposed plan would finance the purchase of shares which are issued by so-called open-end investment trusts and which are not registered on any national securities exchange.

(c) The shares are on continuous sale and can be acquired by periodic cash purchases without the need for any bank financing. However, the bank proposes to make loans to prospective purchasers for the purpose of financing the purchase of larger amounts of the investment trust shares. The shares would be pledged to secure the loan, and the borrower would undertake to pay the principal and interest on the loan in monthly installments.

(d) The bank would furnish forms of a credit application and note to security dealers and their salesmen, who would then make them available to the customers to whom they are selling or contemplate selling the investment trust shares. When the forms had been completed and executed, the dealers would return them to the bank.

(e) The bank would have complete discretion as to whether or not to approve any such application. The bank would not pay any fees or commissions to the security dealers, although the dealers would, of course, get the benefit of increased security sales that might result from operation of the plan.

(f) Upon consideration of the various aspects of the proposed plan, the Board of Governors is of the opinion that if any broker or dealer who is subject to this part participated in the plan in the manner contemplated, there would be an arranging for the extension or maintenance of credit on unregistered securities in violation of section 7(c) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and § 220.7(a).

§ 220.110 Assistance by Federal credit union to its members.

(a) An inquiry was presented recently concerning the application of this part or Part 221 of this subchapter, to a plan proposed by a Federal credit union to aid its members in purchasing stock of a corporation whose subsidiary apparently was the employer of all the credit union's members.

(b) From the information submitted, the plan appeared to contemplate that the Federal credit union would accept orders from its members for registered common stock of the parent corporation in multiples of 5 shares; that whenever orders had been so received for a total of 100 shares, the credit union, as agent for such members, would execute the orders through a brokerage firm with membership on a national securities exchange; that the brokerage firm would deliver certificates for the stock, registered in the names of the individual purchasers, to the credit union against payment by the credit union; that the credit union would prorate the total amount so paid, including the brokerage fee, among the individual purchasers according to the number of shares purchased by them; and that a savings in brokerage fee resulting from the 100-lot purchases would be passed on by the credit union to the individual purchasers of the stock. However, amounts of the stock less than 100 shares would be purchased by the credit union through the brokerage firm for any members willing to forego such savings.

(c) It appeared further that the Federal credit union members for whom stock was so purchased would reimburse the credit union (1) by cash payment, (2) by the proceeds of withdrawn shares of the credit union, (3) by the proceeds of an installment loan from the credit union collateraled by the stock purchased, or by (4) by a combination of two or more of the above methods. To assist the collection of any such loan, the employer of the credit union members would provide payroll deductions. Apparently, sales by the credit union of any of the stock purchased by one of its members would occur only in satisfaction of a delinquent loan balance. In no case did it appear that the credit union would make a charge for arranging the execution of transactions in the stock for its members.

(d) The Board was of the view that, from the facts as presented, it did not appear that the Federal credit union should be regarded as the type of institution to which Part 221 of this subchapter, in its present form, applied.

(e) With respect to this part, the question was whether the activities of the Federal credit union under the proposal, or otherwise, might be such as to bring it within the meaning of the terms "broker" or "dealer" as used in the part and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. The Board observed that this, of course, was a question of fact that necessarily depended upon the circumstances of the particular case, including the manner in which the arrangement in question might be carried out in practice.

(f) On the basis of the information submitted, however, it did not appear to the Board that the Federal credit union should be regarded as being subject to this part as a "broker or dealer who transacts a business in securities through the medium of" a member firm solely because of its activities as contemplated by the proposal in question. The Board stated that the part rather clearly would not apply if there appeared to be nothing other than loans by the credit union to its members to finance purchases made directly by them of stock of the parent corporation of the employer of the member-borrowers. The additional fact that the credit union, as agent, would purchase such stock for its members (even though all such purchases might not be financed by credit union loans) was not viewed by the Board as sufficient to make the regulation applicable where, as from the facts presented, it did not appear that the credit union in any case was to make any charge or receive any compensation for assisting in such purchases or that the credit union otherwise was engaged in securities activities. However, the Board stated that matters of this kind must be examined closely for any variations that might suggest the inapplicability of the foregoing.

§ 220.111 Arranging for extensions of credit to be made by a bank.

(a) The Board has recently had occasion to express opinions regarding the requirements which apply when a person subject to this part (for convenience, called here simply a broker) arranges for a bank to extend credit.

(b) The matter is treated generally in § 220.7(a) and is also subject to the general rule of law that any person who aids or abets a violation of law by another is himself guilty of a violation. It may be stated as a general principle that any person who arranges for credit to be extended by someone else has a responsibility so to conduct his activities as not to be a participant in a violation of this part, which applies to brokers, or Part 221 of this subchapter, which applies to banks.

(c) More specifically, in arranging an extension of credit that may be subject to Part 221 of this subchapter, a broker must act in good faith and, therefore, must question the accuracy of any non-purpose statement (i.e., a statement that the loan is not for the purpose of purchasing or carrying registered stocks) given in connection with the loan where the circumstances are such that the broker from any source knows or has reason to know that the statement is incomplete or otherwise inaccurate as to the true purpose of the credit. The requirement of "good faith" is of vital importance. While the application of the requirement will necessarily vary with the facts of the particular case, the broker, like the bank for whom the loan is arranged to be made, must be alert to the circumstances surrounding the loan. Thus, for example, if a broker or dealer is to deliver registered stocks to secure the loan or is to receive the proceeds of the loan, the broker arranging the loan and the bank making it would be put on notice that the loan would probably be subject to Part 221 of this subchapter. In any such circumstances they could not in good faith accept or rely upon a statement to the contrary without obtaining a reliable and satisfactory explanation of the situation. The foregoing, of course, applies the principles contained in § 221.101 of this subchapter.

(d) In addition, when a broker is approached by another broker to arrange extensions of credit for customers of the approaching broker, the broker approached has a responsibility not to arrange any extension of credit which the approaching broker could not himself arrange. Accordingly, in such cases the statutes and regulations forbid the approached broker to arrange extensions of credit on unregistered securities for the purpose of purchasing or carrying either registered or unregistered securities. The approaching broker would also be violating the applicable requirements if he initiated or otherwise participated in any such forbidden transactions.

(e) The expression of views, set forth in this section, to the effect that certain specific transactions are forbidden, of course, should not in any way be understood to indicate approval of any other transactions which are not mentioned.

§ 220.112 Arranging loan to purchase open-end investment company shares.

(a) The Board was recently asked whether a creditor subject to this part may arrange for a customer a loan from a bank subject to Part 221 on unregistered, redeemable shares of an open-end investment company for the purpose of purchasing such shares.

(b) This matter was the subject of the Board's interpretation contained in § 220.109 which stated, in substance, that a creditor subject to this part may not arrange for the extension or maintenance of credit on unregistered, redeemable shares of an open-end investment company in view of the provisions of section 7(c) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and § 220.7(a). The shares of most open-end investment companies, of course, are not registered on any national securities exchange.

(c) It was suggested, however, that the interpretation just referred to might now be inapplicable because of amendment to § 221.3(b) and (c) of this subchapter, effective August 1, 1953. Under that amendment, loans by banks for the purpose of purchasing or carrying redeemable shares of open-end investment companies, whose assets customarily include registered securities, shall be deemed to be loans for the purpose of purchasing or carrying registered stocks. Therefore, any such loan, if secured directly or indirectly by any stock, is subject to Part 221 of this subchapter although the shares of the company are not themselves registered shares.

(d) In announcing the amendment mentioned in paragraph (c) of this section, the Board in 18 FR 3409 stated, among other things, that such amendment "does not affect Part 220." In addition, the Board's interpretation contained in § 220.111 stated that a creditor subject to this part may not arrange extensions of credit on unregistered securities for the purpose of purchasing or carrying either registered or unregistered securities.

(e) Accordingly, the Board stated that its interpretation contained in § 220.109, referred to in this section, is still effective, and that a creditor subject to this part may not arrange for a customer a bank loan on unregistered, redeemable shares of an open-end investment company for the purpose of purchasing or carrying such shares.

§ 220.113 Necessity for prompt payment and delivery in special cash accounts.

(a) The Board of Governors recently received an inquiry concerning whether purchases of securities by certain municipal employees' retirement or pension systems on the basis of arrangements for delayed delivery and payment, might properly be effected by a creditor subject to this part in a special cash account under § 220.4(c).

(b) It appears that in a typical case the supervisors of the retirement system meet only once or twice each month, at which times decisions are made to purchase any securities wished to be acquired for the system.

Although the securities are available for prompt delivery by the broker-dealer firm selected to effect the system's purchase, it is arranged in advance with the firm that the system will not accept delivery and pay for the securities before some date more than seven business days after the date on which the securities are purchased. Apparently, such an arrangement is occasioned by the monthly or semimonthly meetings of the system's supervisors. It was indicated that a retirement system of this kind may be supervised by officials who administer it as an incidental part of their regular duties, and that meetings requiring joint action by two or more supervisors may be necessary under the system's rules and procedures to authorize issuance of checks in payment for the securities purchased. It was indicated also that the purchases do not involve exempted securities, securities of the kind covered by § 220.4(c)(3), or any shipment of securities as described in § 220.4(c).

(c) This part provides that a creditor subject thereto may not effect for a customer a purchase in a special cash account under § 220.4(c) unless the use of the account meets the limitations of § 220.4(a) and the purchase constitutes a "bona fide cash transaction" which complies with the eligibility requirements of § 220.4(c)(1)(i). One such requirement is that the purchase be made "in reliance upon an agreement accepted by the creditor (broker-dealer) in good faith" that the customer will "promptly make full cash payment for the security, if funds sufficient for the purpose are not already in the account; and, subject to certain exceptions, § 220.4(c)(2) provides that the creditor shall promptly cancel or liquidate the transaction if payment is not made by the customer within seven business days after the date of purchase. As indicated in the Board's interpretation at 1940 Federal Reserve Bulletin 1172, a necessary part of the customer's undertaking pursuant to § 220.4(c)(1)(i) is that he "should have the necessary means of payment readily available when he purchases a security in the special cash account. He should expect to pay for it immediately or in any event within the period (of not more than a very few days) that is as long as is usually required to carry through the ordinary securities transaction."

(d) The arrangements for delayed delivery and payment in the case presented to the Board and outlined above clearly would be inconsistent with the requirement of § 220.4(c)(1)(i) that the purchase be made in reliance upon an agreement accepted by the creditor in good faith that the customer will "promptly" make full cash payment for the security. Accordingly, the Board said that transactions of the kind in question would not qualify as a "bona fide cash transaction" and, therefore, could not properly be effected in a special cash account, unless a contrary conclusion would be justified by the exception in § 220.4(c)(5).

(e) Section 220.4(c)(5) provides that if the creditor, "acting in good faith in accordance with" § 220.4(c)(1), purchases a security for a customer "with the understanding that he is to deliver the security promptly to the customer, and the full cash payment is to be made promptly by the customer is to be made against such delivery", the creditor may at his option treat the transaction as one to which the period applicable under § 220.4(c)(2) is not the seven days therein specified but 35 days after the date of such purchase. It will be observed that the application of § 220.4 (c)(5) is specifically conditioned on the creditor acting in good faith in accordance with § 220.4(c)(1). As noted above, the existence of the arrangements for delayed delivery and payment in the case presented would prevent this condition from being met, since the customer could not be regarded as having agreed to make full cash payment "promptly". Furthermore, such arrangements clearly would be inconsistent with the requirement of § 220.4(c)(5) that the creditor "deliver the security promptly to the customer".

(f) Section 220.4(c)(5) was discussed in the Board's published interpretation, referred to above, which states that "it is not the purpose of (§ 220.4 (c)(5)) to allow additional time to customers for making payment. The 'prompt delivery' described in (§ 220.4 (c)(5)) is delivery which is to be made as soon as the broker or dealer can reasonably make it in view of the mechanics of the securities business and the bona fide usages of the trade. The provision merely recognizes the fact that in certain circumstances it is an established bona fide practice in the trade to obtain payment against delivery of the security to the customer, and the further fact that the mechanics of the trade, unrelated to the customer's readiness to pay, may sometimes delay such delivery to the customer".

(g) In the case presented, it appears that the only reason for the delay is related solely to the customer's readiness to pay and is in no way attributable to the mechanics of the securities business. Accordingly, it is the Board's view that the exception in § 220.4(c)(5) should not be regarded as permitting the transactions in question to be effected in a special cash account.

§ 220.114 Transactions in restricted accounts under amended withdrawal rules.

(a) Amendments to Part 220, effective June 15, 1959 (24 FR 3866), deal with withdrawals of collateral from a "restricted account", i.e., a general account in which the adjusted debit balance exceeds the maximum loan value of the securities. In that connection, an inquiry has been received regarding the application of the amended part to a purchase of unregistered nonexempted securities in such a "restricted account".

(b) Unregistered nonexempted securities have no loan value under the part, are not subject to the restrictions of the withdrawal rules, and are not referred to in those rules. Purchase of an unregistered security without a deposit of a sum equal to the cost would amount to a withdrawal of the cost of the security.

(c) This supersedes paragraph (c)(1) of § 220.107 dealing with a similar question.

(d) Section 220.107 also dealt with two other points. One was the treatment of certain transactions as short sales. Paragraph (c)(2) of § 220.107 was superseded by the June 15, 1959 amendment to paragraph (g) of § 220.3. The other point was that the "good faith loan value" specified for an exempted security means the amount which the broker would customarily lend on the security, and that the figure cannot be arbitrarily reduced merely for the purpose of permitting a later substitution of registered securities for exempted securities. That principle continues to apply and is of increased significance under the amendments.

§ 220.115 Short sales made prior to recent amendments, but covered subsequent thereto.

(a) The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System has been requested to consider the following situation relative to § 220.3(g) as amended June 15, 1959.

(b) Certain securities have been held "long" in a margin account, at least since early 1958. Subsequently, at various times in 1958 and on January 13, 1959, short sales of this same stock were executed in the account. The total shares involved in the short sales did not exceed the shares held in the "long" position. It is now desired to close out the short position by covering purchases.

(c) The applicable provision of § 220.3(g) reads as follows:

> For the purposes of this part (Regulation T), if a security has maximum loan value in the account under paragraph (c)(1) of this section, a sale of the same security (even though not the same certificate) in the account shall be deemed to be a long sale and shall not be deemed to be or treated as a short sale.

Under this provision, a short sale at the present time against a "long" position in the same security must be treated as a "long" sale. The subsequent covering transaction would therefore be treated as any other regular purchase and could not be executed as a covering purchase requiring no further margin. However, where the short sale against the "long" position was executed prior to June 15, 1959, the effective date of the above noted amendment to § 220.3(g), the sale would not lose its character as a "short" sale. The covering transactions, even if effected after June 15, 1959, could be treated as such, and under the provisions of this part, could be completed without obtaining further margin.

(d) This interpretation is expressly limited to the facts here presented. Any variation or addition to the circumstances might well alter the result expressed herein.

(e) Attention is further directed to § 220.7(e) which provides that nothing in this part shall prevent an exchange or a creditor from "further restricting" or requiring "additional security" in the extension or maintenance of any credit.

§ 220.116 Simultaneous long and short positions in same margin account where short position is taken first.

(a) The Board has been asked whether the last sentence of § 220.3(g) applies when a customer first sells a registered security short in an undermargined account, then subsequently purchases the same security, instructing the broker to maintain long and short positions in that security.

(b) The last sentence of § 220.3(g) prohibits the concurrent carrying of long and short positions in the same registered security for the purposes of this part, regardless of which position is taken first. This result follows because the word "sale" is equivalent where the sense of the regulation requires it, to "sale position". Accordingly, where a security is purchased "long" in a margin account, and there is an existing short position in the same security in the account, the two positions must be "netted out" for purposes of the regulation.

§ 220.117 Exception to 90-day rule in special cash account.

(a) The Board of Governors has recently interpreted certain of the provisions of § 220.4(c)(8), with respect to the withdrawal of proceeds of a sale of stock in a "special cash account" when the stock has been sold out of the account prior to payment for its purchase.

(b) The specific factual situation presented may be summarized as follows:

> Customer purchased stock in a special cash account with a member firm on Day 1. On Day 3 customer sold the same stock at a profit. On Day 8 customer delivered his check for the cost of the purchase to the creditor (member firm). On Day 9 the creditor mailed to the customer a check for the proceeds of the sale.

(c) Section 220.4(c)(8) prohibits a creditor, as a general rule, from effecting a purchase of a security in a customer's special cash account if any security has been purchased in that account during the preceding 90 days and has then been sold in the account or delivered out to any broker or dealer without having been previously paid for in full by the customer. One exception to this general rule reads as follows:

> * * * The creditor may disregard for the purposes of this subparagraph (§ 220.4(c)(8)) a sale without prior payment provided full cash payment is received within the period described by subparagraph (2) of this paragraph (seven days after the date of purchase) and the customer has not withdrawn the proceeds of sale on or before the day on which such payment (and also final payment of any check received in that connection) is received. * * *

(d) Final payment of customer's check: (1) The first question is: When is the creditor to be regarded as having received "final payment of any check received" in connection with the purchase?

(2) The clear purpose of § 220.4(c)(8) is to prevent the use of the proceeds of sale of a stock by a customer to pay for its purchase—i.e., to prevent him from trading on the creditor's funds by being able to deposit the sale proceeds prior to presentment of his own check to the drawee bank. Thus, when a customer undertakes to pay for a purchase by check, that check does not constitute payment for the purchase, within the language and intent of the above-quoted exception in § 220.4(c)(8), until it has been honored by the drawee bank, indicating the sufficiency of his account to pay the check.

(3) The phrase "final payment of any check" is interpreted as above notwithstanding § 220.6(f), which provides that:

> For the purposes of this part (Regulation T), a creditor may, at his option (1) treat the receipt in good faith of any check or draft drawn on a bank which in the ordinary course of business is payable on presentation, * * * as receipt of payment of the amount of such check, draft or order; * * *

This is a general provision substantially the same as language found in section 4(f) of Regulation T as originally promulgated in 1934. The language of the subject exception to the 90-day rule of § 220.4(c)(8), i.e., the exception based expressly on final "payment of any check," was added to the regulation in 1949 by an amendment directed at a specific type of situation. Because the exception is a special, more recent provision, and because § 220.6(f), if controlling, would permit the exception to undermine, to some extent, the effectiveness of the 90-day rule, sound principles of construction require that the phrase "final payment of any check" be given its literal and intended effect.

(4) There is no fixed period of time from the moment of receipt by the payee, or of deposit, within which it is certain that any check will be paid by the drawee bank. Therefore, in the rare case where the operation of the subject exception to § 220.4(c)(8) is necessary to avoid application of the 90-day rule, a creditor should ascertain (from his bank of deposit or otherwise) the fact of payment of a customer's check given for the purchase. Having so determined the day of final payment, the creditor can permit withdrawal on any subsequent day.

(e) Mailing as "withdrawal": (1) Also presented is the question whether the mailing to the customer of the creditor's check for the sale proceeds constitutes a withdrawal of such proceeds by the customer at the time of mailing so that, if the check for the sale proceeds is mailed on or before the day on which the customer's check for the purchase is finally paid, the 90-day rule applies. It may be that a check mailed one day will not ordinarily be received by the customer until the next. The Board is of the view, however, that when the check for sale proceeds is issued and released into the mails, the proceeds are to be regarded as withdrawn by the customer; a more liberal interpretation would open a way for circumvention. Accordingly, the creditor's check should not be mailed nor the sale proceeds otherwise released to the customer "on or before the day" on which payment for the purchase, including final payment of any check given for such payment, is received by the creditor, as determined in accordance with the principles stated herein.

(2) Applying the above principles to the schedule of transactions described in the second paragraph of this interpretation, the mailing of the creditor's check on "Day 9" would be consistent with the subject exception to § 220.4(c)(8), as interpreted herein, only if the customer's check was paid by the drawee bank on "Day 8".

§ 220.118 Time of payment for mutual fund shares purchased in a special cash account.

(a) The Board has recently considered the question whether, in connection with the purchase of mutual fund shares in a "special cash account" under the provisions of this Part 220, the 7-day period with respect to liquidation for nonpayment is that described in § 220.4(c)(2) or that described in § 220.4(c)(3).

(b) Section 220.4(c)(2) provides as follows:

> In case a customer purchases a security (other than an exempted security) in the special cash account and does not make full cash payment for the security within 7 days after the date on which the security is so purchased, the creditor shall, except as provided in subparagraphs (3)-(7) of this paragraph, promptly cancel or otherwise liquidate the transaction or the unsettled portion thereof.

Section 220.4(c)(3), one of the exceptions referred to, provides in relevant part as follows:

> If the security when so purchased is an unissued security, the period applicable to the transaction under subparagraph (2) of this paragraph shall be 7 days after the date on which the security is made available by the issuer for delivery to purchasers.

(c) In the case presented, the shares of the mutual fund (open-end investment company) are technically not issued at the time they are sold by the underwriter and distributor. Several days may elapse from the date of sale before a certificate can be delivered by the transfer agent. The specific inquiry to the Board was, in effect, whether the 7-day period after which a purchase transaction must be liquidated or cancelled for nonpayment should run, in the case of mutual fund shares, from the time when a certificate for the purchased shares is available for delivery to the purchaser, instead of from the date of the purchase.

(d) Under the general rule of § 220.4(c)(2) that is applicable to purchases of outstanding securities, the 7-day period runs from the date of purchase without regard to the time required for the mechanical acts of transfer of ownership and delivery of a certificate. This rule is based on the principles governing the use of special cash accounts in accordance with which, in the absence of special circumstances, payment is to be made promptly upon the purchase of securities.

(e) The purpose of § 220.4(c)(3) is to recognize the fact that, when an issue of securities is to be issued at some fixed future date, a security that is a part of such issue can be purchased on a "when-issued" basis and that payment may reasonably be delayed until after such date of issue, subject to other basic conditions for transactions in a special cash account. Thus, unissued securities should be regarded as "made available for delivery to purchasers" on the date when they are substantially as available as outstanding securities are available upon purchase, and this would ordinarily be the designated date of issuance or, in the case of a stock dividend, the "payment date". In any case, the time required for the mechanics of transfer and delivery of a certificate is not material under § 220.4(c)(3) any more than it is under § 220.4(c)(2).

(f) Mutual fund shares are essentially available upon purchase to the same extent as outstanding securities. The mechanics of their issuance and of the delivery of certificates are not significantly different from the mechanics of transfer and delivery of certificates for shares of outstanding securities, and the issuance of mutual fund shares is not a future event in a sense that would warrant the extension of the time for payment beyond that afforded in the case of outstanding securities. Consequently, the Board has concluded that a purchase of mutual fund shares is not a purchase of an "unissued security" to which § 220.4(c)(3) applies, but is a transaction to which § 220.4(c)(2) applies.

§ 220.119 Applicability of margin requirements to credit extended to corporation in connection with retirement of stock.

(a) The Board of Governors has been asked whether Part 220 was violated when a dealer in securities transferred to a corporation 4,161 shares of the stock of such corporation for a consideration of $33,288, of which only 10 percent was paid in cash.

(b) If the transaction was of a kind that must be included in the corporation's "general account" with the dealer (§ 220.3), it would involve an excessive extension of credit in violation of § 220.3 (b)(1). However, the transaction would be permissible if the transaction came within the scope of § 220.4(f)(8), which permits a "creditor" (such as the dealer) to "Extend and maintain credit to or for any customer without collateral or on any collateral whatever for any purpose other than purchasing or carrying or trading in securities." Accordingly, the crucial question is whether the corporation, in this transaction, was "purchasing" the 4,161 shares of its stock, within the meaning of that term as used in this part.

(c) Upon first examination, it might seem apparent that the transaction was a purchase by the corporation. From the viewpoint of the dealer the transaction was a sale, and ordinarily, at least a sale by one party connotes a purchase by the other. Furthermore, other indicia of a sale/purchase transaction were present, such as a transfer of property for a pecuniary consideration. However, when the underlying objectives of the margin regulations are considered, it appears that they do not encompass a transaction of this nature, where securities are transferred on credit to the issuer thereof for the purpose of retirement.

(d) Section 7(a) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 requires the Board of Governors to prescribe margin regulations "For the purpose of preventing the excessive use of credit for the purchase or carrying of securities." Accordingly, the provisions of this part are not intended to prevent the use of credit where the transaction will not have the effect of increasing the volume of credit in the securities markets.

(e) It appears that the instant transaction would have no such effect. When the transaction was completed, the equity interest of the dealer was transmuted into a dollar-obligation interest; in lieu of its status as a stockholder of the corporation, the dealer became a creditor of that corporation. The corporation did not become the owner of any securities acquired through the use of credit; its outstanding stock was simply reduced by 4,161 shares.

(f) The meaning of "sale" and "purchase" in the Securities Exchange Act has been considered by the Federal courts in a series of decisions dealing with corporate "insiders" profits under section 16(b) of that Act. Although the statutory purpose sought to be effectuated in those cases is quite different from the purpose of the margin regulations, the decisions in question support the propriety of not regarding a transaction as a "purchase" where this accords with the probable legislative intent, even though, literally, the statutory definition seems to include the particular transaction. See Roberts v. Eaton (CA 2 1954) 212 F. 2d 82, and cases and other authorities there cited. The governing principle, of course, is to effectuate the purpose embodied in the statutory or regulatory provision being interpreted, even where that purpose may conflict with the literal words. U.S. v. Amer. Trucking Ass'ns, 310 U.S. 534, 543 (1940); 2 Sutherland, Statutory Construction (3d ed. 1943) ch. 45.

(g) There can be little doubt that an extension of credit to a corporation to enable it to retire debt securities would not be for the purpose of "purchasing * * * securities" and therefore would come within § 220.4(f)(8), regardless of whether the retirement was obligatory (e.g., at maturity) or was a voluntary "call" by the issuer. This is true, it is difficult to see any valid distinction, for this purpose, between (1) voluntary retirement of an indebtedness security and (2) voluntary retirement of an equity security.

(h) For the reasons indicated above, it is the opinion of the Board of Governors that the extension of credit here involved is not of the kind which the margin requirements are intended to regulate and that the transaction described does not involve an unlawful extension of credit as far as this part is concerned.

(i) The foregoing interpretation relates, of course, only to cases of the type described. It should not be regarded as governing any other situations; for example, the interpretation does not deal with cases where securities are being transferred to someone other than the issuer, or to the issuer for a purpose other than immediate retirement. Whether the margin requirements are inapplicable to any such situations would depend upon the relevant facts of actual cases presented.

§ 220.120 Loan value of securities used to make required deposit.

(a) The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System has received a number of inquiries resulting from the upward change in the level of margin requirements that became effective November 6, 1963, as to what loan value applies to securities used to make the deposit required by paragraph (b)(1) of § 220.3 with respect to transactions in general accounts which occur before an increase in margin requirements, if such deposit is made after the higher margin requirements become effective.

(b) In the case of such deposits, the loan value (on the occasion of that deposit only) is that which was in effect when the transaction in question was executed on the floor of the exchange. Thus, where the customer's order was executed before the recent increase from 50 percent of 70 percent margin became effective, he would still make his deposit at the lower margin, even though the securities used to satisfy the deposit requirement were not delivered to his broker until after the new margin requirements came into force.

§ 220.121 Applicability of margin requirements to joint account between two creditors.

(a) The Board has recently been asked whether extensions of credit in a joint account between two brokerage firms, a member of a national securities exchange ("Firm X") and a member of the National Association of Securities Dealers ("Firm Y") are subject to the margin requirements of this part (Regulation T). It is understood that similar joint accounts are not uncommon, and it appears that the margin requirements of the regulation are not consistently applied to extensions of credit in the accounts.

(b) When the account in question was opened, Firm Y deposited $5,000 with Firm X and has made no further deposit in the account, except for the monthly settlement described below. Both firms have the privilege of buying and selling specified securities in the account, but it appears that Firm X initiates most of the transactions therein. Trading volume may run from half a million to a million dollars a month. Firm X carries the "official" ledger of the account and sends Firm Y a monthly statement with a complete record of all transactions effected during the month. Settlement is then made in accordance with the agreement between the two firms, which provides that profits and losses shall be shared equally on a fifty-fifty basis. However, all transactions are confirmed and reconfirmed between the two on a daily basis.

(c) Section 220.3(a) provides that

> All financial relations between a creditor and a customer, whether recorded in one record or in more than one record, shall be included in and be deemed to be part of the customer's general account with the creditor, * * *.

and § 220.2(c) defines the term "customer" to include > * * * any person, or any group of persons acting jointly, * * * to or for whom a creditor is extending or maintaining any credit * * *

In the course of a normal month's operations, both Firm X and Firm Y are at one time or another extending credit to the joint account, since both make purchases for the account that are not "settled" until the month's end. Consequently, the account would be a "customer" within the above definition.

(d) Section 220.6(b) provides, with respect to the account of a joint adventure in which a creditor participates, that > * * * the adjusted debit balance of the account shall include, in addition to the items specified in § 220.3(d), any amount by which the creditor's contribution to the joint adventure exceeds the contribution which he would have made if he had contributed merely in proportion to his right to share in the profits of the joint adventure.

In addition, the final paragraph of § 220.2(c) states that the definition of "customer" > * * * includes any joint adventure in which a creditor participates and which would be considered a customer of the creditor if the creditor were not a participant.

(e) The above provisions clearly evince the Board's intent that the regulation shall cover trading accounts in which a creditor participates. If additional confirmation were needed, it is supplied by the fact that the Board found it needful specifically to exempt from ordinary margin requirements credit extended to certain joint accounts in which a creditor participates. These include the account in which transactions of odd-lot dealers may be financed under § 220.4(f) (4), and the specialist's account under § 220.4(g). Accordingly, the Board concluded that the joint account between Firm X and Firm Y is a "customer" within the meaning of the regulation, and that extensions of credit in the account are subject to margin requirements.

§ 220.122 "Deep in the money put and call options" as extensions of credit.

(a) The Board of Governors has been asked to determine whether the business of selling instruments described as "deep in the money put and call options" would involve an extension of credit for the purposes of the Board's regulations governing margin requirements for securities transactions. Most of such options would be of the "call" type, such as the following proposal that was presented to the Board for its consideration:

> If X stock is selling at $100 per share, the customer would pay about $3,250 for a contract to purchase 100 shares of X at $70 per share within a 30-day period. The contract would be guaranteed by an exchange member, as are standard "puts" and "calls". When the contract is made with the customer, the seller, who will also be the writer of the contract, will immediately purchase 100 shares of X at $100 per share through the guarantor member firm in a margin account. If the customer exercises the option, the shares will be delivered to him; if the option is not exercised, the writer will sell the shares in the margin account to close out the transaction. As a practical matter, it is anticipated that the customer will exercise the option in almost every case.

(b) An ordinary "put" is an option given to a person to sell to the writer of the put a specified amount of securities at a stated price within a certain time. A "call" is an option given to a person to buy from the writer a specified amount of securities at a stated price within a certain time. To be freely saleable, options must be indorsed, or guaranteed, by a member firm of the exchange on which the security is registered. The guarantor charges a fee for this service.

(c) The option embodied in the normal put or call is exercisable either at the market price of the security at the time the option is written, or some "points away" from the market. The price of a normal option is modest by comparison with the margin required to take a position. Writers of normal options are persons who are satisfied with the current price of a security, and are prepared to purchase or sell at that price, with the small profit provided by the fee. Moreover, since a large proportion of all options are never exercised, a person who customarily writes normal options can anticipate that the fee would be clear profit in many cases, and he will not be obligated to buy or sell the stock in question.

(d) The stock exchanges require that the writer of an option deposit and maintain in his margin account with the indorser 30 percent of the current market price in the case of a call (unless he has a long position in the stock) and 25 percent in the case of a put (unless he has a short position in the stock). Many indorsing firms in fact require larger deposits. Under § 220.3(a) of Regulation T, all financial relations between a broker and his customer must be included in the customer's general account, unless specifically eligible for one of the special accounts authorized by § 220.4. Accordingly, the writer, as a customer of the member firm, must make a deposit, which is included in his general account.

(e) In order to prevent the deposit from being available against other margin purchases, and in effect counted twice, § 220.3(d)(5) requires that in computing the customer's adjusted debit balance, there shall be included "the amount of any margin customarily required by the creditor in connection with his endorsement or guarantee of any put, call, or other option". No other margin deposit is required in connection with a normal put or call option under Regulation T.

(f) Turning to the "deep in the money" proposed option contract described above, the price paid by the buyer can be divided into (1) a deposit of 30 percent of the current market value of the stock, and (2) an additional fixed charge, or fee. To the extent that the price of the stock rose during the 30 ensuing days the proposed instrument would produce results similar to those in the case of an ordinary profitable call, and the contract right would be exercised. But even if the price fell, unlike the situation with a normal option, the buyer would still be virtually certain to exercise his right to purchase before it expired, in order to minimize his loss. The result would be that the buyer would not have a genuine choice whether or not to buy. Rather, the instrument would have made it possible for him, in effect, to purchase stock as of the time the contract was written by depositing 30 percent of the stock's current market price.

(g) It was suggested that the proposed contract is not unusual, since there are examples of ordinary options selling at up to 28 percent of current market value. However, such examples are of options running for 12 months, and reflect expectations of changes in the price of the stock over that period. The 30-day contracts discussed above are not comparable to such 12-month options, because instances of true expectations of price changes of this magnitude over a 30-day period would be exceedingly rare. And a contract that does not reflect such true expectations of price change, plus a reasonable fee for the services of the writer, is not an option in the accepted meaning of the term.

(h) Because of the virtual certainty that the contract right would be exercised under the proposal described above, the writer would buy the stock in a margin account with an indorsing firm immediately on writing the contract. The indorsing firm would extend credit in the amount of 20 percent of the current market price of the stock, the maximum permitted by the current § 220.8 (supplement to Regulation T). The writer would deposit the 30 percent supplied by the buyer, and furnish the remaining 50 percent out of his own working capital. His account with the indorsing firm would thus be appropriately margined.

(i) As to the buyer, however, the writer would function as a broker. In effect, he would purchase the stock for the account, or use, of the buyer, on what might be described as a deferred payment arrangement. Like an ordinary broker, the writer of the contract described above would put up funds to pay for the difference between the price of securities the customer wished to purchase and the customer's own contribution. His only risk would be that the price of the securities would decline in excess of the customer's contribution. True, he would be locked in, and could not liquidate the customer's collateral for 30 days even if the market price should fall in excess of 30 percent, but the risk of such a decline is extremely slight.

(j) Like any other broker who extends credit in a margin account, the writer who was in the business of writing and selling such a contract would be satisfied with a fixed predetermined amount of return on his venture, since he would realize only the fee charged. Unlike a writer of ordinary puts and calls, he would not receive a substantial part of his income from fees on unexercised contract rights. The similarity of his activities to those of a broker, and the dissimilarity to a writer of ordinary options, would be underscored by the fact that his fee would be a fixed predetermined amount of return similar to an interest charge, rather than a fee arrived at individually for each transaction according to the volatility of the stock and other individual considerations.

(k) The buyer's general account with the writer would in effect reflect a debit for the purchase price of the stock and, on the credit side, a deposit of cash in the amount of 30 percent of that price, plus an extension of credit for the remaining 70 percent, rather than the maximum permissible 20 percent.

(l) For the reasons stated above, the Board concluded that the proposed contracts would involve extensions of credit by the writer as broker in an amount exceeding that permitted by the current supplement to Regulation T. Accordingly, the writing of such contracts by a brokerage firm is presently prohibited by such regulation, and any brokerage firm that indorses such a contract would be arranging for credit in an amount greater than the firm itself could extend, a practice that is prohibited by § 220.7(a).

§ 220.123 Partial delayed issue contracts covering nonconvertible bonds.

(a) During recent years, it has become customary for portions of new issues of nonconvertible bonds and preferred stocks to be sold subject to partial delayed issue contracts, which have customarily been referred to in the industry as "delayed delivery" contracts, and the Board of Governors has been asked for its views as to whether such transactions involve any violations of the Board's margin regulations.

(b) The practice of issuing a portion of a debt (or equivalent) security issue at a date subsequent to the main underwriting has arisen where market conditions made it difficult or impossible, in a number of instances, to place an entire issue simultaneously. In instances of this kind, institutional investors (e.g., insurance companies or pension funds) whose cash flow is such that they expect to have funds available some months in the future, have been willing to subscribe to a portion, to be issued to them at a future date. The issuer has been willing to agree to issue the securities in two or more stages because it did not immediately need the proceeds to be realized from the deferred portion, because it could not raise funds on better terms, or because it preferred to have a certain portion of the issue taken down by an investor of this type.

(c) In the case of such a delayed issue contract, the underwriter is authorized to solicit from institutional customers offers to purchase from the issuer, pursuant to contracts of the kind described above, and the agreement becomes binding at the underwriters' closing, subject to specified conditions. When securities are issued pursuant to the agreement, the purchase price includes accrued interest or dividends, and until they are issued to it, the purchaser does not, in the case of bonds, have rights under the trust indenture, or, in the case of preferred stocks, voting rights.

(d) Securities sold pursuant to such arrangements are high quality debt issues (or their equivalent). The purchasers buy with a view to investment and do not resell or otherwise dispose of the contract prior to its completion. Delayed issue arrangements are not acceptable to issuers unless a substantial portion of an issue, not less than 10 percent, is involved.

(e) Sections 3(a) (13) and (14) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 provide that an agreement to purchase is equivalent to a purchase, and an agreement to sell to a sale. The Board has hitherto expressed the view that credit is extended at the time when there is a firm agreement to extend such credit (1968 Federal Reserve Bulletin 328; 12 CFR 207.101; ¶ 6800 Published Interpretations of the Board of Governors). Accordingly, in instances of the kind described above, the issuer may be regarded as extending credit to the institutional purchaser at the time of the underwriters' closing, when the obligations of both become fixed.

(f) Section 220.7(a) of the Board's Regulation T (12 CFR 220.7(a)), with an exception not applicable here, forbids a creditor subject to that regulation to arrange for credit on terms on which the creditor could not itself extend the credit. Sections 220.4(c) (1) and (2) (12 CFR 220.4(c) (1) and (2)) provide that a creditor may not sell securities to a customer except in good faith reliance upon an agreement that the customer will promptly, and in no event in more than 7 full business days, make full cash payment for the securities. Since the underwriters in question are creditors subject to the regulation, unless some specific exception applies, they are forbidden to arrange for the credit described above. This result follows because payment is not made until more than 7 full business days have passed from the time the credit is extended.

(g) However, § 220.4(c)(3) provides that:

> If the security when so purchased is an unissued security, the period applicable to the transaction under subparagraph (2) of this paragraph shall be 7 days after the date on which the security is made available by the issuer for delivery to purchasers.

(h) In interpreting § 220.4(c)(3), the Board has stated that the purpose of the provision:

> * * * is to recognize the fact that, when an issue of securities is to be issued at some future fixed date, a security that is part of such issue can be purchased on a "when-issued" basis and that payment may reasonably be delayed until after such date of issue, subject to other basic conditions for transactions in a special cash account. (1962

Federal Reserve Bulletin 1427; 12 CFR 220.118; ¶ 5996, Published Interpretations of the Board of Governors.)

In that situation, the Board distinguished the case of mutual fund shares, which technically are not issued until the certificate can be delivered by the transfer agent. The Board held that mutual fund shares must be regarded as issued at the time of purchase because they are:

> * * * essentially available upon purchase to the same extent as outstanding securities. The mechanics of their issuance and of the delivery of certificates are not significantly different from the mechanics of transfer and delivery of certificates for shares of outstanding securities, and the issuance of mutual fund shares is not a future event in the sense that would warrant the extension of the time for payment beyond that afforded in the case of outstanding securities. (ibid.)

The issuance of debt securities subject to delayed issue contracts, by contrast with that of mutual fund shares, which are in a status of continual underwriting, is a specific single event taking place at a future date fixed by the issuer with a view to its need for funds and the availability of those funds under current market conditions.

(i) For the reasons stated above the Board concluded that the nonconvertible debt and preferred stock subject to delayed issue contracts of the kind described above should not be regarded as having been issued until delivered, pursuant to the agreement, to the institutional purchaser. This interpretation does not apply, of course, to fact situations different from that described in this section.

§ 220.124 Installment sale of tax-shelter programs as "arranging" for credit.

(a) The Board has been asked whether the sale by brokers and dealers of tax-shelter programs containing a provision that payment for the program may be made in installments would constitute "arranging" for credit in violation of this Part 220. For the purposes of this interpretation, the term "tax-shelter program" means a program which is required to be registered pursuant to section 5 of the Securities Act of 1933 (15 U.S.C. section 77e), in which tax benefits, such as the ability to deduct substantial amounts of depreciation or oil exploration expenses, are made available to a person investing in the program. The programs may take various legal forms and can relate to a variety of industries including, but not limited to, oil and gas exploration programs, real estate syndications (except real estate investment trusts), citrus grove developments and cattle programs.

(b) The most common type of tax-shelter program takes the form of a limited partnership. In the case of the programs under consideration, the investor would commit himself to purchase and the partnership would commit itself to sell the interests. The investor would be entitled to the benefits, and become subject to the risks of ownership at the time the contract is made, although the full purchase price is not then required to be paid. The balance of the purchase price after the downpayment usually is payable in installments which range from 1 to 10 years depending on the program. Thus, the partnership would be extending credit to the purchaser until the time when the latter's contractual obligation has been fulfilled and the final payment made.

(c) With an exception not applicable here, § 220.7(a) of Regulation T provides that:

> A creditor [broker or dealer] may arrange for the extension or maintenance of credit to or for any customer of such creditor by any person upon the same terms and conditions as those upon which the creditor, under the provisions of this part, may himself extend or maintain such credit to such customer, but only such terms and conditions * * *

(d) In the case of credit for the purpose of purchasing or carrying securities (purpose credit), § 220.8 of the regulation (the Supplement to Regulation T) does not permit any loan value to be given securities that are not registered on a national securities exchange, included on the Board's OTC Margin List, or exempted by statute from the regulation.

(e) The courts have consistently held investment programs such as those described above to be "securities" for purpose of both the Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. The courts have also held that the two statutes are to be construed together. Tax-shelter programs, accordingly, are securities for purposes of Regulation T. They also are not registered on a national securities exchange, included on the Board's OTC Margin List, or exempted by statute from the regulation.

(f) Accordingly, the Board concludes that the sale by a broker/dealer of tax-shelter programs containing a provision that payment for the program may be made in installments would constitute "arranging" for the extension of credit to purchase or carry securities in violation of the prohibitions of §§ 220.7(a) and 220.8 of Regulation T.

§ 220.125 Extending, maintaining or arranging credit on mutual fund shares having portfolio of exempted securities.

(a) The Board of Governors has been asked whether a broker or dealer may extend, maintain, or arrange for credit in a special bond account subject to § 220.4 (i) on collateral consisting of shares of registered open-end investment companies whose portfolios are made up entirely or in part of exempted securities.

(b) The term "exempted securities" is defined in section 3(a)(12) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78c(a)(12)) and generally includes federal, state, and municipal securities. Such securities are eligible as collateral for extensions of credit in § 220.4(i) and are entitled to good faith loan value in an account carried pursuant to that section, under § 220.8(b).

(c) This Part 220 (Regulation T) provides that brokers and dealers may not extend, maintain, or arrange for credit to purchase any securities unless the collateral for such credit consists of exempted securities or securities that are registered on a national securities exchange or appear on the Board's OTC Margin List. Shares in registered open-end investment companies are not "exempted" securities, irrespective of the composition of the portfolio of the company, nor are they registered on national securities exchanges, or included on the OTC Margin List.
cordingly, such shares do not h loan value for purposes of this P

(c) Generally a put or call option refers to an agreement to sell a security or to purchase a security, at some future time. Although the agreement may itself be deemed to be a security, it cannot be an "unissued" security, under § 220.3(h) or § 220.4(c)(3), for the reasons set forth by the Board in discussing a similar question in regard to mutual fund shares (1962 Bulletin 1427; 12 CFR 220.118). Accordingly, in respect of a transaction involving puts or calls, payment is required within the period of time provided by § 220.3(b)(1) if the transaction occurs in the general account (or if the transaction occurs in a special cash account, by § 220.4(c)(2)) without regard to whether there has been a delay in obtaining the endorsement, or for any other reason the option has not yet technically been issued.

(d) A question has been asked whether puts and calls may be considered to be securities which are exchangeable or convertible into other securities within 90 calendar days, without restriction other than the payment of money. If held in a general account, such exchangeable or convertible securities are acceptable in lieu of the margin required in respect of a short sale under § 220.3(d)(3). If held in a special arbitrage account under § 220.4 (d), exchangeable or convertible securities will support the sale, for purposes of bona fide arbitrage, of the security into which they are so exchangeable or convertible. The Board concludes that puts and calls may not be considered, for either purpose, as securities that are exchangeable or convertible into other securities. The Board's view stems from the policies underlying the sections in question.

(e) The margin restrictions in respect of short sales were imposed in order that:

> * * * traders on the short side of the market should not be in a position, with a given amount of funds, to exert a greater influence on the market than they could with the same amount of funds if they were trading on the long side. (Annual Report, Board of Governors, 1937, p. 208.)

Permitting call options to be used in lieu of the margin required in respect of a short sale would be inconsistent with that general policy (parallel considerations would apply in the case of puts).

(f) The use of the special arbitrage account under § 220.4(d) is limited to the simultaneous purchase and sale of the same or equivalent securities for the purpose of taking advantage of a difference in price. Arbitrage is permitted to be carried on without additional deposit of margin because it tends to equalize prices between markets and between equivalent securities. Because the relatively high initial cost of a put or call option must be deducted from the potential profit due to the disparity in price between the two securities, it is not likely that true arbitrage would take place between an option and an underlying security. Such options would be used, rather, for purposes of "hedging," that is to say, to protect an investor against loss while he holds a security in the hope of profiting by changes in its price. Such market strategies may be beneficial to individual investors. However, they do not perform a comparable market function.

(g) Section 221.2 of this chapter provides that "a bank may extend and may maintain any credit for the purpose specified in § 221.1, without regard to the limitations prescribed therein, or in § 221.3(t), if the credit comes within any of the following descriptions." Paragraph (j) contains the following description: "Any credit extended to a member of a national securities exchange for the purpose of financing his or his customers' bona fide arbitrage transactions in securities." The Board has concluded that a purchase of a put or call is not embraced within the term in § 220.4(d) "a purchase of a security which is, without restriction other than the payment of money exchangeable or convertible * * * into a second security" so as to qualify such purchase, when effected together with an offsetting sale of the second security, as a bona fide arbitrage transaction, and the Board's conclusion is also applicable to paragraph (j) of § 221.2.

§ 220.127 Independent broker/dealers arranging credit in connection with the sale of insurance premium funding programs.

(a) The Board's September 5, 1972, clarifying amendment to § 220.4(k) set forth that creditors who arrange credit for the acquisition of mutual fund shares and insurance are also permitted to sell mutual fund shares without insurance under the provisions of the special cash account. It should be understood, of course, that such account provides a relatively short credit period of up to 7 business days even with so-called cash transactions. This amendment was in accordance with the Board's understanding in 1969, when the insurance premium funding provisions were adopted in § 220.4(k), that firms engaged in a general securities business would not also be engaged in the sale and arranging of credit in connection with such insurance premium funding programs.

(b) The 1972 amendment eliminated from § 220.4(k) the requirement that, to be eligible for the provisions of the section, a creditor had to be the issuer, or a subsidiary or affiliate of the issuer, of programs which combine the acquisition of both mutual fund shares and insurance. Thus the amendment permits an independent broker/dealer to sell such a program and to arrange for financing in that connection. In reaching such decision, the Board again relied upon the earlier understanding that independent broker/dealers who would sell such programs would not be engaged in transacting a general securities business.

(c) In response to a specific view recently expressed, the Board agrees that under Regulation T:

> * * * a broker/dealer dealing in special insurance premium funding products can only extend credit in connection with such products or in connection with the sale of shares of registered investment companies under the cash accounts * * * (and) cannot engage in the general securities business or sell any securities other than shares * * * (in) registered investment companies through a cash account or any other manner involving the extension of credit.

(d) There is a way, of course, as has been indicated, that an independent broker/dealer might be able to sell other than shares of registered investment companies without creating any conflict with the regulation. Such sales could be executed on a "funds on hand" basis and in the case of payment by check, would have to include the collection of such check. It is understood from industry sources, however, that few if any independent broker/dealers engage solely in a "fund on hand" type of operation.

§ 220.128 Treatment of simultaneous long and short positions in the same margin account when put or call options or combinations thereof on such stock are also outstanding in the account.

(a) The Board was recently asked whether under Regulation T, "Credit by Brokers and Dealers" (12 CFR Part 220), if there are simultaneous long and short positions in the same security in the same margin account (often referred to as a short sale "against the box"), such positions may be used to supply the place of the deposit of margin ordinarily required in connection with the guarantee by a creditor of a put or call option or combination thereof on such stock.

(b) The applicable provisions of regulation T are § 220.3(d)(3) and (5) and § 220.3(g)(4) and (5) which provide as follows:

> (d) * * * the adjusted debit balance of a general account * * * shall be calculated by taking the sum of the following items:
> (3) The current market value of any securities (other than unissued securities) sold short in the general account plus, for each security (other than an exempted security), such amount as the board shall prescribe from time to time in § 220.8(d) (the supplement to regulation T) as the margin required for such short sales, except that such amount so prescribed in such § 220.8(d) need not be included when there are held in the general account * * * the same securities or securities exchangeable or convertible within 90 calendar days, without restriction other than the payment of money, into such securities sold short;
> * * * * *

> (5) The amount of any margin customarily required by the creditor in connection with his endorsement or guarantee of any put, call, or other option;
>
> (g) * * * (4) Any transaction which serves to meet the requirements of paragraph (e) of this section or otherwise serves to permit any offsetting transaction in an account shall, to that extent, be unavailable to permit any other transaction in such account.
> (5) For the purposes of this part (regulation T), if a security has maximum loan value under paragraph (c)(1) of this section in a general account, or under § 220.4(j) in a special convertible debt security account, a sale of the same security (even though not the same certificate) in such account shall be deemed to be a long sale and shall not be deemed to be or treated as a short sale.

(c) Rule 431 of the New York Stock Exchange requires that a creditor obtain a minimum deposit of 25 percent of the current market value of the optioned stock in connection with his issuance or guarantee of a put, and at least 30 percent in the case of a call (and that such position be "marked to the market"), but permits a short position in the stock to serve in lieu of the required deposit in the case of a put and a long position to serve in the case of a call. Thus, where the appropriate position is held in an account, that position may serve as the margin required by § 220.3(d)(5).

(d) In a short sale "against the box," however, the customer is both long and short the same security. He may have established either position, properly margined, prior to taking the other, or he may have deposited fully paid securities in his margin account on the same day he makes a short sale of such securities. In either case, he will have directed his broker to borrow securities elsewhere in order to make delivery on the short sale rather than using his long position for this purpose (see also 17 CFR 240.3b-3).

(e) Generally speaking, a customer makes a short sale "against the box" for tax reasons. Regulation T, however, provides in § 220.3(g) that the two positions must be "netted out" for the purposes of the calculations required by the regulation. Thus, the board concludes that neither position would be available to serve as the deposit of margin required in connection with the endorsement by the creditor of an option.

(f) A similar conclusion obtains under § 220.3(d)(3). That section provides, in essence, that the margin otherwise required in connection with a short sale need not be included in the account if the customer has in the account a long position in the same security. In § 220.3(g) (4), however, it is provided that "[A]ny transaction which * * * serves to permit any offsetting transaction in an account shall, to that extent, be unavailable to permit any other transaction in such account." Thus, if a customer has, for example, a long position in a security and that long position has been used to supply the margin required in connection with a short sale of the same security, then the long position is unavailable to serve as the margin required in connection with the creditor's endorsement of a call option on such security.

(g) A situation was also described in which a customer has purported to establish simultaneous offsetting long and short positions by executing a "cross" or wash sale of the security on the same day. In this situation, no change in the beneficial ownership of stock has taken place. Since there is no actual "contra" party to either transaction, and no stock has been borrowed or delivered to accomplish the short sale, such fictitious positions would have no value for purposes of the Board's margin regulations. Indeed, the adoption of such a scheme in connection with an overall strategy involving the issuance, endorsement, or guarantee of put or call options or combinations thereof appears to be manipulative and may have been employed for the purpose of circumventing the requirements of the regulations.

§ 220.129 Applicability of same-day substitution rule to accounts subject to section 220.8(g).

(a) The Board has been asked numerous questions regarding the use of the same-day substitution privilege in § 220.3(b) of Regulation T in connection with accounts subject to § 220.8(g), generally, accounts having less than 40 percent equity. Prior to the Board's amendments, effective September 18, 1972 (37 FR 13972, 3, 4, July 15, 1972), a customer whose account was undermargined to any extent was allowed to substitute one security for another on the same day, usually through a sale and purchase for like amounts, without being required to improve his equity in the account. The 1972 amendments limit this privilege to accounts with an equity of 40 percent or more; as presently set by the Board. Accordingly, if a customer's equity is below 40 percent, he is not eligible for the same-day substitution privilege, but is required to put up margin on any new commitment, and retention requirements are applied to any liquidation, even though the transactions are effected on the same day.

(b) The questions raised with the Board touch upon other provisions of Regulation T as well that are affected by the September 1972 amendment to the same-day substitution rule and the impact of the amendment on these provisions is also reflected in the examples stated below. In making computations in similar situations it should be borne in mind that the examples are based on a current loan value of 35 percent for margin securities (margin requirements of 65 percent), and 50 percent loan value for exchange-listed convertible bonds, while the retention requirement for all accounts is 70 percent (release 30 percent).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON THE SAME-DAY SUBSTITUTION RULE IN CONNECTION WITH ACCOUNTS SUBJECT TO § 220.8(g)

Based on margin requirements as of November 24, 1972 of 65 percent (35 percent loan value) in the general account and 50 percent (50 percent loan value) in the special convertible debt security account, and retention requirements with respect to withdrawals in each account of 70 percent (30 percent release).

June 1973

1. Q. Customer is long $10,000 margin securities in his general account, which has an adjusted debit balance of $7,000. Customer has an $8,000 balance in his special miscellaneous account. The general account is subject to section 8(g). The customer wishes to purchase margin securities worth $1,000 and sell securities worth $1,000 on the same day. What is the Regulation T margin call if any?

A. $350, the margin required on the purchase ($650) minus the margin released on the sale ($300) (net $350). The call may be met by a debit to the customer's special miscellaneous account.

2. Q. Customer is long $10,000 margin securities in his general account which has an adjusted debit balance of $9,000. Customer has an $8,000 balance in his special miscellaneous account. The general account is subject to section 8(g). May the creditor reduce the special miscellaneous account balance to a level at which time the general account would no longer be subject to section 8(g)?

A. Yes; before such a debit to the special miscellaneous account is made, however, the creditor may wish to obtain the written consent of the customer. The customer should be fully aware of the procedure to be followed by the creditor and that such an amount could not be transferred back from the general account to the special miscellaneous account at a later date, unless an excess over 65 percent margin in the general account would permit another transfer.

3. Q. Customer's account has a Regulation T margin call which was outstanding (and not overdue) as of the close of business on the preceding business day. In computing the account to determine if it is subject to section 8(g), may the creditor consider the outstanding Regulation T margin call as collected?

A. Yes, for the purpose of computing an account to determine whether it is subject to section 8(g), the creditor may give credit to such an outstanding Regulation T margin call which would reduce the adjusted debit balance.

4. Q. Customer is long $10,000 margin securities in his general account which has an adjusted debit balance of $6,075. The account is subject to section 8(g) by an amount less than $100. He wishes to purchase margin securities valued at $1,000 and sell securities valued at $1,000 in the account on the same day. What Regulation T margin call if any should be issued?

A. $350. Once the determination has been made that an account is subject to section 8(g), purchases in the general account are charged the margin required, currently 65 percent, and sales currently release 30 percent. The $100 rule in § 220.3(g)(3) does not apply to the 8(g) computation.

5. Q. Customer's account has an outstanding maintenance margin call. In computing the account to determine if it is subject to section 8(g), may the creditor consider the outstanding maintenance margin call as collected?

A. No; maintenance margin calls are generally credited to the customer's special miscellaneous account, and accordingly, the collection of the maintenance margin call would not change the adjusted debit balance.

6. Q. Customer is long $10,000 margin securities in his general account which is subject to section 8(g) by $100 and is in a so-called regular restricted status by $2,600. He wishes to sell securities worth $9,000 and buy margin securities worth $9,000 on the same day. The purchase would require margin of $5,850 and the sale would release $2,700 (net $3,150). In what amount should the creditor issue a Regulation T margin call?

A. $2,600. The customer would not be required to deposit more than is needed to eliminate the so-called regular restriction.

7. Q. Does a debit to the general account and a credit to the special miscellaneous account (SMA) increase the customer's adjusted debit balance?

A. Yes; the reference to "net debit balance" in § 220.3(d)(1) of Regulation T, in connection with the adjusted debit balance computation, includes any amounts debited to the general account and credited to the SMA. It is quite possible for an account to be subject to section 8(g) as a result of such entries. For regulatory purposes, the balances of the two accounts should be separately stated, whether the creditor maintains the SMA by journal or memorandum entry methods.

Section 220.4(a) provides that a creditor may establish an SMA, the purpose of which is defined in paragraph (f)(6), provided it is recorded separately, and confined to its intended purpose, with an adequate record maintained. Paragraph (a)(3) further provides that:

> * * * If a customer has with a creditor both a general account and one or more such special accounts, the creditor shall treat each such special account as if the customer had with the creditor no general account * * *

The agreement between the creditor and the customer should clearly show that two accounts will be maintained and that when transfers of amounts such as dividends, maintenance margin calls, and excess are made, the general account and the SMA are debited or credited as the case may be. Funds cannot be freely transferred back and forth. Generally, while funds can always be transferred from the SMA to the general account, transfers from the general account to the SMA can only be made when certain specific events occur and conditions are met.

8. Q. Customer is long $80,000 convertible debt securities in a special convertible debt security account which has an adjusted debit balance of $50,000. The account is subject to section 8(g). The customer wishes to purchase $60,000 convertible debt securities (which are marginable) and sell $60,000 convertible debt securities on the same day. What is the Regulation T margin call if any?

A. $10,000. The margin currently required on the purchase is $30,000 and the margin currently released on the sale is $18,000. However, the customer would not be required to deposit more than is needed to eliminate the so-called regular restriction of $10,000 in the account.

9. Q. Does the 8(g) rule apply to the special bond account?

A. No; in a special bond account, the maximum loan value of collateral held in the account is determined by the creditor in good faith, and the retention requirement which applies to withdrawal of such collateral is equal to the good faith loan value applied by the creditor.

10. Q. Customer has an account subject to 8(g) and wishes to know how much he can buy or sell without incurring a Regulation T margin call.

A. (1) Under the current 65 percent margin requirement (in the general account),

(a) To determine how much a customer can buy with the proceeds of a sale in that account, apply this formula:

(30% (margin released on sale)/65% (margin required on purchase)=46.1% (round off 46%)

Thus, a sale of $10,000 would permit a purchase of $4,600.

Proof:

Margin released on sale of $10,000	$3,000
Margin required on purchase of $4,600	2,990

(b) To determine how much a customer would have to sell to meet the margin requirement on a purchase, apply this formula:

(65% (margin required on purchase)/30% (margin released on sale)=216⅔% (round off 217%)

Thus, a purchase of $10,000 would require a sale of $21,667.

Proof:

Margin required on purchase of $10,000	$6,500
Margin released on sale of $21,667	6,500

(2) Under the current 50 percent margin requirement (in the special convertible debt security account),

(a) To determine how much a customer can buy with the proceeds of a sale in that account, apply this formula:

30% (margin released on sale)/50% (margin required on purchase)=60%

Thus, a sale of $10,000 would permit a purchase of $6,000.

Proof:

Margin released on sale of $10,000	$3,000
Margin required on purchase of $6,000	3,000

(b) To determine how much a customer would have to sell to meet the margin requirement on a purchase, apply this formula:

50% (margin required on purchase)/30% (margin released on sale)=166⅔% (round off 167%)

Thus, a purchase of $10,000 would require a sale of $16,700.

Proof:

Margin required on purchase of $10,000	$5,000
Margin released on sale of $16,700	5,010

11. Q. A Regulation T margin call is issued as a result of a same-day substitution occurring in an account that is subject to section 8(g). What computation is required?

A. The amount may be determined by applying this formula:

Less:
Margin required on commitment
Margin released on liquidation
Equals: Regulation T margin call

ILLUSTRATIONS

1. In a general account:
a. Purchase $10,000×65% margin required	$6,500
Sell $9,000×30% margin released	2,700
Regulation T margin call	3,800
b. Purchase $8,000×65% margin required	5,200
Sell $11,000×30% margin released	3,300
Regulation T margin call	1,900
2. In a special convertible debt security account:
a. Purchase $6,000×50% margin required	3,000
Sell $5,000×30% margin released	1,500
Regulation T margin call	1,500
b. Purchase $7,000×50% margin required	3,500
Sell $9,000×30% margin released	2,700
Regulation T margin call	800

12. Q. Customer's general account which is subject to section 8(g) includes a short position in stock A of 100 shares at 100 (market value $10,000). Customer buys 200 shares of the same stock and maintains his short position, which results in a long position of 200 shares of which 100 shares is considered the long side of the short sale "against the box." Does this transaction result in the issuance of a Regulation T margin call and for how much?

A. Yes; the customer would incur a Regulation T margin call of $6,500, the margin required on the new net commitment of 100 shares long. Because the customer's account is subject to section 8(g), the retention requirement provision in the regulation (which does not provide for any release on the covering of a short position) would apply.

13. Q. Customer's general account is subject to section 8(g) and he wishes to buy and sell the same stock on the same day (day trade). May he do so without furnishing additional margin under Regulation T? (This question assumes that the customer could effect such a day trade in conformance with exchange requirements.)

A. No; Regulation T in providing for transactions on a given day in § 220.3(g) does not distinguish between same or different securities. Therefore, the amount of deposit required would be computed on the basis of the margin required on the purchase less the amount released on the sale of the same stock.

14. Q. May the amount deposited to meet a Regulation T margin call in an account subject to section 8(g) be credited to the customer's special miscellaneous account?

A. No; any Regulation T margin call must be credited directly to the account with respect to which the call was issued and may not be transferred to the customer's special miscellaneous account.

15. Q. Customer's general account is subject to section 8(g). He effects a same-day substitution by liquidating securities worth $21,334, thereby releasing 30 percent ($6,400), and purchasing margin securities worth $10,000, thereby requiring margin of 65 percent ($6,500). Must the customer deposit the $100 difference?

A. No; the creditor may waive a Regulation T margin call of $100 or less.

16. Q. Customer's special convertible debt security account is subject to section 8(g). His general account is in a so-called restricted status but not subject to section 8(g). May he effect a same-day substitution of securities in like amounts in his general account without incurring a Regulation T margin call?

A. Yes. Each account is computed separately, either one of which may or may not be subject to section 8(g).

17. Q. Customer's general account is subject to section 8(g) and he has a $200 balance in his special miscellaneous account. May he withdraw the $200?

A. Yes; Regulation T would not prevent such a withdrawal. However, exchange and creditor requirements should be considered.

18. Q. A customer's general account is priced as of the previous night's close of business and is subject to section 8(g) by $300. On the current day, may the customer deposit $300 directly into his general account and subsequently effect a same-day substitution of margin securities without incurring a Regulation T margin call?

A. No; when an account is subject to section 8(g), a deposit on the current day of the amount by which the account is subject to section 8(g) would not eliminate the section 8(g) restriction. Accordingly, a Regulation T margin call should be issued in the appropriate amount if there is effected in the account a same-day substitution of margin securities.

19. Q. Customer is long a profitable call option on 100 shares of margin stock A at 50 in his general account which is subject to section 8(g). He wishes to exercise the option and hold the stock which is currently at 55. What is the Regulation T margin call if any?

A. $3,250, the margin required on the purchase of $5,000. In pricing the account subsequent to the purchase, loan value would be applied to the stock's current market value of $5,500.

20. Q. Customer is long a profitable call option on 100 shares of margin stock B at 50 in his general account which is subject to section 8(g). He wishes to exercise the option by buying stock B at 50 and selling stock B at 55 on the same day. What is the Regulation T margin call if any?

A. $1,600, the margin required on the purchase ($3,250) minus the margin released on the sale ($1,650).

21. Q. Is it possible under Regulation T for a customer who is long a profitable option in his general account which is subject to section 8(g) to terminate his position in the option and have immediate access to the funds representing the profit?

A. Yes; he may give instructions to his broker to transfer the option from his general account to his special cash account where he could sell the option itself either back to the broker or to others.

22. Q. A customer's general account is subject to section 8(g). May he transfer a profitable call option from his general account to his special cash account where he would exercise it?

A. Yes; provided that full cash payment for the purchased stock is available in the special cash account or is deposited promptly. Such payment must be deposited in the special cash account prior to the release of the proceeds of the resale of the security, if the customer wishes to liquidate the position in the security acquired upon exercise.

23. Q. Customer is short an uncovered call option on 100 shares of stock C with a striking price of 50 in his general account which is subject to section 8(g). His net debit balance was reduced by $1,500 (30 percent margin requirement) when the short option position was taken (made up by receipt of $500 premium and additional deposit of $1,000, both credited to the general account). Presently, the market value of stock C is up to 60 and customer's adjusted debit balance now includes $2,800 ($6,000×30 percent=$1,800 plus the mark to the market loss of $1,000). The call is exercised against him at 60 and customer purchases the stock and delivers it the same day. What is the Regulation T margin call, if any?

A. $2,400, the margin required on the purchase of stock C ($3,900) minus the margin released on the sale of stock C ($1,500). When an account is subject to section 8(g), the retention requirement provisions in the regulation do not provide for any release of any portion of the amount included in the adjusted debit balance computation in connection with the option prior to its exercise. The account, of course, may subsequently be refigured for any Regulation T excess.

24. Q. Customer's account is the same as in question 23. However, when the call is exercised against him at 60, customer borrows the stock for delivery (without buying in), thereby establishing a short position in stock C. What is the Regulation T margin call if any?

A. $3,250, the margin required on the newly established short position in stock C. Here, too, because the account is subject to section 8(g), the regulation would not permit the broker to offset the Regulation T margin call by any portion of the amount previously included in the adjusted debit balance computation in connection with the outstanding option prior to its exercise. It should be further noted that subsequent to the exercise and during the time the customer maintains the short position in stock C, the adjusted debit balance computation for the short position would be based on the current market value of the security.

25. Q. Customer's account is the same as in question 23. However, when the call is exercised, the customer assumes a short position of 100 shares in stock C. Later in the day the customer covers his short position by purchasing on the open market 100 shares of stock C at 60. What is the Regulation T margin call, if any?

A. $2,400, the margin required on the purchase of stock C ($3,900) minus the margin released on the sale of stock C ($1,500).

26. Q. Customer is short an uncovered call option on 100 shares of stock D with a striking price of 50 in his general account which is subject to section 8(g). His net debit balance was reduced by $1,500 (30 percent margin requirement) when the short option position was taken. Presently, the market value of stock D is down to 40 and customer's adjusted debit balance now includes $200 ($4,000×30 percent=$1,200 minus the mark to the market gain of $1,000). The holder of the option allows it to expire. May the customer who is short the option withdraw any portion of the amount included as margin in the adjusted debit balance computation in connection with the option or use the amount against another transaction?

A. No. When an account is subject to section 8(g), the retention requirement provisions in the Regulation do not provide for any release of any portion of the amount included as margin in the adjusted debit balance computation in connection with the option.

§ 220.130 Escrow receipts for option transactions.

(a) The Board has been asked whether or not it is permissible under the provisions of § 220.4(c) of Regulation T (12 CFR 220.4(3)) relating to the special cash account, to allow customers to write put and call securities options which are "covered" by the escrow receipt of a bank when the escrow receipt, because of the mechanics of the trade, cannot be delivered to the broker on the day the option is written. When exchange-traded securities options were first introduced in 1973 the Board expressed the view that certain option transactions were permitted in the cash account (1973 Bulletin 525; 12 CFR 220.126) under circumstances which indicated their nature as bona fide cash transactions. Basically, that interpretation indicates that the special cash account can be used if the underlying securities, or the funds necessary to pay for the securities, are held in the account on the day the option is written. (This is commonly referred to as a "covered" transaction.) The use of "escrow receipts" for option transactions to be effected in a special cash account was not considered by the Board at the time of the 1973 interpretation.

(b) An escrow receipt is an agreement under which a bank represents and warrants that it holds for the account of a customer the securities which are the subject of a call, or the cash to purchase the securities which are the subject of a put, and will continue to hold the same until the option is either exercised or expires. If the option is exercised, the bank will deliver or accept delivery of the appropriate securities against payment, as the circumstances require.

(c) It has been represented to the Board that customers who wish to write covered options in a cash account using escrow receipts are hampered because of procedural delays in transmitting the escrow receipt from the bank to the broker. Up to three business days may elapse before the receipt can be in the physical possession of the broker because, for example, some banks will not issue the receipt until the premium for writing the option is delivered.

(d) The Board is of the view that a broker may effect an option transaction in a special cash account where the customer represents that the required securities or cash are then held for that customer at a bank and the broker independently verifies that the appropriate escrow receipt will be delivered to the broker by the bank as soon as possible but, in no event, later than three business days after the option is written. (The term "bank" as defined in section 3(a)(6) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 includes banks, trust companies and those branches of foreign banks which are located in the United States and are supervised and examined by State banking authorities.) Any delay in delivery of the escrow receipt resulting from factors within the customer's control would, of course, cast doubt on the eligibility of the transaction as a bona fide cash transaction.

§ 221.1 Authority, purpose, and scope.

(a) Authority. Regulation U ("this part") is issued by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System ("the Board") pursuant to the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (the "Act") (15 U.S.C. 78a et seq.).

(b) Purpose and scope. This part imposes credit restrictions upon "banks" (as defined in § 221.2(b) of this part) that extend credit for the purpose of buying or carrying margin stock if the credit is secured directly or indirectly by margin stock. Banks may not extend more than the maximum loan value of the collateral securing such credit, as set by the Board in § 221.8 (the Supplement).

The terms used in this part have the meanings given them in section 3(a) of the Act or as defined in this section.

(a) "Affiliate" means: (1) Any bank holding company of which a bank is a subsidiary within the meaning of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1841(d));

(2) Any other subsidiary of such bank holding company; and

(3) Any other corporation, business trust, association, or other similar organization that is an affiliate as defined in section 2(b) of the Banking Act of 1933 (12 U.S.C. 221a(c)).

(b)(1) "Bank" has the meaning given to it in section 3(a)(6) of the Act (15 U.S.C. 78c(a)(6)) and includes: (i) Any subsidiary of a bank;

(ii) Any corporation organized under section 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 611); and

(iii) Any agency or branch of a foreign bank located within the United States.

(2) "Bank" does not include: (i) Any savings and loan association,

(ii) Any credit union,

(iii) Any lending institution that is an instrumentality or agency of the United States, or

(iv) Any member of a national securities exchange.

(c) "Carrying" credit is credit that enables a customer to maintain, reduce, or retire indebtedness originally incurred to purchase a security that is currently a margin stock.

(d) "Current market value" of (1) a security means: (i) If quotations are available, the closing sale price of the security on the preceding business day, as appearing on any regularly published reporting or quotation service; or

(ii) If there is no closing sale price, the bank may use any reasonable estimate of the market value of the security as of the close of business on the preceding business day; or

(iii) If the credit is used to finance the purchase of the security, the total cost of purchase, which may include any commissions charged.

(2) Any other collateral means a value determined by any reasonable method in accordance with sound banking practices.

(e) "Customer" includes any person or persons acting jointly, to or for whom a bank extends or maintains credit.

(f) "Good faith" with respect to: (1) The loan value of collateral, means that amount (not exceeding 100 per cent of the current market value of the collateral) which a bank, exercising sound banking judgment, would lend, without regard to the customer's other assets held as collateral in connection with unrelated transactions.

(2) Accepting notice or certification from or on behalf of a customer means that the bank or its duly authorized representative is alert to the circumstances surrounding the credit, and if in possession of information that would cause a prudent person not to accept the notice or certification without inquiry, investigates and is satisfied that it is truthful;

(g) "Indirectly secured" (1) Includes any arrangement with the customer under which:

(i) The customer's right or ability to sell, pledge, or otherwise dispose of margin stock owned by the customer is in any way restricted while the credit remains outstanding; or

(ii) The exercise of such right is or may be caused for accelerating the maturity of the credit.

(2) Does not include such an arrangement if:

(i) After applying the proceeds of the credit, not more than 25 percent of the value (as determined by any reasonable method) of the assets subject to the arrangement is represented by margin stock;

(ii) It is a lending arrangement that permits accelerating the maturity of the credit as a result of a default or renegotiation of another credit to the customer by another lender that is not an affiliate of the bank;

(iii) The bank holds the margin stock only in the capacity of custodian, depositary, or trustee, or under similar circumstances, and, in good faith, has not relied upon the margin stock as collateral; or

(iv) The bank, in good faith, has not relied upon the margin stock as collateral in extending or maintaining the particular credit.

(h) "Margin stock" means: (1) Any equity security registered or having unlisted trading privileges on a national securities exchange;

(2) any OTC margin stock;

(3) any OTC security designated as qualified for trading in the National Market System under a designation plan approved by the Securities and Exchange Commission (NMS security);

(4) any debt security convertible into a margin stock or carrying a warrant or right to subscribe to or purchase a margin stock;

(5) any warrant or right to subscribe to or purchase a margin stock; or

(6) any security issued by an investment company registered under section 8 of the Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. 80a-8), other than:

(i) A company licensed under the Small Business Investment Company Act of 1958, as amended (15 U.S.C. 661); or

(ii) a company which has at least 95 percent of its assets continuously invested in exempted securities (as defined in 15 U.S.C. 78c(a)(12)); or

(iii) a company which issues face-amount certificates as defined in 15 U.S.C. 80a-2(a)(15), but only with respect of such securities.

(i) "Maximum loan value" is the percentage of current market value assigned by the Board under § 221.8 of this part to specified types of collateral. The maximum loan value of margin stock is stated as a percentage of its current market value. Puts, calls and combinations thereof have no loan value except for purposes of § 221.5(c)(10) of this part. All other collateral has "good faith" loan value.

(j) "OTC margin stock" is any equity security not traded on a national securities exchange that the Board has determined has the degree of national investor interest, the depth and breadth of market, the availability of information respecting the security and its issuer, and the character and permanence of the issuer to warrant being treated like an equity security traded on a national securities exchange. An OTC stock is not considered to be an "OTC margin stock" unless it appears on the Board's periodically published list of OTC margin stocks.

(k) "Purpose credit" is any credit for the purpose, whether immediate, incidental, or ultimate, of buying or carrying margin stock.

§ 221.3 General requirements.

(a) Extending, maintaining, and arranging credit—(1) Extending credit. No bank shall extend any purpose credit, secured directly or indirectly by margin stock, in an amount that exceeds the maximum loan value of the collateral securing the credit. The maximum loan value of margin stock (set forth in § 221.8 of this part) is assigned by the Board in terms of a percentage of the current market value of the margin stock. All other collateral has "good faith" loan value, as defined in § 221.2(f) of this part.

(2) Maintaining credit. A bank may continue to maintain any credit initially extended in compliance with this part, regardless of:

(i) Reduction in the customer's equity resulting from change in market prices;

(ii) Change in the maximum loan value prescribed by this part; or

(iii) Change in the status of the security (from nonmargin to margin) securing an existing purpose credit.

(3) Arranging credit. No bank may arrange for the extension or maintenance of any purpose credit, except upon the same terms and conditions under which the bank itself may extend or maintain purpose credit under this part.

(b) Purpose statement. (1) Except for credit extended under paragraph (c) of this section, whenever a bank extends credit secured directly or indirectly by any margin stock, the bank shall require its customer to execute Form F.R. U-1 (OMB No. 7100-0115), which shall be signed and accepted by a duly authorized officer of the bank acting in good faith.

(c) Purpose statement for revolving credit or multiple-draw agreements.

(i) If a bank extends credit, secured directly or indirectly by any margin stock, under a revolving credit or other multiple-draw agreement, Form F.R. U-1 can either be executed each time a disbursement is made under the agreement, or at the time the credit arrangement is originally established.

(ii) If a purpose statement executed at the time the credit arrangement is initially made indicates that the purpose is to purchase or carry margin stock, the credit will be deemed in compliance with this part if the maximum loan value of the collateral at least equals the aggregate amount of funds actually disbursed. For any purpose credit disbursed under the agreement, the bank shall obtain and attach to the executed Form F.R. U-1 a current list of collateral which adequately supports all credit extended under the agreement.

(d) Single credit rule. (1) All purpose credit extended to a customer shall be treated as a single credit, and all the collateral securing such credit shall be considered in determining whether or not the credit complies with this part.

(2) A bank that has extended purpose credit secured by margin stock may not subsequently extend unsecured purpose credit to the same customer unless the combined credit does not exceed the maximum loan value of the collateral securing the prior credit.

(3) If a bank extended unsecured purpose credit to a customer prior to the extension of purpose credit secured by margin stock, the credits shall be combined and treated as a single credit solely for the purposes of the withdrawal and substitution provision of paragraph (f) of this section.

(4) If a bank extends purpose credit secured by any margin stock and nonpurpose credit to the same customer, the bank shall treat the credits as two separate loans and may not rely upon the required collateral securing the purpose credit for the nonpurpose credit.

(e) Mixed collateral loans. A purpose credit secured in part by margin stock, and in part by other collateral shall be treated as two separate loans, one secured by margin stock and one by all other collateral. A bank may use a single credit agreement, if it maintains records identifying each portion of the credit and its collateral.

(f) Withdrawals and substitutions. (1) A bank may permit any withdrawal or substitution of cash or collateral by the customer if the withdrawal or substitution would not:

(i) Cause the credit to exceed the maximum loan value of the collateral; or

(ii) Increase the amount by which the credit exceeds the maximum loan value of the collateral.

(2) For purposes of this section, the maximum loan value of the collateral on the day of the withdrawal or substitution shall be used.

(g) Exchange offers. To enable a customer to participate in a reorganization, recapitalization or exchange offer that is made to holders of an issue of margin stock, a bank may permit substitution of the securities received. A nonmargin, nonexempted security acquired in exchange for a margin stock shall be treated as if it is margin stock for a period of 60 days following the exchange.

(h) Renewals and extensions of maturity. A renewal or extension of maturity of a credit need not be considered a new extension of credit if the amount of the credit is increased only by the addition of interest, service charges, or taxes with respect to the credit.

(i) Transfers of credit. (1) A transfer of a credit between customers or banks shall not be considered a new extension of credit if:

(i) The original credit was in compliance with this part;

(ii) The transfer is not made to evade this part;

(iii) The amount of credit is not increased; and

(iv) The collateral for the credit is not changed.

(2) Any transfer between customers at the same bank shall be accompanied by a statement by the transferor customer describing the circumstances giving rise to the transfer and shall be accepted an signed by an officer of the bank acting in good faith. The bank shall keep such statement with its records of the transferee account.

(3) When a transfer is made between banks, the transferee bank shall obtain a copy of the form F.R. U-1 originally filed with the transferor bank and retain the copy with its records of the transferee account.

(j) Action for bank's protection. Nothing in this part shall require a bank to waive or forego any lien or prevent a bank from taking any action it deems necessary in good faith for its protection.

(k) Mistakes in good faith. A mistake in good faith in connection with the extension of maintenance of credit shall not be a violation of this part.

(l) Lack of notice of NMS security designation. Failure to treat an NMS security as a margin stock in connection with an extension of credit shall not be deemed a violation of this part if the designation is made between quarterly publications of the Board's List of OTC Margin Stocks and the bank does not have actual notice of the designation.

§ 221.4 Agreements of nonmember banks.

(a) Banks that are not members of the Federal Reserve System shall file an agreement that conforms to the requirements of section 8(a) of the Act (See Form T-1 for domestic nonmember banks and Form T-2 for all other nonmember banks) prior to extending any credit secured by any nonexempt security registered on a national securities exchange to persons subject to Part 220 of this chapter, who are borrowing in the ordinary course of business.

(b) Any nonmember bank may terminate its agreement upon written notification to the Board.

§ 221.5 Special purpose loans to brokers and dealers.

(a) Special purpose loans. A member bank and a nonmember bank that is in compliance with § 221.4 of this part, may extend and maintain purpose credit to brokers and dealers without regard to the limitations set forth in §§ 221.3 and 221.8 of this part, if the credit is for any of the specific purposes and meets the conditions set forth in paragraph (c) of this section.

(b) Written notice. Prior to extending credit for more than a day under this section, the bank shall obtain and accept in good faith a written notice or certification from the borrower as to the purposes of the loan. The written notice or certification shall be evidence of continued eligiblity for the special credit provisions until the borrower notifies the bank that it is no longer eligible or the bank has information that would cause a reasonable person to question whether the credit is being used for the purpose specified.

(c) Types of special purpose credit. The types of credit that may be extended and maintained on a good faith basis are as follows:

(1) Hypothecation loans. Credit secured by hypothecated customer securities that, according to written notice received from the broker or dealer, may be hypothecated by the broker or dealer under Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") rules.

(2) Temporary advances in payment-against-delivery transactions. Credit to finance the purchase or sale of securities for prompt delivery, if the credit is to be repaid upon completion of the transaction.

(3) Loans for securities in transit or transfer. Credit to finance securities in transit or surrendered for transfer, if the credit is to be repaid upon completion of the transaction.

(4) Intra-day loans. Credit to enable a broker or dealer to pay for securities, if the credit is to be repaid on the same day it is extended.

(5) Arbitrage loans. Credit to finance proprietary or customer bona fide arbitrage transactions. For the purpose of this section "bona fide arbitrage" means:

(i) Purchase or sale of a security in one market, together with an offsetting sale or purchase of the same security in a different market at nearly the same time as practicable, for the purpose of taking advantage of a difference in prices in the two markets; or

(ii) Purchase of a security that is, without restriction other than the payment of money, exchangeable or convertible within 90 calendar days of the purchase into a second security, together with an offsetting sale of the second security at or about the same time, for the purpose of taking advantage of a concurrent disparity in the price of the two securities.

(6) Distribution loans. Credit to finance the distribution of securities to customers.

(7) Odd-lot loans. Credit to finance the odd lot transactions of a person registered as an odd lot dealer on a national securities exchange.

(8) Emergency loans. Credit that is essential to meet emergency needs of the broker-dealer business arising from exceptional circumstances.

(9) Capital contribution loans. (i) Credit that Board has exempted by order upon a finding that the exemption is necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors, provided the Securities Investor Protection Corporation certifies to the Board that the exemption is appropriate; or

(ii) Credit to a customer for the purpose of making a subordinated loan or capital contribution to a broker or dealer in conformity with the SEC's net capital rules and the rules of the broker's or dealer's Examining Authority, provided:

(A) The customer reduces the credit by the amount of any reduction in the loan or contribution to the broker or dealer; and

(B) The credit is not used to purchase securities issued by the broker or dealer in a public distribution.

(10) Loans to specialists. Credit extended to finance the specialty security and permitted offset positions of members of a national securities exchange who are registered and acting as specialists on the exchange, provided the credit is extended on a good faith loan value basis.

(11) OTC market maker credit. Credit to a dealer who has given written notice to the bank that it is a "qualified OTC market maker" in an OTC margin security as defined in SEC Rule 3b-8 (17 CFR 240.3b-8) and that the credit will be used solely for the purpose of financing the market making activity, provided the credit is extended on a good faith loan value basis.

(12) Third market maker loans. Credit to a dealer who has given written notice to the bank that it is a "qualified third market maker," as defined in SEC Rule 3b-8 (17 CFR 240.3b-8), and that the credit will be used solely for the purpose of financing positions in securities assumed as a "qualified third market maker," provided the credit is extended on a good faith loan value basis.

(13) Block positioner credit. Credit to a dealer who has given written notice to the bank that it is a "qualified block positioner" for a block of securities, as defined in SEC Rule 3b-8 (17 CFR 240.3b-8), and that the credit will be used to finance a position in that block, provided the credit is extended on a good faith loan value basis.

§ 221.6 Exempted transactions.

A bank may extend and maintain purpose credit without regard to the provisions of this part if such credit is extended:

(a) To any bank;

(b) To any foreign banking insititution;

(c) Outside the United States;

(d) To an employee stock ownership plan (ESOP) qualified under section 401 of the Internal Revenue Code (26 U.S.C 401);

(e) To any "plan lender" as defined in Part 207 of this chapter to finance such a plan, provided the bank has no recourse to any securities purchased pursuant to the plan;

(f) To any customer, other than a broker or dealer, to temporarily finance the purchase or sale of securities for prompt deliver, if the credit is to be repaid in the ordinary course of business upon completion of the transaction;

(g) Against securities in transit, if the credit is not extended to enable the customer to pay for securities purchased in an account subject to Part 220 of this chapter; or

(h) To enable a customer to meet emergency expenses not reasonably foreseeable, and if the extension of credit is supported by a statement executed by the customer and accepted and signed by an officer of the bank acting in good faith. For this purpose, emergency expenses include expenses arising from circumstances such as the death or disability of the customer, or some other change in circumstances involving extreme hardship, not reasonably foreseeable at the time the credit was extended. The opportunity to realize monetary gain or to avoid loss is not a "change in circumstances" for this purpose.

§ 221.7 Requirements for the list of OTC margin stocks.

(a) Requirements for inclusion on the list. Except as provided in paragraph (d) of this section, an OTC margin stock shall meet the following requirements:

(1) Four or more dealers stand willing to, and do in fact, make a market in such stock and regularly submit bona fide bids and offers to an automated quotations system for their own accounts;

(2) The minimum average bid price of such stock, as determined by the Board, is at least $5 per share;

(3) The stock is registered under section 12 of the Act, is issued by an insurance company subject to section (12)(g)(2)(G) of the Act, is issued by a closed end investment management company subject to registration pursuant to section 8 of the Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. 80a-8), is an American Depository Receipt (ADR) of a foreign issuer whose securities are registered under secton 12 of the Act, or is a stock of an issuer required to file reports under section 15(d) of the Act;

(4) Daily quotations for both bid and asked prices for the stock are continuously available to the general public;

(5) The stock has been publicly traded for at least six months;

(6) The issuer had at least $4 million of capital, surplus, and undivided profits;

(7) There are 400,000 or more shares of such stock outstanding in addition to shares held beneficially by officers, directors or beneficial owners of more than 10 percent of the stock;

(8) There are 1,200 or more holders of record, as defined in SEC Rule 12g5-1 (17 CFR 240.12g5-1), of the stock who are not officers, directors or beneficial owners of ten percent or more of the stock, or the average daily trading volume of such a stock as determined by the Board, is at least 500 shares; and

(9) The issuer or a predecessor in interest has been in existence for at least three years.

(b) Requirements for continued inclusion on the list. Except as provided in paragraph (d) of this section, an OTC margin stock shall meet the following requirements:

(1) Three or more dealers stand willing to, and do in fact make a market in such stock and regularly submit bona fide bids and offers to an automated quotations system for their own accounts;

(2) The minimum average bid price of such stocks, as determined by the Board, is at least $2 per share;

(3) The stock is registered as specified in paragraph (a)(3) of this section;

(4) Daily quotations for both bid and asked prices for the stock are coninuously available to the general public;

(5) The issuer has at least $1 million of capital, surplus, and undivided profits;

(6) There are 300,000 or more shares of such stock outstanding in addition to shares held beneficially by officers, directors, or beneficial owners of more than 10 percent of the stock; and

(7) There continue to be 800 or more holders of record, as defined in SEC Rule 12g5-1 (17 CFR 240.12g5-1), of the stock who are not officers, directors, or beneficial owners of ten percent or more of the stock, or the average daily trading volume of such stock, as determined by the Board, is at least 300 shares.

(c) Removal from the list. The Board shall periodically remove from the list any stock that:

(1) Ceases to exist or of which the issuer ceases to exist, or

(2) No longer substantially meets the provisions of paragraph (b) of this section or § 221.2(j).

(d) Discretionary authority of Board. Without regard to the other paragraphs of this section, the Board may add to, or omit or remove from, the OTC margin stock list, any equity security, if in the judgment of the Board, such action is necessary or appropriate in the public interest.

(e) Unlawful representations. It shall be unlawful for any bank to make, or cause to be made, any representation to the effect that the inclusion of a security on the list of OTC margin stocks is evidence that the Board or the SEC has in any way passed upon the merits of, or given approval to, such security or any transactions therein. Any statement in an advertisement or other similar communication containing a reference to the Board in connection with the list or stocks on that list shall be an unlawful representation.

§ 221.8 Supplement, maximum loan value of margin stock and other collateral.

(a) Maximum loan value of margin stock. The maximum loan value of any margin stock expect options is fifty per cent of its current market value.

(b) Maximum loan value of nonmargin stock and all other collateral. The maximum loan value of nonmargin stock and all other collateral except puts, calls, or combinations thereof is their good faith loan value.

(c) Maximum loan value of options. Except for purposes of §221.5(c)(10) of this part, puts, calls, and combinations thereof have no loan value.

INTERPRETATIONS

§ 221.101 Determination and effect of purpose of loan.

(a) Under this part the original purpose of a loan is controlling. In other words, if a loan originally is not for the purpose of purchasing or carrying registered stocks, changes in the collateral for the loan do not change its exempted character.

(b) However, a so-called increase in the loan is necessarily on an entirely different basis. So far as the purpose of the credit is concerned, it is a new loan, and the question of whether or not it is subject to this part must be determined accordingly.

(c) Certain facts should also be mentioned regarding the determination of the purpose of a loan. Section 221.3(a) provides in that connection that "a bank may rely upon a statement with respect thereto, accepted by the bank in good faith, signed by an officer of the bank or by the borrower." The requirement of "good faith" is of vital importance here. Its application will necessarily vary with the facts of the particular case, but it is clear that the bank must be alert to the circumstances surrounding the loan. For example, if the loan is to be made to a customer who is not a broker or dealer in securities, but such a broker or dealer is to deliver registered stocks to secure the loan or is to receive the proceeds of the loan, the bank would be put on notice that the loan would probably be subject to this part. It could not accept in good faith a statement to the contrary without obtaining a reliable and satisfactory explanation of the situation.

(d) Furthermore, the "purpose" of a loan means just that. It cannot be altered by some temporary application of the proceeds. For example, if a borrower is to purchase Government securities with the proceeds of a loan, but is soon thereafter to sell such securities and replace them with registered stocks, the loan is clearly for the purpose of purchasing or carrying registered stocks.

(a) As amended effective July 20, 1949, § 221.3(o) removes the maximum loan level requirements applicable to credit for financing the functions of "specialists" on an exchange designated by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

(b) Effective July 20, 1949, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System has designated the New York Stock Exchange pursuant to § 221.3(o), as amended, this designation to be effective until further notice.

§ 221.103 Loans to brokers or dealers.

Questions have arisen as to the adequacy of statements received by lending banks under § 221.3(a) in the case of loans to brokers or dealers secured by stock where the proceeds of the loans are to be used to finance customer transactions involving the purchasing or carrying of registered stocks.

While some such loans may qualify for exemption under § 221.2, unless they do qualify for such an exemption they are subject to this part. For example, if a loan so secured is made to a broker to furnish cash working capital for the conduct of his brokerage business (i.e., for purchasing and carrying securities for the account of customers), the maximum loan value prescribed in § 221.4 would be applicable unless the loan should be of a kind exempted by § 221.2. This result would not be affected by the fact that the stock given as security for the loan was or included stock owned by the brokerage firm.

In view of the foregoing, the statement referred to in § 221.3(a) which the lending bank may accept and rely upon in good faith in determining the purpose of the loan would be inadequate if the form of statement accepted or used by the bank failed to call for answers which would indicate whether or not the loan was of the kind discussed above.

§ 221.106 Reliance in "good faith" on statement of purpose of loan.

(a) Certain situations have arisen from time to time under this part wherein it appeared doubtful that, in the circumstances, the lending banks may have been entitled to rely upon the statements accepted by them in determining whether the purposes of certain loans were such as to cause the loans to be not subject to the part.

(b) The use by a lending bank of a statement in determining the purpose of a particular loan is, of course, provided for by § 221.3(a). However, under that paragraph a lending bank may "rely" upon any such statement only if it is "accepted by the bank in good faith." As the Board stated in the interpretation contained in § 221.101, the "requirement of 'good faith' is of vital importance"; and, to fulfill such requirement, "it is clear that the bank must be alert to the circumstances surrounding the loan".

(c) Obviously, such a statement would not be accepted by the bank in "good faith" if at the time the loan was made the bank had knowledge, from any source, of facts or circumstances which were contrary to the natural purport of the statement, or which were sufficient reasonably to put the bank on notice of the questionable reliability or completeness of the statement.

(d) Furthermore, the same requirement of "good faith" is to be applied whether the statement accepted by the bank is signed by the borrower or by an officer of the bank. In either case, "good faith" requires the exercise of special diligence in any instance in which the borrower is not personally known to the bank or to the officer who processes the loan.

(e) The interpretation set forth in § 221.101 contains an example of the application of the "good faith" test. There it was stated that "if the loan is to be made to a customer who is not a broker or dealer in securities, but such a broker or dealer is to deliver registered stocks to secure the loan or is to receive the proceeds of the loan, the bank would be put on notice that the loan would probably be subject to this part. It could not accept in good faith a statement to the contrary without obtaining a reliable and satisfactory explanation of the situation".

(f) Moreover, and as also stated by the aforementioned interpretation contained in § 221.101, the "purpose" of a loan, of course, "cannot be altered by some temporary application of the proceeds. For example, if a borrower is to purchase Government securities with the proceeds of a loan, but is soon thereafter to sell such securities and replace them with registered stocks, the loan is clearly for the purpose of purchasing or carrying registered stocks". The purpose of a loan therefore, should not be determined upon a narrow analysis of the immediate use to which the proceeds of the loan are put. Accordingly, a bank acting in "good faith" should carefully scrutinize cases in which there is any indication that the borrower is concealing the true purpose of the loan, and there would be reason for special vigilance if registered stocks are substituted for bonds or unregistered stocks soon after the loan is made, or on more than one occasion.

(g) Similarly, the fact that a loan made on the borrower's signature only, for example, becomes secured by registered stock shortly after the disbursement of the loan usually would afford reasonable grounds for questioning the bank's apparent reliance upon merely a statement that the purpose of the loan was not to purchase or carry registered stock.

(h) These examples are, of course, by no means exhaustive. They simply illustrate the fundamental fact that no statement accepted by a bank is of any value for the purposes of the regulation unless "accepted by the bank in good faith", and that "good faith" requires, among other things, reasonable diligence to learn the truth.

§ 221.108 Effect of registration of stock subsequent to making of loan.

(a) The Board recently was asked whether a loan by a bank to enable the borrower to purchase a newly issued stock during the initial over-the-counter trading period prior to the stock becoming registered (listed) on a national securities exchange would be subject to this part. The Board replied that, until such stock is so registered, this would not be applicable to such a loan.

(b) The Board has now been asked what the position of the lending bank would be under this part if, after the date on which the stock should become registered, such bank continued to hold a loan of the kind just described. It is assumed that the loan was in an amount greater than the maximum loan value for the collateral specified in this part.

(c) If the stock should become registered, the loan would then be for the purpose of purchasing or carrying a registered stock, and, if secured directly or indirectly by any stock, would be subject to this part as from the date the stock was registered. Under this part, this does not mean that the bank would have to obtain reduction of the loan in order to reduce it to an amount no more than the specified maximum loan value. It does mean, however, that so long as the loan balance exceeded the specified maximum loan value, the bank could not permit any withdrawals or substitutions of collateral that would increase such excess; nor could the bank increase the amount of the loan balance unless there was provided additional collateral having a maximum loan value at least equal to the amount of the increase. In other words, as from the date the stock should become registered, the loan would be subject to this part in exactly the same way, for example, as a loan subject to this part that became under-margined because of a decline in the current market value of the loan collateral or because of a decrease by the Board in the maximum loan value of the loan collateral.

§ 221.109 Loan to open-end investment company.

In response to a question regarding a possible loan by a bank to an open-end investment company that customarily purchases stocks registered on a national securities exchange, the Board stated that in view of the general nature and operations of such a company, any loan by a bank to such a company should be presumed to be subject to this part as a loan for the purpose of purchasing or carrying registered stocks. This would not be altered by the fact that the open-end company had used, or proposed to use, its own funds or proceeds of the loan to redeem some of its own shares, since mere application of the proceeds of a loan to some other use cannot prevent the ultimate purpose of a loan from being to purchase or carry registered stocks.

§ 221.110 Questions arising under Regulation U.

(a) Regulation U governs "any loan" made by a bank "secured directly or indirectly by any stock for the purpose of purchasing or carrying any stock registered on a national securities exchange", with certain exceptions, and provides that the maximum loan value of such stock shall be a fixed percentage "of its current market value, as determined by any reasonable method."

(b) The Board of Governors has recently had occasion to consider the application of this language to the three following questions:

(1) Loan secured by stock. First, is a loan to purchase or carry registered stock subject to Regulation U where made in unsecured form, if stock is subsequently deposited as security with the lending bank, and surrounding circumstances indicate that the parties originally contemplated that the loan should be so secured? The Board answered that in a case of this kind, the loan would be subject to the Regulation, for the following reasons.

(i) The Board has long held, in the closely related "purpose" area, that the original purpose of a loan should not be determined upon a narrow analysis of the technical circumstances under which a loan is made. Instead, the fundamental purpose of the loan is considered to be controlling. Indeed, "the fact that a loan made on the borrower's signature only, for example, becomes secured by registered stock shortly after the disbursement of the loan" affords reasonable grounds for questioning whether the bank was entitled to rely upon the borrower's statement as to the purpose of the loan. 1953 Bull. 951.

(ii) Where security is involved, standards of interpretation should be equally searching. If, for example, the original agreement between borrower and bank contemplated that the loan should be secured by registered stock, and such stock is in fact delivered to the bank when available, the transaction must be regarded as fundamentally a secured loan. This view is strengthened by the fact that the regulation applies to a loan "secured directly or indirectly by any stock."

(2) Loan to acquire controlling shares. (i) The second question is whether the Regulation governs a stock-secured loan made for the business purpose of purchasing a controlling interest in a corporation, or whether such a loan would be exempt on the ground that the Regulation is directed solely toward purchases of stock for speculative or investment purposes. The Board answered that a stock-secured loan for the purpose of purchasing or carrying registered stock is subject to the Regulation, regardless of the reason for which the purchase is made.

(ii) The answer is required, in the Board's view, since the language of the Regulation is explicitly inclusive, covering "any loan * * * secured directly or indirectly by any stock for the purpose of purchasing or carrying any stock registered on a national securities exchange." Moreover, the withdrawal in 1945 of the original section 2(e) of the Regulation, which exempted "any loan for the purpose of purchasing a stock from or through a person who is not a member of a national securities exchange * * *" plainly implies that transactions of the sort described are now subject to the general prohibition of section 1.

(3) Determination of "current market value." (i) The third question is how to determine the "current market value" of a block of registered stock which represents a controlling interest in a corporation where the block is purchased at a price in excess of the average of bid and asked prices on the Exchange for the day of the purchase, and also in excess of the average price on the Exchange over recent months, while the parties to the loan, on the other hand, believe the purchase to be a bargain and report opportunities to resell at a price which is higher still. In a case of this kind, the Board believes that the current market value of the block is the price at which the actual purchase was made.

(ii) The Supplement to Regulation U states that current market value shall be determined by "any reasonable method". Regulation T, which, while not controlling, may throw some light on the problem, provides that the current market value of a security "throughout the day of its purchase or sale" shall be "total cost or the net proceeds of its sale." The Board is of the opinion that actual sale price in an arm's length transaction provides the best evidence of value. Particularly in circumstances such as those indicated above, it must be assumed that this price reflects intangible factors including control.

§ 221.111 Purchase-and-sale substitution on same day.

(a) Amendments to Part 221, effective June 15, 1959 (24 FR 3867), deal, among other things, with changes in collateral for a "restricted loan", i.e., a bank loan that exceeds the maximum loan value of the collateral therefor. In connection with those amendments an inquiry has been received as to whether the bank may permit a substitution of collateral for such a loan under the amended part in a case in which the excess of the loan over the maximum loan value is not thereby increased and the substitution occurs in the form of a purchase and sale of collateral, both the purchase and sale orders being executed on the same day.

(b) The bank may permit such a purchase-and-sale substitution under the amended part without additional collateral or reduction in the loan if it reasonably ascertains, and has evidence thereof in its records, that the purchase and sale orders were executed on the same day. The controlling events which must occur on the same day are the executions of the purchase order and sale order, and not the bank's receipt or release of stock certificates. It may be noted that the result is substantially similar to that under the June 15, 1959, amendments to Part 220 of this subchapter. Substitutions that do not involve a same-day purchase and sale are subject to the withdrawal limitations under both parts.

(a) The Board's advice has been requested whether a bank's activities in connection with the administration of an employees' savings plan are subject to this Part 221.

(b) Under the plan, any regular, full-time employee may participate by authorizing the sponsoring company to deduct a percentage of his salary and wages and transmit the same to the bank as trustee. Voluntary contributions by the company are allocated among the participants. A participant may direct that funds held for him be invested by the trustee in insurance, annuity contracts, Series E Bonds, or in one or more of three specified securities which are listed on a stock exchange. Loans to purchase the stocks may be made to participants from funds of the trust, subject to approval of the administrative committee, which is composed of five participants, and of the trustee. The bank's right to approve is said to be restricted to the mechanics of making the loan, the purpose being to avoid cumbersome procedures.

(c) Loans are secured by the credit balance of the borrowing participants in the savings fund, including stock, but excluding (in practice) insurance and annuity contracts and government securities. Additional stocks may be, but, in practice, have not been pledged as collateral for loans. Loans are not made, under the plan, from bank funds, and participants do not borrow from the bank upon assignment of the participants' accounts in the trust.

(d) It is urged that loans under the plan are not subject to this Part 221 because a loan should not be considered as having been made by a bank where the bank acts solely in its capacity of trustee, without exercise of any discretion.

(e) The Board reviewed this question upon at least one other occasion in recent years, and full consideration has again been given to the matter. After considering the arguments on both sides, the Board has reaffirmed its earlier view that, in conformity with an interpretation not published in CFR which was published at page 874 of the 1946 Federal Reserve Bulletin, this Part 221 applies to the activities of a bank when it is acting in its capacity as trustee. Although the bank in that case had at best a limited discretion with respect to loans made by it in its capacity as trustee, the Board concluded that this fact did not affect the application of the regulation to such loans.

§ 221.113 Loan which is secured indirectly by stock.

(a) A question has been presented to the Board as to whether a loan by a bank to a mutual investment fund is "secured * * * indirectly by any stock" within the meaning of § 221.1, so that the loan should be treated as subject to the regulation.

(b) Briefly, the facts are as follows. Fund X, an open-end investment company, entered into a loan agreement with Bank Y, which was (and still is) custodian of the securities which comprise the portfolio of Fund X. The agreement includes the following terms, which are material to the question before the Board;

(1) Fund X agrees to have an "asset coverage" (as defined in the agreements) of 400 percent of all its borrowings, including the proposed borrowing, at the time when it takes down any part of the loan.

(2) Fund X agrees to maintain an "asset coverage" of at least 300 percent of its borrowings at all times.

(3) Fund X agrees not to amend its custody agreement with Bank Y, or to substitute another custodian without Bank Y's consent.

(4) Fund X agrees not to mortgage, pledge, or otherwise encumber any of its assets elsewhere than with Bank Y.

(c) In § 221.109 the Board stated that because of "the general nature and operations of such a company", any "loan by a bank to an open-end investment company that customarily purchases stocks registered on a national securities exchange * * * should be presumed to be subject to this part as a loan for the purpose of purchasing or carrying registered stocks" ("purpose loans"). The Board's interpretation went on to say that "This would not be altered by the fact that the open-end company had used, or proposed to use, its own funds or proceeds of the loan to redeem some of its own shares * * *."

(d) Accordingly, the loan by Bank Y to Fund X was and is a "purpose loan". However, a loan by a bank is not subject to this part unless (1) it is a purpose loan and (2) it is "secured directly or indirectly by any stock". In the present case, the loan is not "secured directly" by stock in the ordinary sense, since the portfolio of Fund X is not pledged to secure the credit from Bank Y. But the word "indirectly" must signify some form of security arrangement other than the "direct" security which arises from the ordinary "transaction that gives recourse against a particular chattel or land or against a third party on an obligation" described in the American Law Institute's Restatement of the Law of Security, page 1. Otherwise the word "indirectly" would be superflous, and a regulation, like a statute, must be construed if possible to give meaning to every word.

(e) The Board has indicated its view that any arrangement under which stock is more readily available as security to the lending bank than to other creditors of the borrower may amount to indirect security within the meaning of this part. In an interpretation published at § 221.110 it stated.

> The Board has long held, in the * * * "purpose" area, that the original purpose of a loan should not be determined upon a narrow analysis of the technical circumstances under which a loan is made * * * Where security is involved, standards of interpretation should be equally searching.

In its pamphlet issued for the benefit and guidance of banks and bank examiners, entitled "Questions and Answers Illustrating Application of Regulation U", the Board said

> In determining whether a loan is "indirectly" secured, it should be borne in mind that the reason the Board has thus far refrained * * * from regulating loans not secured by stock has been to simplify operations under the regulation. This objective of simplifying operations does not apply to loans in which arrangements are made to retain the substance of stock collateral while sacrificing only the form.

(f) A wide variety of arrangements as to collateral can be made between bank and borrower which will serve, to some extent, to protect the interest of the bank in seeing that the loan is repaid, without giving the bank a conventional direct "security" interest in the collateral. Among such arrangements which have come to the Board's attention are the following:

(1) The borrower may deposit stock in the custody of the bank.

An arrangement of this kind may not, it is true, place the bank in the position of a secured creditor in case of bankruptcy, or even of conflicting claims, but it is likely effectively to strengthen the bank's position. Section 221.3(f), which provides that

> A loan need not be treated as collateralled by securities which are held by the bank only in the capacity of custodian, depositary or trustee, or under similar circumstances, if the bank in good faith has not relied upon such securities as collateral in the making or maintenance of the particular loan.

does not exempt a deposit of this kind from the impact of the regulation unless it is clear that the bank "has not relied" upon the securities deposited with it.

(2) A borrower may not deposit his stock with the bank, but agree not to pledge or encumber his assets elsewhere while the loan is outstanding.

Such an agreement may be difficult to police, yet it serves to some extent to protect the interest of the bank if only because the future credit standing and business reputation of the borrower will depend upon his keeping his word. If the assets covered by such an agreement include stock, then, as under paragraphs (f)(1) and (3) of this section, the stock is "indirect security" for the loan within the meaning of this part.

(3) The borrower may deposit stock with a third party who agrees to hold the stock until the loan has been paid off. Here, even though the parties may purport to provide that the stock is not "security" for the loan (for example, by agreeing that the stock may not be sold and the proceeds applied to the debt if the borrower fails to pay), the mere fact that the stock is out of the borrower's control for the duration of the loan serves to some extent to protect the bank.

(g) The three instances described above are merely illustrative. Other methods, or combinations of methods, may serve a similar purpose. The conclusion that any given arrangement constitutes "indirect security" may, but need not, be reinforced by facts such as that the stock in question was purchased with proceeds of the loan, that the lending bank suggests or insists upon the arrangement, or that the loan would probably be subject to criticism by supervisory authorities were it not for the protective arrangement.

(h) Accordingly, the Board concludes that the loan by Bank Y to Fund X is indirectly secured by the portfolio of the fund and must be treated by the bank as a regulated loan.

§ 221.114 Bank loans to purchase stock of American Telephone and Telegraph Company under Employees' Stock Plan.

(a) The Board of Governors recently interpreted Part 221 (Regulation U) in connection with proposed loans by a bank to persons who are purchasing shares of stock of American Telephone and Telegraph Company pursuant to its Employees' Stock Plan.

(b) According to the current offering under the Plan, an employee of the AT&T system may purchase shares through regular deductions from his pay over a period of 24 months. At the end of that period, a certificate for the appropriate number of shares will be issued to the participating employee by AT&T. Each employee is entitled to purchase, as a maximum, shares that will cost him approximately three-fourths of his annual base pay. Since the program extends over two years, it follows that the payroll deductions for this purpose may be in the neighborhood of 38 percent of base pay and a larger percentage of "take-home pay." Deductions of this magnitude are in excess of the saving rate of many employees.

(c) Certain AT&T employees, who wish to take advantage of the current offering under the Plan, are the owners of shares of AT&T stock that they purchased under previous offerings. A bank proposed to receive such stock as collateral for a "living expenses" loan that will be advanced to the employee in monthly installments over the 24-month period, each installment being in the amount of the employee's monthly payroll deduction under the Plan. The aggregate amount of the advances over the 24-month period would be substantially greater than the maximum loan value of the collateral as prescribed in § 221.4, the Supplement to Regulation U (30 percent, at the present time).

(d) In the opinion of the Board of Governors, a loan of the kind described would violate this Part 221 if it exceeded the maximum loan value of the collateral. The regulation applies to any stock-secured loan for the purpose of purchasing or carrying stock registered on a national securities exchange (§ 221.1(a)). Although the proposed loan would purport to be for living expenses, it seems quite clear, in view of the relationship of the loan to the Employees' Stock Plan, that its actual purpose would be to enable the borrower to purchase AT&T stock, which is registered on a national securities exchange. At the end of the 24-month period the borrower would acquire a certain number of shares of that stock and would be indebted to the lending bank in an amount approximately equal to the amount he would pay for such shares. In these circumstances, the loan by the bank must be regarded as a loan "for the purpose of purchasing" the stock, and therefore it is subject to the limitations prescribed by this Part 221. This conclusion follows from the provisions of the part, and it may also be observed that a contrary conclusion could largely defeat the basic purpose of the margin regulations.

(e) Accordingly, the Board concluded that a loan of the kind described may not be made in an amount exceeding the maximum loan value of the collateral, as prescribed by the current Supplement to Regulation U (§ 221.4).

§ 221.116 Bank loans to replenish working capital used to purchase mutual fund shares.

(a) In a situation recently considered by the Board of Governors, a business concern ("X") proposed to purchase mutual fund shares, from time to time, with proceeds from its accounts receivable, then pledge the shares with a bank in order to secure working capital. The bank was prepared to lend amounts equal to 70 percent of the current value of the shares as they were purchased by X. If the loans were subject to this part (Regulation U), only 30 percent of the current market value of the shares could be lent.

(b) The immediate purpose of the loans would be to replenish X's working capital. However, as time went on, X would be acquiring mutual fund shares at a cost that would exceed the net earnings it would normally have accumulated, and would become indebted to the lending bank in an amount approximately 70 percent of the prices of said shares.

(c) The Board held that the loans were for the purpose of purchasing the shares, and therefore subject to the limitations prescribed by this part. As pointed out in § 221.114 with respect to a similar program for putting a high proportion of cash income into stock, then borrowing against the stock to meet needs for which the cash would otherwise have been required, a contrary conclusion could largely defeat the basic purpose of the margin regulations.

(d) Also considered was an alternative proposal under which X would deposit proceeds from accounts receivable in a time account for 1 year, before using those funds to purchase mutual fund shares. The Board held that this procedure would not change the situation in any significant way. Once the arrangement was established, the proceeds would be flowing into the time account at the same time that similar amounts were released to purchase the shares, and over any extended period of time the result would be the same. Accordingly, the Board concluded that bank loans made under the alternative proposal would similarly be subject to this part.

§ 221.117 When bank in "good faith" has not relied on stock as collateral.

(a) The Board has received questions regarding the circumstances in which an extension or maintenance of credit will not be deemed to be "indirectly secured" by stock as indicated by the phrase, "if the bank in good faith has not relied upon such stock as collateral," contained in clause (2) of a recent amendment to § 221.3(c) of Regulation U. A similar phrase is contained in § 207.2(g) of Regulation G of this chapter and the following applies to that paragraph, insofar as appropriate and consistent.

(b) In response, the Board noted that in amending this portion of the regulation it was indicated that one of the purposes of the change was to make clear that § 221.3(c) does not apply to certain routine negative covenants in loan agreements. Also, while the question of whether or not a bank has relied upon particular stock as collateral is necessarily a question of fact to be determined in each case in the light of all relevant circumstances, some indication that the bank had not relied upon stock as collateral would seem to be afforded by such circumstances as the fact that (1) the bank had obtained a reasonably current financial statement of the borrower and this statement could reasonably support the loan, and (2) the loan was not payable on demand or because of fluctuations in market value of the stock, but instead was payable on one or more fixed maturities which were typical of maturities applied by the bank to loans otherwise similar except for not involving any possible question of stock collateral.

§ 221.118 Bank arranging for extension of credit by corporation.

(15 U.S.C. 78g)

[34 FR 7005, Apr. 29, 1969]

§ 221.119 Status after July 8, 1969, of credit extended prior to that date to purchase or carry mutual fund shares.

(a) Prior to July 8, 1969, the margin and other requirements of Regulations G and U applied to credit extended to purchase or carry shares of a mutual fund (secured by certain described collateral), if (1) the portfolio of the fund did "customarily include" securities that would themselves have been subject to the regulations and (2) the fund was included in a list of such funds that the Board published for this purpose.

(b) It was found that virtually all mutual funds met the "customarily include" test. Accordingly, for administrative reasons, the Board discontinued publication of the list and restated the rule to cover all mutual funds except those at least 95 percent of whose assets are continuously invested in exempted securities.

(c) The Board made these changes, effective July 8, 1969, in Regulation G (Code of Federal Regulations, Title 12, Part 207) by adding a new § 207.2(d) (while eliminating former § 207.2(c)(3) and § 207.4(b)), and in Regulation U (Code of Federal Regulations, Title 12, Part 221) by adding a new § 221.3(v) (while eliminating former § 221.(b)(3) and § 221.3(d)).

(d) The Board has received several questions respecting the effect of the amendments on certain stock-secured credits that were extended prior to July 8, 1969, to purchase or carry mutual fund shares and were treated as not subject to Regulations G or U at the time of extension on the ground that the funds were not on the Board's published list.

(e) The Board has held that whether a loan is for the purpose of purchasing or carrying a stock not registered on a national securities exchange depends on the present status of the stock. Thus, a credit is treated as one for such a purpose if used to purchase or carry a stock that became registered after the loan was made. (1937 Federal Reserve Bulletin 955; Published Interpretations Par. 6435). The converse is also true (1938 Federal Reserve Bulletin 90; Published Interpretations Par. 6445).

(f) The same principle applies to the closely parallel question in the present case. Credits extended before July 8, 1969, to purchase or carry shares in the mutual funds in question were for the purpose of purchasing or carrying "margin stocks" (Regulation U) or "margin securities" (Regulation G) even though at the time of extension, the funds were not on the Board's published list. Accordingly, if collateralized as specified in the regulations, the credits were subject to the pertinent regulation from the effective date of the amendments, July 8, 1969.

(g) In applying the above interpretation, it should be borne in mind that the Board's margin regulations are based on (1) the requirement of an initial deposit in connection with the original extension of a credit, and (2) limitations on substitutions or withdrawals of the collateral securing a credit.

(h) In the latter category, the Board's margin regulations apply a retention requirement to proceeds of a sale of collateral in an undermargined loan (except for a same-day sale-and-purchase substitution) in order to strengthen the margin status of the loan (§ 207.1(j) of Regulation G and § 221.1(b) of Regulation U). While this requirement became applicable on July 8, 1969, to credit previously extended to purchase shares in mutual funds that had not been on the Board's list prior to that date, the Board, in view of all the circumstances, will not insist upon reconstitution of loans to take account of withdrawals and substitutions of collateral before April 27, 1970, the date of issuance of this interpretation, even though henceforth all withdrawals and substitutions must comply with the requirement.

(i) Application of § 221.3(q): Section 221.3(q) of Regulation U provides that credit extended by banks to a customer who is engaged "principally, or as one of the customer's important activities," in the business of extending credit to purchase or carry margin securities is considered to be extended for that purpose. Banks extending credit to such customers must treat the credit as subject to that regulation, and the credit must comply with all the requirements thereof "unless the credit and its purposes are effectively and unmistakably separated and disassociated from any financing or refinancing, for the customer or others, of any purchasing or carrying of [margin] stocks."

(j) Since credit to purchase or carry mutual fund shares (no matter when extended) is credit to purchase or carry margin stocks, any person or organization that engages, as an important activity, in extending credit to purchase or carry such shares (with the exception mentioned) is a lender subject to § 221.3(q) even though the funds were not on the Board's list prior to July 8, 1969. However, as stated above, as an administrative matter the retention requirements of the regulations need apply only to all substitutions and withdrawals, occurring on or after April 27, 1970, of collateral securing such credit.

(k) In view of the likelihood that § 221.3(q) applies to any loan to any financial institution which has pledged or offers to pledge mutual fund shares, particularly shares which were not on the Board's list prior to July 8, 1969, a bank should treat any such loan as being subject to the requirements of the regulation unless the borrower supplies clear proof, to be preserved in the files of the bank, that § 221.3(q) does not apply or that the loan is "separated and disassociated" as specified in the section. In this connection, a general statement, such as that the credit is for "working capital" or "general corporate purposes", is insufficient evidence that the requirements of the regulation are not applicable.

§ 221.120 Allocation of stock collateral to purpose and nonpurpose credits to same customer.

(a) A bank proposes to extend two credits (Credits "A" and "B") to its customer. Although the two credits are proposed to be extended at the same time, each would be evidenced by a separate agreement. Credit A would be extended for the purpose of providing the customer with working capital (nonpurpose credit), collateralized by stock. Credit B would be extended for the purpose of purchasing or carrying margin stock (purpose credit), without collateral or on collateral other than stock.

(b) Regulation U allows a bank to extend purpose and nonpurpose credits simultaneously or successively to the same customer. This rule is expressed in § 221.3(n)(3) which provides in substance that for any nonpurpose credit to the same customer, the bank shall in good faith require as much collateral not already identified to the customer's purpose credit as the bank would require if it held neither the purpose loan nor the identified collateral. This rule also takes into account that the bank would not necessarily be required to hold collateral for the nonpurpose credit if, consistent with good faith banking practices, it would normally make this kind of nonpurpose loan without collateral.

(c) The Board views § 221.3(n)(3) of Regulation U, when read in conjunction with § 221.3(n)(1), as requiring that whenever a bank extends two credits to the same customer, one a purpose credit and the other nonpurpose, any stock collateral must first be identified with and attributed to the purpose loan by taking into account the maximum loan value of such collateral as prescribed in § 221.4 (the Supplement) of Regulation U.

(d) The Board is further of the opinion that under the foregoing circumstances Credit B would be indirectly secured by stock, despite the fact that there would be separate loan agreements for both credits. This conclusion flows from the circumstance that the bank would hold in its possession stock collateral to which it would have access with respect to Credit B, despite any ostensible allocation of such collateral to Credit A.

§ 221.121 Computation of time periods for acquiring and holding blocks of stock by block positioners.

(a) The Board recently considered two questions in connection with § 221.3 (z) (2) and (3) of Regulation U providing for bank credit to block positioners which is exempt from the normal margin requirements as prescribed from time to time in that regulation.

(b) The first question pertained to the period of time in which a block positioner, in order to qualify for the exemption, must position a block of stock when such positioning results from several transactions at approximately the same time from a single source, as set forth in § 221.3(z)(2)(ii).

(c) The Board is of the view that the aggregate of several transactions from a single source would ordinarily be carried out within a timespan of one-half hour in order for such aggregate to be considered one block of stock eligible for exempt credit. In extraordinary circumstances, however, the block positioner could consult the Reserve Bank in whose district its office is situated as to whether stock positioned over a slightly longer period constitutes a single block. In such a case the block positioner should, of course, disclose all relevant circumstances to the Reserve Bank.

(d) The second question related to the computation of the period of 20 business days, specified in § 221.3(z)(3), in which exempt credit may remain outstanding for positioning a block of stock.

(e) The Board is of the view that the computation of such 20-day period shall commence on the business day following the date of trade.

PART 224—BORROWERS OF SECURITIES CREDIT

Sec.
224.1 Authority, purpose and scope.
224.2 Definitions.
224.3 Margin regulations to be applied by nonexempted borrowers.

AUTHORITY: Sec. 7(f), as amended (15 U.S.C. 78a-jj).

§ 224.1 Authority, purpose, and scope.

(a) Authority and purpose. Regulation X (this part) is issued by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (the Board) under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended (the Act) (15 U.S.C. 78a et seq.). This part implements section 7(f) of the Act (15 U.S.C. 78g(f)), the purpose of which is to require that credit obtained within or outside the United States complies with the limitations of the Board's Margin Regulations G, T, and U (12 CFR Parts 207, 220, and 221, respectively).

(b) Scope and exemptions. The Act and this part apply the Board's margin regulations to United States persons and foreign persons controlled by or acting on behalf of or in conjunction with United States persons (hereinafter borrowers), who obtain credit outside the United States to purchase or carry United States securities, or within the United States to purchase or carry any securities (both types of credit are hereinafter referred to as purpose credit). The following borrowers are exempt from the Act and this part:

(1) Any borrower who obtains purpose credit within the United States, unless the borrower willfully causes the credit to be extended in contravention of Regulations G, T, or U.

(2) Any borrower whose permanent residence is outside the United States and who does not obtain or have outstanding, during any calendar year, a total of more than $100,000 in purpose credit obtained outside the United States; and

(3) Any borrower who is exempt by Order upon terms and conditions set by the Board.

§ 224.2 Definitions.

The terms used in this part have the meanings given to them in sections 3(a) and 7(f) of the Act, and in Regulations G, T, and U. Section 7(f) of the Act contains the following definitions:

(a) "United States person" includes a person which is organized or exists under the laws of any State or, in the case of a natural person, a citizen or resident of the United States; a domestic estate; or a trust in which one or more of the foregoing persons has a cumulative direct or indirect beneficial interest in excess of 50 per centum of the valve of the trust.

(b) "United States security" means a security (other than an exempted security) issued by a person incorporated under the laws of any State, or whose principal place of business is within a State.

(c) "Foreign person controlled by a United States person" includes any noncorporate entity in which United States persons directly or indirectly have more than a 50 per centum beneficial interest, and any corporation in which one or more United States persons, directly or indirectly, own stock possessing more than 50 per centum of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote, or more than 50 per centum of the total value of shares of all classes of stock.

§ 224.3 Margin regulations to be applied by nonexempted borrowers.

(a) Credit transactions outside the United States. No borrower shall obtain purpose credit from outside the United States unless it conforms to the following margin regulations:

(1) Regulation T (12 CFR Part 220) if the credit is obtained from a foreign branch of a broker-dealer;

(2) Regulation U (12 CFR Part 221) if the credit is obtained from a foreign branch of a bank, except for the requirement of a purpose statement (12 CFR 221.3 (b) and (c)); and

(3) Regulation G (12 CFR Part 207) if the credit is obtained from any other lender outside the United States, except for the requirement of a purpose statement (12 CFR 207.3 (e) and (f)).

(b) Credit transactions within the United States. Any borrower who willfully causes credit to be extended in contravention of Regulations G, T, or U, and who, therefore, is not exempted by § 224.1(b)(1) of this part, must conform the credit to the margin regulation that applies to the lender.

(c) Inadvertent noncompliance. No borrower who inadvertently violates this part and who acts to remedy the violation as soon as practicable shall be deemed in violation of this part.

REGULATIONS

Subpart A—General Provisions

§ 225.1 Authority, purpose, and scope.

(a) Authority. This part (Regulation Y) is issued by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System ("Board") under section 5(b) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1844(b)) ("BHC Act"); sections 8 and 13(a) of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3106 and 3108); section 7(j)(13) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, as amended by the Change in Bank Control Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 1817(j)(13) ("Bank Control Act"); section 8(b) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1818(b)); and the International Lending Supervision Act of 1983 (Pub. L. 98-181, Title IX). The BHC codified at 12 U.S.C. 1841, et seq.

(b) Purpose. The principal purposes of this part are to regulate the acquisition of control of banks by companies and individuals, to define and regulate the nonbanking activities in which bank holding companies and foreign banking organizations with United States operations may engage, and to set forth the procedures for securing approval for such transactions and activities.

(c) Scope. (1) Subpart A contains general provisions and definitions of terms used in this regulation.

(2) Subpart B governs acquisitions of bank or bank holding company securities and assets by bank holding companies or by any company that will become a bank holding company as a result of the acquisition.

(3) Subpart C defines and regulates the nonbanking activities in which bank holding companies and foreign banking organizations may engage directly or through a subsidiary. In addition, certain nonbanking activities conducted by foreign banking organizations and certain foreign activities conducted by bank holding companies are governed by the Board's Regulation K (12 CFR Part 211, International Banking Operations).

(4) Subpart D specifies situations in which a company is presumed to control voting securities or to have the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of a bank or other company, sets forth the procedures for making a control determination, and provides rules governing the effectiveness of divestitures by bank holding companies.

(5) Subpart E governs changes in bank control resulting from the acquisition by individuals or companies (other than bank holding companies) of voting securities of a bank holding company or state member bank of the Federal Reserve System.

(6) Appendix A to the regulation contains the Board's Capital Adequacy Guidelines for bank holding companies and for state member banks.

(7) Appendix B to the regulation contains the Board's Policy Statement for Formation of Small One-Bank Holding Companies.

§ 225.2 Definitions.

Except as modified in this section or unless the context otherwise requires, the terms used in this regulation have the same meanings as set forth in the relevant statutes.

(a)(1) "Bank" means any institution organized under the laws of the United States that:

(i) Accepts deposits that the depositor has a legal right to withdraw on demand and

(ii) Engages in the business of making commercial loans. For the purposes of this definition:

(A) "Deposits that the depositor has a legal right to withdraw on demand" (hereinafter "demand deposits") means any deposit with transactional capability that, as a matter of practice, is payable on demand and that is withdrawable by check, draft, negotiable order of withdrawal, or other similar instrument; and

(B) "Commercial loans" means any loan other than a loan to an individual for personal, family, household, or charitable purposes, and includes the purchase of retail installment loans or commercial paper, certificates of deposit, bankers' acceptances, and similar money market instruments, the extension of broker call loans, the sale of federal funds, and the deposit of interest-bearing funds.

(2) "Bank" includes any state-chartered bank or national banking association that

(i) Is owned exclusively (except to the extent directors' qualifying shares are required by law) by other depository institutions, or by a bank holding company owned exclusively by other depository institutions; and

(ii) Is organized to engage exclusively in providing services for other depository institutions and their officers, directors, and employees.

(3) "Bank" does not include:

(i) Any institution that does not do business in the United States except as an incident to its activities outside the United States;

(ii) Any institution the accounts of which are insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation or any institution chartered by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board; or

(iii) "Agreement" or "Edge" corporations operating under sections 25 or 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 601-604(a), 611-631).

(b)(1) "Bank holding company" means any company (including a bank) that has direct or indirect control of a bank, other than control that results from the ownership or control of:

(i) Voting securities held in good faith in a fiduciary capacity (other than as provided in paragraphs (d)(2)(ii) and (iii) of this section) without sole discretionary voting authority, or as otherwise exempted under section 2(a)(5)(A) of the BHC Act;

(ii) Voting securities acquired and held only for a reasonable period of time in connection with the underwriting of securities, as provided in section 2(a)(5)(B) of the BHC Act;

(iii) Voting rights to voting securities acquired for the sole purpose and in the course of participating in a proxy solicitation, as provided in section 2(a)(5)(C) of the BHC Act;

(iv) Voting securities acquired in satisfaction of debts previously contracted in good faith, as provided in section 2(a)(5)(D) of the BHC Act, if the securities are divested within two years of acquisition (or such later period as the Board may permit by order); or

(v) Voting securities of certain institutions owned by a thrift institution or a trust company, as provided in sections 2(a)(5)(E) and (F) of the BHC Act.

(2) Except for the purposes of § 225.4(b) of this subpart and Subpart E of this regulation or as otherwise provided in this regulation, the term "bank holding company" includes a foreign banking organization. For the purposes of Subpart B, the term "bank holding company" includes a foreign banking organization only if it owns or controls a bank in the United States.

(c)(1) "Company" includes any bank, corporation, general or limited partnership, association or similar organization, business trust, or any other trust unless by its terms it must terminate either within 25 years, or within 21 years and 10 months after the death of individuals living on the effective date of the trust.

(2) "Company" does not include any organization, the majority of the voting securities of which are owned by the United States or any state.

(d)(1) "Control" of a bank or other company means (except for the purposes of Subpart E):

(i) Ownership, control, or power to vote 25 percent or more of the outstanding shares of any class of voting securities of the bank or other company, directly or indirectly or acting through one or more other persons;

(ii) Control in any manner over the election of a majority of the directors, trustees, or general partners (or individuals exercising similar functions) of the bank or other company;

(iii) The power to exercise, directly or indirectly, a controlling influence over the management or policies of the bank or other company, as determined by the Board after notice and opportunity for hearing in accordance with § 225.31 of Subpart D of this regulation; or

(iv) Conditioning in any manner the transfer of 25 percent or more of the outstanding shares of any class of voting securities of a bank or other company upon the transfer of 25 percent or more of the outstanding shares of any class of voting securities of another bank or other company.

(2) A bank or other company is deemed to control voting securities or assets owned, controlled, or held, directly or indirectly:

(i) By any subsidiary of the bank or other company;

(ii) In a fiduciary capacity (including by pension and profit-sharing trusts) for the benefit of the shareholders, members, or employees (or individuals serving in similar capacities) of the bank or other company or of any of its subsidiaries; or

(iii) In a fiduciary capacity for the benefit of the bank or other company or any of its subsidiaries.

(e) "Foreign banking organization" and "qualifying foreign banking organization" shall have the same meanings as provided in § 211.23 of the Board's Regulation K (12 CFR 211.23).

(f) "Management official" means any officer, director (including honorary or advisory directors), partner, or trustee of a bank or other company, or any employee of the bank or other company with policy-making functions.

(g) "Outstanding shares" means any voting securities, but does not include securities owned by the United States or by a company wholly-owned by the United States.

(h) "Person" includes an individual, bank, corporation, partnership, trust, association, joint venture, pool, syndicate, sole proprietorship, unincorporated organization, or any other form of entity.

(i) "Principal shareholder" means a person that owns or controls, directly or indirectly, 25 percent or more of any class of voting securities of a bank or other company.

(j) "Subsidiary" means a bank or other company that is controlled by another company, and refers to a direct or indirect subsidiary of a bank holding company. An indirect subsidiary is a bank or other company that is controlled by a subsidiary of the bank holding company.

(k) "United States" means the United States and includes any State of the United States, the District of Columbia, any territory of the United States, Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, and the Virgin Islands.

(l) (1) "Voting securities" means shares of common or preferred stock, general or limited partnership shares or interests, or similar interests if the shares or interest, by statue, charter, or in any manner, entitle the holder: (i) to vote for or to select directors, trustees, or partners (or persons exercising similar functions of the issuing company); or (ii) to vote on or to direct the conduct of the operations or other significant policies of the issuing company.

(2) Preferred shares, limited partnership shares or interests, or similar interests are not "voting securities" if:

(i) Any voting rights associated with the shares or interest are limited solely to the type customarily provided by statute with regard to matters that would significantly and adversely affect the rights or preference of the security or other interest, such as the issuance of additional amounts or classes of senior securities, the modification of the terms of the security or interest, the dissolution of the issuing company, or the payment of dividends by the issuing company when preferred dividends are in arrears;

(ii) The shares or interest represent an essentially passive investment or financing device and do not otherwise provide the holder with control over the issuing company; and

(iii) The shares or interest do not entitle the holder, by statute, charter, or in any manner, to select or to vote for the selection of directors, trustees, or partners (or persons exercising similar functions) of the issuing company.

§ 225.3 Administration.

(a) Delegation of authority. Designated Board members and officers and the Federal Reserve Banks are authorized by the Board to exercise various functions prescribed in this regulation and in the Board's Rules Regarding Delegation of Authority (12 CFR Part 265) and the Board's Rules of Procedure (12 CFR Part 262).

(b) Appropriate Federal Reserve Bank. In administering this regulation, the appropriate Federal Reserve Bank is as follows:

(1) For a bank holding company (or a company applying to become a bank holding company): the Reserve Bank of the Federal Reserve district in which the company's banking operations are principally conducted, as measured by total domestic deposits in its subsidiary banks on the date it became (or will become) a bank holding company;

(2) For a foreign banking organization that has no subsidiary bank and is not subject to paragraph (b)(1) of this section: the Reserve Bank of the Federal Reserve district in which the total assets of the organization's United States branches, agencies, and commercial lending companies are the largest as of the later of January 1, 1980, or the date it becomes a foreign banking organization;

(3) For an individual or company submitting a notice under Subpart E of this regulation: the Reserve Bank of the Federal Reserve district in which the banking operations of the bank holding company or State member bank to be acquired are principally conducted, as measured by total domestic deposits on the date the notice is filed.

§ 225.4 Corporate practices.

(a) Bank holding company policy and operations. (1) A bank holding company shall serve as a source of financial and mangerial strength to its subsidiary banks and shall not contuct its operations in an unsafe or unsound manner.

(2) Whenever the Board believes an activity of a bank holding company or control of a nonbank subsidiary (other than a nonbank subsidiary of a bank) constitutes a serious risk to the financial safety, soundness, or stability of a subsidiary bank of the bank holding company and is inconsistent with sound banking principles or the purposes of the BHC Act or the Financial Institutions Supervisory Act of 1966, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1818(b) et seq.), the Board may require the bank holding company to terminate the activity or to terminate control of the subsidiary, as provided in section 5(e) of the BHC Act.

(b) Purchase or redemption by a bank holding company of its own securities—(1) Filing notice. A bank holding company shall give the Board prior written notice before purchasing or redeeming its equity securities, if the gross consideration for the purchase or redemption, when aggregated with the net consideration paid by the company for all such purchases or redemptions during the preceding 12 months, is equal to 10 percent or more of the company's consolidated net worth. For the purposes of this section, "net consideration" is the gross consideration paid by the company for all of its equity securities purchased or redeemed during the period minus the gross consideration received for all of its equity securities sold during the period other than as part of a new issue.

(2) Content of notice. Any notice under this section shall be filed with the appropriate Reserve Bank and shall contain the following information:

(i) The purpose of the transaction, a description of the securities to be purchased or redeemed, the total number of each class outstanding, the gross consideration to be paid, and the terms of any debt incurred in connection with the transaction;

(ii) A description of all equity securities redeemed within the preceding 12 months, the net consideration paid, and the terms of any debt incurred in connection with those transactions; and

(iii) A current and pro forma consolidated balance sheet if the bank holding company has total assets of over $150 million, or a current and pro forma parent company only balance sheet if the bank holding company has total assets of $150 million or less.

(3) Acting on notice. Within 30 calendar days of receipt of a notice under this section, the appropriate Reserve Bank shall either approve the transaction proposed in the notice or refer the notice to the Board for decision. If the notice is referred to the Board for decision, the Board shall act on the notice within 60 calendar days after the Reserve Bank receives the notice.

(4) Factors considered in acting on notice. The Board may disapprove a proposed purchase or redemption if it finds that the proposal would constitute an unsafe or unsound practice, or would violate any law, regulation, Board order, directive, or any condition imposed by, or written agreement with, the Board. In determining whether a proposal constitutes an unsafe or unsound practice, the Board will consider whether the bank holding company's financial condition, after giving effect to the proposed purchase or redemption, meets the financial standards applied by the Board under section 3 of the BHC Act, including the Board's Capital Adequacy Guidelines (Appendix A to Subparts A through E) and the Board's Policy Statement for Formation of Small One-Bank Holding Companies (Appendix B to Subparts A through E).

(5) Disapproval and hearing. The Board shall notify the bank holding company in writing of the reasons for a decision to disapprove any proposed purchase or redemption. Within 10 calendar days of receipt of a notice of disapproval by the Board, the bank holding company may submit a written request for a hearing. The Board will order a hearing within 10 calendar days of receipt of that request if it finds that material facts are in dispute or if it otherwise appears appropriate. Any hearing conducted under this paragraph shall be held in accordance with the Board's Rules of Practice for Formal Hearings (12 CFR Part 263). At the conclusion of the hearing, the Board shall by order approve or disapprove the proposed purchase or redemption on the basis of the record of the hearing.

(c) Deposit insurance. Every bank that is a bank holding company or a subsidiary of a bank holding company shall obtain Federal Deposit Insurance and shall remain an "insured bank" as defined in section 3(h) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1813(h)).

(d) Tie-in arrangements. A bank holding company and any nonbanking subsidiary conducting an activity authorized under § 225.23 of this regulation may not in any manner extend credit, lease or sell property of any kind, provide any service, or fix or vary the consideration for any of these transactions subject to any condition or requirement that, if imposed by a bank, would constitute an unlawful tie-in arrangement under section 106 of the Bank Holding Company Act Amendments of 1970 (12 U.S.C. 1971, 1972(1)).

(e) Acting as transfer agent, municipal securities dealer, or clearing agent. A bank holding company or any nonbanking subsidiary that is a "bank," as defined in section 3(a)(6) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78c(a)(6)), and that is a transfer agent of securities, a municipal securities dealer, a clearing agency, or a participant in a clearing agency (as those terms are defined in section 3(a) of the Securities Exchange Act, (12 U.S.C. 78c(a)), shall be subject to §§ 208.8(f)-(j) of the Board's Regulation H (12 CFR 208.8(f)-(j)) as if it were a state member bank.

§ 225.5 Registration, reports, and inspections.

(a) Registration of bank holding companies. Each company shall register within 180 days after becoming a bank holding company by furnishing information in the manner and form prescribed by the Board. A company that receives the Board's prior approval under Subpart B of this regulation to become a bank holding company may complete this registration requirement through submission of its first annual report to the Board as required by paragraph (b) of this section.

(b) Reports of bank holding companies. Each bank holding company shall furnish, in the manner and form prescribed by the Board, an annual report of the company's operations for the fiscal year in which it becomes a bank holding company, and for each fiscal year during which it remains a bank holding company. Additional information and reports shall be furnished as the Board may require.

(c) Examinations and inspections. The Board may examine or inspect any bank holding company and each of its subsidiaries and prepare a report of their operations and activities. With respect to a foreign banking organization, the Board may also examine any branch or agency of a foreign bank in any state of the United States and may examine or inspect each of the organization's subsidiaries in the United States and prepare reports of their operations and activities. The Board will rely as far as possible on the reports of examination made by the primary federal or state supervisor of the subsidiary bank of a bank holding company or of the branch or agency of the foreign bank.

§ 225.6 Penalties for violations.

(a) Criminal and civil penalties. Section 8 of the BHC Act provides criminal penalties for willful violation, and civil penalties for violation, by any company or individual of the BHC Act or any regulation or order issued under it, or for making a false entry in any book, report, or statement of a bank holding company. Civil money penalty assessments for violations of the BHC Act shall be made in accordance with Subpart B of the Board's Rules of Practice for Hearings (12 CFR Part 263, Subpart B). For any willful violation of the Bank Control Act or any regulation or order issued under it, the Board may assess a civil penalty as provided in 12 U.S.C. 1817(j)(15).

(b) Cease and desist proceedings. For any violation of the BHC Act, the Bank Control Act, this regulation, or any order or notice issued thereunder, the Board may institute a cease and desist proceeding in accordance with the Financial Institutions Supervisory Act of 1966, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1818(b) et seq.).

Subpart B—Acquisition of Bank Securities or Assets

§ 225.11 Transactions requiring Board approval.

The following transactions require an application for the Board's prior approval under section 3 of the BHC Act unless otherwise exempted under § 225.12 of this Subpart:

(a) Formation of bank holding company. Any action that causes a bank or other company to become a bank holding company.

(b) Acquisition of subsidiary bank. Any action that causes a bank to become a subsidiary of a bank holding company.

(c) Acquisition of control of bank or bank holding company securities. The acquisition by a bank holding company of direct or indirect ownership or control of any voting securities of a bank or bank holding company, if the acquisition results in the company's control of more than 5 percent of the outstanding shares of any class of voting securities of the bank or bank holding company. An acquisition includes the purchase of additional securities through the exercise of preemptive rights, but does not include securities received in a stock dividend or stock split that does not alter the bank holding company's proportional share of any class of voting securities.

(d) Acquisition of bank assets. The acquisition by a bank holding company or by a subsidiary thereof (other than a bank) of all or substantially all of the assets of a bank.

(e) Merger of bank holding companies. The merger or consolidation of bank holding companies, including a merger through the purchase of assets and assumption of liabilities.

§ 225.12 Transactions not requiring Board approval.

The following transactions do not require the Board's approval under § 225.11 of this Subpart:

(a) Acquisition of securities in fiduciary capacity. The acquisition by a bank or other company (other than a trust that is a company) of control of voting securities of a bank or bank holding company in good faith in a fiduciary capacity, unless:

(1) The acquiring bank or other company has sole discretionary authority to vote the securities and retains the authority for more than two years; or

(2) The acquisition is for the benefit of the acquiring bank or other company, or its shareholders, employees, or subsidiaries.

(b) Acquisition of securities in satisfaction of debts previously contracted. The acquisition by a bank or other company of control of voting securities of a bank or bank holding company in the regular course of securing or collecting a debt previously contracted in good faith, if the acquiring bank or other company divests the securities within two years of acquisition. The Board or Reserve Bank may grant requests for up to three one-year extensions.

(c) Acquisition of securities by a bank holding company with majority control. The acquisition by a bank holding company of additional voting securities of a bank or bank holding company if more than 50 percent of the outstanding voting securities of the bank or bank holding company is lawfully controlled by the acquiring bank holding company prior to the acquisition.

(d) Transactions subject to Bank Merger Act. The merger or consolidation of a subsidiary bank of a bank holding company with another bank, or the purchase of assets by such a subsidiary bank, or a similar transaction involving subsidiary banks of a bank holding company, if the transaction requires the prior approval of a Federal supervisory agency under the Bank Merger Act (12 U.S.C. 1828(c)). This exception does not include:

(1) The merger of a nonsubsidiary bank and a nonoperating subsidiary bank formed by a company for the purpose of acquiring the nonsubsidiary bank; and

(2) Any transaction requiring the Board's prior approval under § 225.11(e) of this Subpart. The Board may require an application under this subpart if it determines that the merger or consolidation would have a significant adverse impact on the financial condition of the bank holding company or otherwise requires approval under section 3 of the BHC Act.

(e) Holding securities in escrow. The holding of any voting securities of a bank or bank holding company in an escrow arrangement for the benefit of an applicant pending the Board's action on an application for approval of the proposed acquisition, if title to the securities and the voting rights remain with the seller and payment for the securities has not been made to the seller.

§ 225.13 Factors considered in acting on bank applications.

(a) Prohibited anticompetitive transactions. As specified in sections 3(c)(1) and (2) of the BHC Act, the Board may not approve any application under this subpart if:

(1) The transaction would result in a monopoly or would further any combination or conspiracy to monopolize, or to attempt to monopolize, the business of banking in any part of the United States; or

(2) The effect of the transaction may be substantially to lessen competition in any section of the country, tend to create a monopoly, or in any other manner be in restraint of trade, unless the Board finds that the transaction's anticompetitive effects are clearly outweighed by its probable effect in meeting the convenience and needs of the community.

(b) Other factors. In deciding applications under this subpart, the Board also considers the following factors with respect to the applicant, its subsidiaries, any banks related to the applicant through common ownership or management, and the bank or banks to be acquired:

(1) Financial condition. Their financial condition and future prospects, including whether current and projected capital positions and levels of indebtedness conform to standards and policies established by the Board.

(2) Management. The competence and character of the principals of the applicant and banks or bank holding companies concerned; their record of compliance with laws and regulations; and applicant's record of fulfilling any commitments to, and any conditions imposed by, the Board in connection with prior applications.

(3) Convenience and needs of the community. The convenience and needs of the communities to be served, including the record of performance under the Community Reinvestment Act of 1977 (12 U.S.C. 2901 et seq.) and regulations issued thereunder, including the Board's Regulation BB (12 CFR Part 228).

(c)(1) Interstate transactions. The Board may not approve any application under this subpart that would permit:

(i) The formation of a bank holding company that controls more than 5 percent of the outstanding shares of any class of voting securities of two or more banks located in different states; or

(ii) The acquisition by a bank holding company or by any of its subsidiaries of any voting securities of, any interest in, or substantially all of the assets of, an additional bank located in a state other than the state in which the operations of the banking subsidiaries of the bank holding company were principally conducted (as measured by total deposits) on July 1, 1966, or on the date on which the company became a bank holding company, whichever date is later.

(2) Exceptions. The prohibitions of this paragraph do not apply if:

(i) The Bank is located in a state that by statute expressly authorizes the acquisition of securities of, an interest in, or substantially all of the assets of, a bank within the state by an out-of-state bank holding company; or

(ii) The acquisition involves a closed or failing bank with assets of at least $500,000,000, and has been authorized under section 13(f) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1823(f)).

§ 225.14 Procedures for applications, notices, and hearings.

(a) Filing application. An application for the Board's prior approval under this subpart shall be filed with the appropriate Reserve Bank on the designated form and shall comply with § 262.3 of the Rules of Procedure (12 CFR 262.3), which requires the applicant to publish newspaper notice of the application.

(b) Notice—(1) Notice to primary banning supervisor. Upon receipt of an application under this subpart, the Reserve Bank shall promptly furnish notice and a copy of the application to the primary banking supervisor of the bank to be acquired. The primary supervisor shall have 30 calendar days from the date of the letter giving notice in which to submit its views and recommendations to the Board.

(2) Federal Register notice. Upon receipt by the Reserve Bank of an application under this section, notice of the application shall be promptly sent to the FEDERAL REGISTER for publication. The FEDERAL REGISTER notice shall invite comment on the application for a period of no more than 30 days.

(c) Accepting application for processing. Within 10 business days after the Reserve Bank receives an application under this section, the Reserve Bank shall accept it for processing, request additional information to complete the application, or return the application if it is substantially incomplete. If additional information is requested, the Reserve Bank shall, within 5 business days of receipt of the requested information, either accept the application for processing or return it to the applicant if it is still incomplete. Upon accepting an application, the Reserve Bank shall immediately send copies to the Board.

(d) Action on applications—(1) Action under delegated authority. The Reserve Bank shall approve an application under this section within 30 calendar days after it has accepted the application, unless the Reserve Bank, upon notice to the applicant, refers the application to the Board for decision because action under delegated authority is not appropriate. Upon written notice to the applicant, the Reserve Bank may extend the 30-day period for 15 days. If the extension of time is to request necessary additional information, the 15-day period does not commence until after the Reserve Bank receives the requested information.

(2) Board action. The Board shall act on an application under this subpart that is referred to it for decision within 60 calendar days after the Reserve Bank has accepted the application, unless the Board notifies the applicant that the 60-day period is being extended for a specified period and states the reasons for the extension. In no event may the extension exceed the 91-day period provided in paragraph (g) of this section. The Board may request additional information that it believes is necessary for its decision.

(e) Notice to Attorney General. The Board or Reserve Bank shall immediately notify the Attorney General of approval of any application under this section.

(f) Hearings. As provided in section 3(b) of the Act, the Board shall order a hearing if it receives from the primary supervisor of the bank to be acquired, within the 30-day period specified in paragraph (b)(1) of this section, a written recommendation of disapproval of an application. The Board may order a formal or informal hearing or other proceeding on the application, as provided in § 262.3(i)(2) of the Board's Rules of Procedure. Any request for hearing (other than from the primary supervisor) shall comply with § 262.3(e) of the Rules of Procedure (12 CFR 262.3(e)).

(g) Approval through failure to act—(1) Ninety-one day rule. An application under this subpart shall be deemed approved if the Board fails to act on the application within 91 calendar days after the date of submission to the Board of the complete record on the application. For this purpose, the Board acts when it issues an order stating that the Board has approved or denied the application, reflecting the votes of the members of the Board, and indicating that a statement of the reasons for the decision will follow promptly.

(2) Complete record. For the purpose of computing the commencement of the 91-day period, the record is complete on the latest of:

(i) The date of receipt by the Board of an application that has been accepted by the Reserve Bank;

(ii) The last day provided in any notice for receipt of comments and hearing requests on the application;

(iii) The date of receipt by the Board of the last relevant material regarding the application that is needed for the Board's decision, if the material is received from a source outside of the Federal Reserve System; or

(iv) The date of completion of any hearing or other proceeding.

(h) Exceptions to notice and hearing requirements—(1) Probable bank failure. If the Board finds it must act immediately on an application in order to prevent the probable failure of a bank or bank holding company, the Board may modify or dispense with the notice and hearing requirements provided in this section.

(2) Emergency. If the Board finds that, although immediate action on an application is not necessary, an emergency exists requiring expeditious action, the Board shall provide the primary supervisor ten days to submit its recommendation. The Board may act on such an application without a hearing and may modify or dispense with the other notice and hearing requirements provided in this section.

(i) Waiting period. A transaction approved under this subpart shall not be consummated until thirty days after the date of approval of the application, unless the Board has determined under paragraph (h) of this section that:

(1) The application involves a probable bank failure, in which case the transaction may be consummated immediately upon approval; or

(2) An emergency exists requiring expeditious action, in which case the transaction may be consummated on or after the fifth calendar day following approval.

Subpart C—Nonbanking Activities and Acquisitions by Bank Holding Companies

§ 225.21 Prohibited nonbanking activities and acquisitions; exempt bank holding companies.

(a) Prohibited nonbanking activities and acquisitions. Except as provided in § 225.22 of this subpart, a bank holding company or a subsidiary may not engage in, or acquire or control, directly or indirectly, voting securities or assets of a company engaged in, any activity other than:

(1) Banking or managing or controlling banks and other subsidiaries authorized under the BHC Act; and

(2) An activity that the Board determines to be so closely related to banking or managing or controlling banks as to be a proper incident thereto, including any incidental activities that are necessary to carry on such an activity, if the bank holding company has obtained the prior approval of the Board for that activity in accordance with and subject to the requirements of this regulation.

(b) Exempt bank holding companies. The following bank holding companies are exempt from the provisions of this subpart:

(1) Family-owned companies. Any company that is a "company covered in 1970," as defined in section 2(b) of the BHC Act, more than 85 percent of the voting securities of which was collectively owned on June 30, 1968, and continuously thereafter, by members of the same family (or their spouses) who are lineal descendants of common ancestors.

(2) Labor, agricultural, and horticultural organizations. Any company that was on January 4, 1977, both a bank holding company and a labor, agricultural, or horticultural organization exempt from taxation under section 501 of the Internal Revenue Code (26 U.S.C. 501(c)).

(3) Companies granted hardship exemption. Any bank holding company that has controlled only one bank since before July 1, 1968, and that has been granted an exemption by the Board under section 4(d) of the BHC Act, subject to any conditions imposed by the Board.

(4) Companies granted exemption on other grounds. Any company that acquired control of a bank before December 10, 1982, without the Board's prior approval under section 3 of the BHC Act, on the basis of a narrow interpretation of the term "demand deposit" or "commercial loan" if the Board has determined that: (i) coverage of the company as a bank holding company under this subpart would be unfair or represent an unreasonable hardship; and (ii) exclusion of the company from coverage under this regulation is consistent with the purposes of the BHC Act and section 106 of the Bank Holding Company Act Amendments of 1970 (12 U.S.C. 1971, 1972(1)). The provisions of § 225.4 of Subpart A of this regulation are not applicable to a company exempt under this paragraph.

§ 225.22 Exempt nonbanking activities and acquisitions.

(a) Servicing activities. A bank holding company may, without the Board's prior approval under this subpart, furnish services to or perform services for, or establish or acquire a company that engages solely in furnishing services to or performing services for:

(1) The bank holding company or its subsidiaries in connection with their activities as authorized by law, including services that are necessary to fulfill commitments entered into by the subsidiaries with third parties, if the bank holding company or servicing company complies with the Board's published interpretations and does not act as principal in dealing with third parties; and

(2) The internal operations of the bank holding company or its subsidiaries. Services for the internal operations of the bank holding company or its subsidiaries include, but are not limited to:

(i) Accounting, auditing, and appraising;

(ii) Advertising and public relations;

(iii) Data processing and data transmission services, data bases or facilities;

(iv) Personnel services;

(v) Courier services;

(vi) Holding or operating property used wholly or substantially by a subsidiary in its operations or for its future use;

(vii) Liquidating property acquired from a subsidiary;

(viii) Liquidating property acquired from any sources either prior to May 9, 1956, or the date on which the company became a bank holding company, whichever is later; and

(ix) Selling, purchasing, or underwriting insurance such as blanket bond insurance, group insurance for employees, and property and casualty insurance.

(b) Safe deposit business. A bank holding company or nonbank subsidiary may, without the Board's prior approval, conduct a safe deposit business, or acquire voting securities of a company that conducts such a business.

(c) Nonbanking acquisitions not requiring prior Board approval. The Board's prior approval is not required under this subpart for the following acquisitions:

(1) DPC acquisitions. (i) Voting securities or assets, acquired by foreclosure or otherwise, in the ordinary course of collecting a debt previously contracted ("DPC property") in good faith, if the DPC property is divested within two years of acquisition.

(ii) The Board may, upon request, extend this two-year period for up to three additional one-year periods. The Board may permit additional extensions for up to 5 years (for a total of 10 years), for real estate or other assets that are demonstrated by the bank holding company to have value and marketability characteristics similar to real estate.

(iii) Transfers of DPC property within the bank holding company system do not extend any period for divestiture of the property.

(2) Securities or assets required to be divested by subsidiary. Voting securities or assets required to be divested by a subsidiary at the request of an examining federal or state authority (except by the Board under the BHC Act or this regulation), if the bank holding company divests the securities or assets within two years from the date acquired from the subsidiary.

(3) Fiduciary investments. Voting securities or assets acquired by a bank or other company (other than a trust that is a company) in good faith in a fiduciary capacity, if the voting securities or assets are:

(i) Held in the ordinary course of business; and

(ii) Not acquired for the benefit of the company or its shareholders, employees, or subsidiaries.

(4) Securities eligible for investment by a national bank. Voting securities of the kinds and amounts explicitly eligible by federal statute (other than section 4 of the Bank Service Corporation Act, 12 U.S.C. 1864) for investment by a national bank, and voting securities acquired prior to June 30, 1971, in reliance on section 4(c)(5) of the BHC Act and interpretations of the Comptroller of the Currency under section 5136 of the Revised Statutes (12 U.S.C. 24(7)).

(5) Securities or property representing 5 percent or less of a company. Voting securities of a company or property that, in the aggregate, represent 5 percent or less of the outstanding shares of any class of voting securities of a company or a 5 percent interest or less in the property, subject to the provisions of 12 CFR 225.137.

(6) Securities of investment company. Voting securities of an investment company that is solely engaged in investing in securities and that does not own or control more than 5 percent of the outstanding shares of any class of voting securities of any company.

(7) Assets acquired in the ordinary course of business. Assets of a company acquired in the ordinary course of business, subject to the provisions of 12 CFR 225.132, if the assets relate to activities in which the acquiring company has previously received Board approval under this regulation to engage in the geographic areas to be served.

(8) Asset acquisitions by consumer finance or mortgage company or industrial bank. Assets of an office(s) of a company, all or substantially all of which relate to making, acquiring, or servicing loans for personal, family, or household purposes, if:

(i) The acquiring company has previously received Board approval under this regulation to engage in consumer finance, residential mortgage banking, or industrial banking activities in the geographic areas to be served by the acquired office(s);

(ii) The assets acquired during any twelve-month period do not represent more than 25 percent of the assets (on a consolidated basis) of the acquiring consumer finance company, mortgage company or industrial bank, or more than $25 million, whichever amount is less;

(iii) The assets acquired do not represent more than 50 percent of the selling company's consolidated assets that are devoted to the consumer finance, residential mortgage banking, or industrial banking business;

(iv) The acquiring company notifies the Reserve Bank of the acquisition within 30 days after the acquisition; and

(v) The acquiring company, after giving effect to the transaction, meets the Board's Capital Adequacy Guidelines (Appendix A to Subparts A through E) and the Board has not previously notified the acquiring company that it may not acquire assets under the exemption in this paragraph.

(d) Acquisition of securities by subsidiary banks—(1) National bank. A national bank or its subsidiary may, without the Board's approval under this subpart, acquire or retain securities on the basis of section 4(c)(5) of the BHC Act in accordance with the regulations of the Comptroller of the Currency.

(2) State bank. A state-chartered bank or its subsidiary may, insofar as Federal law is concerned and without the Board's prior approval under this subpart:

(i) Acquire or retain securities, on the basis of section 4(c)(5) of the BHC Act, of the kinds and amounts explicitly eligible by federal statute for investment by a national bank; or

(ii) Acquire or retain all (but, except for directors' qualifying shares, not less than all) of the securities of a company that engages solely in activities in which the parent bank may engage, at locations at which the bank may engage in the activity, and subject to the same limitations as if the bank were engaging in the activity directly.

(e) Activities and securities of new bank holding companies. A company that becomes a bank holding company may, for a period of two years, engage in nonbanking activities and control voting securities or assets of a nonbank subsidiary, if the bank holding company engaged in such activities or controlled such voting securities or assets on the date it became a bank holding company. The Board may grant requests for up to three one-year extensions of the two-year period.

(f) Grandfathered activities and securities. Unless the Board orders divestiture or termination under section 4(a)(2) of the BHC Act, a "company covered in 1970," as defined in section 2(b) of the BHC Act, may:

(1) Retain voting securities or assets and engage in activities that it has lawfully held or engaged in continuously since June 30, 1968; and

(2) Acquire voting securities of any newly-formed company to engage in such activities.

(g) Securities or activities exempt under Regulation K. A bank holding company may acquire voting securities or assets and engage in activities as authorized in Regulation K (12 CFR Part 211).

§ 225.23 Procedures for applications, notices, and hearings.

(a) Application or notice required for nonbanking activities. An application or notice for the Board's prior approval under § 225.21(a) of this subpart for the following transactions shall be filed by a bank holding company with the appropriate Reserve Bank on the designated form in accordance with the Board's Rules of Procedure (12 CFR 262.2):

(1) Engaging de novo in listed nonbanking activities. A notice is required to commence or to engage de novo, either directly or through a subsidiary, in a nonbanking activity listed in § 225.25 of this subpart. The applicant may commence the activity 30 days after receipt by the Reserve Bank of the notice unless the Reserve Bank within the 30-day period:

(i) Returns the notice because it is incomplete or requires an application under paragraph (a) (2) or (3) of this section;

(ii) Notifies the company that it may consummate the transaction at an earlier date;

(iii) Extends the 30-day period for an additional 15 days; or

(iv) Refers the notice to the Board for decision because substantive adverse comment is received or it otherwise appears appropriate.

If the 30-day period is extended by the Reserve Bank to request necessary additional information, the 15-day period does not commence until after the Reserve Bank receives the requested information. The Reserve Bank shall promptly send a copy of any notice received under this paragraph to the Board.

(2) Acquiring a company engaged in listed nonbanking activities. An application is required to acquire or control voting securities or assets of a company engaged in a permissible nonbanking activity listed in § 225.25 of this subpart.

(3) Engaging in or acquiring a company to engage in unlisted nonbanking activities. An application is required to commence or to engage de novo, or to acquire or control voting securities or assets of a company engaged in, any activity not listed in § 225.25 of this subpart. The application shall contain evidence that the proposed activity is so closely related to banking or managing or controlling banks as to be a proper incident thereto.

(b) Notice to expand or alter nonbanking activities—(1) De novo expansion. A notice under paragraph (a)(1) of this section is required to open a new office or to form a subsidiary to engage in, or to relocate an existing office engaged in, a nonbanking activitiy that the Board has previously approved for the bank holding company under this regulation, only if:

(i) The Board's prior approval was limited geographically;

(ii) The activity is to be conducted in a country outside of the United States and the bank holding company has not previously received prior Board approval under this regulation to engage in the activity in that country; or

(iii) The Board or appropriate Reserve Bank has notified the company that a notice under paragraph (a)(1) of this section is required.

The Board may require an application under paragraph (a)(2) or (a)(3) of this section instead of a notice.

(2) Activities outside United States. With respect to activities to be engaged in outside the United States that require approval under this subpart, the procedures of this section apply only to activities to be engaged in directly by a bank holding company that is not a qualifying foreign banking organization or by a nonbank subsidiary of a bank holding company approved under this subpart. Regulation K (12 CFR Part 211) governs other international operations of bank holding companies.

(3) Alteration of nonbanking activity. A notice under paragraph (a)(1) of this section is required to alter a nonbanking activity in any material respect from that considered by the Board in acting on the application or notice to engage in the activity. The Board may require an application under paragraph (a) (2) or (3) of this section instead of a notice.

(c) Accepting application for processing. Withing 10 business days after the Reserve Bank receives an application under this section, the Reserve Bank shall accept it for processing, request additional information to complete the application, or return the application to the applicant if it is substantially incomplete. If additional information is requested, the Reserve Bank shall, within 5 business days of receipt of the requested information, either accept the application for processing or return the application to the applicant if it is still incomplete. Upon accepting an application, the Reserve Bank shall immediately send copies to the Board.

(d) Federal Register notice—(1) Listed activities. Upon receipt by the Reserve Bank of an application or notice involving an activity listed in § 225.25 of this subpart, notice of the application or proposal shall be promptly sent to the FEDERAL REGIS-TER for publication. The FEDERAL REGISTER notice shall invite comment for a period of not more than 30 days.

(2) Unlisted activities. In the case of an application under this section involving an activity not listed in § 225.25 of this subpart, the Board shall, within 10 business days of acceptance by the Reserve Bank, send notice of the application to the FEDERAL REGISTER for publication, unless the Board determines that the applicant has not demonstrated that the activity is so closely related to banking or to managing or controlling banks as to be a proper incident thereto. The Board may extend the 10-day period for an additional 30 calendar days upon notice to the applicant. In the event notice of an application is not published for comment, the Board shall inform the applicant of the reasons for the decision. The FEDERAL REGISTER notice shall invite comment on the proposal for a reasonable period of time, generally for 30 days.

(e) Action on applications—(1) Action under delegated authority. The Reserve Bank shall approve an application under paragraph (a)(2) of this section within 30 calendar days after it has accepted the application, unless the Reserve Bank, upon notice to the applicant, refers the application to the Board for decision because action under delegated authority is not appropriate. Upon written notice to the applicant, the Reserve Bank may extend the 30-day period for 15 days. If the extension of time is to request necessary additional information, the 15-day period does not commence until the Reserve Bank receives the requested information.

(2) Board action. The Board shall act on an application or notice under this section that is referred to it for decision within 60 calendar days after the Reserve Bank has accepted the application or received the notice, unless the Board notifies the applicant that the 60-day period is being extended for a specified period and explains the reasons for the extension. In no event may the extension exceed the 91-day period specified in paragraph (h) of this section. The Board may request additional information that it believes is necessary for its decision.

(f) Expedited procedure for small acquisitions—(1) Filing notice. As an alternative to the application procedure of paragraph (a)(2) of this section, a bank holding company may apply to acquire voting securities or assets of a company engaged in an activity listed in § 225.25 of this subpart by:

(i) Providing the appropriate Reserve Bank with a description of the transaction; and either

(ii) Submitting a copy of a newspaper notice in the form prescribed by the Board; or

(iii) Requesting the Board to publish notice of the application in the FEDERAL REGISTER. The newspaper notice shall be published in a newspaper of general circulation in the areas to be served as a result of the acquisition and shall provide an opportunity for interested persons to comment on the application for a period of at least 10 calendar days. If the applicant elects FEDERAL REGISTER notice, the notice shall provide an opportunity for interested persons to comment for a period of at least 15 calendar days.

(2) Criteria for use of expedited procedure. The procedure in this paragraph is available only if:

(i) Neither the book value of the assets to be acquired nor the gross consideration to be paid for the securities or assets exceeds $15 million;

(ii) The bank holding company has previously received Board approval to engage in the activity involved in the acquisition; and

(iii) The bank holding company meets the Board's Capital Adequacy Guidelines (Appendix A to Subparts A through E).

(3) Action on application. Within 5 business days after the close of the comment period specified in the FEDERAL REGISTER notice or within 15 calendar days after receipt by the Reserve Bank of the newspaper notice, the Reserve Bank shall either approve the application or refer it to the Board for decision if action under delegated authority is not appropriate. The Board shall act on an application under this paragraph that is referred to it for decision in accordance with paragraph (e)(2) of this section. The Reserve Bank, upon written notice to the applicant, may extend the time period for approval under this paragraph for a reasonable period of time not to exceed 30 days. The Reserve Bank or the Board may require an application under paragraph (a)(2) of this section.

(g) Hearing. Any request for a hearing on an application or notice under this section shall comply with the provisions of § 262.3(e) of the Board's Rules of Procedure (12 CFR 262.3(e)). The Board may order a formal or informal hearing or other proceeding on an application, as provided in § 262.3(i)(2) of the Rules of Procedure (12 CFR 262.3(i)(2)). The Board shall order a hearing only if there are disputed issues of material fact that cannot be resolved in some other manner.

(h) Approval through failure to act; 91-day rule. An application or notice under this subpart shall be deemed approved if the Board fails to act on the application or notice within 91 calendar days after the date of submission to the Board of the complete record on the application or notice. The procedures for computation of the 91-day rule as set forth in § 225.14(g) of Subpart B of this regulation apply to applications and notices under this subpart.

(i) Emergency thrift institution acquisitions. In the case of an application to acquire a thrift institution, the Board may modify or dispense with the notice and hearing requirements of this section if the Board finds that an emergency exists that requires the Board to act immediately and the primary Federal regulator of the institution concurs.

§ 225.24 Factors considered in acting on nonbanking applications.

In evaluating an application or notice under § 225.23 of this subpart, the Board shall consider whether the performance by the applicant of the activity can reasonably be expected to produce benefits to the public (such as greater convenience, increased competition, the gains in efficiency) that outweigh possible adverse effects (such as undue concentration of resources, decreased or unfair competition, conflicts of interest, and unsound banking practices). This consideration includes an evaluation of the financial and managerial resources of the applicant, including its subsidiaries, and any company to be acquired, and the effect of the proposed transaction on those resources. Unless the record demonstrates otherwise, the commencement or expansion of a nonbanking activity de novo is presumed to result in benefits to the public through increased competition.

(a) Closely related nonbanking activities. The activities listed below are so closely related to banking or managing or controlling banks as to be a proper incident thereto and may be engaged in by a bank holding company or a subsidiary thereof in accordance with and subject to the requirements of this regulation.

(b)(1) Making and servicing loans. Making, acquiring, or servicing loans or other extensions of credit (including issuing letters of credit and accepting drafts) for the company's account or for the account of others, such as would be made, for example, by the following types of companies:

(i) Consumer finance;

(ii) Credit card;

(iii) Mortgage;

(iv) Commercial finance; and

(v) Factoring.

(2) Industrial banking. Operating an industrial bank, Morris Plan bank, or industrial loan company, as authorized under state law, so long as the institution is not a bank.

(3) Trust company functions. Performing functions or activities that may be performed by a trust company (including activities of a fiduciary, agency, or custodial nature), in the manner authorized by federal or state law, so long as the institution is not a bank and does not make loans or investments or accept deposits other than:

(i) Deposits that are generated from trust funds not currently invested and that are properly secured to the extent required by law;

(ii) Deposits representing funds received for a special use in the capacity of managing agent or custodian for an owner of, or investor in, real property, securities, or other personal property; or for such owner or investor as agent or custodian of funds held for investment or as escrow agent; or for an issuer of, or broker or dealer in securities, in a capacity such as a paying agent, dividend disbursing agent, or securities clearing agent; provided such deposits are not employed by or for the account of the customer in the manner of a general purpose checking account or interest-bearing account; or

(iii) Making call loans to securities dealers or purchasing money market instruments such as certificates of deposit, commercial paper, government or municipal securities, and bankers acceptances. (Such authorized loans and investments, however, may not be used as a method of channeling funds to nonbanking affiliates of the trust company.)

(4) Investment or financial advice. Acting as investment or financial adviser to the extent of:

(i) Serving as the advisory company for a mortgage or a real estate investment trust;

(ii) Serving as investment adviser (as defined in section 2(a)(20) of the Investment Company Act of 1940, 15 U.S.C. 80a-2(a)(20)), to an investment company registered under that act, including sponsoring, organizing, and managing a closed-end investment company;

(iii) Providing portfolio investment advice[1] to any other person;

(iv) Furnishing general economic information and advice, general economic statistical forecasting services and industry studies;[2] and

(v) Providing financial advice to state and local governments, such as with respect to the issuance of their securities.

(5) Leasing personal or real property. Leasing personal or real property or acting as agent, broker, or adviser in leasing such property if:

(i) The lease is to serve as the functional equivalent of an extension of credit to the lessee of the property;

(ii) The property to be leased is acquired specifically for the leasing transaction under consideration or was acquired specifically for an earlier leasing transaction;

(iii) The lease is on a nonoperating basis;[3]

[1] The term "portfolio investment" is intended to refer generally to the investment of funds in a "security" as defined in section 2(1) of the Securities Act of 1933 (15 U.S.C. 77b) or in real property interests, except where the real property is to be used in the trade or business of the person being advised. In furnishing portfolio investment advice, bank holding companies and their subsidiaries shall observe the standards of care and conduct applicable to fiduciaries.

[2] This is to be contrasted with "management consulting," which the Board views as including, but not limited to, the provision of analysis or advice as to a firm's (A) purchasing operations, such as inventory control, sources of supply, and cost minimization subject to constraints; (B) production operations, such as quality control, work measurement, product methods, scheduling shifts, time and motion studies, and safety standards; (C) marketing operations, such as market testing, advertising programs, market development, packaging, and brand development; (D) planning operations, such as demand and cost projections, plant location, program planning, corporate acquisitions and mergers, and determination of long-term and short-term goals; (E) personnel operations, such as recruitment, training, incentive programs, employee compensation, and management-personnel relations; (F) internal operations, such as taxes, corporate organization, budgeting systems, budget control, data processing systems evaluation, and efficiency evaluation; or (G) research operations, such as product development, basic research, and product design and innovation. The Board has determined that "management consulting" is not an activity that is so closely related to banking or managing or controlling banks as to be a proper incident thereto.

[3] For purposes of the leasing of automobiles, the requirement that the lease be on a nonoperating basis means that the bank holding company may not, directly or indirectly: (A) provide for the servicing, repair, or maintenance of the leased vehicle during the lease term; (B) purchase parts and accessories in bulk or for an individual vehicle after the lessee has taken delivery of the vehicle; (C) provide for the loan of an automobile during servicing of the leased vehicle; (D) purchase insurance for the lessee; or (E) provide for the renewal of the vehicle's license merely as a service to the lessee where the lessee could renew the license without authorization from the lessor.

(iv) At the inception of the initial lease the effect of the transaction (and, with respect to governmental entities only, reasonably anticipated future transactions[4]) will yield a return that will compensate the lessor for not less than the lessor's full investment in the property plus the estimated total cost of financing the property over the term of the lease,[5] from:

(A) Rentals;

(B) Estimated tax benefits (investment tax credit, net economic gain from tax deferral from accelerated depreciation, and other tax benefits with a substantially similar effect);

(C) The estimated residual value of the property at the expiration of the initial term of the lease, which in no case shall exceed 20 percent of the acquisition cost of the property to the lessor; and

(D) In the case of a lease of personal property of not more than seven years in duration, such additional amount, which shall not exceed 60 percent of the acquisition cost of the property, as may be provided by an unconditional guarantee by a lessee, independent third party, or manufacturer, which has been determined by the lessor to have the financial resources to meet such obligation, that will assure the lessor of recovery of its investment and cost of financing;

(v) The maximum lease term during which the lessor must recover the lessor's full investment in the property, plus the estimated total cost of financing the property, shall be 40 years; and

(vi) At the expiration of the lease (including any renewals or extensions with the same lessee), all interest in the property shall be either liquidated or released on a nonoperating basis as soon as practicable but in no event later than two years from the expiration of the lease;[6] however, in no case shall the lessor retain any interest in the property beyond 50 years after its acquisition of the property.

(6) Community development. Making equity and debt investments in corporations or projects designed primarily to promote community welfare, such as the economic rehabilitation and development of low-income areas by providing housing, services, or jobs for residents.

(7) Data processing. Providing to others data processing and data transmission services, facilities (including data processing and data transmission hardware, software, documentation or operating personnel), data bases, or access to such services, facilities, or data bases by any technological means, if:

(i) The data to be processed or furnished are financial, banking, or economic, and the services are provided pursuant to a written agreement so describing and limiting the services;

(ii) The facilities are designed, marketed, and operated for the processing and transmission of financial, banking, or economic data; and

(iii) The hardware provided in connection therewith is offered only in conjunction with software designed and marketed for the processing and transmission of financial, banking, or economic data, and where the general purpose hardware does not constitute more than 30 percent of the cost of any packaged offering.

[4] The Board understands that some Federal, state and local governmental entities may not enter into a lease for a period in excess of one year. Such an impediment does not prohibit a company authorized to conduct leasing activities under this paragraph from entering into a lease with such governmental entities if the company reasonably anticipates that the governmental entities will renew the lease annually until such time as the company is fully compensated for its investment in the leased property plus its costs of financing the property. Further, a company authorized to conduct personal property leasing activities under this paragraph may also engage in so-called "bridge" lease financing of personal property, but not real property, if the lease is short-term pending completion of long-term financing, by the same or another lender.

[5] The estimate by the lessor of the total cost of financing the property over the term of the lease should reflect, among other factors: the term of the lease, the modes of financing available to the lessor, the credit rating of the lessor and/or the lessee, if a factor in the financing, and prevailing rates in the money and capital markets.

[6] In the event of a default on a lease agreement prior to the expiration of the lease term, the lessor shall either release the property, subject to all the conditions of this paragraph, or liquidate the property as soon as practicable but in no event later than two years from the date of default on a lease agreement or such additional time as the Board may permit under § 225.22(c)(1) of this regulation, as if the property were DPC property.

(8) Insurance sales. Except as prohibited in Title VI of the Garn-St Germain Depository Institutions Act of 1982 (12 U.S.C. 1843(c)(8)), acting as insurance agent or broker in offices at which the holding company or its subsidiaries are otherwise engaged in business (or in an office adjacent thereto) with respect to the following types of insurance:

(i) Any insurance that (A) is directly related to an extension of credit by a bank or bank-related firm of the kind described in this regulation, or (B) is directly related to the provision of other financial services by a bank or such a bank-related firm; and

(ii) Any insurance sold by a bank holding company or a nonbanking subsidiary in a community that has a population not exceeding 5,000 (as shown by the last preceding decennial census), if the principal place of banking business of the bank holding company is located in a community having a population not exceeding 5,000.

(9) Underwriting Credit Life, Accident and Health Insurance. Acting as underwriter for credit life insurance and credit accident and health insurance that is directly related to an extension of credit by the bank holding company system.[7]

(10) Courier services. Providing courier services for:

(i) Checks, commercial papers, documents, and written instruments (excluding currency or bearer-type negotiable instruments) that are exchanged among banks and financial institutions; and

(ii) Audit and accounting media of a banking or financial nature and other business records and documents used in processing such media.[8]

(11) Management consulting to depository institutions. Providing management consulting advice [9] to nonaffiliated bank and nonbank depository institutions, including commercial banks, savings and loan associations, mutual savings banks, credit unions, industrial banks, Morris Plan banks, cooperative banks, and industrial loan companies, if:

(i) Neither the bank holding company nor any of its subsidiaries own or control, directly or indirectly, any equity securities in the client institution;

(ii) No management official, as defined in 12 CFR 212.2(h), of the bank holding company or any of its subsidiaries serves as a management official of the client institution, except where such interlocking relationships are permitted pursuant to an exemption granted under 12 CFR 212.4(b);

(iii) The advice is rendered on an explicit fee basis without regard to correspondent balances maintained by the client institution at any depository institution subsidiary of the bank holding company; and

(iv) Disclosure is made to each potential client institution of (A) the names of all depository institutions that are affiliates of the consulting company, and (B) the names of all existing client institutions located in the same county(ies), Metropolitan Statistical Area, or Primary Metropolitan

[7] To assure that engaging in the underwriting of credit life and credit accident and health insurance can reasonably be expected to be in the public interest, the Board will only approve applications in which an applicant demonstrates that approval will benefit the consumer or result in other public benefits. Normally such a showing would be made by a projected reduction in rates or increase in policy benefits due to bank holding company performance of this service.

[8] See also the Board's interpretation on courier activities (12 CFR 225.129), which sets forth conditions for bank holding company entry into the activity.

[9] A bank holding company that has received the Board's prior approval to engage in offering management consulting advice to nonaffiliated commercial banks as of April 20, 1982, may offer such advice on a de novo basis to nonbank depository institutions pursuant to this paragraph without filing an application under § 225.23 of this subpart.

Statistical Area as the client institution.[10]

(12) Money orders, savings bonds, and travelers checks. The issuance and sale at retail of money orders and similar consumer-type payment instruments having a face value of not more than $1,000; the sale of U.S. savings bonds; and the issuance and sale of travelers checks.

(13) Real estate appraising. Performing appraisals of real estate.

(14) Arranging commercial real estate equity financing. Acting as intermediary for the financing of commercial or industrial income-producing real estate by arranging for the transfer of the title, control and risk of such a real estate project to one or more investors, if:

(i) The financing arranged exceeds $1 million;

(ii) The bank holding company and its affiliates do not provide financing to the investors to acquire a real estate project for which the bank holding company arranges equity financing;

(iii) The bank holding company and its affiliates do not have an interest in or participate in managing, developing or syndicating a real estate project for which it arranges equity financing, and do not promote or sponsor the development or syndication of such property; and

(iv) The fee received for arranging equity financing for a real estate project is not based on profits to be derived from the project and is not larger than the fee that would be charged by an unaffiliated intermediary.

(15) Securities brokerage. Providing securities brokerage services, related securities credit activities pursuant to the Board's Regulation T (12 CFR Part 220), and incidental activities such as offering custodial services, individual retirement accounts, and cash management services, if the securities brokerage services are restricted to buying and selling securities solely as agent for the account of customers and do not include securities underwriting or dealing or investment advice or research services.

(16) Underwriting and dealing in government obligations and money market instruments. Underwriting and dealing in obligations of the United States, general obligations of states and their political subdivisions, and other obligations that state member banks of the Federal Reserve System may be authorized to underwrite and deal in under 12 U.S.C. 24 and 335, including bankers' acceptances and certificates of deposit, under the same limitations as would be applicable if the activity were performed by the bank holding company's subsidiary member banks or its subsidiary nonmember banks as if they were member banks.

(17) Foreign exchange advisory and transactional services. Providing, by any means, general information and statistical forecasting with respect to foreign exchange markets; advisory services designed to assist customers in monitoring, evaluating and managing their foreign exchange exposures; and transactional services with respect to foreign exchange by arranging for "swaps" among customers with complementary foreign exchange exposures and for the execution of foreign exchange transactions; provided the activity is conducted through a separately incorporated subsidiary of the bank holding company that:

(i) Does not take positions in foreign exchange for its own account;

(ii) Observes the standards of care and conduct applicable to fiduciaries with respect to its foreign exchange advisory and transactional services; and

(iii) Does not itself execute foreign exchange transactions.

(18) Futures commission merchant. Acting as a futures commission merchant for nonaffiliated persons in the execution and clearance on major commodity exchanges of futures contracts and options on futures contracts for bullion, foreign exchange, government securities, certificates of deposit and other money market instruments that a bank may buy or sell in the cash market for its own account, if the activity is conducted through a separately incorporated subsidiary of the bank holding company that:

[10] In performing this activity, bank holding companies are not authorized to perform tasks or operations or provide services to client institutions either on a daily or continuing basis, except as necessary to instruct the client institution on how to perform such services for itself. See also the Board's interpretation of bank management consulting advice (12 CFR 225.131). This interpretation shall apply to the performance of management consulting services for commercial banks and any other type of depository institution.

(i) Does not become a clearing member of any exchange or clearing association that requires the parent corporation of the clearing member to also become a member of that exchange or clearing association unless a waiver of the requirement is obtained;

(ii) Does not trade for its own account except for the purpose of hedging a cash position in the related government security, bullion, foreign currency, or money market instrument;

(iii) Time stamps orders of all customers to the nearest minute, executes all orders strictly in chronological sequence to the extent consistent with the customers' specifications, and executes all orders with reasonable promptness with due regard to market conditions;

(iv) Does not extend credit to customers for the purpose of meeting initial or maintenance margins required of customers except for posting margin on behalf of customers in advance of prompt reimbursement; and

(v) Has and maintains capitalization fully adequate to meet its own commitments and those of its customers, including affiliates.

Subpart D—Control and Divestiture Proceedings

§ 225.31 Control proceedings.

(a) Preliminary determination of control. (1) The Board may issue a preliminary determination of control under the procedures set forth in this section in any case in which:

(i) Any of the presumptions of control set forth in paragraph (d) of this section is present; or

(ii) It otherwise appears that a company has the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of a bank or other company.

(2) If the Board makes a preliminary determination of control under this section, the Board shall send notice to the controlling company containing a statement of the facts upon which the preliminary determination is based.

(b) Response to preliminary determination of control. Within 30 calendar days of issuance by the Board of a preliminary determination of control or such longer period permitted by the Board, the company against whom the determination has been made shall:

(1) Submit for the Board's approval a specific plan for the prompt termination of the control relationship;

(2) File an application under Subpart B or C of this regulation to retain the control relationship; or

(3) Contest the preliminary determination by filing a response, setting forth the facts and circumstances in support of its position that no control exists, and, if desired, requesting a hearing or other proceeding.

(c) Hearing and final determination. (1) The Board shall order a formal hearing or other appropriate proceeding upon the request of a company that contests a preliminary determination that the company has the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of a bank or other company, if the Board finds that material facts are in dispute. The Board may also in its discretion order a formal hearing or other proceeding with respect to a preliminary determination that the company controls voting securities of the bank or other company under the presumptions in paragraph (d)(1) of this section.

(2) At a hearing or other proceeding, any applicable presumptions established by paragraph (d) of this section shall be considered in accordance with the Federal Rules of Evidence and the Board's Rules of Practice for Formal Hearings (12 CFR Part 263).

(3) After considering the submissions of the company and other evidence, including the record of any hearing or other proceeding, the Board shall issue a final order determining whether the company controls voting securities, or has the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies, of the bank or other company. If a control relationship is found, the Board may direct the company to terminate the control relationship or to file an application for the Board's approval to retain the control relationship under Subpart B or C of this regulation.

(d) Rebuttable presumptions of control. The following rebuttable presumptions shall be used in any proceeding under this section:

(1) Control of voting securities—(i) Securities convertible into voting securities. A company that owns, controls, or holds securities that are immediately convertible, at the option of the holder or owner, into voting securities of a bank or other company, controls the voting securities.

(ii) Option or restriction on voting securities. A company that enters into an agreement or understanding under which the rights of a holder of voting securities of a bank or other company are restricted in any manner controls the securities. This presumption does not apply where the agreement or understanding:

(A) is a mutual agreement among shareholders granting to each other a right of first refusal with respect to their shares;

(B) Is incident to a bona fide loan transaction; or

(C) Relates to restrictions on transferability and continues only for the time necessary to obtain approval from the appropriate Federal supervisory authority with respect to acquisition by the company of the securities.

(2) Control over company—(i) Management agreement. A company that enters into any agreement or understanding with a bank or other company (other than an investment advisory agreement), such as a management contract, under which the first company or any of its subsidiaries directs or exercises significant influence over the general management or overall operations of the bank or other company controls the bank or other company.

(ii) Shares controlled by company and associated individuals. A company that, together with its management officials or principal shareholders (including members of the immediate families of either as defined in 12 CFR 206.2(k)), owns, controls, or holds with power to vote 25 percent or more of the outstanding shares of any class of voting securities of a bank or other company controls the bank or other company, if the first company owns, controls, or holds with power to vote more than 5 percent of the outstanding shares of any class of voting securities of the bank or other company.

(iii) Common management officials. A company that has one or more management officials in common with a bank or other company controls the bank or other company, if the first company owns, controls or holds with power to vote more than 5 percent of the outstanding shares of any class of voting securities of the bank or other company, and no other person controls as much as 5 percent of the outstanding shares of any class of voting securities of the bank or other company.

(iv) Shares held as fiduciary. The presumptions in paragraphs (d)(2) (ii) and (iii) of this section do not apply if the securities are held by the company in a fiduciary capacity without sole discretionary authority to exercise the voting rights.

(e) Presumption of non-control—(1) In any proceeding under this section, there is a presumption that any company that directly or indirectly owns, controls, or has power to vote less than 5 percent of the outstanding shares of any class of voting securities of a bank or other company does not have control over that bank or other company.

(2) In any proceeding under this section, or judicial proceeding under the BHC Act, other than a proceeding in which the Board has made a preliminary determination that a company has the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of the bank or other company, a company may not be held to have had control over the bank or other company at any given time, unless that company, at the time in question, directly or indirectly owned, controlled, or had power to vote 5 percent or more of the outstanding shares of any class of voting securities of the bank or other company, or had already been found to have control on the basis of the existence of a controlling influence relationship.

§ 225.32 Divestiture proceedings.

(a) Ineffective divestitures. (1) The divestiture of assets or voting securities by a bank holding company (or a company that would be a bank holding company but for the divestiture) is ineffective, and the divesting company shall be presumed to control the acquiring person or the divested assets or securities, if:

(i) The acquiring person is indebted in any manner to the divesting company; or

(ii) The divesting company has any management official in common with the acquiring person.

(2) For the purposes of this section:

(i) "Indebtedness" does not include routine business or personal credit that is unrelated to the divestiture transaction and that is extended by the divesting company in the ordinary course of its lending business; and

(ii) "Divesting company" and "acquiring person" include their parent companies, subsidiaries, and, if the acquiring person is an individual, companies controlled by the individual.

(b) Request for divestiture determination. For any divestiture that is deemed ineffective under paragraph (a) of this section, the divesting company may request the Board to determine that the divestiture is in fact effective by submitting a letter that includes:

(1) A description of the divestiture transaction and the existing and prospective relationship between the divesting company and the acquiring person;

(2) Evidence and argument demonstrating that the divesting company is not capable of controlling the acquiring person or the divested assets or securities; and

(3) A request for a hearing, if desired.

(c) Hearing. The Board shall order a formal hearing or other appropriate proceeding upon the request of a divesting company under paragraph (b) of this section, if the Board finds that material facts are in dispute. The Board may also order a formal hearing or other proceeding if, in the Board's judgment, such a proceeding would be appropriate.

(d) Standards for making divestiture determination. In acting on the request of a divesting company under paragraph (b) of this section, the Board shall consider the following factors, among others, in determining whether the divesting company is capable of controlling the acquiring person or the divested assets or securities:

(1) Indebtedness of acquiring person to divesting company. (i) The terms of the indebtedness, including the amount of the indebtedness in relation to the total purchase price;

(ii) The ability of the acquiring person to repay the indebtedness; and

(iii) The manner in which the divesting company would dispose of the divested assets in the event it reacquires the assets as a result of default on the indebtedness.

(2) Management official interlocks. The extent of the involvement of the interlocking management official in the operations of the divesting company and the acquiring person, and the management official's relationship to the assets or securities being divested.

(e) Final determination. After considering the submission of the divesting company and other evidence, including the record of any hearing or other proceeding, the Board shall issue an order determining whether the company controls or is capable of controlling the acquiring person or the divested assets or securities.

(f) Review of other divestitures. In any divestiture of assets or securities by a company that is not covered under paragraph (a) of his section, the Board may review the divestiture to assure that the divesting company is not capable of controlling the acquiring person or the divested assets or securities.

Subpart E—Change in Bank Control

§ 225.41 Transactions requiring prior notice.

(a) Prior notice requirement. (1) Any person acting directly or indirectly, or through or in concert with one or more persons, shall give the Board 60 days' written notice, as specified in § 225.43 of this subpart, before acquiring control of a state member bank or bank holding company, unless the acquisition is exempt under § 225.42 of this subpart.

(2) For the purposes of this subpart, "acquisition" includes a purchase, assignment, transfer, or pledge of voting securities, or an increase in percentage ownership of a bank or other company resulting from a redemption of voting securities.

(b) Acquisitions requiring prior notice. The following transactions constitute, or are presumed to constitute, the acquisition of control under the Bank Control Act, requiring prior notice to the Board:

(1) The acquisition of any voting securities of a state member bank or bank holding company if, after the transaction, the acquiring person (or persons acting in concert) owns, controls, or holds with power to vote 25 percent or more of any class of voting securities of the institution; or

(2) The acquisition of any voting securities of a state member bank or bank holding company if, after the transaction, the acquiring person (or persons acting in concert) owns, controls, or holds with power to vote 10 percent or more (but less than 25 percent) of any class of voting securities of the institution, and if:

(i) The institution has registered securities under section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78*l*); or

(ii) No other person will own a greater percentage of that class of voting securities immediately after the transaction.

(c) Rebuttal of presumption of control. Prior notice to the Board is not required for any acquisition of voting securities under the presumption set forth in paragraph (b)(2) of this section, if the Board finds that the acquisition will not result in control. The Board will afford the person seeking to rebut the presumption an opportunity to present views in writing or, if appropriate, orally before its designated representatives at an informal conference.

(d) Other transactions. Transactions other than those set forth in paragraph (b)(2) resulting in a person's control of less than 25 percent of a class of voting securities of a state member bank or bank holding company do not result in control for purposes of the Bank Control Act.

§ 225.42 Transactions not requiring prior notice.

The following transactions do not require prior notice to the Board under this subpart:

(a) Increase of previously authorized acquisitions. The acquisition of additional shares of a class of voting securities of a state member bank or bank holding company by any person who has lawfully acquired and maintained control of 25 percent or more of that class of voting securities after filing the notice required under § 225.41(b)(1) of this subpart.

(b) Acquisitions subject to approval under BHC Act or Bank Merger Act. Any acquisition of voting securities subject to approval under section 3 of the BHC Act (§ 225.11 of Subpart B), or section 18(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (Bank Merger Act, 12 U.S.C. 1828(c)).

(c) Transactions exempt under BHC Act. Any acquisition described in sections 2(a)(5) or 3(a) (A) or (B) of the BHC Act (12 U.S.C. 1841(a)(5), 1842(a) (A) and (B)) by a person described in those provisions.

(d) Grandfathered control relationships. (1) The acquisition of additional voting securities of a state member bank or bank holding company by a person who continuously since March 9, 1979 (or since that institution commenced business, if later) held power to vote 25 percent or more of any class of voting securities of that institution; or

(2) The acquisition of additional voting securities of a state member bank or bank holding company by a person who is presumed under § 225.41(b)(2) of this subpart to have controlled the institution continuously since March 9, 1979, if the aggregate amount of voting securities held does not exceed 25 percent of any class of voting securities of the institution.

(e) Acquisitions in satisfaction of debts previously contracted or through inheritance or gift. Any acquisition of voting securities, which would otherwise require a notice under this subpart, in satisfaction of a debt previously contracted in good faith, or through inheritance or a bona fide gift, if the acquiring person notifies the appropriate Reserve Bank within 30 calendar days after the acquisition and provides any relevant information requested by the Reserve Bank.

(f) Proxy solicitation. The acquisition of the power to vote securities of a state member bank or bank holding company through receipt of a revocable proxy in connection with a proxy solicitation for the purpose of conducting business at a regular or special meeting of the institution, if the proxy terminates within a reasonable period after the meeting.

(g) Stock dividends. The receipt of voting securities of a state member bank or bank holding company through a stock dividend or stock split if the proportional interest of the recipient in the institution remains substantially the same.

(h) Acquisition of foreign banking organization. The acquisition of voting securities of a qualifying foreign banking organization. (This exemption does not extend to the reports and information required under paragraphs 9, 10, and 12 of the Bank Control Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(j) (9), (10), and (12)).)

§ 225.43 Procedures for filing, processing, and acting on notices.

(a) Filing notice. A notice required under this subpart shall be filed with the appropriate Reserve Bank and shall contain the information required by paragraph 6 of the Bank Control Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(j)(6)), or prescribed in the designated Board form. With respect to personal financial statements required by paragraph 5(B) of the Bank Control Act, an individual may include a statement of assets and liabilities as of a date within 90 days of filing the notice, a brief income summary, and a description of any subsequent material changes, subject to the authority of the Reserve Bank or the Board to require additional information.

(b) Advice to bank supervisory agencies—(1) Upon accepting a notice relating to acquisition of securities of a state member bank, the Reserve Bank shall send a copy of the notice to the appropriate state bank supervisor, which shall have 30 calendar days from the date the notice is sent in which to submit its views and recommendations to the Board. The Reserve Bank shall also send a copy of any notice it accepts to the Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

(2) If the Board finds that it must act immediately in order to prevent the probable failure of the bank or bank holding company involved, the Board may dispense with or modify the requirements for notice to the state supervisor.

(c) Time period for Board action—(1) Consummation of acquisition. (i) A proposed acquisition may be consummated 60 days after submission to the Reserve Bank of a complete notice under paragraph (a) of this section, unless within that period the Board disapproves the proposed acquisition or extends the 60-day period as provided under paragraph (c)(2) of this section.

(ii) A proposed acquisition for which notice has been filed under paragraph (a) of this section may be consummated before the expiration of the 60-day period if the Board notifies the acquiring person in writing of the Board's intention not to disapprove the acquisition.

(2) Extensions of time period. (i) The Board may extend the 60-day period in paragraph (c)(1) of this section for an additional 30 days by notifying the acquiring person.

(ii) The Board may further extend the period for disapproval or return the notice, if the Board finds that the acquiring person has not furnished all the information required under paragraph (a) of this section or has submitted material information that is substantially inaccurate. If the Board so extends the time period, it shall notify the acquiring person of the information that is incomplete or inaccurate.

(d) Investigation of notice. In investigating any notice accepted under this subpart, the Board or Reserve Bank may solicit information or views from any person (including any bank or bank holding company involved in the notice, and any appropriate state, federal or foreign governmental authority). No person (other than the acquiring person), whose views are solicited or who presents information, thereby becomes a party to the proceeding or acquires any standing or right to participate in the Board's consideration of the notice.

(e) Factors considered in acting on notices. In reviewing a notice filed under this subpart, the Board shall consider the information in the record, the views and recommendations of the appropriate bank supervisor, and any other relevant information obtained during any investigation of the notice. The Board may disapprove an acquisition if it finds adverse effects with respect to any of the factors set forth in paragraph 7 of the Bank Control Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(j)(7)) (i.e., competitive, financial, managerial, banking or incompleteness of information).

(f) Disapproval and hearing. Within three days after its decision to issue a notice of intent to disapprove any proposed acquisition, the Board shall notify the acquiring person in writing of the reasons for the action. Within 10 calendar days of receipt of the notice of the Board's intent to disapprove, the acquiring person may submit a written request for a hearing. Any hearing conducted under this paragraph shall be in accordance with the Rules of Practice for Formal Hearings (12 CFR Part 263). At the conclusion of the hearing, the Board shall, by order, approve or disapprove the proposed acquisition on the basis of the record of the hearing. If the acquiring person does not request a hearing, the notice of intent to disapprove becomes final and unappealable.

APPENDIX A—CAPITAL ADEQUACY GUIDELINES FOR BANK HOLDING COMPANIES AND STATE MEMBER BANKS

The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System has adopted minimum capital ratios and guidelines to provide a framework for assessing the adequacy of the capital of bank holding companies and state member banks (collectively "banking organizations"). The guidelines generally apply to all state member banks and bank holding companies regardless of size and are to be used in the examination and supervisory process as well as in the analysis of applications acted upon by the Federal Reserve. The Board of Governors will review the guidelines from time to time for possible adjustment commensurate with changes in the economy, financial markets, and banking practices.

Two principal measurements of capital are used—the primary capital ratio and the total capital ratio. The definitions of primary and total capital for banks and bank holding companies and formulas for calculating the capital ratios are set forth below in the definitional sections of these guidelines.

CAPITAL GUIDELINES

The Board has established a minimum level of primary capital to total assets of 5.5 percent and a minimum level of total capital to total assets of 6.0 percent. Generally, banking organizations are expected to operate above the minimum primary and total capital levels. Those organizations whose operations involve or are exposed to high or inordinate degrees of risk will be expected to hold additional capital to compensate for these risks.

In addition, the Board has established the following three zones for total capital for banking organizations of all sizes:

TOTAL CAPITAL RATIO

[In percent]

Zone 1	Above 7.0.
Zone 2	6.0 to 7.0.
Zone 3	Below 6.0.

The capital guidelines assume adequate liquidity and a moderate amount of risk in the loan and investment portfolios and in off-balance sheet activities. The Board is concerned that some banking organizations may attempt to comply with the guidelines in ways that reduce their liquidity or increase risk. Banking organizations should avoid the practice of attempting to meet the guidelines by decreasing the level of liquid assets in relation to total assets. In assessing compliance with the guidelines, the Federal Reserve will take into account liquidity and the overall degree of risk associated with an organization's operations, including the volume of assets exposed to risk.

The Federal Reserve will also take into account the sale of loans or other assets with recourse and the volume and nature of all off-balance sheet risk. Particularly close attention will be directed to risks associated with standby letters of credit and participation in joint venture activities. The Federal Reserve will review the relationship of all on- and off-balance sheet risks to capital and will require those institutions with high or inordinate levels of risk to hold additional primary capital. In addition, the Federal Reserve will continue to review the need for more explicit procedures for factoring on- and off-balance sheet risks into the assessment of capital adequacy.

The capital guidelines apply to both banks and bank holding companies on a consolidated basis.[1] Some banking organizations are engaged in significant nonbanking activities that typically require capital ratios higher than those of commercial banks alone. The Board believes that, as a matter of both safety and soundness and competitive equity, the degree of leverage common in banking should not automatically extend to nonbanking activities. Consequently, in evaluating the consolidated capital positions of banking organizations, the Board is placing greater weight on the building-block approach for assessing capital requirements. This approach generally provides that nonbank subsidiaries of a banking organization should maintain levels of capital consistent with the levels that have been established by industry norms or standards, by Federal or State regulatory agencies for similar firms that are not affiliated with banking organizations, or that may be established by the Board after taking into account risk factors of a particular industry. The assessment of an organization's consolidated capital adequacy must take into account the amount and nature of all nonbank activities, and an institution's consolidated capital position should at least equal the sum of the capital requirements of the organization's bank and nonbank subsidiaries as well as those of the parent company.

SUPERVISORY ACTION

The nature and intensity of supervisory action will be determined by an organization's compliance with the required minimum primary capital ratio as well as by the zone in which the company's total capital ratio falls. Banks and bank holding companies with primary capital ratios below the 5.5 percent minimum will be considered undercapitalized unless they can demonstrate clear extenuating circumstances. Such banking organizations will be required to submit an acceptable plan for achieving compliance with the capital guidelines and will be subject to denial of applications and appropriate supervisory enforcement actions.

The zone in which an organization's total capital ratio falls will normally trigger the following supervisory responses, subject to qualitative analysis:

For institutions operating in Zone 1, the Federal Reserve will:

—Consider that capital is generally adequate if the primary capital ratio is acceptable to the Federal Reserve and is above the 5.5 percent minimum.

For institutions operating in Zone 2, the Federal Reserve will:

—Pay particular attention to financial factors, such as asset quality, liquidity, off-balance sheet risk, and interest rate risk, as they relate to the adequacy of capital. If these areas are deficient and the Federal Reserve concludes capital is not fully adequate, the Federal Reserve will intensify its monitoring and take appropriate supervisory action.

For institutions operating in Zone 3, the Federal Reserve will:

—Consider that the institution is undercapitalized, absent clear extenuating circumstances;

—Require the institution to submit a comprehensive capital plan, acceptable to the Federal Reserve, that includes a program for achieving compliance with the required minimum ratios within a reasonable time period; and —Institute appropriate supervisory and/or administrative enforcement action, which may include the issuance of a capital directive or denial of applications, unless a capital plan acceptable to the Federal Reserve has been adopted by the institution.

TREATMENT OF INTANGIBLE ASSETS FOR THE PURPOSE OF ASSESSING THE CAPITAL ADEQUACY OF BANK HOLDING COMPANIES AND STATE MEMBER BANKS

In considering the treatment of intangible assets for the purpose of assessing capital adequacy, the Federal Reserve recognizes that the determination of the future benefits and useful lives of certain intangible assets may involve a degree of uncertainty that is not normally associated with other banking assets. Supervisory concern over intangible assets derives from this uncertainty and from the possibility that, in the event an organization experiences financial difficulties, such assets may not provide the degree of support generally associated with other assets. For this reason, the Federal Reserve will carefully review the level and specific character of intangible assets in evaluating the capital adequacy of state member banks and bank holding companies.

[1] The guidelines will apply to bank holding companies with less than $150 million in consolidated assets on a bank-only basis unless (1) the holding company or any nonbank subsidiary is engaged directly or indirectly in any nonbank activity involving significant leverage or (2) the holding company or any nonbank subsidiary has outstanding significant debt held by the general public. Debt held by the general public is defined to mean debt held by parties other than financial institutions, officers, directors, and principal shareholders of the banking organization or their related interests.

The Federal Reserve recognizes that intangible assets may differ with respect to predictability of any income stream directly associated with a particular asset, the existence of a market for the asset, the ability to sell the asset, or the reliability of any estimate of the asset's useful life. Certain intangible assets have predictable income streams and objectively verifiable values and may contribute to an organization's profitability and overall financial strength. The value of other intangibles, such as goodwill, may involve a number of assumptions and may be more subject to changes in general economic circumstances or to changes in an individual institution's future prospects. Consequently, the value of such intangible assets may be difficult to ascertain. Consistent with prudent banking practices and the principle of the diversification of risks, banking organizations should avoid excessive balance sheet concentration in any category or related categories of intangible assets.

Bank Holding Companies

While the Federal Reserve will consider the amount and nature of all intangible assets, those holding companies with aggregate intangible assets in excess of 25 percent of tangible primary capital (i.e., stated primary capital less all intangible assets) or those institutions with lesser, although still significant, amounts of goodwill will be subject to close scrutiny. For the purpose of assessing capital adequacy, the Federal Reserve may, on a case-by-case basis, make adjustments to an organization's capital ratios based upon the amount of intangible assets in excess of the 25 percent threshold level or upon the specific character of the organization's intangible assets in relation to its overall financial condition. Such adjustments may require some organizations to raise additional capital.

The Board expects banking organizations (including state member banks) contemplating expansion proposals to ensure that pro forma capital ratios exceed the minimum capital levels without significant reliance on intangibles, particularly goodwill. Consequently, in reviewing acquisition proposals, the Board will take into consideration both the stated primary capital ratio (that is, the ratio without any adjustment for intangible assets) and the primary capital ratio after deducting intangibles. In acting on applications, the Board will take into account the nature and amount of intangible assets and will, as appropriate, adjust capital ratios to include certain intangible assets on a case-by-case basis.

State Member Banks

State member banks with intangible assets in excess of 25 percent of intangible primary capital will be subject to close scrutiny. In addition, for the purpose of calculating capital ratios of state member banks, the Federal Reserve will deduct goodwill from primary capital and total capital. The Federal Reserve may, on a case-by-case basis, make further adjustments to a bank's capital ratios based on the amount of intangible assets (aside from goodwill) in excess of the 25 percent threshold level or on the specific character of the bank's intangible assets in relation to its overall financial condition. Such adjustments may require some banks to raise additional capital.

In addition, state member banks and bank holding companies are expected to review periodically the value at which intangible assets are carried on their balance sheets to determine whether there has been any impairment of value or whether changing circumstances warrant a shortening of amortization periods. Institutions should make appropriate reductions in carrying values and amortization periods in light of this review, and examiners will evaluate the treatment of intangible assets during on-site examinations.

DEFINITION OF CAPITAL TO BE USED IN DETERMINING CAPITAL ADEQUACY OF BANK HOLDING COMPANIES AND STATE MEMBER BANKS

Primary Capital Components

The components of primary capital are:

—Common stock,
—Perpetual preferred stock (preferred stock that does not have a stated maturity date and that may not be redeemed at the option of the holder),
—Surplus (excluding surplus relating to limited-life preferred stock),
—Undivided profits,
—Contingency and other capital reserves,
—Mandatory convertible instruments [2],
—Allowance for possible loan and lease losses (exclusive of allocated transfer risk reserves),
—Minority interest in equity accounts of consolidated subsidiaries.

Secondary Capital Components

The components of secondary capital are:

---

[2] See the definitional section below that lists the criteria for mandatory convertible instruments to qualify as primary capital.

—Limited-life preferred stock (including related surplus) and —Bank subordinated notes and debentures and unsecured long-term debt of the parent company and its nonbank subsidiaries.

Restrictions Relating to Capital Components

To qualify as primary or secondary capital, a capital instrument should not contain or be covered by any convenants, terms, or restrictions that are inconsistent with safe and sound banking practices. Examples of such terms are those regarded as unduly interfering with the ability of the bank or holding company to conduct normal banking operations or those resulting in significantly higher dividends or interest payments in the event of a deterioration in the financial condition of the issuer.

The secondary components must meet the following conditions to qualify as capital:

—The instrument must have an original weighted-average maturity of at least seven years.

—The instrument must be unsecured.

—The instrument must clearly state on its face that it is not a deposit and is not insured by a Federal agency.

—Bank debt instruments must be subordinated to claims of depositors.

—For banks only, the aggregate amount of limited-life preferred stock and subordinate debt qualifying as capital may not exceed 50 percent of the amount of the bank's primary capital.

As secondary capital components approach maturity, the banking organization must plan to redeem or replace the instruments while maintaining an adequate overall capital position. Thus, the remaining maturity of secondary capital components will be an important consideration in assessing the adequacy of total capital.

Capital Ratios

The primary and total capital ratios for bank holding companies are computed as follows:

Primary capital ratio:

Primary capital components/Total assets + Allowance for loan and lease losses (exclusive of allocated transfer risk reserves)

Total capital ratio:

Primary capital components + Secondary capital components/Total assets + Allowance for loan and lease losses (exclusive of allocated transfer risk reserves)

The primary and total capital ratios for state member banks are computed as follows:

Primary capital ratio:

Primary capital components—Goodwill/Average total assets + Allowance for loan and lease losses (exclusive of allocated transfer risk reserves)—Goodwill

Total capital ratio:

Primary capital components + Secondary capital components—Goodwill/Average total assets + Allowance for loan and lease losses (exclusive of allocated transfer risk reserves)—Goodwill Generally, period-end amounts will be used to calculate bank holding company ratios. However, the Federal Reserve will discourage temporary balance sheet adjustments or any other "window dressing" practices designed to achieve transitory compliance with the guidelines. Banking organizations are expected to maintain adequate capital positions at all times. Thus, the Federal Reserve will, on a case-by-case basis, use average total assets in the calculation of bank holding company capital ratios whenever this approach provides a more meaningful indication of an individual holding company's capital position.

For the calculation of bank capital ratios, "average total assets" will generally be defined as the quarterly average total assets figure reported on the bank's Report of Condition. If warranted, however, the Federal Reserve may calculate bank capital ratios based upon total assets as of period-end. All other components of the bank's capital ratios will be based upon period-end balances.

CRITERIA FOR DETERMINING THE PRIMARY CAPITAL STATUS OF MANDATORY CONVERTIBLE SECURITIES OF BANK HOLDING COMPANIES AND STATE MEMBER BANKS

Mandatory convertible securities are subordinated debt instruments that are eventually transformed into common or perpetual preferred stock within a specified period of time, not to exceed 12 years. To be counted as primary capital, mandatory convertible securities must meet the criteria set forth below. These criteria cover the two basic types of mandatory convertible securities: "equity contract notes"—securities that obligate the holder to take common or perpetual preferred stock of the issuer in lieu of cash for repayment of principal, and "equity commitment notes"—securities that are redeemable only with the proceeds from the sale of common or perpetual preferred stock. Both equity commitment notes and equity contract notes qualify as primary capital for bank holding companies, but only equity contract notes qualify as primary capital for banks.[3]

---

[3] Equity commitment notes that were issued by state member banks prior to May

Continued

Criteria Applicable to Both Types of Mandatory Convertible Securities

a. The securities must mature in 12 years or less.

b. The maximum amount of mandatory convertible securities that may be counted as primary capital is limited to 20 percent of primary capital, exclusive of mandatory convertible securities.[4] (Amounts outstanding in excess of the 20 percent limitation may be counted as secondary capital provided they meet the requirements of secondary capital instruments.)

c. The issuer may redeem securities prior to maturity only with the proceeds from the sale of common or perpetual preferred stock of the bank or bank holding company. Any exception to this rule must be approved by the Federal Reserve. The securities may not be redeemed with the proceeds of another issue of mandatory convertible securities. Nor may the issuer repurchase or acquire its own mandatory convertible securities for resale or reissuance.

d. Holders of the securities may not accelerate the payment of principal except in the event of bankruptcy, insolvency, or reorganization.

e. The securities must be subordinate in right of payment to all senior indebtedness of the issuer. In the event that the proceeds of the securities are reloaned to an affiliate, the loan must be subordinated to the same degree as the original issue.

f. An issuer that intends to dedicate the proceeds of an issue of common or perpetual preferred stock to satisfy the funding requirements of an issue of mandatory convertible securities (i.e. the requirement to retire or redeem the notes with the proceeds from the issuance of common or perpetual preferred stock) generally must make such a dedication during the quarter in which the new common or preferred stock is issued.[5] As a general rule, if the dedication is not made within the prescribed period, then the securities issued may not at a later date be dedicated to the retirement or redemption of the mandatory convertible securities.[6] a. The note must contain a contractual provision (or must be issued with a mandatory stock purchase contract) that requires the holder of the instrument to take the common or perpetual stock of the issuer in lieu of cash in satisfaction of the claim for principal repayment. The obligation of the holder to take the common or perpetual preferred stock of the issuer may be waived if, and to the extent that, prior to the maturity date of the obligation, the issuer sells new common or perpetual preferred stock and dedicates the proceeds to the retirement or redemption of the notes. The dedication generally must be made during the quarter in which the new common or preferred stock is issued.

b. A stock purchase contract may be separated from a security only if: (1) The holder of the contract provides sufficient collateral[7] to the issuer, or to an independent trustee for the benefit of the issuer, to assure performance under the contract and (2) the stock purchase contract requires the purchase of common or perpetual preferred stock.

15, 1985 will continue to be included in primary capital.

[4] The maximum amount of equity commitment notes that may be counted as primary capital is limited to 10 percent of primary capital exclusive of mandatory convertible securities.

[5] Common or perpetual preferred stock issued under dividend reinvestment plans or issued to finance acquisitions, including acquisitions of business entities, may be dedicated to the retirement or redemption of the mandatory convertible securities. Documentation certified by an authorized agent of the issuer showing the amount of common stock or perpetual preferred stock issued, the dates of issue, and amounts of such issues dedicated to the retirement or redemption of mandatory convertible securities will satisfy the dedication requirement.

[6] The dedication procedure is necessary to ensure that the primary capital of the issuer is not overstated. For each dollar of common or perpetual preferred proceeds dedicated to the retirement or redemption of the notes, there is a corresponding reduction in the amount of outstanding mandatory securities that may qualify as primary capital. De minimis amounts (in relation to primary capital) of common or perpetual preferred stock issued under arrangements in which the amount of stock issued is not predictable, such as dividend reinvestment plans and employee stock option plans (but excluding public stock offerings and stock issued in connection with acquisitions), should be dedicated by no later than the company's fiscal year end.

[7] Collateral is defined as: (1) Cash or certificates of deposit; (2) U.S. government securities that will mature prior to or simultaneous with the maturity of the equity contract and that have a par or maturity value at least equal to the amount of the holder's obligation under the stock purchase contract; (3) standby letters of credit issued by an insured U.S. bank that is not an affiliate of the issuer; or (4) other collateral as may be designated from time to time by the Federal Reserve.

Additional Criteria Applicable to Equity Commitment Notes

a. The indenture or note agreement must contain the following two provisions:

1. The proceeds of the sale of common or perpetual preferred stock will be the sole source of repayment for the notes, and the issuer must dedicate the proceeds for the purpose of repaying the notes. (Documentation certified by an authorized agent of the issued showing the amount of common or perpetual preferred stock issued, the dates of issue, and amounts of such issues dedicated to the retirement or redemption of mandatory convertible securities will satisfy the dedication requirement.)

2. By the time that one-third of the life of the securities has run, the issuer must have raised and dedicated an amount equal to one-third of the original principal of the securities. By the time that two-thirds of the life of the securities has run, the issuer must have raised and dedicated an amount equal to two-thirds of the original principal of the securities. At least 60 days prior to the maturity of the securities, the issuer must have raised and dedicated an amount equal to the entire original principal of the securities. Proceeds dedicated to redemption or retirement of the notes must come only from the sale of common or perpetual preferred stock.[8]

b. If the issuer fails to meet any of these periodic funding requirements, the Federal Reserve immediately will cease to treat the unfunded securities as primary capital and will take appropriate supervisory action. In addition, failure to meet the funding requirements will be viewed as a breach of a regulatory commitment and will be taken into consideration by the Board in acting on statutory applications.

c. If a security is issued by a subsidiary of a bank or bank holding company, any guarantee of the principal by that subsidiary's parent bank or bank holding company must be subordinate to the same degree as the security issued by the subsidiary and limited to repayment of the principal amount of the security at its final maturity.

d. The maximum amount of equity commitment notes that may be counted as primary capital for a bank holding company is limited to 10 percent of primary capital exclusive of mandatory convertible securities. Amounts outstanding in excess of the 10 percent limitation may be counted as secondary capital provided they meet the requirements of secondary capital instruments.

APPENDIX B—POLICY STATEMENT FOR FORMATION OF SMALL ONE-BANK HOLDING COMPANIES

Assessment of Financial Factors

In acting on applications filed under the Bank Holding Company Act, the Board has adopted, and continues to follow, the principle that bank holding companies should serve as a source of strength for their subsidiary banks. When bank holding companies incur debt and rely upon the earnings of their subsidiary banks as the means of repaying such debt, a question arises as to the probable effect upon the financial condition of the company and its subsidiary bank or banks.

The Board believes that a high level of debt at the parent holding company level impairs the ability of a bank holding company to provide financial assistance to its subsidiary bank and in some cases the servicing requirements on such debt may be a significant drain on the bank's resources. For these reasons, the Board has not favored the use of acquisition debt in the formation of bank holding companies. Nevertheless, the Board has recognized that the transfer of ownership of small banks often requires the use of acquisition debt. The Board therefore has permitted the formation of small one-bank holding companies with debt levels higher than would be permitted for larger or multibank holding companies. Approval of these applications has been given on the condition that the small one-bank holding companies demonstrate the ability to service the acquisition debt without straining the capital of their subsidiary bank and, further, that such companies restore their ability to serve as a source of strength for their subsidiary bank within a relatively short period of time.

In the interest of furthering its policy of facilitating the transfer of ownership in banks without diluting bank safety and soundness, the Board has reexamined the analytical framework and financial criteria it applies when considering the formation of small one-bank holding companies and has adopted certain revisions in its procedures and standards as described below.

The revised criteria shift the focus from debt repayment to the relationship between debt and equity at the parent holding company. The holding company will have the option of improving the relationship of debt to equity by repaying the principal amount of its debt or through the retention of earnings, or both. Under these procedures, newly organized small one-bank holding companies will be expected to reduce the relationship of their debt to equity over a reasonable period of time to a level comparable to that maintained by many large and multibank holding companies.

[8] The funded portions of the securities will be deducted from primary capital to avoid double counting.

In general, this policy is intended to apply only to one-bank holding companies that would not have significant leveraged nonbank activities and whose subsidiary bank would have total assets of approximately $150 million or less at the time the application is filed. Small one-bank holding companies formed before the initial effective date of the Board's policy concerning formation of small one-bank holding companies and assessment of financial factors (March 28, 1980) may switch to a plan that adheres to the intent of this policy provided they comply with criteria 2, 3, and 4 set forth below.

The criteria are as follows:

General

In evaluating applications filed pursuant to section 3(a)(1) of the Bank Holding Company Act, as amended, when the applicant intends to incur debt to finance the acquisition of a small bank, the Board will take into account a full range of financial and other information, including the recent trend and stability of earnings of the bank, the past and prospective growth of the bank, the quality of the bank's assets, the ability of the applicant to meet debt servicing requirements without placing an undue strain on the bank's resources, and the record and competency of management of the applicant and the bank. In addition, the Board will require applicants to meet the minimum requirements set forth below. As a general rule, failure to meet any of these requirements will result in denial of the application; however, the Board reserves the right to make exceptions if the circumstances warrant.

1. Minimum Down Payment. The amount of acquisition debt should not exceed 75 percent of the purchase price of the bank to be acquired. When the owner(s) of the holding company incur debt to finance the purchase of the bank, such debt will be considered acquisition debt even though it does not represent an obligation of the bank holding company, unless the owner(s) can demonstrate that such debt can be serviced without reliance on the resources of the bank or bank holding company.

2. Maintenance of Adequate Capital. An applicant proposing to use acquisition debt must demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Board that any debt servicing requirements to which the bank holding company may be subject would not cause the subsidiary bank's ratio of gross capital to assets to fall below 8 percent during the 12-year period following consummation of the acquisition. Gross capital is defined as the sum of total stockholders' equity, the allowance for possible loan losses, and subordinated capital notes and debentures.

3. Reduction in Parent Company Leverage. The applicant must demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Board that the parent holding company's ratio of debt to equity will decline to 30 percent within 12 years after consummation of the acquisition. The holding company must also demonstrate that it will be able to safely meet debt servicing and other requirements imposed by its creditors.

The term "debt," as used in the ratio of debt to equity, means any borrowed funds (exclusive of short-term borrowings that arise out of current transactions, the proceeds of which are used for current transactions), and any securities issued by, or obligations of, the holding company that are the functional equivalent of borrowed funds.

The term "equity," as used in the ratio of debt to equity, means the total stockholders' equity of the bank holding company adjusted to reflect the periodic amortization of "goodwill" (defined as the excess of cost of any acquired company over the sum of the amounts assigned to identifiable assets acquired, less liabilities assumed) in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. In determining the total amount of stockholders' equity, the bank holding company should account for its investments in the common stock of subsidiaries by the equity method of accounting.

Ordinarily the Board does not view redeemable preferred stock as a substitute for common stock in a one-bank holding company formation. Nevertheless, to a limited degree and under certain circumstances the Board will consider redeemable preferred stock as equity in the capital accounts of the holding company if the following conditions are met: (1) The preferred stock is redeemable only at the option of the issuer and (2) the debt to equity ratio of the holding company would be at or remain below 30 percent following the redemption or retirement of any preferred stock. Preferred stock that is convertible into common stock of the holding company may be treated as equity.

4. Dividend Restrictions. The bank holding company is not expected to pay any corporate dividends on common stock until such time as its debt to equity ratio is below 30 percent. However, some dividends may be permitted provided all of the following conditions are met: (a) The applicant has begun making scheduled repayments of principal on the acquisition debt; (b) such scheduled repayments of principal are reasonable in amount, will be made at least annually, and will allow for the retirement of the acquisition debt over a period not to exceed 25 years; and (c) the applicant can clearly demonstrate at the time the application is filed that such dividends will not jeopardize the ability of the holding company to reduce its debt to equity ratio to 30 percent within 12 years of consummation of the proposal or cause the gross capital to assets of the subsidiary bank to fall below 8 percent over the same period. Also, it is expected that dividends will be eliminated if the holding company is not meeting the projections made at the time the application was filed regarding the ability of the holding company to reduce the debt to equity ratio to 30 percent within 12 years of consummation of the proposal.

The requirements of this Policy Statement should be read in the context of the Board's Capital Adequacy Guidelines (Appendix A), including the definitions of capital and its components.

INTERPRETATIONS

§ 225.101 Bank holding company's subsidiary banks owning shares of nonbanking companies.

(a) The Board's opinion has been requested on the following related matters under the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956.

(b) The question is raised as to whether shares in a nonbanking company which were acquired by a banking subsidiary of the bank holding company many years ago when their acquisition was lawful and are now held as investments, and which do not include more than 5 percent of the outstanding voting securities of such nonbanking company and do not have a value greater than 5 percent of the value of the bank holding company's total assets, are exempted from the divestment requirements of the Act by the provisions of section 4(c)(5) of the Act.

(c) In the Board's opinion, this exemption is as applicable to such shares when held by a banking subsidiary of a bank holding company as when held directly by the bank holding company itself. While the exemption specifically refers only to shares held or acquired by the bank holding company, the prohibition of the Act against retention of nonbanking interests applies to indirect as well as direct ownership of shares of a nonbanking company, and, in the absence of a clear mandate to the contrary, any exception to this prohibition should be given equal breadth with the prohibition. Any other interpretation would lead to unwarranted results.

(d) Although certain of the other exemptions in section 4(c) of the Act specifically refer to shares held or acquired by banking subsidiaries, an analysis of those exemptions suggests that such specific reference to banking subsidiaries was for the purpose of excluding nonbanking subsidiaries from such exemptions, rather than for the purpose of providing an inclusionary emphasis on banking subsidiaries.

(e) It should be noted that the Board's view as to this question should not be interpreted as meaning that each banking subsidiary could own up to 5 percent of the stock of the same nonbanking organization. In the Board's opinion the limitations set forth in section 4(c)(5) apply to the aggregate amount of stock held in a particular organization by the bank holding company itself and by all of its subsidiaries.

(f) Secondly, question is raised as to whether shares in a nonbanking company acquired in satisfaction of debts previously contracted (d.p.c.) by a banking subsidiary of the bank holding company may be retained if such shares meet the conditions contained in section 4(c)(5) as to value and amount, notwithstanding the requirement of section 4(c)(2) that shares acquired d.p.c. be disposed of within two years after the date of their acquisition or the date of the Act, whichever is later. In the Board's opinion, the 5 percent exemption provided by section 4(c)(5) covers any shares, including shares acquired d.p.c., that meet the conditions set forth in that exemption, and, consequently, d.p.c. shares held by a banking subsidiary of a bank holding company which meet such conditions are not subject to the two-year disposition requirement prescribed by section 4(c)(2), although any such shares would, of course, continue to be subject to such requirement for disposition as may be prescribed by provisions of any applicable banking laws or by the appropriate bank supervisory authorities.

(g) Finally, question is raised as to whether shares held by banking subsidiaries of the bank holding company in companies holding bank premises of such subsidiaries are exempted from the divestment requirements by section 4(c)(1) of the Act. It is the Board's view that section 4(c)(1), exempting shares owned or acquired by a bank holding company in any company engaged solely in holding or operating properties used wholly or substantially by any subsidiary bank, is to be read and interpreted, like section 4(c)(5), as applying to shares owned indirectly by a bank holding company through a banking subsidiary as well as to shares held directly by the bank holding company. A contrary interpretation would impair the right that member banks controlled by bank holding companies would otherwise have to invest, subject to the limitations of section 24A of the Federal Reserve Act, in stock of companies holding their bank premises; and such a result was not, in the Board's opinion, intended by the Bank Holding Company Act.

§ 225.102 Bank holding company indirectly owning nonbanking company through subsidiaries.

(a) The Board of Governors has been requested for an opinion regarding the exemptions contained in section 4(c)(5) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956. It is stated that Y Company is an investment company which is not a bank holding company and which is not engaged in any business other than investing in securities, which securities do not include more than 5 per centum of the outstanding voting securities of any company and do not include any asset having a value greater than 5 per centum of the value of the total assets of X Corporation, a bank holding company. It is stated that direct ownership by X Corporation of voting shares of Y Company would be exempt by reason of section 4(c)(5) from the prohibition of section 4 of the Act against ownership by bank holding companies of nonbanking assets.

(b) It was asked whether it makes any difference that the shares of Y Company are not owned directly by X Corporation but instead are owned through Subsidiaries A and B. X Corporation owns all the voting shares of Subsidiary A, which owns one-half of the voting shares of Subsidiary B. Subsidiaries A and B each own one-third of the voting shares of Y Company.

(c) Section 4(c)(5) is divided into two parts. The first part exempts the ownership of securities of nonbanking companies when the securities do not include more than 5 percent of the voting securities of the nonbanking company and do not have a value greater than 5 percent of the value of the total assets of the bank holding company. The second part exempts the ownership of securities of an investment company which is not a bank holding company and is not engaged in any business other than investing in securities, provided the securities held by the investment company meet the 5 percent tests mentioned above.

(d) In § 225.101, the Board expressed the opinion that the first exemption in section 4(c)(5):

> * * * is as applicable to such shares when held by a banking subsidiary of a bank holding company as when held directly by the bank holding company itself. While the exemption specifically refers only to shares held or acquired by the bank holding company, the prohibition of the Act against retention of nonbanking interests applies to indirect as well as direct ownership of shares of a nonbanking company, and, in the absence of a clear mandate to the contrary, any exception to this prohibition should be given equal breadth with the prohibition. Any other interpretation would lead to unwarranted results.

(e) The Board is of the view that the principles stated in that opinion are also applicable to the second exemption in section 4(c)(5), and that they apply whether or not the subsidiary owning the shares is a banking subsidiary. Accordingly, on the basis of the facts presented, the Board is of the opinion that the second exemption in section 4(c)(5) applies to the indirect ownership by X Corporation of shares of Y Company through Subsidiaries A and B.

§ 225.103 Bank holding company acquiring stock by dividends, stock splits or exercise of rights.

(a) The Board of Governors has been asked whether a bank holding company may receive bank stock dividends or participate in bank stock splits without the Board's prior approval, and whether such a company may exercise, without the Board's prior approval, rights to subscribe to new stock issued by banks in which the holding company already owns stock.

(b) Neither a stock dividend nor a stock split results in any change in a stockholder's proportional interest in the issuing company or any increase in the assets of that company. Such a transaction would have no effect upon the extent of a holding company's control of the bank involved; and none of the five factors required by the Bank Holding Company Act to be considered by the Board in approving a stock acquisition would seem to have any application. In view of the objectives and purposes of the act, the word "acquire" would not seem reasonably to include transactions of this kind.

(c) On the other hand, the exercise by a bank holding company of the right to subscribe to an issue of additional stock of a bank could result in an increase in the holding company's proportional interest in the bank. The holding company would voluntarily pay additional funds for the extra shares and would "acquire" the additional stock even under a narrow meaning of that term. Moreover, the exercise of such rights would cause the assets of the issuing company to be increased and in a sense, therefore, the "size or extent" of the bank holding company system would be expanded.

(d) In the circumstances, it is the Board's opinion that receipt of bank stock by means of a stock dividend or stock split, assuming no change in the class of stock, does not require the Board's prior approval under the act, but that purchase of bank stock by a bank holding company through the exercise of rights does require the Board's prior approval, unless one of the exceptions set forth in section 3(a) is applicable.

(a) Section 4(c)(1) of the Bank Holding Company Act, among other things, exempts from the nonbanking divestment requirements of section 4(a) of the Act shares of a company engaged "solely in the business of furnishing services to or performing services for" its bank holding company or subsidiary banks thereof.

(b) The Board of Governors has had occasion to express opinions as to whether this section of law applies to the following two sets of facts:

(1) In the first case, Corporation X, a nonbanking subsidiary of a bank holding company (Holding Company A), was engaged in the business of purchasing installment paper suitable for investment by banking subsidiaries of Holding Company A. All installment paper purchased by Corporation X was sold by it to a bank which is a subsidiary of Holding Company A, without recourse, at a price equal to the cost of the installment paper to Corporation X, and with compensation to the latter based on the earnings from such paper remaining after certain reserves, expenses and charges. The subsidiary bank sold participations in such installment paper to the other affiliated banks of Holding Company A which desired to participate. Purchases by Corporation X consisted mainly of paper insured under Title I of the National Housing Act and, in addition, Corporation X purchased time payment contracts covering sales of appliances by dealers under contractual arrangements with utilities, as well as paper covering home improvements which was not insured. Pursuant to certain service agreements, Corporation X made all collections, enforced guaranties, filed claims under Title I insurance and performed other services for the affiliated banks. Also Corporation X rendered to banking subsidiaries of Holding Company A various accounting, statistical and advisory services such as payroll, life insurance and budget loan installment account.

(2) In the second case, Corporation Y, a nonbanking subsidiary of a bank holding company (Holding Company B, which was also a bank), solicited business on behalf of Holding Company B from dealers, throughout several adjoining or contiguous States, who made time sales and desired to convert their time sales paper into cash; but Corporation Y made no loans or purchases of sales contracts and did not discount or advance money for time sales obligations. Corporation Y investigated credit standings of purchasers obligated on time sale contracts to be acquired by Holding Company B. Corporation Y received from dealers the papers offered by them and inspected such papers to see that they were in order, and transmitted to Holding Company B for its determination to purchase, including, in some cases, issuance of drafts in favor of dealers in order to facilitate their prompt receipt of payment for installment paper purchased by Holding Company B. Corporation Y made collections of delinquent paper or delinquent installments, which sometimes involved repossession and resale of the automobile or other property which secured the paper. Also, upon request of purchasers obligated on paper held by Holding Company B, Corporation Y transmitted installment payments to Holding Company B. Holding Company B reimbursed Corporation Y for its actual costs and expenses in performing the services mentioned above, including the salaries and wages of all Corporation Y officers and employees.

(c) While the term "services" is sometimes used in a broad and general sense, the legislative history of the Bank Holding Company Act indicates that in section 4(c)(1) the word was meant to be somewhat more limited in its application. An early version of the bill specifically exempted companies engaged in serving the bank holding company and its subsidiary banks in "auditing, appraising, investment counseling". The statute as finally enacted does not expressly mention any specific type of servicing activity for exemption. In recommending the change, the Senate Banking and Currency Committee stated that the types of services contemplated are "in the fields of advertising, public relations, developing new business, organizations, operations, preparing tax returns, personnel, and many others", which indicates that latitude should be given to the range of activities contemplated by this section beyond those specifically set forth in the early draft of the bill. (84th Cong., 2d Sess., Senate Report 1095, Part 2, p. 3.) It nevertheless seems evident that Congress intended such services to be types of activities generally comparable to those mentioned above from the early bill ("auditing, appraising, investment counseling") and in the excerpt from the Committee Report on the later bill ("advertising, public relations, developing new business, organization, operations, preparing tax returns, personnel, and many others"). This legislative history and the context in which the term "services" is used in section 4(c)(1) seem to suggest that the term was in general intended to refer to servicing operations which a bank could carry on itself, but which the bank or its holding company chooses to have done through another organization. Moreover, the report of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee indicated that the types of servicing permitted under section 4(c)(1) are to be distinguished from activities of a "financial, fiduciary, or insurance nature", such as those which might be considered for possible exemption under section 4(c)(6) of the Act.

(d) With respect to the first set of facts, the Board expressed the opinion that certain of the activities of Corporation X, such as the accounting, statistical and advisory services referred to above, may be within the range of servicing activities contemplated by section 4(c)(1), but that this would not appear to be the case with the main activity of Corporation X, which was the purchase of installment paper and the resale of such paper at cost, without recourse, to banking subsidiaries of Holding Company A. This latter and basic activity of Corporation X appeared to involve essentially a financial relationship between it and the banking subsidiaries of Holding Company A and appeared beyond the category of servicing exemptions contemplated by section 4(c)(1) of the Act. Accordingly, it was the Board's view that Corporation X could not be regarded as qualifying under section 4 (c)(1) as a company engaged "solely in the business of furnishing services to or performing services for" Holding Company A or subsidiary banks thereof.

(e) With respect to the second set of facts, the Board expressed the opinion that some of the activities engaged in by Corporation Y were clearly within the range of servicing activities contemplated by section 4(c)(1). There was some question as to whether or not some of the other activities of Corporation Y mentioned above could meet the test, but on balance, it seemed that all such activities probably were activities in which Holding Company B, which as already indicated was a bank, could itself engage, at the present locations of Corporation Y, without being engaged in the operation of bank branches at those locations. In the circumstances, while the question was not free from doubt, the Board expressed the opinion that the activities of Corporation Y were those of a company engaged "solely in the business of furnishing services to or performing services for" Holding Company B within the meaning of section 4(c)(1) of the act, and that, accordingly, the control by Holding Company B of shares in Corporation Y was exempted under that section.

§ 225.107 Acquisition of stock in small business investment company.

(a) A registered bank holding company requested an opinion by the Board of Governors with respect to whether that company and its banking subsidiaries may acquire stock in a small business investment company organized pursuant to the Small Business Investment Act of 1958.

(b) It is understood that the bank holding company and its subsidiary banks propose to organize and subscribe for stock in a small business investment company which would be chartered pursuant to the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 which provides for long-term credit and equity financing for small business concerns.

(c) Section 302(b) of the Small Business Investment Act authorizes national banks, as well as other member banks and nonmember insured banks to the extent permitted by applicable State law, to invest capital in small business investment companies not exceeding one percent of the capital and surplus of such banks. Section 4(c)(4) of the Bank Holding Company Act exempts from the prohibitions of section 4 of the Act "shares which are of the kinds and amounts eligible for investment by National banking associations under the provisions of section 5136 of the Revised Statutes". Section 5136 of the Revised Statutes (paragraph "Seventh") in turn provides, in part, as follows:

> Except as hereinafter provided or otherwise permitted by law nothing herein contained shall authorize the purchase by the association for its own account of any shares of stock of any corporation.

Since the shares of a small business investment company are of a kind and amount expressly made eligible for investment by a national bank under the Small Business Investment Act of 1958, it follows, therefore, that the ownership or control of such shares by a bank holding company would be exempt from the prohibitions of section 4 of the Bank Holding Company Act by virtue of the provisions of section 4(c)(4) of that Act. Accordingly, the ownership or control of such shares by the bank holding company would be exempt from the prohibitions of section 4 of the Bank Holding Company Act.

(d) An additional question is presented, however, as to whether section 6 of the Bank Holding Company Act prohibits banking subsidiaries of the bank holding company from purchasing stock in a small business investment company where the latter is a "subsidiary" under that Act.

(e) Section 6(a)(1) of the Act makes it unlawful for a bank to invest any of its funds in the capital stock of any other subsidiary of the bank holding company. However, section 6(a)(1) was, in effect, amended by section 302(b) of the Small Business Investment Act (15 U.S.C. 682) as amended by the Act of June 11, 1960 (Pub. L. 86-502) so as to nullify this prohibition when the "subsidiary" is a small business investment company.

(f) Accordingly, section 6 of the Bank Holding Company Act does not prohibit banking subsidiaries of the bank holding company from purchasing stock in a small business investment company organized pursuant to the Small Business Investment Act of 1958, where that company is or will be a subsidiary of the bank holding company.

(a) The Board of Governors has been requested by a bank holding company for an interpretation under section 4(c)(1) of the Bank Holding Company Act which, among other things, exempts from the nonbanking divestment requirements of section 4(a) of the Act, shares of a company engaged "solely in the business of furnishing services to or performing services for" its bank holding company or subsidiary banks thereof.

(b) It is understood that a nonbanking subsidiary of the holding company engages in writing comprehensive automobile insurance (fire, theft, and collision) which is sold only to customers of a subsidiary bank of the holding company in connection with the bank's retail installment loans; that when payment is made on a loan secured by a lien on a motor vehicle, renewal policies are not issued by the insurance company; and that the insurance company receives the usual agency commissions on all comprehensive automobile insurance written for customers of the bank.

(c) It is also understood that the insurance company writes credit life insurance for the benefit of the bank and its installment-loan customers; that each insured debtor is covered for an amount equal to the unpaid balance of his note to the bank, not to exceed $5,000; that as the note is reduced by regular monthly payments, the amount of insurance is correspondingly reduced so that at all times the debtor is insured for the unpaid balance of his note; that each insurance contract provides for payment in full of the entire loan balance upon the death or permanent disability of the insured borrower; and that this credit life insurance is written only at the request of, and solely for, the bank's borrowing customers. It is further understood that the insurance company engages in no other activity.

(d) As indicated in § 225.104 (23 FR 2675), the term "services," while sometimes used in a broad and general sense, appears to be somewhat more limited in its application in section 4(c)(1) of the Bank Holding Company Act. Unlike an early version of the Senate bill (S. 2577, before amendment), the act as finally enacted does not expressly mention any type of servicing activity for exemption. The legislative history of the Act, however, as indicated in the relevant portion of the record of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee on amended S. 2577 (84th Cong., 2d Sess., Senate Report 1095, Part 2, p. 3) makes it evident that Congress had in mind the exemption of services comparable to the types of activities mentioned expressly in the early Senate bill ("auditing, appraising, investment counseling") and in the Committee Report on the later bill ("advertising, public relations, developing new business, organization, operations, preparing tax returns, personnel, and many others"). Furthermore, this Committee Report expressly stated that the provision of section 4(c)(1) with respect to "furnishing services to or performing services for" was not intended to supplant the exemption contained under section 4 (c)(6) of the Act.

(e) The only activity of the insurance company (writing comprehensive automobile insurance and credit life insurance) appears to involve an insurance relationship between it and a banking subsidiary of the holding company which the legislative history clearly indicates does not come within the meaning of the phrase "furnishing services to or performing services for" a bank holding company or its banking subsidiaries.

(f) Accordingly, it is the Board's view that the insurance company could not be regarded as qualifying as a company engaged "solely in the business of furnishing services to or performing services for" the bank holding company or banks with respect to which the latter is a bank holding company.

§ 225.111 Limit on investment by bank holding company system in stock of small business investment companies.

(a) Under the provisions of section 4(c)(5) of the Bank Holding Company Act, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1843), a bank holding company may acquire shares of nonbank companies "which are of the kinds and amounts eligible for investment" by national banks. Pursuant to section 302(b) of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 (15 U.S.C. 682(b)), as amended by Title II of the Small Business Act Amendments of 1967 (Pub. L. 90-104, 81 Stat. 268, 270), a national bank may invest in stock of small business investment companies (SBICs) subject to certain restrictions.

(b) On the basis of the foregoing statutory provisions, it is the position of the Board that a bank holding company may acquire direct or indirect ownership or control of stock of an SBIC subject to the following limits:

(1) The total direct and indirect investments of a bank holding company in stock of SBICs may not exceed:

(i) With respect to all stock of SBICs owned or controlled directly or indirectly by a subsidiary bank, 5 percent of that bank's capital and surplus;

(ii) With respect to all stock of SBICs owned directly by a bank holding company that is a bank, 5 percent of that bank's capital and surplus; and

(iii) With respect to all stock of SBICs otherwise owned or controlled directly or indirectly by a bank holding company, 5 percent of its proportionate interest in the capital and surplus of each subsidiary bank (that is, the holding company's percentage of that bank's stock times that bank's capital and surplus) less that bank's investment in stock of SBICs; and

(2) A bank holding company may not acquire direct or indirect ownership or control of 50 percent or more of the shares of any class of equity securities of an SBIC that have actual or potential voting rights.

(c) A bank holding company or a bank subsidiary that acquired direct or indirect ownership or control of 50 percent or more of any such class of equity securities prior to January 9, 1968, is not required to divest to a level below 50 percent. A bank that acquired 50 percent or more prior to January 9, 1968, may become a subsidiary in a holding company system without any necessity for divesting to a level below 50 percent: Provided, That such action does not result in the bank holding company acquiring control of a percentage greater than that controlled by such bank.

§ 225.112 Indirect control of small business concern through convertible debentures held by small business investment company.

(a) A question has been raised concerning the applicability of provisions of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 to the acquisition by a bank holding company of stock of a small business investment company ("SBIC") organized pursuant to the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 ("SBI Act").

(b) As indicated in the interpretation of the Board (§ 225.107) published at 23 FR 7813, it is the Board's opinion that, since stock of an SBIC is eligible for purchase by national banks and since section 4(c)(4) of the Holding Company Act exempts stock eligible for investment by national banks from the prohibitions of section 4 of that Act, a bank holding company may lawfully acquire stock in such an SBIC.

(c) However, section 304 of the SBI Act provides that debentures of a small business concern purchased by a small business investment company may be converted at the option of such company into stock of the small business concern. The question therefore arises as to whether, in the event of such conversion, the parent bank holding company would be regarded as having acquired "direct or indirect ownership or control" of stock of the small business concern in violation of section 4(a) of the Holding Company Act.

(d) The Small Business Investment Act clearly contemplates that one of the primary purposes of that Act was to enable SBICs to provide needed equity capital to small business concerns through the purchase of debentures convertible into stock. Thus, to the extent that a stockholder in an SBIC might acquire indirect control of stock of a small business concern, such control appears to be a natural and contemplated incident of ownership of stock of the SBIC. The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency has informally indicated concurrence with this interpretation insofar as it affects investments by national banks in stock of an SBIC.

(e) Since the exception as to stock eligible for investment by national banks contained in section 4(c)(4) of the Holding Company Act was apparently intended to permit a bank holding company to acquire any stock that would be eligible for purchase by a national bank, it is the Board's view that section 4(a)(1) of the Act does not prohibit a bank holding company from acquiring stock of an SBIC, even though ownership of such stock may result in the acquisition of indirect ownership or control of stock of a small business concern which would not itself be eligible for purchase directly by a national bank or a bank holding company.

§ 225.113 Services under section 4(a) of Bank Holding Company Act.

(a) The Board of Governors has been requested for an opinion as to whether the performance of certain functions by a bank holding company for four banks of which it owns less than 25 percent of the voting shares is in violation of section 4(a) of the Bank Holding Company Act.

(b) It is claimed that the holding company is engaged in "managing" four nonsubsidiary banks, for which services it receives "management fees." Specifically, the company engages in the following activities for the four nonsubsidiary banks: (1) Establishment and supervision of loaning policies; (2) direction of the purchase and sale of investment securities; (3) selection and training of officer personnel; (4) establishment and enforcement of operating policies; and (5) general supervision over all policies and practices.

(c) The question raised is whether these activities are prohibited by section 4(a)(2) of the Bank Holding Company Act, which permits a bank holding company to engage in only three categories of business: (1) Banking; (2) managing or controlling banks; and (3) furnishing services to or performing services for any bank of which the holding company owns or controls 25 percent or more of the voting shares.

(d) Clearly, the activities of the company with respect to the four nonsubsidiary banks do not constitute "banking." With respect to the business of "managing or controlling" banks, it is the Board's view that such business, within the purview of section 4(a)(2), is essentially the exercise of a broad governing influence of the sort usually exercised by bank stockholders, as distinguished from direct or active participation in the establishment or carrying out of particular policies or operations. The latter kinds of activities fall within the third category of businesses in which a bank holding company is permitted to engage. In the Board's view, the activities enumerated above fall in substantial part within that third category.

(e) Section 4(a)(2), like all other sections of the Holding Company Act, must be interpreted in the light of all of its provisions, as well as in the light of other sections of the Act. The expression "managing * * * banks," if it could be taken by itself, might appear to include activities of the sort enumerated. However, such an interpretation of those words would virtually nullify the last portion of section 4(a)(2), which permits a holding company to furnish services to or perform services for "any bank of which it owns or controls 25 per centum or more of the voting shares."

(f) Since Congress explicitly authorized the performance of services for banks that are at least 25 percent owned by a holding company, it obviously intended that the holding company should not perform services for banks in which it owns less than 25 percent of the voting shares. However, if the second category—"managing or controlling banks"—were interpreted to permit the holding company to perform services for any bank, including a bank in which it held less than 25 percent of the stock (or no stock whatsoever), the last clause of section 4(a)(2) would be meaningless.

(g) It is principally for this reason—that is, to give effective meaning to the final clause of section 4(a)(2)—that the Board interprets "managing or controlling banks" in that provision as referring to the exercise of a stockholder's management or control of banks, rather than direct and active participation in their operations. To repeat, such active participation in operations falls within the third category ("furnishing services to or performing services for any bank") and consequently may be engaged in only with respect to banks in which the holding company "owns or controls 25 per centum or more of the voting shares."

(h) Accordingly, it is the Board's conclusion that, in performing the services enumerated, the bank holding company is "furnishing services to or performing services for" the four banks referred to. Under the Act such furnishing or performing of services is permissible only if the holding company owns or controls 25 percent of the voting shares of each bank receiving such services, and, since the company owns less than 25 percent of the voting shares of these banks, it follows that these activities are prohibited by section 4(a)(2).

(i) While this conclusion is required, in the Board's opinion, by the language of the statute, it may be noted further that any other conclusion would make it possible for bank holding company or any other corporation, through arrangements for the "managing" of banks in the manner here involved, to acquire effective control of banks without acquiring bank stocks and thus to evade the underlying objectives of section 3 of the Act.

§ 225.115 Applicability of Bank Service Corporation Act in certain bank holding company situations.

(a) Questions have been presented to the Board of Governors regarding the applicability of the recently enacted Bank Service Corporation Act (Pub. L. 87-856, approved October 23, 1962) in cases involving service corporations that are subsidiaries of bank holding companies under the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956. In addition to being charged with the administration of the latter Act, the Board is named in the Bank Service Corporation Act as the Federal supervisory agency with respect to the performance of bank services for State member banks.

(b) Holding company-owned corporation serving only subsidiary banks. (1) One question is whether the Bank Service Corporation Act is applicable in the case of a corporation, wholly owned by a bank holding company, which is engaged in performing "bank services", as defined in section 1(b) of the Act, exclusively for subsidiary banks of the holding company.

(2) Except as noted below with respect to section 5 thereof, the Bank Service Corporation Act is not applicable in this case. This is true because none of the stock of the corporation performing the services is owned by any bank and the corporation, therefore, is not a "bank service corporation" as defined in section 1(c) of the Act. A corporation cannot meet that definition unless part of its stock is owned by two or more banks. The situation clearly is unaffected by section 2(b) of the Act which permits a corporation that fell within the definition initially to continue to function as a bank service corporation although subsequently only one of the banks remains as a stockholder in the corporation.

(3) However, although it is not a bank service corporation, the corporation in question and each of the banks for which it performs bank services are subject to section 5 of the Bank Service Corporation Act. That section, which requires the furnishing of certain assurances to the appropriate Federal supervisory agency in connection with the performance of bank services for a bank, is applicable whether such services are performed by a bank service corporation or by others.

(4) Section 4(a)(1) of the Bank Holding Company Act prohibits the acquisition by a bank holding company of "direct or indirect ownership or control" of shares of a nonbanking company, subject to certain exceptions. Section 4(c)(1) of the Act exempts from section 4(a)(1) shares of a company engaged "solely in the business of furnishing services to or performing services for" its bank holding company or subsidiary banks thereof. Assuming that the bank services performed by the corporation in question are "services" of the kinds contemplated by section 4(c)(1) of the Bank Holding Company Act (as would be true, for example, of the electronic data processing of deposit accounts), the holding company's ownership of the corporation's shares in the situation described above clearly is permissible under that section of the Act.

(c) Bank service corporation owned by holding company subsidiaries and serving also other banks. (1) The other question concerns the applicability of the Bank Service Corporation Act and the Bank Holding Company Act in the case of a corporation, all the stock of which is owned either by a bank holding company and its subsidiary banks together or by the subsidiary banks alone, which is engaged in performing "bank services", as defined in section 1(b) of the Bank Service Corporation Act, for the subsidiary banks and for other banks, as well.

(3) The other important difference between this case and the situation in paragraph (b) of this section is that here the bank service corporation performs services for nonsubsidiary banks, as well as for subsidiary banks. This is permissible because section 2(a) of the Bank Service Corporation Act, which authorizes any two or more banks to invest limited amounts in a bank service corporation, removes all limitations and prohibitions of Federal law exclusively relating to banks that otherwise would prevent any such investment. From the legislative history of section 2(a), it is clear that section 6 of the Bank Holding Company Act is among the limitations and prohibitions so removed. But for such removal, section 6(a)(1) of that Act would make it unlawful for any of the subsidiary banks of the bank holding company in question to own stock in the bank service corporation subsidiary of the holding company, as the exemption in section 6(b)(1) would not apply because of the servicing by the bank service corporation of nonsubsidiary banks.

(4) Because the bank service corporation referred to in the question is serving banks other than the subsidiary banks, the bank holding company is not exempt under section 4(c)(1) of the Bank Holding Company Act from the prohibition of acquisition of nonbanking interests in section 4(a)(1) of that Act. The bank holding company, however, is entitled to the benefit of the exemption in section 4(c)(4) of the Act. That section exempts from section 4(a) "shares which are of the kinds and amounts eligible for investment by National banking associations under the provisions of section 5136 of the Revised Statutes". Section 5136 provides, in part, that: "Except as hereinafter provided or otherwise permitted by law, nothing herein contained shall authorize the purchase by the association for its own account of any shares of stock of any corporation." As the provisions of section 2(a) of the Bank Service Corporation Act and its legislative history make it clear that shares of a bank service corporation are of a kind eligible for investment by national banks under section 5136, it follows that the direct or indirect ownership on control of such shares by a bank holding company are permissible within the amount limitation discussed in paragraph (d) of this section.

(d) Limit on investment by bank holding company system in stock of bank service corporation. (1) In the situation presented by paragraph (c) the bank holding company clearly owns or controls, directly or indirectly, all of the stock of the bank service corporation. The remaining question, therefore, is whether the total direct and indirect investment of the bank holding company in the bank service corporation exceeds the amount permissible under the Bank Holding Company Act.

(2) The effect of sections 4(a)(1) and 4(c)(4) of the Bank Holding Company Act is to limit the amount of shares of a bank service corporation that a bank holding company may own or control, directly or indirectly, to the amount eligible for investment by a national bank, as previously indicated. Under section 2(a) of the Bank Service Corporation Act, the amount of shares of a bank service corporation eligible for investment by a national bank may not exceed "10 per centum [of the bank's] * * * paid-in and unimpaired capital and unimpaired surplus".

(3) The Board's view is that this aspect of the matter should be determined in accordance with the principles set forth in § 225.111, as revised (27 FR 12671), involving the application of sections 4(a)(1) and 4(c)(4) of the Bank Holding Company Act in the light of section 302(b) of the Small Business Investment Act limiting the amount eligible for investment by a national bank in the shares of a small business investment company to two percent of the bank's "capital and surplus".

(4) Except for the differences in the percentage figures, the investment limitation in section 302(b) of the Small Business Investment Act is essentially the same as the investment limitation in section 2(a) of the Bank Service Corporation Act since, as an accounting matter and for the purposes under consideration, "capital and surplus" may be regarded as equivalent in meaning to "paid-in and unimpaired capital and unimpaired surplus." Accordingly, the maximum permissible investment by a bank holding company system in the stock of a bank service corporation should be determined in accordance with the formula prescribed in § 222.111.

§ 225.118 Computer services for customers of subsidiary banks.

(a) The question has been presented to the Board of Governors whether a wholly-owned nonbanking subsidiary ("service company") of a bank holding company, which is now exempt from the prohibitions of section 4 of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 ("the Act") because its sole business is the providing of services for the holding company and the latter's subsidiary banks, would lose its exempt status if it should provide data processing services for customers of the subsidiary banks.

(b) The Board understood from the facts presented that the service company owns a computer which it utilizes to furnish data processing services for the subsidiary banks of its parent holding company. Customers of these banks have requested that the banks provide for them computerized billing, accounting, and financial records maintenance services. The banks wish to utilize the computer services of the service company in providing these and other services of a similar nature. It is proposed that, in each instance where a subsidiary bank undertakes to provide such services, the bank will enter into a contract directly with the customer and then arrange to have the service company perform the services for it, the bank. In no case will the service company provide services for anyone other than its affiliated banks. Moreover, it will not hold itself out as, nor will its parent corporation or affiliated banks represent it to be, authorized or willing to provide services for others.

(c) Section 4(c)(1) of the Act permits a holding company to own shares in "any company engaged solely * * * in the business of furnishing services to or performing services for such holding company and banks with respect to which it is a bank holding company * * *." The Board has ruled heretofore that the term "services" as used in section 4(c)(1) is to be read as relating to those services (excluding "closely related" activities of "a financial, fiduciary, or insurance nature" within the meaning of section 4(c)(6)) which a bank itself can provide for its customers (§ 225.104). A determination as to whether a particular service may legitimately be rendered or performed by a bank for its customers must be made in the light of applicable Federal or State statutory or regulatory provisions. In the case of a State-chartered bank, the laws of the State in which the bank operates, together with any interpretations thereunder rendered by appropriate bank authorities, would govern the right of the bank to provide a particular service. In the case of a national bank, a similar determination would require reference to provisions of Federal law relating to the establishment and operation of national banks, as well as to pertinent rulings or interpretations promulgated thereunder.

(d) Accordingly, on the assumption that all of the services to be performed are of the kinds that the holding company's subsidiary banks may render for their customers under applicable Federal or State law, the Board concluded that the rendition of such services by the service company for its affiliated banks would not adversely affect its exempt status under section 4(c)(1) of the Act.

(e) In arriving at the above conclusion, the Board emphasized that its views were premised explicitly upon the facts presented to it, and particularly its understanding that banks are permitted, under applicable Federal or State law to provide the proposed computer services. The Board emphasized also that in respect to the service company's operations, there continues in effect the requirement under section 4(c)(1) that the service company engage solely in the business of furnishing services to or performing services for the bank holding company and its subsidiary banks. The Board added that any substantial change in the facts that had been presented might require re-examination of the service company's status under section 4(c)(1).

§ 225.121 Acquisition of Edge corporation affiliate by State member banks of registered bank holding company.

(a) The Board has been asked whether it is permissible for the commercial banking affiliates of a bank holding company registered under the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, as amended, to acquire and hold the shares of the holding company's Edge corporation subsidiary organized under section 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act.

(b) Section 9 of the Bank Holding Company Act amendments of 1966 (Pub. L. 89-485, approved July 1, 1966) repealed section 6 of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956. That rendered obsolete the Board's interpretation of section 6 that was published in the March 1966 Federal Reserve Bulletin, page 339 (§ 225.120). Thus, so far as Federal Banking law applicable to State member banks is concerned, the answer to the foregoing question depends on the provisions of section 23A of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended by the 1966 amendments to the Bank Holding Company Act. By its specific terms, the provisions of section 23A do not apply to an affiliate organized under section 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act.

(c) Accordingly, the Board concludes that, except for such restrictions as may exist under applicable State law, it would be legally permissible by virtue of paragraph 20 of section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act for any or all of the State member banks that are affiliates of a registered bank holding company to acquire and hold shares of the Edge corporation subsidiary of the bank holding company within the amount limitation in the last sentence of paragraph 12 of section 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act.

§ 225.122 Bank holding company ownership of mortgage companies.

(a) The Board of Governors recently considered whether a bank holding may acquire, either directly or through a subsidiary, the stock of a so-called "mortgage company" that would be operated on the following basis: The company would solicit mortgage loans on behalf of a bank in the holding company system, assemble credit information, make property inspections and appraisals, and secure title information. The company would also participate in the preparation of applications for mortgage loans, which it would submit, together with recommendations with respect to action thereon, to the bank, which alone would decide whether to make any or all of the loans requested. The company would in addition solicit investors to purchase mortgage loans from the bank and would seek to have such investors contract with the bank for the servicing of such loans.

(b) Under section 4 of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1843), a bank holding company is generally prohibited from acquiring "direct or indirect ownership" of stock of nonbanking corporations. The two exceptions principally involved in the question presented are with respect to (1) stock that is eligible for investment by a national bank (section 4(c)(5) of the Act) and (2) shares of a company "furnishing services to or performing services for such bank holding company or its banking subsidiaries" (section 4(c)(1)(C) of the Act).

(c) The Board has previously indicated its view that a national bank is forbidden by the so-called "stock-purchase prohibition" of paragraph "Seventh" of section 5136 of the Revised Statutes (12 U.S.C. 24) to purchase "for its own account * * * any shares of stock of any corporation" except (1) to the extent permitted by specific provisions of Federal law or (2) as comprised within the concept of "such incidental powers as shall be necessary to carry on the business of banking" referred to in the first sentence of said paragraph "Seventh". There is no specific statutory provision authorizing a national bank to purchase stock in a mortgage company, and in the Board's view such purchase may not properly be regarded as authorized under the "incidental powers" clause. (See 1966 Federal Reserve Bulletin 1151; 12 CFR 208.119.) Accordingly, a bank holding company may not acquire stock in a mortgage company on the basis of the section 4(c)(5) exemption.

(d) However, the Board does not believe that such conclusion prejudices consideration of the question whether such a company is within the section 4(c)(1)(C) "servicing exemption". The basic purpose of section 4 of the Act is to confine a bank holding company's activities to the management and control of banks. In determining whether an activity in which a bank could itself engage is within the servicing exemption, the question is simply whether such activity may appropriately be considered as "furnishing services to or performing services for" a bank.

(e) As indicated in the Board's interpretation published in the 1958 Federal Reserve Bulletin at page 431 (12 CFR 225.104), the legislative history of the servicing exemption indicates that it includes the following activities: "auditing, appraising, investment counselling" and "advertising, public relations, developing new business, organization, operations, preparing tax returns, and personnel". The legislative history further indicates that some other activities also are within the scope of the exemption. However, the types of servicing permitted under such exemption must be distinguished from activities of a "financial fiduciary, or insurance nature", such as those that might be considered for possible exemption under section 4(c)(8) of the Act.

(f) In considering the interrelation of these exemptions in the light of the purpose of the prohibition against bank holding company interests in nonbanking organizations, the Board has concluded that the appropriate test for determining whether a mortgage company may be considered as within the servicing exemption is whether the company will perform as principal any banking activities—such as receiving deposits, paying checks, extending credit, conducting a trust department, and the like. In other words, if the mortgage company is to act merely as an adjunct to a bank for the purpose of facilitating the banks operations, the company may appropriately be considered as within the scope of the servicing exemption.[1]

(g) On this basis the Board concluded that, insofar as the Bank Holding Company Act is concerned, a bank holding company may acquire, either directly or through a subsidiary, the stock of a mortgage company whose functions are as described in the question presented. On the other hand, in the Board's view, a bank holding company may not acquire, on the basis of the servicing exemption, a mortgage company whose functions include such activities as extending credit for its own account, arranging interim financing, entering into mortgage service contracts on a fee basis, or otherwise performing functions other than solely on behalf of a bank.

§ 225.123 Activities closely related to banking.

(a) Effective June 15, 1971, the Board of Governors has amended § 225.4(a) of Regulation Y to implement its regulatory authority under section 4(c)(8) of the Bank Holding Company Act. In some respects activities determined by the Board to be closely related to banking are described in general terms that will require interpretation from time to time. The Board's views on some questions that have arisen are set forth below.

(b) Section 225.4(a) states that a company whose ownership by a bank holding company is authorized on the basis of that section may engage solely in specified activities. That limitation refers only to activities the authority for which depends on section 4(c)(8) of the Act. It does not prevent a holding company from establishing one subsidiary to engage, for example, in activities specified in § 225.4(a) and also in activities that fall within the scope of section 4(c)(1)(C) of the Act—the "servicing" exemption.

(c) The amendments to § 225.4(a) do not apply to restrict the activities of a company previously approved by the Board on the basis of section 4(c)(8) of the Act. Activities of a company authorized on the basis of section 4(c)(8) either before the 1970 Amendments or pursuant to the amended § 225.4(a) may be shifted in a corporate reorganization to another company within the holding company system without complying with the procedures of § 225.4(b), as long as all the activities of such company are permissible under one of the exemptions in section 4 of the Act.

(d) Under the procedures in § 225.4(a)(c), a holding company that wishes to change the location at which it engages in activities authorized pursuant to § 225.4(a) must publish notice in a newspaper of general circulation in the community to be served. The Board does not regard minor changes in location as within the coverage of that requirement. A move from one site to another within a 1-mile radius would constitute such a minor change if the new site is in the same State.

(e) Data processing: In providing packaged data processing and transmission services for banking, financial and economic data for installation on the premises of the customer, as authorized by § 225.4(a)(8)(ii), a bank holding company should limit its activities to providing facilities that perform banking functions, such as check collection, or other similar functions for customers that are depository or other similar institutions, such as mortgage companies. In addition, the Board regards the following as incidental activities necessary to carry on the permissible activities in this area:

[1] Insofar as the 1958 interpretation referred to above suggested that the branch banking laws are an appropriate general test for determining the scope of the servicing exemption, such interpretation is hereby modified. In view of the different purposes to be served by the branch banking laws and by section 4 of the Bank Holding Company Act, the Board has concluded that basing determinations under the latter solely on the basis of determinations under the former is inappropriate.

(1) Providing excess capacity, not limited to the processing or transmission of banking, financial or economic data on data processing or transmission equipment or facilities used in connection with permissible data processing and data transmission activities, where:

(A) Equipment is not purchased solely for the purpose of creating excess capacity;

(B) Hardware is not offered in connection therewith; and

(C) Facilities for the use of the excess capacity do not include the provision of any software, other than systems software (including language), network communications support, and the operating personnel and documentation necessary for the maintenance and use of these facilities.

(2) Providing by-products of permissible data processing and data transmission activities, where not designed, or appreciably enhanced, for the purpose of marketability.

(3) Furnishing any data processing service upon request of a customer if such data processing service is not otherwise reasonably available in the relevant market area; and

(4) Supplying formatting for computer output microfilm and supplying computer output microfilm only as an output option for data otherwise being permissibly processed by the holding company system.

In order to eliminate or reduce to an insignificant degree any possibility of unfair competition where services, facilities, by-products or excess capacity are provided by a bank holding company's nonbank subsidiary or related entity, the entity providing the services, facilities, by-products and/or excess capacity should have separate books and financial statements, and should provide these books and statements to any new or renewal customer requesting financial data. Consolidated or other financial statements of the bank holding company should not be provided unless specifically requested by the customer.

§ 225.124 Foreign bank holding companies.

(a) Effective December 1, 1971, the Board of Governors has added a new § 225.4(g) to Regulation Y implementing its authority under section 4(c)(9) of the Bank Holding Company Act. The Board's views on some questions that have arisen in connection with the meaning of terms used in § 225.4(g) are set forth in paragraphs (b) through (g) of this section.

(b) The term "activities" refers to nonbanking activities and does not include the banking activities that foreign banks conduct in the United States through branches or agencies licensed under the banking laws of any State of the United States or the District of Columbia.

(c) A company (including a bank holding company) will not be deemed to be engaged in "activities" in the United States merely because it exports (or imports) products to (or from) the United States, or furnishes services or finances goods or services in the United States, from locations outside the United States. A company is engaged in "activities" in the United States if it owns, leases, maintains, operates, or controls any of the following types of facilities in the United States:

(1) A factory,

(2) A wholesale distributor or purchasing agency,

(3) A distribution center,

(4) A retail sales or service outlet,

(5) A network of franchised dealers,

(6) A financing agency, or

(7) Similar facility for the manufacture, distribution, purchasing, furnishing, or financing of goods or services locally in the United States.

A company will not be considered to be engaged in "activities" in the United States if its products are sold to independent importers, or are distributed through independent warehouses, that are not controlled or franchised by it.

(d) In the Board's opinion, section 4 (a)(1) of the Bank Holding Company Act applies to ownership or control of shares of stock as an investment and does not apply to ownership or control of shares of stock in the capacity of an underwriter or dealer in securities. Underwriting or dealing in shares of stock are nonbanking activities prohibited to bank holding companies by section 4(a)(2) of the Act, unless otherwise exempted. Under § 225.4(g) of Regulation Y, foreign bank holding companies are exempt from the prohibitions of section 4 of the Act with respect to their activities outside the United States; thus foreign bank holding companies may underwrite or deal in shares of stock (including shares of United States issuers) to be distributed outside the United States, provided that shares so acquired are disposed of within a reasonable time.

(e) A foreign bank holding company does not "indirectly" own voting shares by reason of the ownership or control of such voting shares by any company in which it has a noncontrolling interest. A foreign bank holding company may, however, "indirectly" control such voting shares if its noncontrolling interest in such company is accompanied by other arrangements that, in the Board's judgment, result in control of such shares by the bank holding company. The Board has made one exception to this general approach. A foreign bank holding company will be considered to indirectly own or control voting shares of a bank if that bank holding company acquires more than 5 percent of any class of voting shares of another bank holding company. A bank holding company may make such an acquisition only with prior approval of the Board.

(f) A company is "indirectly" engaged in activities in the United States if any of its subsidiaries (whether or not incorporated under the laws of this country) is engaged in such activities. A company is not "indirectly" engaged in activities in the United States by reason of a noncontrolling interest in a company engaged in such activities.

(g) Under the foregoing rules, a foreign bank holding company may have a noncontrolling interest in a foreign company that has a U.S. subsidiary (but is not engaged in the securities business in the United States) if more than half of the foreign company's consolidated assets and revenues are located and derived outside the United States. For the purpose of such determination, the assets and revenues of the United States subsidiary would be counted among the consolidated assets and revenues of the foreign company to the extent required or permitted by generally accepted accounting principles in the United States. The foreign bank holding company would not, however, be permitted to "indirectly" control voting shares of the said U.S. subsidiary, as might be the case if there are other arrangements accompanying its noncontrolling interest in the foreign parent company that, in the Board's judgment, result in control of such shares by the bank holding company.

(a) Effective February 1, 1972, the Board of Governors amended § 225.4(a) of Regulation Y to add "serving as investment adviser, as defined in section 2(a)(20) of the Investment Company Act of 1940, to an investment company registered under that Act" to the list of activities it has determined to be so closely related to banking or managing or controlling banks as to be a proper incident thereto. During the course of the Board's consideration of this amendment several questions arose as to the scope of such activity, particularly in view of certain restrictions imposed by sections 16, 20, 21, and 32 of the Banking Act of 1933 (12 U.S.C. 24, 377, 378, 78) (sometimes referred to hereinafter as the "Glass-Steagall Act provisions") and the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in Investment Company Institute v. Camp, 401 U.S. 617 (1971). The Board's views with respect to some of these questions are set forth below.

(b) It is clear from the legislative history of the Bank Holding Company Act Amendments of 1970 (84 Stat. 1760) that the Glass-Steagall Act provisions were not intended to be affected thereby. Accordingly, the Board regards the Glass-Steagall Act provisions and the Board's prior interpretations thereof as applicable to a holding company's activities as an investment adviser. Consistently with the spirit and purpose of the Glass-Steagall Act, this interpretation applies to all bank holding companies registered under the Bank Holding Company Act irrespective of whether they have subsidiaries that are member banks.

(c) Under § 225.4(a)(5), as amended, bank holding companies (which term, as used herein, includes both their bank and nonbank subsidiaries) may, in accordance with the provisions of § 225.4 (b), act as investment advisers to various types of investment companies, such as "open-end" investment companies (commonly referred to as "mutual funds") and "closed-end" investment companies. Briefly, a mutual fund is an investment company which, typically, is continuously engaged in the issuance of its shares and stands ready at any time to redeem the securities as to which it is the issuer; a closed-end investment company typically does not issue shares after its initial organization except at infrequent intervals and does not stand ready to redeem its shares.

(d) The Board intends that a bank holding company may exercise all functions that are permitted to be exercised by an "investment adviser" under the Investment Company Act of 1940, except to the extent limited by the Glass-Steagall Act provisions, as described, in part, hereinafter.

(e) The Board recognizes that presently most mutual funds are organized, sponsored and managed by investment advisers with which they are affiliated and that their securities are distributed to the public by such affiliated investment advisers, or subsidiaries or affiliates thereof. However, the Board believes that (1) the Glass-Steagall Act provisions do not permit a bank holding company to perform all such functions, and (2) it is not necessary for a bank holding company to perform all such functions in order to engage effectively in the described activity.

(f) In the Board's opinion, the Glass-Steagall Act provisions, as interpreted by the U.S. Supreme Court, forbid a bank holding company to sponsor, organize or control a mutual fund. However, the Board does not believe that such restrictions apply to closed-end investment companies as long as such companies are not primarily or frequently engaged in the issuance, sale and distribution of securities. In no case, however, should a bank holding company act as investment adviser to an investment company which has a name that is similar to, or a variation of, the name of the holding company or any of its subsidiary banks.

(g) In view of the potential conflicts of interests that may exist, a bank holding company and its bank and nonbank subsidiaries should not (1) purchase for their own account securities of any investment company for which the bank holding company acts as investment adviser; (2) purchase in their sole discretion, any such securities in a fiduciary capacity (including as managing agent); (3) extend credit to any such investment company; or (4) accept the securities of any such investment company as collateral for a loan which is for the purpose of purchasing securities of the investment company.

(h) A bank holding company should not engage, directly or indirectly, in the sale or distribution of securities of any investment company for which it acts as investment adviser. Prospectuses or sales literature should not be distributed by the holding company, nor should any such literature be made available to the public at any offices of the holding company. In addition, officers and employees of bank subsidiaries should be instructed not to express any opinion with respect to advisability of purchase of securities of any investment company for which the bank holding company acts as investment adviser. Customers of banks in a bank holding company system who request information on an unsolicited basis regarding any investment company for which the bank holding company acts as investment adviser may be furnished the name and address of the fund and its underwriter or distributing company, but the names of bank customers should not be furnished by the bank holding company to the fund or its distributor. Further, a bank holding company should not act as investment adviser to a mutual fund which has offices in any building which is likely to be identified in the public's mind with the bank holding company.

(i) Acting in such capacities as registrar, transfer agent, or custodian for an investment company is not a selling activity and is permitted under § 225.4(a)(4) of Regulation Y. However, in view of potential conflicts of interests, a bank holding company which acts both as custodian and investment adviser for an investment company should exercise care to maintain at a minimal level demand deposit accounts of the investment company which are placed with a bank affiliate and should not invest cash funds of the investment company in time deposit accounts (including certificates of deposit) of any bank affiliate.

§ 225.126 Activities not closely related to banking.

Pursuant to section 4(c)(8) of the Bank Holding Company Act and § 225.4(a) of Regulation Y, the Board of Governors has determined that the following activities are not so closely related to banking or managing or controlling banks as to be a proper incident thereto:

(a) Insurance premium funding—that is, the combined sale of mutual funds and insurance.

(b) Underwriting life insurance that is not sold in connection with a credit transaction by a bank holding company, or a subsidiary thereof.

(c) Real estate brokerage (see 1972 Fed. Res. Bulletin 428).

(d) Land development (see 1972 Fed. Res. Bulletin 429).

(e) Real estate syndication.

(f) Management consulting (see 1972 Fed. Res. Bulletin 571).

(g) Property management (see 1972 Fed. Res. Bulletin 652).

(h) Operation of savings and loan associations.[1] (See 1972 Fed. Res. Bulletin 717.)

§ 225.127 Investment in corporations or projects designed primarily to promote community welfare.

(a) Under § 225.4(a)(7) of Regulation Y, a bank holding company may, in accordance with the provisions of § 225.4(b), engage in "making equity and debt investments in corporations or projects designed primarily to promote community welfare, such as the economic rehabilitation and development of low-income areas." The Board included that activity among those the Board has determined to be so closely related to banking or managing or controlling banks as be a proper incident thereto, in order to permit bank holding companies to fulfill their civic responsibilities. As indicated hereinafter in this interpretation, the Board intends § 225.4(a)(7) to enable bank holding companies to take an active role in the quest for solutions to the Nation's social problems. Although the interpretation primarily focuses on low- and moderate-income housing, it is not intended to limit projects under § 225.4(a)(7) to that area. Other investments primarily designed to promote community welfare are considered permissable, but have not been defined in order to provide bank holding companies flexibility in approaching community problems. For example, bank holding companies may utilize this flexibility to provide new and creative approaches to the promotion of employment opportunities for low-income persons. Bank holding companies possess a unique combination of financial and managerial resources making them particularly suited for a meaningful and substantial role in remedying our social ills. Section 225.4(a)(7) is intended to provide an opportunity for them to assume such a role.

(b) Under the authority of § 225.4(a)(7), a bank holding company may invest in community development corporations established pursuant to Federal or State law. A bank holding company may also participate in other civic projects, such as a municipal parking facility sponsored by a local civic organization as a means to promote greater public use of the community's facilities.

[1] As indicated in its statement announcing this action, published in the FEDERAL REGISTER of August 10, 1972 (37 FR 16133), this activity may be the subject of further consideration by the Board.

(c) Within the category of permissible investments under § 225.4(a)(7) are investments in projects to construct or rehabilitate multifamily low- or moderate-income housing with respect to which a mortgage is insured under section 221(d)(3), 221(d)(4), or 236 of the National Housing Act (12 U.S.C. 1701) and investments in projects to construct or rehabilitate low- or moderate-income housing which is financed or assisted by direct loan, tax abatement, or insurance under provisions of State or local law, similar to the aforementioned Federal programs, provided that, with respect to all such projects the owner is, by statute, regulation, or regulatory authority, limited as to the rate of return on his investment in the project, as to rentals or occupancy charges for units in the project, and in such other respects as would be a "limited dividend corporation" (as defined by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development).

(d) Investments in other projects that may be considered to be designed primarily to promote community welfare include but are not limited to: (1) Projects for the construction or rehabilitation of housing for the benefit of persons of low- or moderate-income, (2) projects for the construction or rehabilitation of ancillary local commercial facilities necessary to provide goods or services principally to persons residing in low- or moderate-income housing, and (3) projects designed explicitly to create improved job opportunities for low- or moderate-income groups (for example, minority equity investments, on a temporary basis, in small or medium-sized locally-controlled businesses in low-income urban or other economically depressed areas). In the case of de novo projects, the copy of the notice with respect to such other projects which is to be furnished to Reserve Banks in accordance with the provisions of § 225.4(b)(1) should be accompanied by a memorandum which demonstrates that such projects meet the objectives of § 225.4(a)(7).

(e) Investments in corporations or projects organized to build or rehabilitate high-income housing, or commercial, office, or industrial facilities that are not designed explicitly to create improved job opportunities for low-income persons shall be presumed not to be designed primarily to promote community welfare, unless there is substantial evidence to the contrary, even though to some extent the investment may benefit the community.

(a) Effective September 1, 1971, the Board of Governors amended § 225.4(a) of Regulation Y to add specified insurance agency activities to the list of activities the Board has determined to be so closely related to banking or managing or controlling banks as to be a proper incident thereto. In the course of administering this regulation, a number of questions have arisen concerning the scope and terms of the Board's regulation. The Board's views on some of these questions are set forth below.

(b) Section 225.4(a)(9)(i)(a): Insurance "directly related to an extension of credit by a bank or a bank-related firm". (1) This provision is designed to permit the sale, by a bank holding company system, of insurance that supports the lending transactions of a bank or bank-related firm in the holding company system. The Board regards the sale of insurance as directly related to an extension of credit by a bank or bank-related firm where (i) the insurance assures repayment of an extension of credit by the holding company system in the event of death or disability of the borrower (for example, credit life and credit accident and health insurance); or (ii) the insurance protects collateral in which the bank or bank-related firm has a security interest as a result of its extension of credit; or (iii) the insurance is other insurance which is sold to individual borrowers in conjunction with or as part of an insurance package (as a matter of general practice) with insurance protecting the collateral in which a bank or bank-related firm has a security interest as a result of its extension of credit. Examples that fall within subdivision (iii) of this subparagraph are: (a) Liability insurance sold in conjunction with insurance relating to physical damage of an automobile when the purchase of such automobile is financed by a bank or bank-related firm; and (b) a homeowner's insurance policy with respect to a residence mortgaged to a bank or bank-related firm.

(2) Other types of insurance may be directly related to an extension of credit. A bank holding company applying to engage in the sale of such other types should furnish information showing that such insurance is so directly related.

(3) The Board generally regards insurance protecting collateral where the security interest of a bank or bank-related firm was obtained by purchase rather than by a direct extension of credit by the holding company system as not being directly related to an extension of credit by a bank or bank-related firm. However, if such security interests are purchased on a continuing basis from a firm or an individual and the interval between the creation of the security interest and its subsequent purchase is minimal, the Board may regard such purchase as an extension of credit. Full details of the transactions should be provided to support a holding company's contention that such insurance sales are directly related to an extension of credit.

(c) *Section 225.4(a)(9)(i)(b): Insurance "directly related to the provision of other financial services by a bank or * * * bank-related firm".* This provision is designed to permit the sale by a bank holding company system of insurance in connection with bank-related services (rendered by a member of the holding company system) other than an extension of credit. Among the types of insurance the Board regards as directly related to such services are: (1) Insurance against loss of securities held for safekeeping; (2) insurance for valuables in a safe deposit box; (3) life insurance equal to the difference between the maturity value of a deposit plan for periodic deposits over a specified term and the balance in the account at the time of the depositor's death; (4) in connection with mortgage loan servicing that is provided by a bank or bank-related firm, insurance on the mortgaged property and/or insurance on the mortgagor to the extent of the outstanding balance of the credit extension, Provided, That the mortgagee is a beneficiary under such types of insurance policies; and (5) insurance directly related to the provision of trust services if the sale of such insurance is permitted by the trust instruments and under State law.

[Reg. Y, 37 FR 18520, Sept. 13, 1972, as amended at 46 FR 38495, July 28, 1981]

§ 225.129 Activities closely related to banking.

Courier activities. The Board's amendment of § 225.4(a), which adds courier services to the list of closely related activities is intended to permit holding companies to transport time critical materials of limited intrinsic value of the types utilized by banks and bank-related firms in performing their business activities. Such transportation activities are of particular importance in the check clearing process of the banking system, but are also important to the performance of other activities, including the processing of financially-related economic data. The authority is not intended to permit holding companies to engage generally in the provision of transportation services.

During the course of the Board's proceedings pertaining to courier services, objections were made that courier activities were not a proper incident to banking because of the possibility that holding companies would or had engaged in unfair competitive practices. The Board believes that adherence to the following principles will eliminate or reduce to an insignificant degree any possibility of unfair competition:

a. A holding company courier subsidiary established under section 4(c)(8) should be a separate, independent corporate entity, not merely a servicing arm of a bank.

b. As such, the subsidiary should exist as a separate, profit-oriented operation and should not be subsidized by the holding company system.

c. Services performed should be explicitly priced, and shall not be paid for indirectly, for example, on the basis of deposits maintained at or loan arrangements with affiliated banks.

Accordingly, entry of holding companies into courier activities on the basis of section 4(c)(8) will be conditioned as follows:

1. The courier subsidiary shall perform services on an explicit fee basis and shall be structured as an individual profit center designed to be operated on a profitable basis. The Board may regard operating losses sustained over an extended period as being inconsistent with continued authority to engage in courier activities.

2. Courier services performed on behalf of an affiliate's customer (such as the carriage of incoming cash letters) shall be paid for by the customer. Such payments shall not be made indirectly, for example, on the basis of imputed earnings on deposits maintained at or of loan arrangements with subsidiaries of the holding company. Concern has also been expressed that bank-affiliated courier services will be utilized to gain a competitive advantage over firms competing with other holding company affiliates. To reduce the possibility that courier affiliates might be so employed, the Board will impose the following third condition:

3. The courier subsidiary shall, when requested by any bank or any data processing firm providing financially-related data processing services which firm competes with a banking or data processing subsidiary of Applicant, furnish comparable service at comparable rates, unless compliance with such request would be beyond the courier subsidiary's practical capacity. In this regard, the courier subsidiary should make known to the public its minimum rate schedule for services and its general pricing policies thereto. The courier subsidiary is also expected to maintain for a reasonable period of time (not less than two years) each request denied with the reasons for such denial.

§ 225.131 Activities closely related to banking.

(a) Bank management consulting advice. The Board's amendment of § 225.4(a), which adds bank management consulting advice to the list of closely related activities, described in general terms the nature of such activity. This interpretation is intended to explain in greater detail certain of the terms in the amendment.

(b) It is expected that bank management consulting advice would include, but not be limited to, advice concerning: Bank operations, systems and procedures; computer operations and mechanization; implementation of electronic funds transfer systems; site planning and evaluation; bank mergers and the establishment of new branches; operation and management of a trust department; international banking; foreign exchange transactions; purchasing policies and practices; cost analysis, capital adequacy and planning; auditing; accounting procedures; tax planning; investment advice (as authorized in § 225.4(a)(5)); credit policies and administration, including credit documentation, evaluation, and debt collection; product development, including specialized lending provisions; marketing operations, including research, market development and advertising programs; personnel operations, including recruiting, training, evaluation and compensation; and security measures and procedures.

(c) In permitting bank holding companies to provide management consulting advice to nonaffiliated "banks", the Board intends such advice to be given only to an institution that both accepts deposits that the depositor has a legal right to withdraw on demand and engages in the business of making commercial loans. It is also intended that such management consulting advice may be provided to the "operations subsidiaries" of a bank, since such subsidiaries perform functions that a bank is empowered to perform directly at locations at which the bank is authorized to engage in business (§ 250.141 of this chapter).

(d) Although a bank holding company providing management consulting advice is prohibited by the regulation from owning or controlling, directly or indirectly, any equity securities in a client bank, this limitation does not apply to shares of a client bank acquired, directly or indirectly, as a result of a default on a debt previously contracted. This limitation is also inapplicable to shares of a client bank acquired by a bank holding company, directly or indirectly, in a fiduciary capacity: Provided, That the bank holding company or its subsidiary does not have sole discretionary authority to vote such shares or shares held with sole voting rights constitute not more than five percent of the outstanding voting shares of a client bank.

§ 225.132 Acquisition of assets.

(a) From time to time questions have arisen as to whether and under what circumstances a bank holding company engaged in nonbank activities, directly or indirectly through a subsidiary, pursuant to section 4(c)(8) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1843(c)(3)), may acquire the assets and employees of another company, without first obtaining Board approval pursuant to section 4(c) (8) and the Board's Regulation Y (12 CFR 225.4(b)).

(b) In determining whether Board approval is required in connection with the acquisition of assets, it is necessary to determine (a) whether the acquisition is made in the ordinary course of business[1] or (b) whether it constitutes the acquisition, in whole or in part, of a going concern.[2]

(c) The following examples illustrate transactions where prior Board approval will generally be required:

(1) The transaction involves the acquisition of all or substantially all of the assets of a company, or a subsidiary, division, department or office thereof.

(2) The transaction involves the acquisition of less than "substantially all" of the assets of a company, or a subsidiary, division, department or office thereof, the operations of which are being terminated or substantially discontinued by the seller, but such asset acquisition is significant in relation to the size of the same line of nonbank activity of the holding company (e.g., consumer finance mortgage banking, data processing). For purposes of this interpretation, an acquisition would generally be presumed to be significant if the book value of the nonbank assets being acquired exceeds 20 percent of the book value of the nonbank assets of the holding company or nonbank subsidiary comprising the same line of activity.

(3) The transaction involves the acquisition of assets for resale and the sale of such assets is not a normal business activity of the acquiring holding company.

(4) The transaction involves the acquisition of the assets of a company, or a subsidiary, division, department or office thereof, and a major purpose of the transaction is to hire some of the seller's principal employees who are expert, skilled and experienced in the business of the company being acquired.

(d) In some cases it may be difficult, due to the wide variety of circumstances involving possible acquisition of assets, to determine whether such acquisitions require prior Board approval. Bank holding companies are encouraged to contact their local Reserve Bank for guidance where doubt exists as to whether such an acquisition is in the ordinary course of business or an acquisition, in whole or in part, of a going concern.

§ 225.134 Escrow arrangements involving bank stock resulting in a violation of the Bank Holding Company Act.

(a) In connection with a recent application to become a bank holding company, the Board considered a situation in which shares of a bank were acquired and then placed in escrow by the applicant prior to the Board's approval of the application. The facts indicated that the applicant company had incurred debt for the purpose of acquiring bank shares and immediately after the purchase the shares were transferred to an unaffiliated escrow agent with instructions to retain possession of the shares pending Board action on the company's application to become a bank holding company. The escrow agreement provided that, if the application were approved by the Board, the escrow agent was to return the shares to the applicant company; and, if the application were denied, the escrow agent was to deliver the shares to the applicant company's shareholders upon their assumption of debt originally incurred by the applicant in the acquisition of the bank shares. In addition, the escrow agreement provided that, while the shares were held in escrow, the applicant could not exercise voting or any other ownership rights with respect to those shares.

[1] Section 225.4(c)(3) of the Board's Regulation Y (12 CFR 225.4(c)(3)) generally prohibits a bank holding company or its subsidiary engaged in activities pursuant to authority of section 4(c)(8) of the Act from being a party to any merger "or acquisition of assets other than in the ordinary course of business" without prior Board approval.

[2] In accordance with the provisions of section 4(c)(8) of the Act and § 225.4(b) of Regulation Y, the acquisition of a going concern requires prior Board approval.

(b) On the basis of the above facts, the Board concluded that the company had violated the prior approval provisions of section 3 of the Bank Holding Company Act ("Act") at the time that it made the initial acquisition of bank shares and that, for purposes of the Act, the company continued to control those shares in violation of the Act. In view of these findings, individuals and bank holding companies should not enter into escrow arrangements of the type described herein, or any similar arrangement, without securing the prior approval of the Board, since such action could constitute a violation of the Act.

(c) While the above represents the Board's conclusion with respect to the particular escrow arrangement involved in the proposal presented, the Board does not believe that the use of an escrow arrangement would always result in a violation of the Act. For example, it appears that a transaction whereby bank shares are placed in escrow pending Board action on an application would not involve a violation of the Act so long as title to such shares remains with the seller during the pendency of the application; there are no other indicia that the applicant controls the shares held in escrow; and, in the event of a Board denial of the application, the escrow agreement provides that the shares would be returned to the seller.

§ 225.135 Acting as underwriter (reinsurer) for credit life and credit accident and health (disability) insurance—assuring continuing public benefits.

(a) Under the provisions of section 4 (c)(8) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, as amended ["Act"] (12 U.S.C. 1843), a bank holding company may acquire shares of any company the activities of which the Board after due notice and opportunity for hearing has determined (by order or regulation) to be so closely related to banking or managing or controlling banks as to be a proper incident thereto. In making its determination, the Board is required to consider whether the performance of a particular activity by an affiliate of a holding company can reasonably be expected to produce benefits to the public that outweigh possible adverse effects.

(b) On December 11, 1972, pursuant to this authority, the Board amended its Regulation Y, by adding § 225.4(a)(10), to authorize as a permissible activity for bank holding companies the underwriting of credit life insurance and credit accident and health insurance that is directly related to extensions of credit by the bank holding company system. In authorizing this activity, the Board, in a footnote to § 225.4(a)(10) of Regulation Y (fn. 7), stated:

> To assure that engaging in the underwriting of credit life and credit accident and health insurance can reasonably be expected to be in the public interest, the Board will only approve applications in which an applicant demonstrates that approval will benefit the consumer or result in other public benefits. Normally such a showing would be made by a projected reduction in rates or increase in policy benefits to bank holding company performance of this service.

(c) In the course of considering a recent application, the Board became aware of pending legislation in the applicant's State that, if adopted, would provide new, lower premium rate standards applicable to the sale of such credit-related insurance. Because the applicant had already proposed, as one of the public benefits of its application, that it would offer premium rates below the then-existing State rates generally being charged by others, enactment of the legislation would have had the effect of nullifying the proposed public benefits unless the applicant were to commit to lower its rates, concurrently, so as to assure the continuation of meaningful public benefits. Accordingly, the Board's Order granting the application made clear that the applicant's obligation to offer lower rates was a continuing one.

(d) While the Board does assure that such a public benefit exists at the time of approval of a credit insurance underwriting application, the Board is also concerned that this public benefit be maintained on a continuing basis, not only by new applicants, but by those applicants who have heretofore received approval of such applications. In the event that a State's insurance regulations were amended to provide for new premium rate standards that would establish new, and possibly lower, prima facie rates, it is possible that the public benefit involved in a previously approved application could be nullified unless the bank holding company, in light of such new premium rate standards, continued to offer this insurance to their customers at reduced rates. The Board believes that without such a continuing public benefit, a bank holding company's continuing to engage in the activity of underwriting credit insurance would be contrary to the requirements of the Act. In order to avoid such a situation, the Board has interpreted section 4(c)(8) of the Act and § 225.4(a)(10) of Regulation Y and its accompanying footnote as imposing a continuing obligation upon all bank holding companies authorized to underwrite such credit insurance pursuant to section 4(c)(8) of the Act and the Board's Regulation Y, to maintain a public benefit such as was anticipated and considered by the Board at the time of the original approval of each application, and was envisioned by the Board when this activity was adopted as a permissible nonbanking activity under section 4(c)(8) of the Act.[1]

§ 225.137 Acquisitions of shares pursuant to section 4(c)(6) of the Bank Holding Company Act.

(a) The Board has received a request for an interpretation of section 4(c)(6) of the Bank Holding Company Act ("Act")[2] in connection with a proposal under which a number of bank holding companies would purchase interests in an insurance company to be formed for the purpose of underwriting or reinsuring credit life and credit accident and health insurance sold in connection with extensions of credit by the stockholder bank holding companies and their affiliates.

(b) Each participating holding company would own no more than 5 percent of the outstanding voting shares of the company. However, the investment of each holding company would be represented by a separate class of voting security, so that each stockholder would own 100 percent of its respective class. The participating companies would execute a formal "Agreement Among Stockholders" under which each would agree to use its best efforts at all times to direct or recommend to customers and clients the placement of their life, accident and health insurance directly or indirectly with the company. Such credit-related insurance placed with the company would be identified in the records of the company as having been originated by the respective stockholder. A separate capital account would be maintained for each stockholder consisting of the original capital contribution increased or decreased from time to time by the net profit or loss resulting from the insurance business attributable to each stockholder. Thus, each stockholder would receive a return on its investment based upon the claims experience and profitability of the insurance business that it had itself generated. Dividends declared by the board of directors of the company would be payable to each stockholder only out of the earned surplus reflected in the respective stockholder's capital account.

[1] Section 4(c)(6) of the Act provides an exemption from the Act's prohibitions on ownership of shares in nonbanking companies for "shares of any company which do not include more than 5 per centum of the outstanding voting shares of such company."

[2] It should be noted that every Board Order granting approval under section 4(c)(8) of the Act contains the following paragraph:

"This determination is subject . . . to the Board's authority to require such modification or termination of the activities of a holding company or any of its subsidiaries as the Board finds necessary to assure compliance with the provisions and purposes of the Act and the Board's regulations and orders issued thereunder, or to prevent evasion thereof."

The Board believes that, even apart from this Interpretation, this language preserves the authority of the Board to require the revisions contemplated in this Interpretation.

(c) It has been requested that the Board issue an interpretation that section 4(c)(6) of the Act provides an exemption under which participating bank holding companies may acquire such interests in the company without prior approval of the Board.

(d) On the basis of a careful review of the documents submitted, in light of the purposes and provisions of the Act, the Board has concluded that section 4(c)(6) of the Act is inapplicable to this proposal and that a bank holding company must obtain the approval of the Board before participating in such a proposal in the manner described. The Board's conclusion is based upon the following considerations:

(1) Section 2(a)(2)(A) of the Act provides that a company is deemed to have control over a second company if it owns or controls "25 per centum or more of any class of voting securities" of the second company. In the case presented, the stock interest of each participant would be evidenced by a different class of stock and each would accordingly, own 100 percent of a class of voting securities of the company. Thus, each of the stockholders would be deemed to "control" the company and prior Board approval would be required for each stockholder's acquisition of stock in the company.

The Board believes that this application of section 2(a)(2)(A) of the Act is particularly appropriate on the facts presented here. The company is, in practical effect, a conglomeration of separate business ventures each owned 100 percent by a stockholder the value of whose economic interest in the company is determined by reference to the profits and losses attributable to its respective class of stock. Furthermore, it is the Board's opinion that this application of section 2(a)(2)(A) is not inconsistent with section 4(c)(6). Even assuming that section (4)(c)(6) is intended to refer to all outstanding voting shares, and not merely the outstanding shares of a particular class of securities, section 4(c)(6) must be viewed as permitting ownership of 5 percent of a company's voting stock only when that ownership does not constitute "control" as otherwise defined in the Act. For example, it is entirely possible that a company could exercise a controlling influence over the management and policies of a second company, and thus "control" that company under the Act's definitions, even though it held less than 5 percent of the voting stock of the second company. To view section 4(c)(6) as an unqualified exemption for holdings of less than 5 percent would thus create a serious gap in the coverage of the Act.

(2) The Board believes that section 4(c)(6) should properly be interpreted as creating an exemption from the general prohibitions in section 4 on ownership of stock in nonbank companies only for passive investments amounting to not more than 5 percent of a company's outstanding stock, and that the exemption was not intended to allow a group of holding companies, through concerted action, to engage in an activity as entrepreneurs. Section 4 of the Act, of course, prohibits not only owning stock in nonbank companies, but engaging in activities other than banking or those activities permitted by the Board under section 4(c)(8) as being closely related to banking. Thus, if a holding company may be deemed to be engaging in an activity through the medium of a company in which it owns less than 5 percent of the voting stock it may nevertheless require Board approval, despite the section 4(c)(6) exemption.

(e) To accept the argument that section 4(c)(6) is an unqualified grant of permission to a bank holding company to own 5 percent of the shares of any nonbanking company irrespective of the nature or extent of the holding company's participation in the affairs of the nonbanking company would, in the Board's view, create the potential for serious and widespread evasion of the Act's controls over nonbanking activities. Such a construction would allow a group of 20 bank holding companies—or even a single bank holding company and one or more nonbank companies—to engage in entrepreneurial joint ventures in businesses prohibited to bank holding companies, a result the Board believes to be contrary to the intent of Congress.

(f) In this proposal, each of the participating stockholders must be viewed as engaging in the business of insurance underwriting. Each stockholder would agree to channel to the company the insurance business it generates, and the value of the interest of each stockholder would be determined by reference to the profitability of the business generated by that stockholder itself. There is no sharing or pooling among stockholders of underwriting risks assumed by the company, and profit or loss from investments is allocated on the basis of each bank holding company's allocable underwriting profit or loss. The interest of each stockholder is thus clearly that of an entrepreneur rather than that of an investor.

(g) Accordingly, on the basis of the factual situation before the Board, and for the reasons summarized above, the Board has concluded that section 4(c)(6) of the Act cannot be interpreted to exempt the ownership of 5 percent of the voting stock of a company under the circumstances described, and that a bank holding company wishing to become a stockholder in a company under this proposal would be required to obtain the Board's approval to do so.

§ 225.138 Statement of policy concerning divestitures by bank holding companies.

(a) From time to time the Board of Governors receives requests from companies subject to the Bank Holding Company Act, or other laws administered by the Board, to extend time periods specified either by statute or by Board order for the divestiture of assets held or activities engaged in by such companies. Such divestiture requirements may arise in a number of ways. For example, divestiture may be ordered by the Board in connection with an acquisition found to have been made in violation of law. In other cases the divestiture may be pursuant to a statutory requirement imposed at the time and amendment to the Act was adopted, or it may be required as a result of a foreclosure upon collateral held by the company or a bank subsidiary in connection with a debt previously contracted in good faith. Certain divestiture periods may be extended in the discretion of the Board, but in other cases the Board may be without statutory authority, or may have only limited authority, to extend a specified divestiture period.

(b) In the past, divestitures have taken many different forms, and the Board has followed a variety of procedures in enforcing divestiture requirements. Because divestitures may occur under widely disparate factual circumstances, and because such forced dispositions may have the potential for causing a serious adverse economic impact upon the divesting company, the Board believes it is important to maintain a large measure of flexibility in dealing with divestitures. For these reasons, there can be no fixed rule as to the type of divestiture that will be appropriate in all situations. For example, where divestiture has been ordered to terminate a control relationship created or maintained in violation of the Act, it may be necessary to impose conditions that will assure that the unlawful relationship has been fully terminated and that it will not arise in the future. In other circumstances, however, less stringent conditions may be appropriate.

(1) Avoidance of delays in divestitures. Where a specific time period has been fixed for accomplishing divestiture, the affected company should endeavor and should be encouraged to complete the divestiture as early as possible during the specific period. There will generally be substantial advantages to divesting companies in taking steps to plan for and accomplish divestitures well before the end of the divestiture period. For example, delays may impair the ability of the company to realize full value for the divested assets, for as the end of the divestiture period approaches the "forced sale" aspect of the divestiture may lead potential buyers to withhold firm offers and to bargain for lower prices. In addition, because some prospective purchasers may themselves require regulatory approval to acquire the divested property, delay by the divesting company may—by leaving insufficient time to obtain such approvals—have the effect of narrowing the range of prospective purchases. Thus, delay in planning for divestiture may increase the likelihood that the company will seek an extension of the time for divestiture if difficulty is encountered in securing a purchaser, and in certain situations, of course, the Board may be without statutory authority to grant extensions.

(2) Submissions and approval of divestiture plans. When a divestiture requirement is imposed, the company affected should generally be asked to submit a divestiture plan promptly for review and approval by the Reserve Bank or the Board. Such a requirement may be imposed pursuant to the Board's authority under section 5(b) of the Bank Holding Company Act to issue such orders as may be necessary to enable the Board to administer and carry out the purposes of the Act and prevent evasions thereof. A divestiture plan should be as specific as possible, and should indicate the manner in which divestiture will be accomplished—for example, by a bulk sale of the assets to a third party, by "spin-off" or distribution of shares to the shareholders of the divesting company, or by termination of prohibited activities. In addition, the plan should specify the steps the company expects to take in effecting the divestiture and assuring its completeness, and should indicate the time schedule for taking such steps. In appropriate circumstances, the divestiture plan should make provision for assuring that "controlling influence" relationships, such as management or financial interlocks, will not continue to exist.

(3) Periodic progress reports. A company subject to a divestiture requirement should generally be required to submit regular periodic reports detailing the steps it has taken to effect divestiture. Such a requirement may be imposed pursuant to the Board's authority under section 5(b) of the Bank Holding Company Act, referred to above, as well as its authority under section 5(c) of the Act to require reports for the purpose of keeping the Board informed as to whether the Act and Board regulations and order thereunder are being complied with. Reports should set forth in detail such matters as the identities of potential buyers who have been approached by the company, the dates of discussions with potential buyers and the identities of the individuals involved in such discussions, the terms of any offers received, and the reasons for rejecting any offers. In addition, the reports should indicate whether the company has employed brokers, investment bankers or others to assist in the divestiture, or its reasons for not doing so, and should describe other efforts by the company to seek out possible purchasers. The purpose of requiring such reports is to insure that substantial and good faith efforts being made by the company to satisfy its divestiture obligations. The frequency of such reports may vary depending upon the nature of the divestiture and the period specified for divestiture. However, such reports should generally not be required less frequently than every three months, and may in appropriate cases be required on a monthly or even more frequent basis. Progress reports as well as divestiture plans should be afforded confidential treatment.

(4) Extensions of divestiture periods. Certain divestiture periods—such as December 31, 1980 deadline for divestitures required by the 1970 Amendments to the Bank Holding Company Act—are not extendable. In such cases it is imperative that divestiture be accomplished in a timely manner. In certain other cases, the Board may have discretion to extend a statutorily prescribed divestiture period within specified limits. For example, under section 4(c)(2) of the Act the Board may extend for three one-year periods the two-year period in which a bank subsidiary of a holding company is otherwise required to divest shares acquired in satisfaction of a debt previously contracted in good faith. In such cases, however, when the permissible extensions expire the Board no longer has discretion to grant further extensions. In still other cases, where a divestiture period is prescribed by the Board, in the exercise of its regulatory judgment, the Board may have broader discretion to grant extensions. Where extensions of specified divestiture periods are permitted by law, extensions should not be granted except under compelling circumstances. Neither unfavorable market conditions, nor the possibility that the company may incur some loss, should alone be viewed as constituting such circumstances—particularly if the company has failed to take earlier steps to accomplish a divestiture under more favorable circumstances. Normally, a request for an extension will not be considered unless the company has established that it has made substantial and continued good faith efforts to accomplish the divestiture within the prescribed period. Furthermore, requests for extensions of divestiture periods must be made sufficiently in advance of the expiration of the prescribed period both to enable the Board to consider the request in an orderly manner and to enable the company to effect a timely divestiture in the event the request for extension is denied. Companies subject to divestiture requirements should be aware that a failure to accomplish a divestiture within the prescribed period may in and of itself be viewed as a separate violation of the Act.

(5) Use of trustees. In appropriate cases a company subject to a divestiture requirement may be required to place the assets subject to divestiture with an independent trustee under instructions to accomplish a sale by a specified date, by public auction if necessary. Such a trustee may be given the responsibility for exercising the voting rights with respect to shares being divested. The use of such a trustee may be particularly appropriate where the divestiture is intended to terminate a control relationship established or maintained in violation of law, or where the divesting company has demonstrated an inability or unwillingness to take timely steps to effect a divestiture.

(6) Presumptions of control. Bank holding companies contemplating a divestiture should be mindful of section 2(g)(3) of the Bank Holding Company Act, which creates a presumption of continued control over the transferred assets where the transferee is indebted to the transferor, or where certain interlocks exist, as well as § 225.2 of Regulation Y, which sets forth certain additional control presumptions. Where one of these presumptions has arisen with respect to divested assets, the divestiture will not be considered as complete until the presumption has been overcome. It should be understood that the inquiry into the termination of control relationships is not limited by the statutory and regulatory presumptions of control, and that the Board may conclude that a control relationship still exists even though the presumptions do not apply.

(7) Role of the Reserve Banks. The Reserve Banks have a responsibility for supervising and enforcing divestitures. Specifically, in coordination with Board staff they should review divestiture plans to assure that proposed divestitures will result in the termination of control relationships and will not create unsafe or unsound conditions in any bank or bank holding company; they should monitor periodic progress reports to assure that timely steps are being taken to effect divestitures; and they should prompt companies to take such steps when it appears that progress is not being made. Where Reserve Banks have delegated authority to extend divestiture periods, that authority should be exercised consistently with this policy statement.

(a) Section 2(g)(3) of the Bank Holding Company Act (the "Act") establishes a statutory presumption that where certain specified relationships exist between a transferor and transferee of shares, the transferor (if it is a bank holding company, or a company that would be such but for the transfer) continues to own or control indirectly the transferred shares.[1] This presumption arises by operation of law, as of the date of the transfer, without the need for any order or determination by the Board. Operation of the presumption may be terminated only by the issuance of a Board determination, after opportunity for hearing, "that the transferor is not in fact capable of controlling the transferee."[2]

(b) The purpose of section 2(g)(3) is to provide the Board an opportunity to assess the effectiveness of divestitures in certain situations in which there may be a risk that the divestiture will not result in the complete termination of a control relationship. By presuming control to continue as a matter of law, section 2(g)(3) operates to allow the effectiveness of the divestiture to be assessed before the divesting company is permitted to act on the assumption that the divestiture is complete. Thus, for example, if a holding company divests its banking interest under circumstances where the presumption of continued control arises, the divesting company must continue to consider itself bound by the Act until an appropriate order is entered by the Board dispelling the presumption. Section 2(g)(3) does not establish a substantive rule that invalidates transfers to which it applies, and in a great many cases the Board has acted favorably on applications to have the presumption dispelled. It merely provides a procedural opportunity for Board consideration of the effect of such transfers in advance of their being deemed effective. Whether or not the statutory presumption arises, the substantive test for assessing the effectiveness of a divestiture is the same—that is, the Board must be assured that all control relationships between the transferor and the transferred property have been terminated and will not be reestablished.[3]

(c) In the course of administering section 2(g)(3) the Board has had several occasions to consider the scope of that section. In addition, questions have been raised by and with the Board's staff as to coverage of the section. Accordingly, the Board believes it would be useful to set forth the following interpretations of section 2(g)(3):

(1) The terms "transferor" and "transferee," as used in section 2(g)(3), include parents and subsidiaries of each. Thus, for example, where a transferee is indebted to a subsidiary of the transferor, or where a specified interlocking relationship exists between the transferor or transferee and a subsidiary of the other (or between subsidiaries of each), the presumption arises. Similarly, if a parent of the

---

[1] The presumption arises where the transferee "is indebted to the transferor, or has one or more officers, directors, trustees, or beneficiaries in common with or subject to control by the transferor."

[2] The Board has delegated to its General Counsel the authority to issue such determinations, 12 CFR 265.2(b)(1).

[3] It should be noted, however, that the Board will require termination of any interlocking management relationships between the divesting company and the transferee or the divested company as a precondition of finding that a divestiture is complete. Similarly, the retention of an economic interest in the divested company that would create an incentive for the divesting company to attempt to influence the management of the divested company will preclude a finding that the divestiture is complete. (See the Board's Order in the matter of "International Bank", 1977 Federal Reserve Bulletin 1106, 1113.)

transferee is indebted to a parent of the transferor, the presumption arises. The presumption of continued control also arises where an interlock or debt relationship is retained between the divesting company and the company being divested, since the divested company will be or may be viewed as a "subsidiary" of the transferee or group of transferees.

(2) The terms "officers," "directors," and "trustees," as used in section 2(g)(3), include persons performing functions normally associated with such positions (including general partners in a partnership and limited partners having a right to participate in the management of the affairs of the partnership) as well as persons holding such positions in an advisory or honorary capacity. The presumption arises not only where the transferee or transferred company has an officer, director or trustee "in common with" the transferor, but where the transferee himself holds such a position with the transferor.[4] It should be noted that where a transfer takes the form of a pro-rata distribution, or "spinoff," of shares to a company's shareholders, officers and directors of the transferor company are likely to receive a portion of such shares. The presumption of continued control would, of course, attach to any shares transferred to officers and directors of the divesting company, whether by "spinoff" or outright sale. However, the presumption will be of legal significance—and will thus require an application under section 2(g)(3)—only where the total number of shares subject to the presumption exceeds one of the applicable thresholds in the Act. For example, where officers and directors of a one-bank holding company receive in the aggregate 25 percent or more of the stock of a bank subsidiary being divested by the holding company, the holding company would be presumed to continue to control the "divested" bank. In such a case it would be necessary for the divesting company to demonstrate that it no longer controls either the divested bank or the officer/director transferees. However, if officers and directors were to receive in the aggregate less than 25 percent of the bank's stock (and no other shares were subject to the presumption), section 2(g)(3) would not have the legal effect of presuming continued control of the bank.[5] In the case of a divestiture of nonbank shares, an application under section 2(g)(3) would be required whenever officers and directors of the divesting company received in the aggregate more than 5 percent of the shares of the company being divested.

(3) Although section 2(g)(3) refers to transfers of "shares" it is not, in the Board's view, limited to disposition of corporate stock. General or limited partnership interests, for example, are included within the term "shares." Furthermore, the transfer of all or substantially all of the assets of a company, or the transfer of such a significant volume of assets that the transfer may in effect constitute the disposition of a separate activity of the company, is deemed by the Board to involve a transfer of "shares" of that company.

(4) The term "indebtedness" giving rise to the presumption of continued control under section 2(g)(3) of the Act is not limited to debt incurred in connection with the transfer; it includes any debt outstanding at the time of transfer from the transferee to the transferor or its subsidiaries. However, the Board believes that not every kind of indebtedness was within the contemplation of the Congress when section 2(g)(3) was adopted. Routine business credit of limited amounts and

[4] It has been suggested that the words "in common with" in section 2(g)(3) evidence an intent to make the presumption applicable only where the transferee is a company having an interlock with the transferor. Such an interpretation would, in the Board's view, create an unwarranted gap in the coverage of section 2(g)(3). Furthermore, because the presumption clearly arises where the transferee is an individual who is indebted to the transferor such an interpretation would result in an illogical internal inconsistency in the statute.

loans for personal or household purposes are generally not the kinds of indebtedness that, standing alone, support a presumption that the creditor is able to control the debtor. Accordingly, the Board does not regard the presumption of section 2(g)(3) as applicable to the following categories of credit, provided the extensions of credit are not secured by the transferred property and are made in the ordinary course of business of the transferor (or its subsidiary) that is regularly engaged in the business of extending credit:

(i) Consumer credit extended for personal or household use to an individual transferee; (ii) student loans made for the education of the individual transferee or a spouse or child of the transferee; (iii) a home mortgage loan made to an individual transferee for the purchase of a residence for the individual's personal use and secured by the residence; and (iv) loans made to companies (as defined in section 2(b) of the Act) in an aggregate amount not exceeding ten per cent of the total purchase price (or if not sold, the fair market value) of the transferred property. The amounts and terms of the preceding categories of credit should not differ substantially from similar credit extended in comparable circumstances to others who are not transferees. It should be understood that, while the statutory presumption in situations involving these categories of credit may not apply, the Board is not precluded in any case from examining the facts of a particular transfer and finding that the divestiture of control was ineffective based on the facts of record.

(d) Section 2(g)(3) provides that a Board determination that a transferor is not in fact capable of controlling a transferee shall be made after opportunity for hearing. It has been the Board's routine practice since 1966 to publish notice in the FEDERAL REGISTER of applications filed under section 2(g)(3) and to offer interested parties an opportunity for a hearing. Virtually without exception no comments have been submitted on such applications by parties other than the applicant and, with the exception of one case in which the request was later withdrawn, no hearings have been requested in such cases. Because the Board believes that the hearing provision in section 2(g)(3) was intended as a protection for applicants who are seeking to have the presumption overcome by a Board order, a hearing would not be of use where an application is to be granted. In light of the experience indicating that the publication of FEDERAL REGISTER notice of such applications has not served a useful purpose, the Board has decided to alter its procedures in such cases. In the future, FEDERAL REGISTER notice of section 2(g)(3) applications will be published only in cases in which the Board's General Counsel, acting under delegated authority, has determined not to grant such an application and has referred the matter to the Board for decision.[6]

§ 225.140 Disposition of property acquired in satisfaction of debts previously contracted.

(a) The Board recently considered the permissibility, under section 4 of the Bank Holding Company Act, of a subsidiary of a bank holding company acquiring and holding assets acquired in satisfaction of a debt previously contracted in good faith (a "dpc" acquisition). In the situation presented, a lending subsidiary of a bank holding company made a "dpc" acquisition of assets and transferred them to a wholly-owned subsidiary of the bank holding company for the purpose of effecting an orderly divestiture. The question presented was whether such "dpc" assets could be held indefinitely by a bank holding company subsidiary as incidental to its permissible lending activity.

[6] It should be noted that in the event a third party should take exception to a Board order under section 2(g)(3) finding that control has been terminated, any rights such party might have would not be prejudiced by the order. If such party brought facts to the Board's attention indicating that control had not been terminated the Board would have ample authority to revoke its order and take necessary remedial action.

Orders issued under section 2(g)(3) are published in the Federal Reserve "Bulletin."

(b) While the Board believes that "dpc" acquisitions may be regarded as normal, necessary and incidental to the business of lending, the Board does not believe that the holding of assets acquired "dpc" without any time restrictions is appropriate from the standpoint of prudent banking and in light of the prohibitions in section 4 of the Act against engaging in nonbank activities. If a nonbanking subsidiary of a bank holding company were permitted, either directly or through a subsidiary, to hold "dpc" assets of substantial amount over an extended period of time, the holding of such property could result in an unsafe or unsound banking practice or in the holding company engaging in an impermissible activity in connection with the assets, rather than liquidating them.

(c) The Board notes that section 4(c)(2) of the Bank Holding Company Act provides an exemption from the prohibitions of section 4 of the Act for bank holding company subsidiaries to acquire shares "dpc". It also provides that such "dpc" shares may be held for a period of two years, subject to the Board's authority to grant three one-year extensions up to a maximum of five years.[1] Viewed in light of the Congressional policy evidenced by section 4(c)(2), the Board believes that a lending subsidiary of a bank holding company or the holding company itself, should be permitted, as an incident to permissible lending activities, to make acquisitions of "dpc" assets. Consistent with the principles underlying the provisions of section 4(c)(2) of the Act and as a matter of prudent banking practice, such assets may be held for no longer than five years from the date of acquisition. Within the divestiture period it is expected that the company will make good faith efforts to dispose of "dpc" shares or assets at the earliest practicable date. While no specific authorization is necessary to hold such assets for the five-year period, after two years from the date of acquisition of such assets, the holding company should report annually on its efforts to accomplish divestiture to its Reserve Bank. The Reserve Bank will monitor the efforts of the company to effect an orderly divestiture, and may order divestiture before the end of the five-year period if supervisory concerns warrant such action.

(d) The Board recognizes that there are instances where a company may encounter particular difficulty in attempting to effect an orderly divestiture of "dpc" real estate holdings within the divestiture period, notwithstanding its persistent good faith efforts to dispose of such property. In the Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980, (Pub. L. 96–221) Congress, recognizing that real estate possesses unusual characteristics, amended the National Banking Act to permit national banks to hold real estate for five years and for an additional five-year period subject to certain conditions. Consistent with the policy underlying the recent Congressional enactment, and as a matter of supervisory policy, a bank holding company may be permitted to hold real estate acquired "dpc" beyond the initial five-year period provided that the value of the real estate on the books of the company has been written down to fair market value, the carrying costs are not significant in relation to the overall financial position of the company, and the company has made good faith efforts to effect divestiture. Companies holding real estate for this extended period are expected to make active efforts to dispose of it, and should keep the Reserve Bank advised on a regular basis concerning their ongoing efforts. Fair market value should be derived from appraisals, comparable sales or some other reasonable method. In any case, "dpc" real estate would not be permitted to be held beyond 10 years from the date of its acquisition.

[1] The Board notes that where the dpc shares or other similar interests represent less than 5 percent of the total of such interests outstanding, they may be retained on the basis of section 4(c)(6), even if originally acquired dpc.

(e) With respect to the transfer by a subsidiary of other "dpc" shares or assets to another company in the holding company system, including a section 4(c)(1)(D) liquidating subsidiary, or to the holding company itself, such transfers would not alter the original divestiture period applicable to such shares or assets at the time of their acquisition. Moreover, to ensure that assets are not carried at inflated values for extended periods of time, the Board expects, in the case of all such intracompany transfers, that the shares or assets will be transferred at a value no greater than the fair market value at the time of transfer and that the transfer will be made in a normal arms-length transaction.

(f) With regard to "dpc" assets acquired by a banking subsidiary of a holding company, so long as the assets continue to be held by the bank itself, the Board will regard them as being solely within the regulatory authority of the primary supervisor of the bank.

§ 225.141 Operations subsidiaries of a bank holding company.

In orders approving the retention by a bank holding company of a 4(c)(8) subsidiary, the Board has stated that it would permit, without any specific regulatory approval, the formation of a wholly owned subsidiary of an approved 4(c)(8) company to engage in activities that such a company could itself engage in directly through a division or department. (Northwestern Financial Corporation, 65 Federal Reserve Bulletin 566 (1979).) Section 4(a)(2) of the Act provides generally that a bank holding company may engage directly in the business of managing and controlling banks and permissible nonbank activities, and in furnishing services directly to its subsidiaries. Even though section 4 of the Act generally prohibits the acquisition of shares of nonbanking organizations, the Board does not believe that such prohibition should apply to the formation by a holding company of a wholly-owned subsidiary to engage in activities that it could engage in directly. Accordingly, as a general matter, the Board will permit without any regulatory approval a bank holding company to form a wholly-owned subsidiary to perform servicing activities for subsidiaries that the holding company itself could perform directly or through a department or a division under section 4(a)(2) of the Act. The Board believes that permitting this type of subsidiary is not inconsistent with the nonbanking prohibitions of section 4 of the Act, and is consistent with the authority in section 4(c)(1)(C) of the Act, which permits a bank holding company, without regulatory approval, to form a subsidiary to perform services for its banking subsidiaries. The Board notes, however, that a servicing subsidiary established by a bank holding company in reliance on this interpretation will be an affiliate of the subsidiary bank of the holding company for the purposes of the lending restrictions of section 23A of the Federal Reserve Act. (12 U.S.C. 371c)

§ 225.142 Statement of policy concerning bank holding companies engaging in futures, forward and options contracts on U.S. Government and agency securities and money market instruments.

(a) Purpose of financial contract positions. In supervising the activities of bank holding companies, the Board has adopted and continues to follow the principle that bank holding companies should serve as a source of strength for their subsidiary banks. Accordingly, the Board believes that any positions that bank holding companies or their nonbank subsidiaries take in financial contracts should reduce risk exposure, that is, not be speculative.

(b) Establishment of prudent written policies, appropriate limitations and internal controls and audit programs. If the parent organization or nonbank subsidiary is taking or intends to take positions in financial contracts, that company's board of directors should approve prudent written policies and establish appropriate limitations to insure that financial contract activities are performed in a safe and sound manner with levels of activity reasonably related to the organization's business needs and capacity to fulfill obligations. In addition, internal controls and internal audit programs to monitor such activity should be established. The board of directors, a duly authorized committee thereof or the internal auditors should review periodically (at least monthly) all financial contract positions to insure conformity with such policies and limits. In order to determine the company's exposure, all open positions should be reviewed and market values determined at least monthly, or more often, depending on volume and magnitude of positions.

(c) Formulating policies and recording financial contracts. In formulating its policies and procedures, the parent holding company may consider the interest rate exposure of its nonbank subsidiaries, but not that of its bank subsidiaries. As a matter of policy, the Board believes that any financial contracts executed to reduce the interest rate exposure of a bank affiliate of a holding company should be reflected on the books and records of the bank affiliate (to the extent required by the bank policy statements), rather than on the books and records of the parent company. If a bank has an interest rate exposure that management believes requires hedging with financial contracts, the bank should be the direct beneficiary of any effort to reduce that exposure. The Board also believes that final responsibility for financial contract transactions for the account of each affiliated bank should reside with the management of that bank.

(d) Accounting. The joint bank policy statements of March 12, 1980 include accounting guidelines for banks that engage in financial contract activities. Since the Financial Accounting Standards Board is presently considering accounting standards for contract activities, no specific accounting requirements for financial contracts entered into by parent bank holding companies and nonbank subsidiaries are being mandated at this time. The Board expects to review further developments in this area.

(e) Board to monitor bank holding company transactions in financial contracts. The Board intends to monitor closely bank holding company transactions in financial contracts to ensure that any such activity is consistent with maintaining a safe and sound banking system. In any cases where bank holding companies are found to be engaging in speculative practices, the Board is prepared to institute appropriate action under the Financial Institutions Supervisory Act of 1966, as amended.

(f) Federal Reserve Bank notification. Bank holding companies should furnish written notification to their District Federal Reserve Bank within 10 days after financial contract activities are begun by the parent or a nonbank subsidiary. Holding companies in which the parent or a nonbank subsidiary currently engage in financial contract activity should furnish notice by March 31, 1983.

(Secs. 5(b) and 8 of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1844 and 1847); sec. 8(b) of the Financial Institutions Supervisory Act (12 U.S.C. 1818(b))

§ 225.143 Policy statement on nonvoting equity investments by bank holding companies.

(a) Introduction. (1) In recent months, a number of bank holding companies have made substantial equity investments in a bank or bank holding company (the "acquiree") located in states other than the home state of the investing company through acquisition of preferred stock or nonvoting common shares of the acquiree. Because of the evident interest in these types of investments and because they raise substantial questions under the Bank Holding Company Act (the "Act"), the Board believes it is appropriate to provide guidance regarding the consistency of such arrangements with the Act.

(2) This statement sets out the Board's concerns with these investments, the considerations the Board will take into account in determining whether the investments are consistent with the Act, and the general scope of arrangements to be avoided by bank holding companies. The Board recognizes that the complexity of legitimate business arrangements precludes rigid rules designed to cover all situations and that decisions regarding the existence or absence of control in any particular case must take into account the effect of the combination of provisions and covenants in the agreement as a whole and the particular facts and circumstances of each case. Nevertheless, the Board believes that the factors outlined in this statement provide a framework for guiding bank holding companies in complying with the requirements of the Act.

(b) Statutory and regulatory provisions. (1) Under section 3(a) of the Act, a bank holding company may not acquire direct or indirect ownership or control of more than 5 per cent of the voting shares of a bank without the Board's prior approval. (12 U.S.C. 1842(a)(3)). In addition, this section of the Act provides that a bank holding company may not, without the Board's prior approval, acquire control of a bank: That is, in the words of the statute, "for any action to be taken that causes a bank to become a subsidiary of a bank holding company." (12 U.S.C. 1842(a)(2)). Under the Act, a bank is a subsidiary of a bank holding company if:

(i) The company directly or indirectly owns, controls, or holds with power to vote 25 per cent or more of the voting shares of the bank;

(ii) The company controls in any manner the election of a majority of the board of directors of the bank; or

(iii) The Board determines, after notice and opportunity for hearing, that the company has the power, directly or indirectly, to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of the bank. (12 U.S.C. 1841(d)).

(2) In intrastate situations, the Board may approve bank holding company acquisitions of additional banking subsidiaries. However, where the acquiree is located outside the home state of the investing bank holding company, section 3(d) of the Act prevents the Board from approving any application that will permit a bank holding company to "acquire, directly or indirectly, any voting shares of, interest in, or all or substantially all of the assets of any additional bank." (12 U.S.C. 1842(d)(1)).

(c) Review of agreements. (1) In apparent expectation of statutory changes that might make interstate banking permissible, bank holding companies have sought to make substantial equity investments in other bank holding companies across state lines, but without obtaining more than 5 per cent of the voting shares or control of the acquiree. These investments involve a combination of the following arrangements:

(i) Options on, warrants for, or rights to convert nonvoting shares into substantial blocks of voting securities of the acquiree bank holding company or its subsidiary bank(s);

(ii) Merger or asset acquisition agreements with the out-of-state bank or bank holding company that are to be consummated in the event interstate banking is permitted;

(iii) Provisions that limit or restrict major policies, operations or decisions of the acquiree; and

(iv) Provisions that make acquisition of the acquiree or its subsidiary bank(s) by a third party either impossible or economically impracticable.

The various warrants, options, and rights are not exercisable by the investing bank holding company unless interstate banking is permitted, but may be transferred by the investor either immediately or after the passage of a period of time or upon the occurrence of certain events.

(2) After a careful review of a number of these agreements, the Board believes that investments in nonvoting stock, absent other arrangements, can be consistent with the Act. Some of the agreements reviewed appear consistent with the Act since they are limited to investments of relatively moderate size in nonvoting equity that may become voting equity only if interstate banking is authorized.

(3) However, other agreements reviewed by the Board raise substantial problems of consistency with the control provisions of the Act because the investors, uncertain whether or when interstate banking may be authorized, have evidently sought to assure the soundness of their investments, prevent takeovers by others, and allow for sale of their options, warrants, or rights to a person of the investor's choice in the event a third party obtains control of the acquiree or the investor otherwise becomes dissatisfied with its investment. Since the Act precludes the investors from protecting their investments through ownership or use of voting shares or other exercise of control, the investors have substituted contractual agreements for rights normally achieved through voting shares.

(4) For example, various covenants in certain of the agreements seek to assure the continuing soundness of the investment by substantially limiting the discretion of the acquiree's management over major policies and decisions, including restrictions on entering into new banking activities without the investor's approval and requirements for extensive consultations with the investor on financial matters. By their terms, these covenants suggest control by the investing company over the management and policies of the acquiree.

(5) Similarly, certain of the agreements deprive the acquiree bank holding company, by covenant or because of an option, of the right to sell, transfer, or encumber a majority or all of the voting shares of its subsidiary bank(s) with the aim of maintaining the integrity of the investment and preventing takeovers by others. These long-term restrictions on voting shares fall within the presumption in the Board's Regulation Y that attributes control of shares to any company that enters into any agreement placing long-term restrictions on the rights of a holder of voting securities. (12 CFR 225.2(b)(4)).

(6) Finally, investors wish to reserve the right to sell their options, warrants or rights to a person of their choice to prevent being locked into what may become an unwanted investment. The Board has taken the position that the ability to control the ultimate disposition of voting shares to a person of the investor's choice and to secure the economic benefits therefrom indicates control of the shares under the Act.[1] Moreover, the ability to transfer rights to large blocks of voting shares, even if nonvoting in the hands of the investing company, may result in such a substantial position of leverage over the management of the acquiree as to involve a structure that inevitably results in control prohibited by the Act.

(d) Provisions that avoid control. (1) In the context of any particular agreement, provisions of the type described above may be acceptable if combined with other provisions that serve to preclude control. The Board believes that such agreements will not be consistent with the Act unless provisions are included that will preserve management's discretion over the policies and decisions of the acquiree and avoid control of voting shares.

(2) As a first step towards avoiding control, covenants in any agreement should leave management free to conduct banking and permissible nonbanking activities. Another step to avoid control is the right of the acquiree to "call" the equity investment and options or warrants to assure that covenants that may become inhibiting can be avoided by the acquiree. This right makes such investments or agreements more like a loan in which the borrower has a right to escape covenants and avoid the lender's influence by prepaying the loan.

(3) A measure to avoid problems of control arising through the investor's control over the ultimate disposition of rights to substantial amounts of voting shares of the acquiree would be a provision granting the acquiree a right of first refusal before warrants, options or other rights may be sold and requiring a public and dispersed distribution of these rights if the right of first refusal is not exercised.

(4) In this connection, the Board believes that agreements that involve rights to less than 25 percent of the voting shares, with a requirement for a dispersed public distribution in the event of sale, have a much greater prospect of achieving consistency with the Act than agreements involving a greater percentage. This guideline is drawn by analogy from the provision in the Act that ownership of 25 percent or more of the voting securities of a bank constitutes control of the bank.

---

(5) The Board expects that one effect of this guideline would be to hold down the size of the nonvoting equity investment by the investing company relative to the acquiree's total equity, thus avoiding the potential for control because the investor holds a very large proportion of the acquiree's total equity. Observance of the 25 percent guideline will also make provisions in agreements providing for a right of first refusal or a public and widely dispersed offering of rights to the acquiree's shares more practical and realistic.

(6) Finally, certain arrangements should clearly be avoided regardless of other provisions in the agreement that are designed to avoid control. These are:

(i) Agreements that enable the investing bank holding company (or its designee) to direct in any manner the voting of more than 5 per cent of the voting shares of the acquiree;

(ii) Agreements whereby the investing company has the right to direct the acquiree's use of the proceeds of an equity investment by the investing company to effect certain actions, such as the purchase and redemption of the acquiree's voting shares; and

(iii) The acquisition of more than 5 per cent of the voting shares of the acquiree that "simultaneously" with their acquisition by the investing company become nonvoting shares, remain nonvoting shares while held by the investor, and revert to voting shares when transferred to a third party.

(e) Review by the Board. This statement does not constitute the exclusive scope of the Board's concerns, nor are the considerations with respect to control outlined in this statement an exhaustive catalog of permissible or impermissible arrangements. The Board has instructed its staff to review agreements of the kind discussed in this statement and to bring to the Board's attention those that raise problems of consistency with the Act. In this regard, companies are requested to notify the Board of the terms of such proposed merger or asset acquisition agreements or nonvoting equity investments prior to their execution or consummation.

§ 225.144 Application required for the relocation of a subsidiary bank to another State.

(a) The Board has recently considered whether a bank holding company may relocate one of its subsidiary banks, pursuant to the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency under 12 U.S.C. 30, from the holding company's home state [1] to another state without the approval of the Board under section 3 of the Bank Holding Company Act ("BHC Act") and without compliance with the interstate banking provisions of the Douglas Amendment to the BHC Act. (12 U.S.C. 1842 (a) and (d)). After a review of the terms and purposes of the BHC Act, the Board concludes that the relocation of a subsidiary bank of a bank holding company from the holding company's home state to another state requires the Board's prior approval under the BHC Act and is subject to the interstate banking provisions of the Douglas Amendment to the BHC Act. The retention by a bank holding company of control of a bank after its relocation outside of the holding company's home state, while simultaneously controlling a bank in its home state, creates a multi-state bank holding company, and, in the Board's view, is inconsistent with, and constitutes an evasion of, the terms and intent of the BHC Act that a bank holding company not expand its banking operations outside its home state without the express approval of the other state.

(b) The BHC Act establishes a comprehensive Federal framework governing the operations and acquisitions of bank holding companies. Section 3(a) of the BHC Act provides that a bank holding company must obtain the approval of the Board, under specified competitive, financial, managerial and convenience and need factors before acquiring control of a bank. 12 U.S.C. 1842(a). The Douglas Amendment provides that the Board may not approve any application under section 3 that would allow a bank holding company to acquire control of or any interest in a bank located outside of the holding company's home state, unless the acquisition is specifically authorized by the state in which the bank to be acquired is located.

[1] A bank holding company's home state under the BHC Act is that state in which the total deposits of its banking subsidiaries were largest on the day the company became a bank holding company or on July 1, 1966, whichever date is later. 12 U.S.C. 1842(d).

(c) The Douglas Amendment was adopted to prevent the creation or expansion of interstate banking networks through acquisition by a bank holding company of control of a bank located outside of the holding company's home state, without the explicit approval of the state in which the bank is located. (See Florida Dep't of Banking v. Board of Governors, 760 F.2d 1135, 1141 (11th Cir. 1985); Credit and Commerce American Holdings, N.V., 65 Federal Reserve Bulletin 254, 255-56 (1979)). Under the terms of the BHC Act, the Board's authority to grant approval to a bank holding company to control a bank is limited to banks located within the holding company's home state or in states that have specifically authorized the acquisition. The Board has no authority to grant approval to a bank holding company to control a bank outside of the holding company's home state, without appropriate state statutory authorization. Thus, a bank holding company's authority to control a bank, which derives from the Board's approval under the BHC Act for the acquisition of the bank, must necessarily be limited by, and cannot be broader than, the Board's authority to grant approval for the acquisition in the first place. In other words, a bank holding company's authority to continue to control a bank acquired pursuant to the terms of the BHC Act is subject to the limitation of the BHC Act that the bank remain located in the state specified in its application to the Board to acquire the bank. A change in the location of the bank to a place outside of the holding company's home state constitutes a material change in an essential predicate for the Board's approval for the acquisition of the bank, transforming the proposal from one that the Board could approve to one that the Board did not and could not have lawfully approved.

(d) Accordingly, the Board believes that a bank holding company's authority to continue to control a bank is limited by the requirements of the Douglas Amendment such that the bank must remain in the state in which it was located at the time the Board granted approval for its acquisition and that a bank holding company may not, without the Board's prior approval under the BHC Act and compliance with the state authorization provisions of the Douglas Amendment, take action that would cause it to control a bank outside of its home state.

(e) The Board believes that this interpretation of the Act is not only consistent with the terms of the BHC Act, but is necessary in order to give effect to the Congressional intent underlying the Douglas Amendment to maintain state control over the acquisition of banks within their borders. As the legislative history of the Douglas Amendment indicates, prior to the enactment of the BHC Act, the acquisition and control of banks by bank holding companies was not regulated, and thus bank holding companies could establish networks of subsidiary banks in numerous states, while their subsidiary banks were limited by the McFadden Act and state law to branching in a single state. (102 Cong. Rec. 6858 (1956); H.R. No. 609, 84th Cong., 1st Sess. 3-4 (1955)). The United States Supreme Court has stated that the Douglas Amendment was enacted for the express purpose of eliminating this "loophole" in order to maintain "local, community-based control over banking. (Northeast Bancorp, Inc. v. Board of Governors, 105 S. Ct. 2545, 2553 (1985)).

(f) In the debate surrounding the enactment of the amendment, Senator Douglas described the amendment as intended "to prevent bank holding companies from expanding across State lines, unless the States give them explicit permission to do so," and that the "immediate practical effect [of the Amendment] would be to bar the expansion of bank holding companies across State lines."[2] The Senator stated that his proposal was "a logical continuation of the McFadden Act, which tried to prevent the Federal power from being used to permit national banks to expand across State lines in a way contrary to State policy . . . ." Id. and that it would "carry over into the field of holding companies the same provisions which already apply for branch banking under the McFadden Act . . . ." (102 Cong. Rec. 6858 (1956)).

(g) The principle of the McFadden Act, as applied to bank holding companies, requires that a bank holding company may not establish a subsidiary bank outside of its home state, unless authorized by the host state. While Congress has phrased the Douglas Amendment in terms of the application requirements of the BHC Act, it is clear that Congress was concerned with the substance of preventing further interstate expansion through the bank holding company device without express state authorization.

(h) In the Board's view, an interpretation of the BHC Act that would allow a bank holding company to acquire a bank in its home state and, without further approval under the BHC Act, relocate that bank to another state would nullify the stated purpose of the Douglas Amendment to ensure that the holding company form is not used to evade state restrictions against interstate banking. (Northeast Bancorp, 105 S. Ct. at 2550-52). Using the relocation device, a multi-bank holding company could expand into the adjoining state by relocating the main office of a subsidiary national bank located within thirty miles of a state border, while retaining control of its other subsidiary banks in its home state, regardless of whether the adjoining state has consented to entry by out-of-state bank holding companies.

(i) The Board has found no evidence that Congress intended section 30, which governs the relocation of the main office of a national bank, to create an exception to the provisions of the Douglas Amendment. Section 30 was enacted in 1886, and provided that a national bank may change its place of operations to any other place within the same state, not more than thirty miles distant, with the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency and shareholders. 24 Stat. 18. The Comptroller had interpreted this provision as not requiring the Comptroller's approval if the bank's place of operations was only moved within the city in which it was located. (S. Rep. No. 121, 85th Cong., 1st Sess. 17 (1957)). In 1959, Congress overturned this interpretation by amending section 30 to subject all changes of location by a national bank to the Comptroller's approval. Id.

(j) The amended section 30 does not contain the language in the previous version limiting changes in office location to within the state where the bank is located. The omission of this provision is not explained in the legislative history. There is, however, no indication in the relevant history that Congress affirmatively intended that the amendment to section 30, which was part of a package of technical amendments to the Federal banking laws, create a specific exception to the provisions or general policy of the Douglas Amendment—adopted three years earlier—against the establishment of new interstate bank holding companies without the consent of the states involved. The Board cannot attribute to a technical amendment, in the absence of compelling legislative history, any intention to abandon one of the central policies behind the enactment of the BHC Act in 1956.

(k) Finally, the Board believes that the relocation by a bank holding company of a subsidiary bank from the holding company's home state to another state, while continuing to retain a bank in its home state, would constitute an evasion of the Douglas Amendment that would warrant, if not require, the exercise by the Board of its authority under section 5(b) of the BHC Act to take necessary action to carry out the purposes and prevent evasions of the Act. 12 U.S.C. 1844(b).

SOURCE: Reg. Z, 46 FR 20892, Apr. 7, 1981, unless otherwise noted.

Subpart A—General

§ 226.1 Authority, purpose, coverage, organization, enforcement and liability.

(a) Authority. This regulation, known as Regulation Z, is issued by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System to implement the federal Truth in Lending and Fair Credit Billing Acts, which are contained in Title I of the Consumer Credit Protection Act, as amended (15 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.).

(b) Purpose. The purpose of this regulation is to promote the informed use of consumer credit by requiring disclosures about its terms and cost. The regulation also gives consumers the right to cancel certain credit transactions that involve a lien on a consumer's principal dwelling, regulates certain credit card practices, and provides a means for fair and timely resolution of credit billing disputes. The regulation does not govern charges for consumer credit.

(c) Coverage. (1) In general, this regulation applies to each individual or business that offers or extends credit when four conditions are met: (i) The credit is offered or extended to consumers; (ii) the offering or extension of credit is done regularly;[1] (iii) the credit is subject to a finance charge or is payable by a written agreement in more than 4 installments; and (iv) the credit is primarily for personal, family, or household purposes.

[1] The meaning of "regularly" is explained in the definition of "creditor" in § 226.2(a).

(2) If a credit card is involved, however, certain provisions apply even if the credit is not subject to a finance charge, or is not payable by a written agreement in more than 4 installments, or if the credit card is to be used for business purposes.

(d) Organization. The regulation is divided into subparts and appendices as follows:

(1) Subpart A contains general information. It sets forth: (i) The authority, purpose, coverage, and organization of the regulation; (ii) the definitions of basic terms; (iii) the transactions that are exempt from coverage; and (iv) the method of determining the finance charge.

(2) Subpart B contains the rules for open-end credit. It requires that initial disclosures and periodic statements be provided. It also describes special rules that apply to credit card transactions, treatment of payments and credit balances, procedures for resolving credit billing errors, annual percentage rate calculations, rescission requirements, and advertising rules.

(3) Subpart C relates to closed-end credit. It contains rules on disclosures, treatment of credit balances, annual percentage rate calculations, rescission requirements, and advertising.

(4) Subpart D contains rules on oral disclosures, Spanish language disclosure in Puerto Rico, record retention, effect on state laws, and state exemptions.

(5) There are several appendices containing information such as the procedures for determinations about state laws, state exemptions and issuance of staff interpretations, special rules for certain kinds of credit plans, a list of enforcement agencies, and the rules for computing annual percentage rates in closed-end credit transactions.

(e) Enforcement and liability. Section 108 of the act contains the administrative enforcement provisions. Sections 112, 113, 130, 131, and 134 contain provisions relating to liability for failure to comply with the requirements of the Act and the regulation.

(Information collection requirements contained in this section have been approved by the Office of Management and Budget under OMB Control No. 7100-0199.)

§ 226.2 Definitions and rules of construction.

(a) Definitions. For purposes of this regulation, the following definitions apply:

(1) "Act" means the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.).

(2) "Advertisement" means a commercial message in any medium that promotes, directly or indirectly, a credit transaction.

(3) [Reserved][2]

(4) "Billing cycle" or "cycle" means the interval between the days or dates of regular periodic statements. These intervals shall be equal and no longer than a quarter of a year. An interval will be considered equal if the number of days in the cycle does not vary more than 4 days from the regular day or date of the periodic statement.

(5) "Board" means the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

(6) "Business day" means a day on which a creditor's offices are open to the public for carrying on substantially all of its business functions. However, for purposes of rescission under §§ 226.15 and 226.23, the term means all calendar days except Sundays and the legal public holidays specified in 5 U.S.C. 6103(a), such as New Year's Day, Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Columbus Day, Veterans Day, Thanksgiving Day, and Christmas Day.

(7) "Card issuer" means a person that issues a credit card or that person's agent with respect to the card.

(8) "Cardholder" means a natural person to whom a credit card is issued for consumer credit purposes, or a natural person who has agreed with the card issuer to pay consumer credit obligations arising from the issuance of a credit card to another natural person. For purposes of § 226.12(a) and (b), the term includes any person to whom a credit card is issued for any purpose, including business, commercial, or agricultural use, or a person who has agreed with the card issuer to pay obligations arising from the issuance of such a credit card to another person.

(9) "Cash price" means the price at which a creditor, in the ordinary course of business, offers to sell for cash the property or service that is the subject of the transaction. At the creditor's option, the term may include the price of accessories, services related to the sale, service contracts and taxes and fees for license, title, and registration. The term does not include any finance charge.

(10) "Closed-end credit" means consumer credit other than "open-end credit" as defined in this section.

(11) "Consumer" means a cardholder or a natural person to whom consumer credit is offered or extended. However, for purposes of rescission under §§ 226.15 and 226.23, the term also includes a natural person in whose principal dwelling a security interest is or will be retained or acquired, if that person's ownership interest in the dwelling is or will be subject to the security interest.

(12) "Consumer credit" means credit offered or extended to a consumer primarily for personal, family, or household purposes.

(13) "Consummation" means the time that a consumer becomes contractually obligated on a credit transaction.

(14) "Credit" means the right to defer payment of debt or to incur debt and defer its payment.

(15) "Credit card" means any card, plate, coupon book, or other single credit device that may be used from time to time to obtain credit.

(16) "Credit sale" means a sale in which the seller is a creditor. The term includes a bailment or lease (unless terminable without penalty at any time by the consumer) under which the consumer:

(i) Agrees to pay as compensation for use a sum substantially equivalent to, or in excess of, the total value of the property and services involved; and

(ii) Will become (or has the option to become), for no additional consideration or for nominal consideration, the owner of the property upon compliance with the agreement.

(17) "Creditor" means:

(i) A person (A) who regularly extends consumer credit[3] that is subject to a finance charge or is payable by written agreement in more than 4 installments (not including a downpayment), and (B) to whom the obligation is initially payable, either on the face of the note or contract, or by agreement when there is no note or contract.

(ii) For purposes of §§ 226.4(c)(8) (discounts), 226.9(d) (Finance charge imposed at time of transaction), and 226.12(e) (Prompt notification of returns and crediting of refunds), a person that honors a credit card.

(iii) For purposes of Subpart B, any card issuer that extends either open-end credit or credit that is not subject to a finance charge and is not payable by written agreement in more than 4 installments.

(iv) For purposes of Subpart B (except for the finance charge disclosures contained in §§ 226.6(a) and 226.7 (d) through (g) and the right of rescission set forth in § 226.15) and Subpart C, any card issuer that extends closed-end credit that is subject to a finance charge or is payable by written agreement in more than 4 installments.

(18) "Downpayment" means an amount, including the value of any property used as a trade-in, paid to a seller to reduce the cash price of goods or services purchased in a credit sale transaction. A deferred portion of a downpayment may be treated as part of the downpayment if it is payable not later than the due date of the second otherwise regularly scheduled payment and is not subject to a finance charge.

(19) "Dwelling" means a residential structure that contains 1 to 4 units, whether or not that structure is attached to real property. The term includes an individual condominium

---

[3] A person regularly extends consumer credit only if it extended credit more than 25 times (or more than 5 times for transactions secured by a dwelling) in the preceding calendar year. If a person did not meet these numerical standards in the preceding calendar year, the numerical standards shall be applied to the current calendar year.

unit, cooperative unit, mobile home, and trailer, if it is used as a residence.

(20) "Open-end credit" means consumer credit extended by a creditor under a plan in which:

(i) The creditor reasonably contemplates repeated transactions;

(ii) The creditor may impose a finance charge from time to time on an outstanding unpaid balance; and

(iii) The amount of credit that may be extended to the consumer during the term of the plan (up to any limit set by the creditor) is generally made available to the extent that any outstanding balance is repaid.

(21) "Periodic rate" means a rate of finance charge that is or may be imposed by a creditor on a balance for a day, week, month, or other subdivision of a year.

(22) "Person" means a natural person or an organization, including a corporation, partnership, proprietorship, association, cooperative, estate, trust, or government unit.

(23) "Prepaid finance charge" means any finance charge paid separately in cash or by check before or at consummation of a transaction, or withheld from the proceeds of the credit at any time.

(24) "Residential mortgage transaction" means a transaction in which a mortgage, deed of trust, purchase money security interest arising under an installment sales contract, or equivalent consensual security interest is created or retained in the consumer's principal dwelling to finance the acquisition or initial construction of that dwelling.

(25) "Security interest" means an interest in property that secures performance of a consumer credit obligation and that is recognized by State or Federal law. It does not include incidental interests such as interests in proceeds, accessions, additions, fixtures, insurance proceeds (whether or not the creditor is a loss payee or beneficiary), premium rebates, or interests in after-acquired property. For purposes of disclosure under §§ 226.6 and 226.18, the term does not include an interest that arises solely by operation of law. However, for purposes of the right of rescission under §§ 226.15 and 226.23, the term does include interests that arise solely by operation of law.

(26) "State" means any state, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and any territory or possession of the United States.

(b) Rules of construction. For purposes of this regulation, the following rules of construction apply:

(1) Where appropriate, the singular form of a word includes the plural form and plural includes singular.

(2) Where the words "obligation" and "transaction" are used in this regulation, they refer to a consumer credit obligation or transaction, depending upon the context. Where the word "credit" is used in this regulation, it means "consumer credit" unless the context clearly indicates otherwise.

(3) Unless defined in this regulation, the words used have the meanings given to them by state law or contract.

(4) Footnotes have the same legal effect as the text of the regulation.

§ 226.3 Exempt transactions.

This regulation does not apply to the following:[4]

(a) Business, commercial, agricultural, or organizational credit. (1) An extension of credit primarily for a business, commercial or agricultural purpose.

(2) An extension of credit to other than a natural person, including credit to government agencies or instrumentalities.

(b) Credit over $25,000 not secured by real property or a dwelling. An extension of credit not secured by real property, or by personal property used or expected to be used as the principal dwelling of the consumer, in which the amount financed exceeds $25,000 or in which there is an express written commitment to extend credit in excess of $25,000.

[4] The provisions in § 226.12 (a) and (b) governing the issuance of credit cards and the liability for their unauthorized use apply to all credit cards, even if the credit cards are issued for use in connection with extensions of credit that otherwise are exempt under this section.

(c) Public utility credit. An extension of credit that involves public utility services provided through pipe, wire, other connected facilities, or radio or similar transmission (including extensions of such facilities), if the charges for service, delayed payment, or any discounts for prompt payment are filed with or regulated by any government unit. The financing of durable goods or home improvements by a public utility is not exempt.

(d) Securities or commodities accounts. Transactions in securities or commodities accounts in which credit is extended by a broker-dealer registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission or the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

(e) Home fuel budget plans. An installment agreement for the purchase of home fuels in which no finance charge is imposed.

(f) Student loan programs. Loans made, insured, or guaranteed pursuant to a program authorized by Title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1070 et seq.).

[46 FR 20892, Apr. 7, 1981, as amended at 48 FR 14886, Apr. 6, 1983; 49 FR 46991, Nov. 30, 1984]

§ 226.4 Finance charge.

(a) Definition. The finance charge is the cost of consumer credit as a dollar amount. It includes any charge payable directly or indirectly by the consumer and imposed directly or indirectly by the creditor as an incident to or a condition of the extension of credit. It does not include any charge of a type payable in a comparable cash transaction.

(b) Example of finance charge. The finance charge includes the following types of charges, except for charges specifically excluded by paragraphs (c) through (e) of this section:

(1) Interest, time price differential, and any amount payable under an add-on or discount system of additional charges.

(2) Service, transaction, activity, and carrying charges, including any charge imposed on a checking or other transaction account to the extent that the charge exceeds the charge for a similar account without a credit feature.

(3) Points, loan fees, assumption fees, finder's fees, and similar charges.

(4) Appraisal, investigation, and credit report fees.

(5) Premiums or other charges for any guarantee or insurance protecting the creditor against the consumer's default or other credit loss.

(6) Charges imposed on a creditor by another person for purchasing or accepting a consumer's obligation, if the consumer is required to pay the charges in cash, as an addition to the obligation, or as a deduction from the proceeds of the obligation.

(7) Premiums or other charges for credit life, accident, health, or loss-of-income insurance, written in connection with a credit transaction.

(8) Premiums or other charges for insurance against loss of or damage to property, or against liability arising out of the ownership or use of property, written in connection with a credit transaction.

(9) Discounts for the purpose of inducing payment by a means other than the use of credit.

(c) Charges excluded from the finance charge. The following charges are not finance charges:

(1) Application fees charged to all applicants for credit, whether or not credit is actually extended.

(2) Charges for actual unanticipated late payment, for exceeding a credit limit, or for delinquency, default, or a similar occurrence.

(3) Charges imposed by a financial institution for paying items that overdraw an account, unless the payment of such items and the imposition of the charge were previously agreed upon in writing.

(4) Fees charged for participation in a credit plan, whether assessed on an annual or other periodic basis.

(5) Seller's points.

(6) Interest forfeited as a result of an interest reduction required by law on a time deposit used as security for an extension of credit.

(7) The following fees in a transaction secured by real property or in a residential mortgage transaction, if the fees are bona fide and reasonable in amount:

(i) Fees for title examination, abstract of title, title insurance, property survey, and similar purposes.

(ii) Fees for preparing deeds, mortgages, and reconveyance, settlement, and similar documents.

(iii) Notary, appraisal, and credit report fees.

(iv) Amounts required to be paid into escrow or trustee accounts if the amounts would not otherwise be included in the finance charge.

(8) Discounts offered to induce payment for a purchase by cash, check, or other means, as provided in section 167(b) of the Act.

(d) Insurance. (1) Premiums for credit life, accident, health, or loss-of-income insurance may be excluded from the finance charge if the following conditions are met:

(i) The insurance coverage is not required by the creditor, and this fact is disclosed.

(ii) The premium for the initial term of insurance coverage is disclosed. If the term of insurance is less than the term of the transaction, the term of insurance also shall be disclosed. The premium may be disclosed on a unit-cost basis only in open-end credit transactions, closed-end credit transactions by mail or telephone under § 226.17(g), and certain closed-end credit transactions involving an insurance plan that limits the total amount of indebtedness subject to coverage.

(iii) The consumer signs or initials an affirmative written request for the insurance after receiving the disclosures specified in this paragraph. Any consumer in the transaction may sign or initial the request.

(2) Premiums for insurance against loss of or damage to property, or against liability arising out of the ownership or use of property,[5] may be excluded from the finance charge if the following conditions are met:

(i) The insurance coverage may be obtained from a person of the consumer's choice,[6] and this fact is disclosed.

(ii) If the coverage is obtained from or through the creditor, the premium for the initial term of insurance coverage shall be disclosed. If the term of insurance is less than the term of the transaction, the term of insurance shall also be disclosed. The premium may be disclosed on a unit-cost basis only in open-end credit transactions, closed-end credit transactions by mail or telephone under § 226.17(g), and certain closed-end credit transactions involving an insurance plan that limits the total amount of indebtedness subject to coverage.

(e) Certain security interest charges. If itemized and disclosed, the following charges may be excluded from the finance charge:

(1) Taxes and fees prescribed by law that actually are or will be paid to public officials for determining the existence of or for perfecting, releasing, or satisfying a security interest.

(2) The premium for insurance in lieu of perfecting a security interest to the extent that the premium does not exceed the fees described in paragraph (e)(1) of this section that otherwise would be payable.

(f) Prohibited offsets. Interest, dividends, or other income received or to be received by the consumer on deposits or investments shall not be deducted in computing the finance charge.

Subpart B—Open-End Credit

§ 226.5 General disclosure requirements.

(a) Form of disclosures. (1) The creditor shall make the disclosures required by this subpart clearly and conspicuously in writing,[7] in a form that the consumer may keep.[8]

(2) The terms "finance charge" and "annual percentage rate," when required to be disclosed with a corresponding amount or percentage rate,

---

[5] This includes single interest insurance if the insurer waives all right of subrogation against the consumer.

[6] A creditor may reserve the right to refuse to accept, for reasonable cause, an insurer offered by the consumer.

[7] The disclosure required by § 226.9(d) when a finance charge is imposed at the time of a transaction need not be written.

[8] The alternative summary billing rights statement provided for in § 226.9(a)(2), and the disclosures made under § 226.10(b) about payment requirements need not be in a form that the consumer can keep.

shall be more conspicuous than any other required disclosure.[9]

(b) Time of disclosures. (1) Initial disclosures. The creditor shall furnish the initial disclosure statement required by § 226.6 before the first transaction is made under the plan.

(2) Periodic statements. (i) The creditor shall mail or deliver a periodic statement as required by § 226.7 for each billing cycle at the end of which an account has a debit or credit balance of more than $1 or on which a finance charge has been imposed. A periodic statement need not be sent for an account if the creditor deems it uncollectible, or if delinquency collection proceedings have been instituted, or if furnishing the statement would violate Federal law.

(ii) The creditor shall mail or deliver the periodic statement at least 14 days prior to any date or the end of any time period required to be disclosed under § 226.7(j) in order for the consumer to avoid an additional finance or other charge.[10] A creditor that fails to meet this requirement shall not collect any finance or other charge imposed as a result of such failure.

(c) Basis of disclosures and use of estimates. Disclosures shall reflect the terms of the legal obligation between the parties. If any information necessary for accurate disclosure is unknown to the creditor, it shall make the disclosure based on the best information reasonably available and shall state clearly that the disclosure is an estimate.

(d) Multiple creditors; multiple consumers. If the credit plan involves more than one creditor, only one set of disclosures shall be given, and the creditors shall agree among themselves which creditor must comply with the requirements that this regulation imposes on any or all of them. If there is more than one consumer, the disclosures may be made to any consumer who is primarily liable on the account. If the right of rescission under § 226.15 is applicable, however, the disclosures required by §§ 226.6 and 226.15(b) shall be made to each consumer having the right to rescind.

(e) Effect of subsequent events. If a disclosure becomes inaccurate because of an event that occurs after the creditor mails or delivers the disclosures, the resulting inaccuracy is not a violation of this regulation, although new disclosures may be required under § 226.9(c).

§ 226.6 Initial disclosure statement.

The creditor shall disclose to the consumer, in terminology consistent with that to be used on the periodic statement, each of the following items, to the extent applicable:

(a) Finance charge. The circumstances under which a finance charge will be imposed and an explanation of how it will be determined, as follows:

(1) A statement of when finance charges begin to accrue, including an explanation of whether or not any time period exists within which any credit extended may be repaid without incurring a finance charge. If such a time period is provided, a creditor may, at its option and without disclosure, impose no finance charge when payment is received after the time period's expiration.

(2) A disclosure of each periodic rate that may be used to compute the finance charge, the range of balances to which it is applicable,[11] and the corresponding annual percentage rate.[12] When different periodic rates apply to different types of transactions, the types of transactions to which the periodic rates apply shall also be disclosed.

(3) An explanation of the method used to determine the balance on

---

[9] The terms need not be more conspicuous when used under § 226.7(d) on periodic statements and under § 226.16 in advertisements.

[10] This timing requirement does not apply if the creditor is unable to meet the requirement because of an act of God, war, civil disorder, natural disaster, or strike.

[11] A creditor is not required to adjust the range of balances disclosure to reflect the balance below which only a minimum charge applies.

[12] If a creditor is offering a variable rate plan, the creditor shall also disclose: (1) The circumstances under which the rate(s) may increase; (2) any limitations on the increase; and (3) the effect(s) of an increase.

which the finance charge may be computed.

(4) An explanation of how the amount of any finance charge will be determined,[13] including a description of how any finance charge other than the periodic rate will be determined.

(b) Other charges. The amount of any charge other than a finance charge that may be imposed as part of the plan, or an explanation of how the charge will be determined.

(c) Security interests. The fact that the creditor has or will acquire a security interest in the property purchased under the plan, or in other property identified by item or type.

(d) Statement of billing rights. A statement that outlines the consumer's rights and the creditor's responsibilities under §§ 226.12(c) and 226.13 and that is substantially similar to the statement found in Appendix G.

§ 226.7 Periodic statement.

The creditor shall furnish the consumer with a periodic statement that discloses the following items, to the extent applicable:

(a) Previous balance. The account balance outstanding at the beginning of the billing cycle.

(b) Identification of transactions. An identification of each credit transaction in accordance with § 226.8.

(c) Credits. Any credit to the account during the billing cycle, including the amount and the date of crediting. The date need not be provided if a delay in crediting does not result in any finance or other charge.

(d) Periodic rates. Each periodic rate that may be used to compute the finance charge, the range of balances to which it is applicable,[14] and the corresponding annual percentage rate.[15] If different periodic rates apply to different types of transactions, the types of transactions to which the periodic rates apply shall also be disclosed.

(e) Balance on which finance charge computed. The amount of the balance to which a periodic rate was applied and an explanation of how that balance was determined. When a balance is determined without first deducting all credits and payments made during the billing cycle, that fact and the amount of the credits and payments shall be disclosed.

(f) Amount of finance charge. The amount of any finance charge debited or added to the account during the billing cycle, using the term "finance charge." The components of the finance charge shall be individually itemized and identified to show the amount(s) due to the appliction of any periodic rates and the amount(s) of any other type of finance charge. If there is more than one periodic rate, the amount of the finance charge attributable to each rate need not be separately itemized and identified.

(g) Annual percentage rate. When a finance charge is imposed during the billing cycle, the annual percentage rate(s) determined under § 226.14, using the term "annual percentage rate."

(h) Other charges. The amounts, itemized and identified by type, of any charges other than finance charges debited to the account during the billing cycle.

(i) Closing date of billing cycle; new balance. The closing date of the billing cycle and the account balance outstanding on that date.

(j) Free-ride period. The date by which or the time period within which the new balance or any portion of the new balance must be paid to avoid additional finance charges. If such a time period is provided, a creditor may, at its option and without disclosure, impose no finance charge when payment is received after the time period's expiration.

(k) Address for notice of billing errors. The address to be used for notice of billing errors. Alternatively, the address may be provided on the billing rights statement permitted by § 226.9(a)(2).

[13] If no finance charge is imposed when the outstanding balance is less than a certain amount, no disclosure is required of that fact or of the balance below which no finance charge will be imposed.

[14] See footnotes 11 and 13.

[15] If a variable rate plan is involved, the creditor shall disclose the fact that the periodic rate(s) may vary.

§ 226.8 Identification of transactions.

The creditor shall identify credit transactions on or with the first periodic statement that reflects the transaction by furnishing the following information, as applicable.[16]

(a) Sale credit. For each credit transaction involving the sale of property or services, the following rules shall apply:

(1) Copy of credit document provided. When an actual copy of the receipt or other credit document is provided with the first periodic statement reflecting the transaction, the transaction is sufficiently identified if the amount of the transaction and either the date of the transaction or the date of debiting the transaction to the consumer's account are disclosed on the copy or on the periodic statement.

(2) Copy of credit document not provided—creditor and seller same or related person(s). When the creditor and the seller are the same person or related persons, and an actual copy of the receipt or other credit document is not provided with the periodic statement, the creditor shall disclose the amount and date of the transaction, and a brief identification[17] of the property or services purchased.[18]

(3) Copy of credit document not provided—creditor and seller not same or related person(s). When the creditor and seller are not the same person or related persons, and an actual copy of the receipt or other credit document is not provided with the periodic statement, the creditor shall disclose the amount and date of the transaction; the seller's name; and the city, and state or foreign country where the transaction took place.[19]

(b) Nonsale credit. A nonsale credit transaction is sufficiently identified if the first periodic statement reflecting the transaction discloses a brief identification of the transaction;[20] the amount of the transaction; and at least one of the following dates: the date of the transaction, the date of debiting the transaction to the consumer's account, or, if the consumer signed the credit document, the date appearing on the document. If an actual copy of the receipt or other credit document is provided and that copy shows the amount and at least one of the specified dates, the brief identification may be omitted.

§ 226.9 Subsequent disclosure requirements.

(a) Furnishing statement of billing rights—(1) Annual statement. The creditor shall mail or deliver the billing rights statement required by § 226.6(d) at least once per calendar year, at intervals of not less than 6 months nor more than 18 months, either to all consumers or to each consumer entitled to receive a periodic statement under § 226.5(b)(2) for any one billing cycle.

[16] Failure to disclose the information required by this section shall not be deemed a failure to comply with the regulation if: (1) The creditor maintains procedures reasonably adapted to obtain and provide the information; and (2) the creditor treats an inquiry for clarification or documentation as a notice of a billing error, including correcting the account in accordance with § 226.13(e). This applies to transactions that take place outside a state, as defined in § 226.2(a), whether or not the creditor maintains procedures reasonably adapted to obtain the required information.

[17] As an alternative to the brief identification, the creditor may disclose a number or symbol that also appears on the receipt or other credit document given to the consumer, if the number or symbol reasonably identifies that transaction with that creditor, and if the creditor treats an inquiry for clarification or documentation as a notice of a billing error, including correcting the account in accordance with § 226.13(e).

[18] An identification of property or services may be replaced by the seller's name and location of the transaction when: (1) The creditor and the seller are the same person; (2) the creditor's open-end plan has fewer than 15,000 accounts; (3) the creditor provides the consumer with point-of-sale documentation for that transaction; and (4) the creditor treats an inquiry for clarification or documentation as a notice of a billing error, including correcting the account in accordance with § 226.13(e).

[19] The creditor may omit the address or provide any suitable designation that helps the consumer to identify the transaction when the transaction (1) took place at a location that is not fixed; (2) took place in the consumer's home; or (3) was a mail or telephone order.

[20] See footnote 17.

(2) Alternative summary statement. As an alternative to paragraph (a)(1) of this section, the creditor may mail or deliver, on or with each periodic statement, a statement substantially similar to that in Appendix G.

(b) Disclosures for supplemental credit devices and additional features—(1) If a creditor, within 30 days after mailing or delivering the initial disclosures under § 226.6(a), adds a credit feature to the consumer's account or mails or delivers to the consumer a credit device for which the finance charge terms are the same as those previously disclosed, no additional disclosures are necessary. After 30 days, if the creditor adds a credit feature or furnishes a credit device (other than as a renewal, resupply, or the original issuance of a credit card) on the same finance charge terms, the creditor shall disclose, before the consumer uses the feature or device for the first time, that it is for use in obtaining credit under the terms previously disclosed.

(2) Whenever a credit feature is added or a credit device is mailed or delivered, and the finance charge terms for the feature or device differ from disclosures previously given, the disclosures required by § 226.6(a) that are applicable to the added feature or device shall be given before the consumer uses the feature or device for the first time.

(c) Change in terms—(1) Written notice required. Whenever any term required to be disclosed under § 226.6 is changed or the required minimum periodic payment is increased, the creditor shall mail or deliver written notice of the change to each consumer who may be affected. The notice shall be mailed or delivered at least 15 days prior to the effective date of the change. The 15-day timing requirement does not apply if the change has been agreed to by the consumer, or if a periodic rate or other finance charge is increased because of the consumer's delinquency or default; the notice shall be given, however, before the effective date of the change.

(2) Notice not required. No notice under this section is required when the change involves late payment charges, charges for documentary evidence, or over-the-limit charges; a reduction of any component of a finance or other charge; suspension of future credit privileges or termination of an account or plan; or when the change results from an agreement involving a court proceeding, or from the consumer's default or delinquency (other than an increase in the periodic rate or other finance charge).

(d) Finance charge imposed at time of transaction. (1) Any person, other than the card issuer, who imposes a finance charge at the time of honoring a consumer's credit card, shall disclose the amount of that finance charge prior to its imposition.

(2) The card issuer, if other than the person honoring the consumer's credit card, shall have no responsibility for the disclosure required by paragraph (d)(1) of this section, and shall not consider any such charge for purposes of §§ 226.6 and 226.7.

§ 226.10 Prompt crediting of payments.

(a) General rule. A creditor shall credit a payment to the consumer's account as of the date of receipt, except when a delay in crediting does not result in a finance or other charge or except as provided in paragraph (b) of this section.

(b) Specific requirements for payments. If a creditor specifies, on or with the periodic statement, requirements for the consumer to follow in making payments, but accepts a payment that does not conform to the requirements, the creditor shall credit the payment within 5 days of receipt.

(c) Adjustment of account. If a creditor fails to credit a payment, as required by paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section, in time to avoid the imposition of finance or other charges, the creditor shall adjust the consumer's account so that the charges imposed are credited to the consumer's account during the next billing cycle.

§ 226.11 Treatment of credit balances.

When a credit balance in excess of $1 is created on a credit account (through transmittal of funds to a creditor in excess of the total balance due on an account, through rebates of unearned finance charges or insurance premiums, or through amounts otherwise owed to or held for the benefit of a consumer), the creditor shall:

(a) Credit the amount of the credit balance to the consumer's account;

(b) Refund any part of the remaining credit balance within 7 business days from receipt of a written request from the consumer; and

(c) Make a good faith effort to refund to the consumer by cash, check, or money order, or credit to a deposit account of the consumer, any part of the credit balance remaining in the account for more than 6 months. No further action is required if the consumer's current location is not known to the creditor and cannot be traced through the consumer's last known address or telephone number.

§ 226.12 Special credit card provisions.

(a) Issuance of credit cards. Regardless of the purpose for which a credit card is to be used, including business, commercial, or agricultural use, no credit card shall be issued to any person except:

(1) In response to an oral or written request or application for the card; or

(2) As a renewal of, or substitute for, an accepted credit card.[21]

(b) Liability of cardholder for unauthorized use—(1) Limitation on amount. The liability of a cardholder for unauthorized use[22] of a credit card shall not exceed the lesser of $50 or the amount of money, property, labor, or services obtained by the unauthorized use before notification to the card issuer under paragraph (b)(3) of this section.

(2) Conditions of liability. A cardholder shall be liable for unauthorized use of a credit card only if:

(i) The credit card is an accepted credit card;

(ii) The card issuer has provided adequate notice[23] of the cardholder's maximum potential liability and of means by which the card issuer may be notified of loss or theft of the card. The notice shall state that the cardholder's liability shall not exceed $50 (or any lesser amount) and that the cardholder may give oral or written notification, and shall describe a means of notification (for example, a telephone number, an address, or both); and

(iii) The card issuer has provided a means to identify the cardholder on the account or the authorized user of the card.

(3) Notification to card issuer. Notification to a card issuer is given when steps have been taken as may be reasonably required in the ordinary course of business to provide the card issuer with the pertinent information about the loss, theft, or possible unauthorized use of a credit card, regardless of whether any particular officer, employee, or agent of the card issuer does, in fact, receive the information. Notification may be given, at the option of the person giving it, in person, by telephone, or in writing. Notification in writing is considered given at the time of receipt or, whether or not received, at the expiration of the time ordinarily required for transmission, whichever is earlier.

(4) Effect of other applicable law or agreement. If state law or an agreement between a cardholder and the card issuer imposes lesser liability than that provided in this paragraph, the lesser liability shall govern.

(5) Business use of credit cards. If 10 or more credit cards are issued by one

[21] For purposes of this section, "accepted credit card" means any credit card that a cardholder has requested or applied for and received, or has signed, used, or authorized another person to use to obtain credit. Any credit card issued as a renewal or substitute in accordance with this paragraph becomes an accepted credit card when received by the cardholder.

[22] "Unauthorized use" means the use of a credit card by a person, other than the cardholder, who does not have actual, implied, or apparent authority for such use, and from which the cardholder receives no benefit.

[23] "Adequate notice" means a printed notice to a cardholder that sets forth clearly the pertinent facts so that the cardholder may reasonably be expected to have noticed it and understood its meaning. The notice may be given by any means reasonably assuring receipt by the cardholder.

card issuer for use by the employees of an organization, this section does not prohibit the card issuer and the organization from agreeing to liability for unauthorized use without regard to this section. However, liability for unauthorized use may be imposed on an employee of the organization, by either the card issuer or the organization, only in accordance with this section.

(c) Right of cardholder to assert claims or defenses against card issuer[24]—(1) General rule. When a person who honors a credit card fails to resolve satisfactorily a dispute as to property or services purchased with the credit card in a consumer credit transaction, the cardholder may assert against the card issuer all claims (other than tort claims) and defenses arising out of the transaction and relating to the failure to resolve the dispute. The cardholder may withhold payment up to the amount of credit outstanding for the property or services that gave rise to the dispute and any finance or other charges imposed on that amount.[25]

(2) Adverse credit reports prohibited. If, in accordance with paragraph (c)(1) of this section, the cardholder withholds payment of the amount of credit outstanding for the disputed transaction, the card issuer shall not report that amount as delinquent until the dispute is settled or judgment is rendered.

(3) Limitations. The rights stated in paragraphs (c)(1) and (2) of this section apply only if:

(i) The cardholder has made a good faith attempt to resolve the dispute with the person honoring the credit card; and

(ii) The amount of credit extended to obtain the property or services that result in the assertion of the claim or defense by the cardholder exceeds $50, and the disputed transaction occurred in the same state as the cardholder's current designated address or, if not within the same state, within 100 miles from that address.[26]

(d) Offsets by card issuer prohibited. (1) A card issuer may not take any action, either before or after termination of credit card privileges, to offset a cardholder's indebtedness arising from a consumer credit transaction under the relevant credit card plan against funds of the cardholder held on deposit with the card issuer.

(2) This paragraph does not alter or affect the right of a card issuer acting under state or Federal law to do any of the following with regard to funds of a cardholder held on deposit with the card issuer if the same procedure is constitutionally available to creditors generally: obtain or enforce a consensual security interest in the funds; attach or otherwise levy upon the funds; or obtain or enforce a court order relating to the funds.

(3) This paragraph does not prohibit a plan, if authorized in writing by the cardholder, under which the card issuer may periodically deduct all or part of the cardholder's credit card debt from a deposit account held with

[24] This paragraph does not apply to the use of a check guarantee card or a debit card in connection with an overdraft credit plan, or to a check guarantee card used in connection with cash advance checks.

[25] The amount of the claim or defense that the cardholder may assert shall not exceed the amount of credit outstanding for the disputed transaction at the time the cardholder first notifies the card issuer or the person honoring the credit card of the existence of the claim or defense. To determine the amount of credit outstanding for purposes of this section, payments and other credits shall be applied to: (1) Late charges in the order of entry to the account; then to (2) finance charges in the order of entry to the account; and then to (3) any other debits in the order of entry to the account. If more than one item is included in a single extension of credit, credits are to be distributed pro rata according to prices and applicable taxes.

[26] The limitations stated in paragraph (c)(3)(ii) of this section shall not apply when the person honoring the credit card: (1) Is the same person as the card issuer; (2) is controlled by the card issuer directly or indirectly; (3) is under the direct or indirect control of a third person that also directly or indirectly controls the card issuer; (4) controls the card issuer directly or indirectly; (5) is a franchised dealer in the card issuer's products or services; or (6) has obtained the order for the disputed transaction through a mail solicitation made or participated in by the card issuer.

(e) Prompt notification of returns and crediting of refunds. (1) When a creditor other than the card issuer accepts the return of property or forgives a debt for services that is to be reflected as a credit to the consumer's credit card account, that creditor shall, within 7 business days from accepting the return or forgiving the debt, transmit a credit statement to the card issuer through the card issuer's normal channels for credit statements.

(2) The card issuer shall, within 3 business days from receipt of a credit statement, credit the consumer's account with the amount of the refund.

(3) If a creditor other than a card issuer routinely gives cash refunds to consumers paying in cash, the creditor shall also give credit or cash refunds to consumers using credit cards, unless it discloses at the time the transaction is consummated that credit or cash refunds for returns are not given. This section does not require refunds for returns nor does it prohibit refunds in kind.

(f) Discounts; tie-in arrangements. No card issuer may, by contract or otherwise:

(1) Prohibit any person who honors a credit card from offering a discount to a consumer to induce the consumer to pay by cash, check, or similar means rather than by use of a credit card or its underlying account for the purchase of property or services; or

(2) Require any person who honors the card issuer's credit card to open or maintain any account or obtain any other service not essential to the operation of the credit card plan from the card issuer or any other person, as a condition of participation in a credit card plan. If maintenance of an account for clearing purposes is determined to be essential to the operation of the credit card plan, it may be required only if no service charges or minimum balance requirements are imposed.

(g) Relation to Electronic Fund Transfer Act and Regulation E. For guidance on whether Regulation Z or Regulation E applies in instances involving both credit and electronic fund transfer aspects, refer to Regulation E, 12 CFR 205.5(c) regarding issuance and 205.6(d) regarding liability for unauthorized use. On matters other than issuance and liability, this section applies to the credit aspects of combined credit/electronic fund transfer transactions, as applicable.

§ 226.13 Billing error resolution [27]

(a) Definition of billing error. For purposes of this section, the term "billing error" means:

(1) A reflection on or with a periodic statement of an extension of credit that is not made to the consumer or to a person who has actual, implied, or apparent authority to use the consumer's credit card or open-end credit plan.

(2) A reflection on or with a periodic statement of an extension of credit that is not identified in accordance with the requirements of §§ 226.7(b) and 226.8.

(3) A reflection on or with a periodic statement of an extension of credit for property or services not accepted by the consumer or the consumer's designee, or not delivered to the consumer or the consumer's designee as agreed.

(4) A reflection on a periodic statement of the creditor's failure to credit properly a payment or other credit issued to the consumer's account.

(5) A reflection on a periodic statement of a computational or similar error of an accounting nature that is made by the creditor.

(6) A reflection on a periodic statement of an extension of credit for which the consumer requests additional clarification, including documentary evidence.

(7) The creditor's failure to mail or deliver a periodic statement to the consumer's last known address if that address was received by the creditor, in writing, at least 20 days before the end of the billing cycle for which the statement was required.

---

[27] A creditor shall not accelerate any part of the consumer's indebtedness or restrict or close a consumer's account solely because the consumer has exercised in good faith rights provided by this section. A creditor may be subject to the forfeiture penalty under section 161(e) of the Act for failure to comply with any of the requirements of this section.

(b) Billing error notice.[28] A billing error notice is a written notice[29] from a consumer that:

(1) Is received by a creditor at the address disclosed under § 226.7(k) no later than 60 days after the creditor transmitted the first periodic statement that reflects the alleged billing error;

(2) Enables the creditor to identify the consumer's name and account number; and

(3) To the extent possible, indicates the consumer's belief and the reasons for the belief that a billing error exists, and the type, date, and amount of the error.

(c) Time for resolution; general procedures. (1) The creditor shall mail or deliver written acknowledgment to the consumer within 30 days of receiving a billing error notice, unless the creditor has complied with the appropriate resolution procedures of paragraphs (e) and (f) of this section, as applicable, within the 30-day period; and

(2) The creditor shall comply with the appropriate resolution procedures of paragraphs (e) and (f) of this section, as applicable, within 2 complete billing cycles (but in no event later than 90 days) after receiving a billing error notice.

(d) Rules pending resolution. Until a billing error is resolved under paragraph (e) or (f) of this section, the following rules apply:

(1) Consumer's right to withhold disputed amount; collection action prohibited. The consumer need not pay (and the creditor may not try to collect) any portion of any required payment that the consumer believes is related to the disputed amount (including related finance or other charges).[30] If the cardholder maintains a deposit account with the card issuer and has agreed to pay the credit card indebtedness by periodic deductions from the cardholder's deposit account, the card issuer shall not deduct any part of the disputed amount or related finance or other charges if a billing error notice is received any time up to 3 business days before the scheduled payment date.

(2) Adverse credit reports prohibited. The creditor or its agent shall not (directly or indirectly) make or threaten to make an adverse report to any person about the consumer's credit standing, or report that an amount or account is delinquent, because the consumer failed to pay the disputed amount or related finance or other charges.

(e) Procedures if billing error occurred as asserted. If a creditor determines that a billing error occurred as asserted, it shall within the time limits in paragraph (c)(2) of this section:

(1) Correct the billing error and credit the consumer's account with any disputed amount and related finance or other charges, as applicable; and

(2) Mail or deliver a correction notice to the consumer.

(f) Procedures if different billing error or no billing error occurred. If, after conducting a reasonable investigation,[31] a creditor determines that no

[28] The creditor need not comply with the requirements of paragraphs (c) through (g) of this section if the consumer concludes that no billing error occurred and voluntarily withdraws the billing error notice.

[29] The creditor may require that the written notice not be made on the payment medium or other material accompanying the periodic statement if the creditor so stipulates in the billing rights statement required by §§ 226.6(d) and 226.9(a).

[30] A creditor is not prohibited from taking action to collect any undisputed portion of the item or bill; from deducting any disputed amount and related finance or other charges from the consumer's credit limit on the account; or from reflecting a disputed amount and related finance or other charges on a periodic statement, provided that the creditor indicates on or with the periodic statement that payment of any disputed amount and related finance or other charges is not required pending the creditor's compliance with this section.

[31] If a consumer submits a billing error notice alleging either the nondelivery of property or services under paragraph (a)(3) of this section or that information appearing on a periodic statement is incorrect because a person honoring the consumer's credit card has made an incorrect report to billing error occurred or that a different billing error occurred from that asserted, the creditor shall within the time limits in paragraph (c)(2) of this section:

(1) Mail or deliver to the consumer an explanation that sets forth the reasons for the creditor's belief that the billing error alleged by the consumer is incorrect in whole or in part;

(2) Furnish copies of documentary evidence of the consumer's indebtedness, if the consumer so requests; and

(3) If a different billing error occurred, correct the billing error and credit the consumer's account with any disputed amount and related finance or other charges, as applicable.

(g) Creditor's rights and duties after resolution. If a creditor, after complying with all of the requirements of this section, determines that a consumer owes all or part of the disputed amount and related finance or other charges, the creditor:

(1) Shall promptly notify the consumer in writing of the time when payment is due and the portion of the disputed amount and related finance or other charges that the consumer still owes;

(2) Shall allow any time period disclosed under §§ 226.6(a)(1) and 226.7(j), during which the consumer can pay the amount due under paragraph (g)(1) of this section without incurring additional finance or other charges;

(3) May report an account or amount as delinquent because the amount due under paragraph (g)(1) of this section remains unpaid after the creditor has allowed any time period disclosed under §§ 226.6(a)(1) and 266.7(j) or 10 days (whichever is longer) during which the consumer can pay the amount; but

(4) May not report that an amount or account is delinquent because the amount due under paragraph (g)(1) of the section remains unpaid, if the creditor receives (within the time allowed for payment in paragraph (g)(3) of this section) further written notice from the consumer that any portion of the billing error is still in dispute, unless the creditor also:

(i) Promptly reports that the amount or account is in dispute;

(ii) Mails or delivers to the consumer (at the same time the report is made) a written notice of the name and address of each person to whom the creditor makes a report; and

(iii) Promptly reports any subsequent resolution of the reported delinquency to all persons to whom the creditor has made a report.

(h) Reassertion of billing error. A creditor that has fully complied with the requirements of this section has no further responsibilities under this section (other than as provided in paragraph (g)(4) of this section) if a consumer reasserts substantially the same billing error.

(i) Relation to Electronic Fund Transfer Act and Regulation E. If an extension of credit is incident to an electronic fund transfer, under an agreement between a consumer and a financial institution to extend credit when the consumer's account is overdrawn or to maintain a specified minimum balance in the consumer's account, the creditor shall comply with the requirements of Regulation E, 12 CFR 205.11 governing error resolution rather than those of paragraphs (a), (b), (c), (e), (f), and (h) of this section.

§ 226.14 Determination of annual percentage rate.

(a) General rule. The annual percentage rate is a measure of the cost of credit, expressed as a yearly rate. An annual percentage rate shall be considered accurate if it is not more than ⅛ of 1 percentage point above or below the annual percentage rate determined in accordance with this section.[31a] the card issuer, the creditor shall not deny the assertion unless it conducts a reasonable investigation and determines that the property or services were actually delivered, mailed, or sent as agreed or that the information was correct.

[31a] An error in disclosure of the annual percentage rate or finance charge shall not, in itself, be considered a violation of this regulation if: (1) The error resulted from a corresponding error in a calculation tool used in good faith by the creditor; and (2) upon discovery of the error, the creditor

(b) Annual percentage rate for initial disclosures and for advertising purposes. Where one or more periodic rates may be used to compute the finance charge, the annual percentage rate(s) to be disclosed for purposes of §§ 226.6(a)(2) and 226.16(b)(2) shall be computed by multiplying each periodic rate by the number of periods in a year.

(c) Annual percentage rate for periodic statements. The annual percentage rate(s) to be disclosed for purposes of § 226.7(d) shall be computed by multiplying each periodic rate by the number of periods in a year and, for purposes of § 226.7(g), shall be determined as follows:

(1) If the finance charge is determined solely by applying one or more periodic rates, at the creditor's option, either:

(i) By multiplying each periodic rate by the number of periods in a year; or

(ii) By dividing the total finance charge for the billing cycle by the sum of the balances to which the periodic rates were applied and multiplying the quotient (expressed as a percentage) by the number of billing cycles in a year.

(2) If the finance charge imposed during the billing cycle is or includes a minimum, fixed, or other charge not due to the application of a periodic rate, other than a charge with respect to any specific transaction during the billing cycle, by dividing the total finance charge for the billing cycle by the amount of the balance(s) to which it is applicable[32] and multiplying the quotient (expressed as a percentage) by the number of billing cycles in a year.[33]

(3) If the finance charge imposed during the billing cycle is or includes a charge relating to a specific transaction during the billing cycle (even if the total finance charge also includes any other minimum, fixed, or other charge not due to the application of a periodic rate), by dividing the total finance charge imposed during the billing cycle by the total of all balances and other amounts on which a finance charge was imposed during the billing cycle without duplication, and multiplying the quotient (expressed as a percentage) by the number of billing cycles in a year,[34] except that the annual percentage rate shall not be less than the largest rate determined by multiplying each periodic rate imposed during the billing cycle by the number of periods in a year.[35]

(4) If the finance charge imposed during the billing cycle is or includes a minimum, fixed, or other charge not due to the application of a periodic rate and the total finance charge imposed during the billing cycle does not exceed 50 cents for a monthly or longer billing cycle, or the pro rata part of 50 cents for a billing cycle shorter than monthly, at the creditor's option, by multiplying each applicable periodic rate by the number of periods in a year, notwithstanding the provisions of paragraphs (c)(2) and (3) of this section.

(d) Calculations where daily periodic rate applied. If the provisions of paragraph (c)(1)(ii) or (2) of this section apply and all or a portion of the finance charge is determined by the application of one or more daily periodic rates, the annual percentage rate may be determined either:

(1) By dividing the total finance charge by the average of the daily balances and multiplying the quotient by the number of billing cycles in a year; or

(2) By dividing the total finance charge by the sum of the daily balances and multiplying the quotient by 365.

promptly discontinues use of that calculation tool for disclosure purposes, and notifies the Board in writing of the error in the calculation tool.

[32] If there is no balance to which the finance charge is applicable, an annual percentage rate cannot be determined under this section.

[33] Where the finance charge imposed during the billing cycle is or includes a loan fee, points, or similar charge that relates to the opening of the account, the amount of such charge shall not be included in the calculation of the annual percentage rate.

§ 226.15 Right of rescission.

(a) Consumer's right to rescind. (1)(i) Except as provided in paragraph (a)(1)(ii) of this section, in a credit plan in which a security interest is or will be retained or acquired in a consumer's principal dwelling, each consumer whose ownership interest is or will be subject to the security interest shall have the right to rescind: each credit extension made under the plan; the plan when the plan is opened; a security interest when added or increased to secure an existing plan; and the increase when a credit limit on the plan is increased.

(ii) As provided in section 125(e) of the Act, the consumer does not have the right to rescind each credit extension made under the plan if such extension is made in accordance with a previously established credit limit for the plan.

(2) To exercise the right to rescind, the consumer shall notify the creditor of the rescission by mail, telegram, or other means of written communication. Notice is considered given when mailed, or when filed for telegraphic transmission, or, if sent by other means, when delivered to the creditor's designated place of business.

(3) The consumer may exercise the right to rescind until midnight of the third business day following the occurrence described in paragraph (a)(1) of this section that gave rise to the right of rescission, delivery of the notice required by paragraph (b) of this section, or delivery of all material disclosures,[36] whichever occurs last. If the required notice and material disclosures are not delivered, the right to rescind shall expire 3 years after the occurrence giving rise to the right of rescission, or upon transfer of all of the consumer's interest in the property, or upon sale of the property, whichever occurs first. In the case of certain administrative proceedings, the rescission period shall be extended in accordance with section 125(f) of the Act.

(4) When more than one consumer has the right to rescind, the exercise of the right by one consumer shall be effective as to all consumers.

(b) Notice of right to rescind. In any transaction or occurrence subject to rescission, a creditor shall deliver 2 copies of the notice of the right to rescind to each consumer entitled to rescind. The notice shall identify the transaction or occurrence and clearly and conspicuously disclose the following:

(1) The retention or acquisition of a security interest in the consumer's principal dwelling.

(2) The consumer's right to rescind, as described in paragraph (a)(1) of this section.

(3) How to exercise the right to rescind, with a form for that purpose, designating the address of the creditor's place of business.

(4) The effects of rescission, as described in paragraph (d) of this section.

(5) The date the rescission period expires.

(c) Delay of creditor's performance. Unless a consumer waives the right to rescind under paragraph (e) of this section, no money shall be disbursed other than in escrow, no services shall be performed, and no materials delivered until after the rescission period has expired and the creditor is reasonably satisfied that the consumer has not rescinded. A creditor does not violate this section if a third party with no knowledge of the event activating the rescission right does not delay in providing materials or services, as long as the debt incurred for those materials or services is not secured by the property subject to rescission.

(d) Effects of rescission. (1) When a consumer rescinds a transaction, the security interest giving rise to the right of rescission becomes void, and the consumer shall not be liable for any amount, including any finance charge.

[36] The term "material disclosures" means the information that must be provided to satisfy the requirements in § 226.6 with regard to the method of determining the finance charge and the balance upon which a finance charge will be imposed, the annual percentage rate, and the amount or method of determining the amount of any membership or participation fee that may be imposed as part of the plan.

(2) Within 20 calendar days after receipt of a notice of rescission, the creditor shall return any money or property that has been given to anyone in connection with the transaction and shall take any action necessary to reflect the termination of the security interest.

(3) If the creditor has delivered any money or property, the consumer may retain possession until the creditor has met its obligation under paragraph (d)(2) of this section. When the creditor has complied with that paragraph, the consumer shall tender the money or property to the creditor or, where the latter would be impracticable or inequitable, tender its reasonable value. At the consumer's option, tender of property may be made at the location of the property or at the consumer's residence. Tender of money must be made at the creditor's designated place of business. If the creditor does not take possession of the money or property within 20 calendar days after the consumer's tender, the consumer may keep it without further obligation.

(4) The procedures outlined in paragraphs (d)(2) and (3) of this section may be modified by court order.

(e) Consumer's waiver of right to rescind. The consumer may modify or waive the right to rescind if the consumer determines that the extension of credit is needed to meet a bona fide personal financial emergency. To modify or waive the right, the consumer shall give the creditor a dated written statement that describes the emergency, that specifically modifies or waives the right to rescind, and that bears the signatures of the consumers entitled to rescind. Printed forms for this purpose are prohibited.

(f) Exempt transactions. The right to rescind does not apply to the following:

(1) A residential mortgage transaction.

(2) A credit plan in which a state agency is a creditor.

§ 226.16 Advertising.

(a) Actually available terms. If an advertisement for credit states specific credit terms, it shall state only those terms that actually are or will be arranged or offered by the creditor.

(b) Advertisement of terms that require additional disclosures. If any of the terms required to be disclosed under § 226.6 is set forth in an advertisement, the advertisement shall also clearly and conspicuously set forth the following:

(1) Any minimum, fixed, transaction, activity or similar charge that could be imposed.

(2) Any periodic rate that may be applied expressed as an annual percentage rate as determined under § 226.14(b). If the plan provides for a variable periodic rate, that fact shall be disclosed.

(3) Any membership or participation fee that could be imposed.

(c) Catalogs and multiple-page advertisements. (1) If a catalog or other multiple-page advertisement gives information in a table or schedule in sufficient detail to permit determination of the disclosures required by paragraph (b) of this section, it shall be considered a single advertisement if:

(i) The table or schedule is clearly and conspicuously set forth; and

(ii) Any statement of terms set forth in § 226.6 appearing anywhere else in the catalog or advertisement clearly refers to that page on which the table or schedule begins.

(2) A catalog or multiple-page advertisement complies with this paragraph if the table or schedule of terms includes all appropriate disclosures for a representative scale of amounts up to the level of the more commonly sold higher-priced property or services offered.

Subpart C—Closed-End Credit

§ 226.17 General disclosure requirements.

(a) Form of disclosures. (1) The creditor shall make the disclosures required by this subpart clearly and conspicuously in writing, in a form that the consumer may keep. The disclosures shall be grouped together, shall be segregated from everything else, and shall not contain any information not directly related[37] to the disclosures required under § 226.18.[38] The itemization of the amount financed under § 226.18(c)(1) must be separate from the other disclosures under that section.

(2) The terms "finance charge" and "annual percentage rate," when required to be disclosed under § 226.18 (d) and (e) together with a corresponding amount or percentage rate, shall be more conspicuous than any other disclosure, except the creditor's identity under § 226.18(a).

(b) Time of disclosures. The creditor shall make disclosures before consummation of the transaction. In certain residential mortgage transactions, special timing requirements are set forth in § 226.19. In certain transactions involving mail or telephone orders or a series of sales, the timing of the disclosures may be delayed in accordance with paragraphs (g) and (h) of this section.

(c) Basis of disclosures and use of estimates. (1) The disclosures shall reflect the terms of the legal obligation between the parties.

(2) If any information necessary for an accurate disclosure is unknown to the creditor, it shall make the disclosure based on the best information reasonably available and shall state that the disclosure is an estimate.

(3) The creditor may disregard the effects of the following in making calculations and disclosures.

(i) That payments must be collected in whole cents.

(ii) That dates of scheduled payments and advances may be changed because the scheduled date is not a business day.

(iii) That months have different numbers of days.

(iv) The occurrence of leap year.

(4) In making calculations and disclosures, the creditor may disregard any irregularity in the first period that falls within the limits described below and any payment schedule irregularity that results from the irregular first period:

(i) For transactions in which the term is less than 1 year, a first period not more than 6 days shorter or 13 days longer than a regular period;

(ii) For transactions in which the term is at least 1 year and less than 10 years, a first period not more than 11 days shorter or 21 days longer than a regular period; and

(iii) For transactions in which the term is at least 10 years, a first period shorter than or not more than 32 days longer than a regular period.

(5) If an obligation is payable on demand, the creditor shall make the disclosures based on an assumed maturity of 1 year. If an alternate maturity date is stated in the legal obligation between the parties, the disclosures shall be based on that date.

(6)(i) A series of advances under an agreement to extend credit up to a certain amount may be considered as one transaction.

(ii) When a multiple-advance loan to finance the construction of a dwelling may be permanently financed by the same creditor, the construction phase and the permanent phase may be treated as either one transaction or more than one transaction.

(d) Multiple creditors; multiple consumers. If a transaction involves more than one creditor, only one set of disclosures shall be given and the creditors shall agree among themselves which creditor must comply with the requirements that this regulation imposes on any or all of them. If there is more than one consumer, the disclosures may be made to any consumer who is primarily liable on the obligation. If the transaction is rescindable under § 226.23, however, the disclosures shall be made to each consumer who has the right to rescind.

(e) Effect of subsequent events. If a disclosure becomes inaccurate because of an event that occurs after the creditor delivers the required disclosures, the inaccuracy is not a violation of this regulation, although new disclosures may be required under paragraph (f) of this section, § 226.19, or § 226.20.

[37] The disclosures may include an acknowledgment of receipt, the date of the transaction, and the consumer's name, address, and account number.

[38] The following disclosures may be made together or separately from other required disclosures: the creditor's identity under § 226.18(a), the variable rate example under § 226.18(f)(4), insurance under § 226.18(n), and certain security interest charges under § 226.18(o).

(f) Early disclosures. If disclosures are given before the date of consummation of a transaction and a subsequent event makes them inaccurate, the creditor shall disclose the changed terms before consummation, if the annual percentage rate in the consummated transaction varies from the annual percentage rate disclosed under § 226.18(e) by more than ⅛ of 1 percentage point in a regular transaction, or more than ¼ of 1 percentage point in an irregular transaction, as defined in § 226.22(a).

(g) Mail or telephone orders—delay in disclosures. If a creditor receives a purchase order or a request for an extension of credit by mail, telephone, or any other written or electronic communication without face-to-face or direct telephone solicitation, the creditor may delay the disclosures until the due date of the first payment, if the following information for representative amounts or ranges of credit is made available in written form to the consumer or to the public before the actual purchase order or request:

(1) The cash price or the principal loan amount.

(2) The total sale price.

(3) The finance charge.

(4) The annual percentage rate, and if the rate may increase after consummation, the following disclosures:

(i) The circumstances under which the rate may increase.

(ii) Any limitations on the increase.

(iii) The effect of an increase.

(5) The terms of repayment.

(h) Series of sales—delay in disclosures. If a credit sale is one of a series made under an agreement providing that subsequent sales may be added to an outstanding balance, the creditor may delay the required disclosures until the due date of the first payment for the current sale, if the following two conditions are met:

(1) The consumer has approved in writing the annual percentage rate or rates, the range of balances to which they apply, and the method of treating any unearned finance charge on an existing balance.

(2) The creditor retains no security interest in any property after the creditor has received payments equal to the cash price and any finance charge attributable to the sale of that property. For purposes of this provision, in the case of items purchased on different dates, the first purchased is deemed the first item paid for; in the case of items purchased on the same date, the lowest priced is deemed the first item paid for.

(i) Interim student credit extensions. For each transaction involving an interim credit extension under a student credit program, the creditor need not make the following disclosures: the finance charge under § 226.18(d), the payment schedule under § 226.18(g), the total of payments under § 226.18(h), or the total sale price under § 226.18(j).

§ 226.18 Content of disclosures.

For each transaction, the creditor shall disclose the following information as applicable:

(a) Creditor. The identity of the creditor making the disclosures.

(b) Amount financed. The "amount financed," using that term, and a brief description such as "the amount of credit provided to you or on your behalf." The amount financed is calculated by:

(1) Determining the principal loan amount or the cash price (subtracting any downpayment);

(2) Adding any other amounts that are financed by the creditor and are not part of the finance charge; and

(3) Subtracting any prepaid finance charge.

(c) Itemization of amount financed. (1) A separate written itemization of the amount financed, including: [39]

(i) The amount of any proceeds distributed directly to the consumer.

(ii) The amount credited to the consumer's account with the creditor.

(iii) Any amounts paid to other persons by the creditor on the consumer's behalf. The creditor shall identify those persons.[40]

---

[39] Good faith estimates of settlement costs provided for transactions subject to the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (12 U.S.C. 2601 et seq.) may be substituted for the disclosures required by paragraph (c) of this section.

(iv) The prepaid finance charge.

(2) The creditor need not comply with paragraph (c)(1) of this section if the creditor provides a statement that the consumer has the right to receive a written itemization of the amount financed, together with a space for the consumer to indicate whether it is desired, and the consumer does not request it.

(d) Finance charge. The "finance charge," using that term, and a brief description such as "the dollar amount the credit will cost you."[41]

(e) Annual percentage rate. The "annual percentage rate," using that term, and a brief description such as "the cost of your credit as a yearly rate."[42]

(f) Variable rate. If the annual percentage rate may increase after consummation, the following disclosures:[43]

(1) The circumstances under which the rate may increase.

(2) Any limitations on the increase.

(3) The effect of an increase.

(4) An example of the payment terms that would result from an increase.

(g) Payment schedule. The number, amounts, and timing of payments scheduled to repay the obligation.

(1) In a demand obligation with no alternate maturity date, the creditor may comply with this paragraph by disclosing the due dates or payment periods of any scheduled interest payments for the first year.

(2) In a transaction in which a series of payments varies because a finance charge is applied to the unpaid principal balance, the creditor may comply with this paragraph by disclosing the following information:

(i) The dollar amounts of the largest and smallest payments in the series.

(ii) A reference to the variations in the other payments in the series.

(h) Total of payments. The "total of payments," using that term, and a descriptive explanation such as "the amount you will have paid when you have made all scheduled payments."[44]

(i) Demand feature. If the obligation has a demand feature, that fact shall be disclosed. When the disclosures are based on an assumed maturity of 1 year as provided in § 226.17(c)(5), that fact shall also be disclosed.

(j) Total sale price. In a credit sale, the "total sale price," using that term, and a descriptive explanation (including the amount of any downpayment) such as "the total price of your purchase on credit, including your downpayment of $——." The total sale price is the sum of the cash price, the items described in paragraph (b)(2), and the finance charge disclosed under paragraph (d) of this section.

(k) Prepayment. (1) When an obligation includes a finance charge computed from time to time by application of a rate to the unpaid principal balance, a statement indicating whether or not a penalty may be imposed if the obligation is prepaid in full.

(2) When an obligation includes a finance charge other than the finance charge described in paragraph (k)(1) of this section, a statement indicating whether or not the consumer is entitled to a rebate of any finance charge if the obligation is prepaid in full.

(l) Late payment. Any dollar or percentage charge that may be imposed before maturity due to a late payment, other than a deferral or extension charge.

[40] The following payees may be described using generic or other general terms and need not be further identified: public officials or government agencies, credit reporting agencies, appraisers, and insurance companies.

[41] The finance charge shall be considered accurate if it is not more than $5 above or below the exact finance charge in a transaction involving an amount financed of $1,000 or less, or not more than $10 above or below the exact finance charge in a transaction involving an amount financed of more that $1,000.

[42] For any transaction involving a finance charge of $5 or less on an amount financed of $75 or less, or a finance charge of $7.50 or less on an amount financed of more than $75, the creditor need not disclose the annual percentage rate.

[43] Information provided in accordance with variable rate regulations of other federal agencies may be substituted for the disclosures required by paragraph (f) of this section.

[44] In any transaction involving a single payment, the creditor need not disclose the total of payments.

(m) Security interest. The fact that the creditor has or will acquire a security interest in the property purchased as part of the transaction, or in other property identified by item or type.

(n) Insurance. The items required by § 226.4(d) in order to exclude certain insurance premiums from the finance charge.

(o) Certain security interest charges. The disclosures required by § 226.4(e) in order to exclude from the finance charge certain fees prescribed by law or certain premiums for insurance in lieu of perfecting a security interest.

(p) Contract reference. A statement that the consumer should refer to the appropriate contract document for information about nonpayment, default, the right to accelerate the maturity of the obligation, and prepayment rebates and penalties. At the creditor's option, the statement may also include a reference to the contract for further information about security interests and, in a residential mortgage transaction, about the creditor's policy regarding assumption of the obligation.

(q) Assumption policy. In a residential mortgage transaction, a statement whether or not a subsequent purchaser of the dwelling from the consumer may be permitted to assume the remaining obligation on its original terms.

(r) Required deposit. If the creditor requires the consumer to maintain a deposit as a condition of the specific transaction, a statement that the annual percentage rate does not reflect the effect of the required deposit.[45]

§ 226.19 Certain residential mortgage transactions.

(a) Time of disclosure. In a residential mortgage transaction subject to the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (12 U.S.C. 2601 et seq.) the creditor shall make good faith estimates of the disclosures required by § 226.18 before consummation, or shall deliver or place them in the mail not later than 3 business days after the creditor receives the consumer's written application, whichever is earlier.

(b) Redisclosure required. If the annual percentage rate in the consummated transaction varies from the annual percentage rate disclosed under § 226.18(e) by more than ⅛ of 1 percentage point in a regular transaction or more than ¼ of 1 percentage point in an irregular transaction, as defined in § 226.22, the creditor shall disclose the changed terms no later than consummation or settlement.

§ 226.20 Subsequent disclosure requirements.

(a) Refinancings. A refinancing occurs when an existing obligation that was subject to this subpart is satisfied and replaced by a new obligation undertaken by the same consumer. A refinancing is a new transaction requiring new disclosures to the consumer. The new finance charge shall include any unearned portion of the old finance charge that is not credited to the existing obligation. The following shall not be treated as a refinancing:

(1) A renewal of a single payment obligation with no change in the original terms.

(2) A reduction in the annual percentage rate with a corresponding change in the payment schedule.

(3) An agreement involving a court proceeding.

(4) A change in the payment schedule or a change in collateral requirements as a result of the consumer's default or delinquency, unless the rate is increased, or the new amount financed exceeds the unpaid balance plus earned finance charge and premiums for continuation of insurance of the types described in § 226.4(d).

(5) The renewal of optional insurance purchased by the consumer and added to an existing transaction, if disclosures relating to the initial purchase were provided as required by this subpart.

[45] A required deposit need not include, for example: (1) an escrow account for items such as taxes, insurance or repairs; (2) a deposit that earns not less than 5 percent per year; or (3) payments under a Morris Plan.

(b) Assumptions. An assumption occurs when a creditor expressly agrees in writing with a subsequent consumer to accept that consumer as a primary obligor on an existing residential mortgage transaction. Before the assumption occurs, the creditor shall make new disclosures to the subsequent consumer, based on the remaining obligation. If the finance charge originally imposed on the existing obligation was an add-on or discount finance charge, the creditor need only disclose:

(1) The unpaid balance of the obligation assumed.

(2) The total charges imposed by the creditor in connection with the assumption.

(3) The information required to be disclosed under § 226.18(k), (l), (m), and (n).

(4) The annual percentage rate originally imposed on the obligation.

(5) The payment schedule under § 226.18(g) and the total of payments under § 226.18(h) based on the remaining obligation.

§ 226.21 Treatment of credit balances.

When a credit balance in excess of $1 is created in connection with a transaction (through transmittal of funds to a creditor in excess of the total balance due on an account, through rebates of unearned finance charges or insurance premiums, or through amounts otherwise owed to or held for the benefit of a consumer), the creditor shall:

(a) Credit the amount of the credit balance to the consumer's account;

(b) Refund any part of the remaining credit balance, upon the written request of the consumer; and

(c) Make a good faith effort to refund to the consumer by cash, check, or money order, or credit to a deposit account of the consumer, any part of the credit balance remaining in the account for more than 6 months, except that no further action is required if the consumer's current location is not known to the creditor and cannot be traced through the consumer's last known address or telephone number.

§ 226.22 Determination of annual percentage rate.

(a) Accuracy of annual percentage rate. (1) The annual percentage rate is a measure of the cost of credit, expressed as a yearly rate, that relates the amount and timing of value received by the consumer to the amount and timing of payments made. The annual percentage rate shall be determined in accordance with either the actuarial method or the United States Rule method. Explanations, equations and instructions for determining the annual percentage rate in accordance with the actuarial method are set forth in Appendix J to this regulation.[45a]

(2) As a general rule, the annual percentage rate shall be considered accurate if it is not more than ⅛ of 1 percentage point above or below the annual percentage rate determined in accordance with paragraph (a)(1) of this section.

(3) In an irregular transaction, the annual percentage rate shall be considered accurate if it is not more than ¼ of 1 percentage point above or below the annual percentage rate determined in accordance with paragraph (a)(1) of this section.[46]

(b) Computation tools. (1) The Regulation Z Annual Percentage Rate Tables produced by the Board may be used to determine the annual percentage rate, and any rate determined from those tables in accordance with the accompanying instructions complies with the requirements of this section. Volume I of the tables applies to single advance transactions involving up to 480 monthly payments or 104 weekly payments. It may be used for regular transactions and for transactions with any of the following irregularities: an irregular first period, an irregular first payment, and an irregular final payment. Volume II of the tables applies to transactions involving multiple advances and any type of payment or period irregularity.

[45a] An error in disclosure of the annual percentage rate or finance charge shall not, in itself, be considered a violation of this regulation if: (1) The error resulted from a corresponding error in a calculation tool used in good faith by the creditor; and (2) upon discovery of the error, the creditor promptly discontinues use of that calculation tool for disclosure purposes and notifies the Board in writing of the error in the calculation tool.

[46] For purposes of paragraph (a)(3) of this section, an irregular transaction is one that includes one or more of the following features: multiple advances, irregular payment periods, or irregular payment amounts (other than an irregular first period or an irregular first or final payment).

(2) Creditors may use any other computation tool in determining the annual percentage rate if the rate so determined equals the rate determined in accordance with Appendix J, within the degree of accuracy set forth in paragraph (a) of this section.

(c) Single add-on rate transactions. If a single add-on rate is applied to all transactions with maturities up to 60 months and if all payments are equal in amount and period, a single annual percentage rate may be disclosed for all those transactions, so long as it is the highest annual percentage rate for any such transaction.

(d) Certain transactions involving ranges of balances. For purposes of disclosing the annual percentage rate referred to in § 226.17(g)(4) (Mail or telephone orders—delay in disclosures) and (h) (Series of sales—delay in disclosures), if the same finance charge is imposed on all balances within a specified range of balances, the annual percentage rate computed for the median balance may be disclosed for all the balances. However, if the annual percentage rate computed for the median balance understates the annual percentage rate computed for the lowest balance by more than 8 percent of the latter rate, the annual percentage rate shall be computed on whatever lower balance will produce an annual percentage rate that does not result in an understatement of more than 8 percent of the rate determined on the lowest balance.

(a) Consumer's right to rescind. (1) In a credit transaction in which a security interest is or will be retained or acquired in a consumer's principal dwelling, each consumer whose ownership interest is or will be subject to the security interest shall have the right to rescind the transaction, except for transactions described in paragraph (f) of this section.[47]

(2) To exercise the right to rescind, the consumer shall notify the creditor of the rescission by mail, telegram or other means of written communication. Notice is considered given when mailed, when filed for telegraphic transmission or, if sent by other means, when delivered to the creditor's designated place of business.

(3) The consumer may exercise the right to rescind until midnight of the third business day following consummation, delivery of the notice required by paragraph (b) of this section, or delivery of all material disclosures,[48] whichever occurs last. If the required notice or material disclosures are not delivered, the right to rescind shall expire 3 years after consummation, upon transfer of all of the consumer's interest in the property, or upon sale of the property, whichever occurs first. In the case of certain administrative proceedings, the rescission period shall be extended in accordance with section 125(f) of the Act.

(4) When more than one consumer in a transaction has the right to rescind, the exercise of the right by one consumer shall be effective as to all consumers.

(b) Notice of right to rescind. In a transaction subject to rescission, a creditor shall deliver 2 copies of the notice of the right to rescind to each consumer entitled to rescind. The notice shall be on a separate document that identifies the transaction and shall clearly and conspicuously disclose the following:

---

[47] For purposes of this section, the addition to an existing obligation of a security interest in a consumer's principal dwelling is a transaction. The right of rescission applies only to the addition of the security interest and not the existing obligation. The creditor shall deliver the notice required by paragraph (b) of this section but need not deliver new material disclosures. Delivery of the required notice shall begin the rescission period.

[48] The term "material disclosures" means the required disclosures of the annual percentage rate, the finance charge, the amount financed, the total of payments, and the payment schedule.

(1) The retention or acquisition of a security interest in the consumer's principal dwelling.

(2) The consumer's right to rescind the transaction.

(3) How to exercise the right to rescind, with a form for that purpose, designating the address of the creditor's place of business.

(4) The effects of rescission, as described in paragraph (d) of this section.

(5) The date the rescission period expires.

(c) Delay of creditor's performance. Unless a consumer waives the right of rescission under paragraph (e) of this section, no money shall be disbursed other than in escrow, no services shall be performed and no materials delivered until the rescission period has expired and the creditor is reasonably satisfied that the consumer has not rescinded.

(d) Effects of rescission. (1) When a consumer rescinds a transaction, the security interest giving rise to the right of rescission becomes void and the consumer shall not be liable for any amount, including any finance charge.

(2) Within 20 calendar days after receipt of a notice of rescission, the creditor shall return any money or property that has been given to anyone in connection with the transaction and shall take any action necessary to reflect the termination of the security interest.

(3) If the creditor has delivered any money or property, the consumer may retain possession until the creditor has met its obligation under paragraph (d)(2) of this section. When the creditor has complied with that paragraph, the consumer shall tender the money or property to the creditor or, where the latter would be impracticable or inequitable, tender its reasonable value. At the consumer's option, tender of property may be made at the location of the property or at the consumer's residence. Tender of money must be made at the creditor's designated place of business. If the creditor does not take possession of the money or property within 20 calendar days after the consumer's tender, the consumer may keep it without further obligation.

(4) The procedures outlined in paragraphs (d) (2) and (3) of this section may be modified by court order.

(e) Consumer's waiver of right to rescind. The consumer may modify or waive the right to rescind if the consumer determines that the extension of credit is needed to meet a bona fide personal financial emergency. To modify or waive the right, the consumer shall give the creditor a dated written statement that describes the emergency, specifically modifies or waives the right to rescind, and bears the signature of all of the consumers entitled to rescind. Printed forms for this purpose are prohibited.

(f) Exempt transactions. The right to rescind does not apply to the following:

(1) A residential mortgage transaction.

(2) A refinancing or consolidation by the same creditor of an extension of credit already secured by the consumer's principal dwelling. If the new amount financed exceeds the unpaid principal balance plus any earned unpaid finance charge on the existing debt, this exemption applies only to the existing debt and its security interest.

(3) A transaction in which a state agency is a creditor.

(4) An advance, other than an initial advance, in a series of advances or in a series of single-payment obligations that is treated as a single transaction under § 226.17(c)(6), if the notice required by paragraph (b) of this section and all material disclosures have been given to the consumer.

(5) A renewal of optional insurance premiums that is not considered a refinancing under § 226.20(a)(5).

[46 FR 20892, Apr. 7, 1981, as amended at 47 FR 51732, Nov. 17, 1982]

(a) Actually available terms. If an advertisement for credit states specific credit terms, it shall state only those terms that actually are or will be arranged or offered by the creditor.

(b) Advertisement of rate of finance charge. If an advertisement states a rate of finance charge, it shall state the rate as an "annual percentage rate," using that term. If the annual percentage rate may be increased after consummation, the advertisement shall state that fact. The advertisement shall not state any other rate, except that a simple annual rate or periodic rate that is applied to an unpaid balance may be stated in conjunction with, but not more conspicuously than, the annual percentage rate.

(c) Advertisement of terms that require additional disclosures. (1) If any of the following terms is set forth in an advertisement, the advertisement shall meet the requirements of paragraph (c)(2) of this section:

(i) The amount or percentage of any downpayment.

(ii) The number of payments or period of repayment.

(iii) The amount of any payment.

(iv) The amount of any finance charge.

(2) An advertisement stating any of the terms in paragraph (c)(1) of this section shall state the following terms,[49] as applicable:

(i) The amount or percentage of the downpayment.

(ii) The terms of repayment.

(iii) The "annual percentage rate," using that term, and, if the rate may be increased after consummation, that fact.

(d) Catalogs and multiple-page advertisements. (1) If a catalog or other multiple-page advertisement gives information in a table or schedule in sufficient detail to permit determination of the disclosures required by paragraph (c)(2) of this section, it shall be considered a single advertisement if:

(i) The table or schedule is clearly set forth; and

(ii) Any statement of the credit terms in paragraph (c)(1) of this section appearing anywhere else in the catalog or advertisement clearly refers to the page on which the table or schedule begins.

(2) A catalog or multiple-page advertisement complies with paragraph (c)(2) of this section if the table or schedule of terms includes all appropriate disclosures for a representative scale of amounts up to the level of the more commonly sold higher-priced property or services offered.

Subpart D—Miscellaneous

§ 226.25 Record retention.

(a) General rule. A creditor shall retain evidence of compliance with this regulation (other than advertising requirements under §§ 226.16 and 226.24) for 2 years after the date disclosures are required to be made or action is required to be taken. The administrative agencies responsible for enforcing the regulation may require creditors under their jurisdictions to retain records for a longer period if necessary to carry out their enforcement responsibilities under section 108 of the act.

(b) Inspection of records. A creditor shall permit the agency responsible for enforcing this regulation with respect to that creditor to inspect its relevant records for compliance.

§ 226.26 Use of annual percentage rate in oral disclosures.

(a) Open-end credit. In an oral response to a consumer's inquiry about the cost of open-end credit, only the annual percentage rate or rates shall be stated, except that the periodic rate or rates also may be stated. If the annual percentage rate cannot be determined in advance because there are finance charges other than a periodic rate, the corresponding annual percentage rate shall be stated, and other cost information may be given.

(b) Closed-end credit. In an oral response to a consumer's inquiry about the cost of closed-end credit, only the annual percentage rate shall be stated, except that a simple annual rate or periodic rate also may be stated if it is applied to an unpaid balance. If the annual percentage rate cannot be determined in advance, the annual percentage rate for a sample transaction shall be stated, and other cost information for the consumer's specific transaction may be given.

---

[49] An example of one or more typical extensions of credit with a statement of all the terms applicable to each may be used.

§ 226.27 Spanish language disclosures.

All disclosures required by this regulation shall be made in the English language, except in the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, where creditors may, at their option, make disclosures in the Spanish language. If Spanish disclosures are made, English disclosures shall be provided on the consumer's request, either in substitution for or in addition to the Spanish disclosures. This requirement for providing English disclosures on request shall not apply to advertisements subject to §§ 226.16 and 226.24 of this regulation.

§ 226.28 Effect on State laws.

(a) Inconsistent disclosure requirements. (1) State law requirements that are inconsistent with the requirements contained in chapter 1 (General provisions), chapter 2 (Credit transactions), or chapter 3 (Credit advertising) of the Act and the implementing provisions of this regulation are preempted to the extent of the inconsistency. A State law is inconsistent if it requires a creditor to make disclosures or take actions that contradict the requirements of the Federal law. A State law is contradictory if it requires the use of the same term to represent a different amount or a different meaning than the Federal law, or if it requires the use of a term different from that required in the Federal law to describe the same item. A creditor, state, or other interested party may request the Board to determine whether a State law requirement is inconsistent. After the Board determines that a state law is inconsistent, a creditor may not make disclosures using the inconsistent term or form.

(2)(i) State law requirements are inconsistent with the requirements contained in sections 161 (Correction of billing errors) or 162 (Regulation of credit reports) of the Act and the implementing provisions of this regulation and are preempted if they provide rights, responsibilities, or procedures for consumers or creditors that are different from those required by the Federal law. However, a State law that allows a consumer to inquire about an open-end credit account and imposes on the creditor an obligation to respond to such inquiry after the time allowed in the Federal law for the consumer to submit written notice of a billing error shall not be preempted in any situation where the time period for making written notice under this regulation has expired. If a creditor gives written notice of a consumer's rights under such State law, the notice shall state that reliance on the longer time period available under state law may result in the loss of important rights that could be preserved by acting more promptly under Federal law; it shall also explain that the state law provisions apply only after expiration of the time period for submitting a proper written notice of a billing error under the Federal law. If the state disclosures are made on the same side of a page as the required Federal disclosures, the state disclosures shall appear under a demarcation line below the Federal disclosures, and the Federal disclosures shall be identified by a heading indicating that they are made in compliance with Federal law.

(ii) State law requirements are inconsistent with the requirements contained in chapter 4 (Credit billing) of the Act (other than section 161 or 162) and the implementing provisions of this regulation and are preempted if the creditor cannot comply with State law without violating Federal law.

(iii) A State may request the Board to determine whether its law is inconsistent with chapter 4 of the Act and its implementing provisions.

(b) Equivalent disclosure requirements. If the Board determines that a disclosure required by State law (other than a requirement relating to the finance charge or annual percentage rate) is substantially the same in meaning as a disclosure required under the Act or this regulation, creditors in that State may make the State disclosure in lieu of the Federal disclosure. A creditor, State, or other interested party may request the Board to determine whether a State disclosure is substantially the same in meaning as a Federal disclosure.

(c) Request for determination. The procedures under which a request for a determination may be made under this section are set forth in Appendix A.

§ 226.29 State exemptions.

(a) General rule. Any State may apply to the Board to exempt a class of transactions within the State from the requirements of chapter 2 (Credit transactions) or chapter 4 (Credit billing) of the Act and the corresponding provisions of this regulation. The Board shall grant an exemption if it determines that:

(1) The State law is substantially similar to the Federal law or, in the case of chapter 4, affords the consumer greater protection than the Federal law; and

(2) There is adequate provision for enforcement.

(b) Civil liability. (1) No exemptions granted under this section shall extend to the civil liability provisions of sections 130 and 131 of the Act.

(2) If an exemption has been granted, the disclosures required by the applicable State law (except any additional requirements not imposed by Federal law) shall constitute the disclosures required by this Act.

(c) Applications. The procedures under which a State may apply for an exemption under this section are set forth in Appendix B.

APPENDIX A—EFFECT ON STATE LAWS

Request for Determination

A request for a determination that a State law is inconsistent or that a State law is substantially the same as the Act and regulation shall be in writing and addressed to the Secretary, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Washington, D.C. 20551. The request shall be made pursuant to the procedures herein and the Board's Rules of Procedure (12 CFR Part 262).

Supporting Documents

A request for a determination shall include the following items:

(1) The text of the State statute, regulation, or other document that is the subject of the request.

(2) Any other statute, regulation, or judicial or administrative opinion that implements, interprets, or applies the relevant provision.

(3) A comparison of the State law with the corresponding provision of the Federal law, including a full discussion of the basis for the requesting party's belief that the State provision is either inconsistent or substantially the same.

(4) Any other information that the requesting party believes may assist the Board in its determination.

Public Notice of Determination

Notice that the Board intends to make a determination (either on request or on its own motion) will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER, with an opportunity for public comment, unless the Board finds that notice and opportunity for comment would be impracticable, unnecessary, or contrary to the public interest and publishes its reasons for such decision.

Subject to the Board's Rules Regarding Availability of Information (12 CFR Part 261), all requests made, including any documents and other material submitted in support of the requests, will be made available for public inspection and copying.

Notice After Determination

Notice of a final determination will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER, and the Board will furnish a copy of such notice to the party who made the request and to the appropriate State official.

Reversal of Determination

The Board reserves the right to reverse a determination for any reason bearing on the coverage or effect of State or Federal law.

Notice of reversal of a determination will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER and a copy furnished to the appropriate State official.

[46 FR 20892, Apr. 7, 1981; 46 FR 29246, June 1, 1981]

APPENDIX B—STATE EXEMPTIONS

Application

Any State may apply to the Board for a determination that a class of transactions subject to State law is exempt from the requirements of the Act and this regulation. An application shall be in writing and addressed to the Secretary, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Washington, D.C. 20551, and shall be signed by the appropriate State official. The application shall be made pursuant to the procedures herein and the Board's Rules of Procedure (12 CFR Part 262).

Supporting Documents

An application shall be accompanied by:

(1) The text of the State statute or regulation that is the subject of the application, and any other statute, regulation, or judicial or administrative opinion that implements, interprets, or applies it.

(2) A comparison of the State law with the corresponding provisions of the Federal law.

(3) The text of the State statute or regulation that provides for civil and criminal liability and administrative enforcement of the State law.

(4) A statement of the provisions for enforcement, including an identification of the State office that administers the relevant law, information on the funding and the number and qualifications of personnel engaged in enforcement, and a description of the enforcement procedures to be followed, including information on examination procedures, practices, and policies. If an exemption application extends to Federally chartered institutions, the applicant must furnish evidence that arrangements have been made with the appropriate Federal agencies to ensure adequate enforcement of State law in regard to such creditors.

(5) A statement of reasons to support the applicant's claim that an exemption should be granted.

Public Notice of Application

Notice of an application will be published, with an opportunity for public comment, in the FEDERAL REGISTER, unless the Board finds that notice and opportunity for comment would be impracticable, unnecessary, or contrary to the public interest and publishes its reasons for such decision.

Subject to the Board's Rules Regarding Availability of Information (12 CFR Part 261), all applications made, including any documents and other material submitted in support of the applications, will be made available for public inspection and copying. A copy of the application also will be made available at the Federal Reserve Bank of each district in which the applicant is situated.

Favorable Determination

If the Board determines on the basis of the information before it that an exemption should be granted, notice of the exemption will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER, and a copy furnished to the applicant and to each Federal official responsible for administrative enforcement.

The appropriate State official shall inform the Board within 30 days of any change in its relevant law or regulations. The official shall file with the Board such periodic reports as the Board may require.

The Board will inform the appropriate State official of any subsequent amendments to the Federal law, regulation, interpretations, or enforcement policies that might require an amendment to State law, regulation, interpretations, or enforcement procedures.

Adverse Determination

If the Board makes an initial determination that an exemption should not be granted, the Board will afford the applicant a reasonable opportunity to demonstrate further that an exemption is proper. If the Board ultimately finds that an exemption should not be granted, notice of an adverse determination will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER and a copy furnished to the applicant.

Revocation of Exemption

The Board reserves the right to revoke an exemption if at any time it determines that the standards required for an exemption are not met.

Before taking such action, the Board will notify the appropriate State official of its intent, and will afford the official such opportunity as it deems appropriate in the circumstances to demonstrate that revocation is improper. If the Board ultimately finds that revocation is proper, notice of the Board's intention to revoke such exemption will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER with a reasonable period of time for interested persons to comment.

Notice of revocation of an exemption will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER. A copy of such notice will be furnished to the appropriate State official and to the Federal officials responsible for enforcement. Upon revocation of an exemption, creditors in that State shall then be subject to the requirements of the Federal law.

APPENDIX C—ISSUANCE OF STAFF INTERPRETATIONS

Official Staff Interpretations

Officials in the Board's Division of Consumer and Community Affairs are authorized to issue official staff interpretations of this regulation. These interpretations provide the protection afforded under section 130(f) of the Act. Except in unusual circumstances, such interpretations will not be issued separately but will be incorporated in an official commentary to the regulation which will be amended periodically.

Requests for Issuance of Official Staff Interpretations

A request for an official staff interpretation shall be in writing and addressed to the Director, Division of Consumer and Community Affairs, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Washington, D.C. 20551. The request shall contain a complete statement of all relevant facts concerning the issue, including copies of all pertinent documents.

Scope of Interpretations

No staff interpretations will be issued approving creditors' forms, statements, or calculation tools or methods. This restriction does not apply to forms, statements, tools, or methods whose use is required or sanctioned by a government agency.

APPENDIX D—MULTIPLE ADVANCE CONSTRUCTION LOANS

Section 226.17(c)(6) permits creditors to treat multiple advance loans to finance construction of a dwelling that may be permanently financed by the same creditor either as a single transaction or as more than one transaction. If the actual schedule of advances is not known, the following methods may be used to estimate the interest portion of the finance charge and the annual percentage rate and to make disclosures. If the creditor chooses to disclose the construction phase separately, whether interest is payable periodically or at the end of construction, Part I may be used. If the creditor chooses to disclose the construction and the permanent financing as one transaction, Part II may be used.

Part I—Construction period disclosed separately.

A. If interest is payable only on the amount actually advanced for the time it is outstanding:

1. Estimated interest—Assume that one-half of the commitment amount is outstanding at the contract interest rate for the entire construction period.

2. Estimated annual percentage rate—Assume a single payment loan that matures at the end of the construction period. The finance charge is the sum of the estimated interest and any prepaid finance charge. The amount financed for computation purposes is determined by subtracting any prepaid finance charge from one-half of the commitment amount.

3. Repayment schedule—The number and amounts of any interest payments may be omitted in disclosing the payment schedule under § 226.18(g). The fact that interest payments are required and the timing of such payments shall be disclosed.

4. Amount financed—The amount financed for disclosure purposes is the entire commitment amount less any prepaid finance charge.

B. If interest is payable on the entire commitment amount without regard to the dates or amounts of actual disbursement:

1. Estimated interest—Assume that the entire commitment amount is outstanding at the contract interest rate for the entire construction period.

2. Estimated annual percentage rate—Assume a single payment loan that matures at the end of the construction period. The finance charge is the sum of the estimated interest and any prepaid finance charge. The amount financed for computation purposes is determined by subtracting any prepaid finance charge from one-half of the commitment amount.

3. Repayment schedule—Interest payments shall be disclosed in making the repayment schedule disclosure under § 226.18(g).

4. Amount financed - The amount financed for disclosure purposes is the entire commitment amount less any prepaid finance charge.

Example:

Assume a $50,000 loan commitment at 10.5% interest with a 5-month construction period and a prepaid finance charge of 2 points.

	(A)	(B)
Estimated Interest:	$25,000 x .105 ÷ 12 x 5 = $1,093.75	$50,000 x .105 ÷ 12 x 5 = $2,187.50
Estimated APR:	$\frac{(1\ 093.75 + 1{,}000)}{(25{,}000 - 1{,}000)} \times 100 \div 5 \times 12 =$ 20.94%	$\frac{(2{,}187.50 + 1{,}000)}{(25{,}000 - 1{,}000)} \times 100 \div 5 \times 12 =$ 31.88%
Disclosures:
Amount financed	$49,000.00	$49,000.00
Prepaid finance charge	1,000.00	1,000.00
FINANCE CHARGE (Estimate)	2,093.75	3,187.50
ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE (Estimate)	20.94%	31.88%
Repayment:	One payment of principal of $50,000 on 12-12-80. Interest on the amount of credit outstanding will be paid monthly.	4 monthly payments of $437.50, beginning 8-12-80, and a final payment of $50,437.50 on 12-12-80.
Total of payments (Estimate)	$51,093.75	$52,187.50

Part II - Construction and permanent financing disclosed as one transaction.

A. The creditor shall estimate the interest payable during the construction period to be included in the total finance charge as follows:

1. If interest is payable only on the amount actually advanced for the time it is outstanding, assume that one-half of the commitment amount is outstanding at the contract interest rate for the entire construction period.

2. If interest is payable on the entire commitment amount without regard to the dates or amounts of actual disbursement, assume that the entire commitment amount is outstanding at the contract rate for the entire construction period.

B. The creditor shall compute the estimated annual percentage rate as follows:

1. Estimated interest payable during the construction period shall be treated for computation purposes as a prepaid finance charge (although it shall not be treated as a prepaid finance charge for disclosure purposes).

2. The number of payments shall not include any payments of interest only that are made during the construction period.

3. The first payment period shall consist of one-half of the construction period plus the period between the end of the construction period and the first amortization payment.

C. The creditor shall disclose the repayment schedule as follows:

1. For loans under paragraph A.1. of Part II, without reflecting the number or amounts of payments of interest only that are made during the construction period. The fact that interest payments must be made and the timing of such payments shall be disclosed.

2. For loans under paragraph A.2. of Part II, including any payments of interest only that are made during the construction period.

D. The creditor shall disclose the amount financed as the entire commitment amount less any prepaid finance charge.

Example:

Assume a $50,000 loan commitment at 10.5% interest with a 5-month construction period and a prepaid finance charge of 2 points, followed by 30-year permanent financing at the same rate with monthly amortization payments of $457.37.

Computation of Estimated APR

	Interest on Amount Advanced		Interest on Entire Commitment
Estimated construction interest:
$25,000 x .105 ÷ 12 x 5 =		$1,093.75	$50,000 x .105 ÷ 12 x 5 =	$2,187.50
Estimated total finance charge:
360 x $457.37 =	$164,653.20		$164,653.20
Principal	- 50,000.00		- 50,000.00
Interest on Permanent Fin.	114,653.20		114,653.20
Construction Interest	+ 1,093.75		+ 2,187.50
Points	+ 1,000.00	$116,746.95	+ 1,000.00	$117,840.70

Estimated amount financed:
Principal	$ 50,000.00		$ 50,000.00

APPENDIX E—RULES FOR CARD ISSUERS THAT BILL ON A TRANSACTION-BY-TRANSACTION BASIS

The following provisions of Subpart B apply if credit cards are issued and (1) the card issuer and the seller are the same or related persons; (2) no finance charge is imposed; (3) consumers are billed in full for each use of the card on a transaction-by-transaction basis, by means of an invoice or other statement reflecting each use of the card; and (4) no cumulative account is maintained which reflects the transactions by each consumer during a period of time, such as a month:

Section 226.6(d), and, as applicable, § 226.6(b) and (c). The disclosure required by § 226.6(b) shall be limited to those charges that are or may be imposed as a result of the deferral of payment by use of the card, such as late payment or delinquency charges.

Section 226.7(b) and § 226.7(k). Creditors may comply by placing the required disclosures on the invoice or statement sent to the consumer for each transaction.

Section 226.9(a). Creditors may comply by mailing or delivering the statement required by § 226.6(d) (See Appendix G-3) to each consumer receiving a transaction invoice during a one-month period chosen by the card issuer or by sending either the statement prescribed by § 226.6(d) or an alternative billing error rights statement substantially similar to that in Appendix G-4, with each invoice sent to a consumer.

Section 226.9(c).

Section 226.10.

Section 226.11. This section applies when a card issuer receives a payment or other credit that exceeds by more than $1 the amount due, as shown on the transaction invoice. The requirement to credit amounts to an account may be complied with by other reasonable means, such as by a credit memorandum. Since no periodic statement is provided, a notice of the credit balance shall be sent to the consumer within a reasonable period of time following its occurrence unless a refund of the credit balance is mailed or delivered to the consumer within 7 business days of its receipt by the card issuer.

Section 226.12 including § 226.12(c) and (d), as applicable. Section 226.12(e) is inapplicable.

Section 226.13, as applicable. All references to "periodic statement" shall be read to indicate the invoice or other statement for the relevant transaction. All actions with regard to correcting and adjusting a consumer's account may be taken by issuing a refund or a new invoice, or by other appropriate means consistent with the purposes of the section.

Section 226.15, as applicable.

APPENDIX F—ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE COMPUTATIONS FOR CERTAIN OPEN-END CREDIT PLANS

In determining the denominator of the fraction under § 226.14(c)(3), no amount will be used more than once when adding the sum of the balances[1] subject to periodic rates to the sum of the amounts subject to specific transaction charges. In every case, the full amount of transactions subject to specific transaction charges shall be included in the denominator. Other balances or parts of balances shall be included according to the manner of determining the balance subject to a periodic rate, as illustrated in the following examples of accounts on monthly billing cycles:

1. Previous balance—none.

A specific transaction of $100 occurs on the first day of the billing cycle. The average daily balance is $100. A specific transaction charge of 3% is applicable to the specific transaction. The periodic rate is 1½% applicable to the average daily balance. The numerator is the amount of the finance charge, which is $4.50. The denominator is the amount of the transaction (which is $100), plus the amount by which the balance subject to the periodic rate exceeds the amount of the specific transactions (such excess in this case is 0), totaling $100.

The annual percentage rate is the quotient (which is 4½%) multiplied by 12 (the number of months in a year), i.e., 54%.

2. Previous balance—$100.

A specific transaction of $100 occurs at the midpoint of the billing cycle. The average daily balance is $150. A specific transaction charge of 3% is applicable to the specific transaction. The periodic rate is 1½% applicable to the average daily balance. The numerator is the amount of the finance charge which is $5.25. The denominator is the amount of the transaction (which is $100), plus the amount by which the balance subject to the periodic rate exceeds the amount of the specific transaction (such excess in this case is $50), totaling $150. As explained in example 1, the annual percentage rate is 3½% x 12 = 42%.

3. If, in example 2, the periodic rate applies only to the previous balance, the numerator is $4.50 and the denominator is $200 (the amount of the transaction, $100, plus the balance subject only to the periodic rate, the $100 previous balance). As explained in example 1, the annual percentage rate is 2¼% x 12 = 27%.

4. If, in example 2, the periodic rate applies only to an adjusted balance (previous balance less payments and credits) and the consumer made a payment of $50 at the midpoint of the billing cycle, the numerator is $3.75 and the denominator is $150 (the amount of the transaction, $100, plus the balance subject to the periodic rate, the $50 adjusted balance). As explained in example 1, the annual percentage rate is 2½% x 12 = 30%.

5. Previous balance—$100.

A specific transaction (check) of $100 occurs at the midpoint of the billing cycle. The average daily balance is $150. The specific transaction charge is $.25 per check. The periodic rate is 1½% applied to the average daily balance. The numerator is the amount of the finance charge, which is $2.50 and includes the $.25 check charge and the $2.25 resulting from the application of the periodic rate. The denominator is the full amount of the specific transaction (which is $100) plus the amount by which the average daily balance exceeds the amount of the specific transaction (which in this case is $50), totaling $150. As explained in example 1, the annual percentage rate would be 1⅔% x 12 = 20%.

6. Previous balance—none.

A specific transaction of $100 occurs at the midpoint of the billing cycle. The average daily balance is $50. The specific transaction charge is 3% of the transaction amount or $3.00. The periodic rate is 1½% per month applied to the average daily balance. The numerator is the amount of the finance charge, which is $3.75, including the $3.00 transaction charge and $.75 resulting from application of the periodic rate. The denominator is the full amount of the specific transaction ($100) plus the amount by which the balance subject to the periodic rate exceeds the amount of the transaction ($0). Where the specific transaction amount exceeds the balance subject to the periodic rate, the resulting number is considered to be zero rather than a negative number ($50 − $100 = −$50). The denominator, in this case, is $100. As explained in example 1, the annual percentage rate is 3¾% x 12 = 45%.

G-1 Balance Computation Methods Model Clauses (§§ 226.6 and 226.7).
G-2 Liability for Unauthorized Use Model Clause (§ 226.12).
G-3 Long Form Billing Error Rights Model Form (§§ 226.6 and 226.9).

G-8 Rescission Model Form (when adding a security interest) (§ 226.15).
G-9 Rescission Model Form (when increasing the security) (§ 226.15).

G-1—Balance Computation Methods Model Clauses

(a) Adjusted balance method
We figure [a portion of] the finance charge on your account by applying the periodic rate to the "adjusted balance" of your account. We get the "adjusted balance" by taking the balance you owed at the end of the previous billing cycle and subtracting [any unpaid finance charges and] any payments and credits received during the present billing cycle.

(b) Previous balance method
We figure [a portion of] the finance charge on your account by applying the periodic rate to the amount you owe at the beginning of each billing cycle [minus any unpaid finance charges.] We do not subtract any payments or credits received during the billing cycle. [The amount of payments and credits to your account this billing cycle was $______________.]

(c) Average daily balance method (excluding current transactions)
We figure [a portion of] the finance charge on your account by applying the periodic rate to the "average daily balance" of your account (excluding current transactions). To get the "average daily balance" we take the beginning balance of your account each day and subtract any payments or credits [and any unpaid finance charges]. We do not add in any new [purchases/advances/loans]. This gives us the daily balance. Then, we add all the daily balances for the billing cycle together and divide the total by the number of days in the billing cycle. This gives us the "average daily balance."

(d) Average daily balance method (including current transactions)
We figure [a portion of] the finance charge on your account by applying the periodic rate to the "average daily balance" of your account (including current transactions). To get the "average daily balance" we take the beginning balance of your account each day, add any new [purchases/advances/loans], and subtract any payments or credits, [and unpaid finance charges]. This gives us the daily balance. Then, we add up all the daily balances for the billing cycle and divide the total by the number of days in the billing cycle. This gives us the "average daily balance."

G-2—Liability for Unauthorized Use Model Clause

You may be liable for the unauthorized use of your credit card [or other term that describes the credit card.] You will not be liable for unauthorized use that occurs after you notify [name of card issuer or its designee] at [address], orally or in writing, of the loss, theft, or possible unauthorized use. In any case, your liability will not exceed [insert $50 or any lesser amount under agreement with the cardholder.]

G-3—Long Form Billing Error Rights Model Form

YOUR BILLING RIGHTS
KEEP THIS NOTICE FOR FUTURE USE

This notice contains important information about your rights and our responsibilities under the Fair Credit Billing Act.

Notify Us In Case of Errors or Questions About Your Bill

If you think your bill is wrong, or if you need more information about a transaction on your bill, write us [on a separate sheet] at [address] [the address listed on your bill]. Write to us as soon as possible. We must hear from you no later than 60 days after we sent you the first bill on which the error or problem appeared. You can telephone us, but doing so will not preserve your rights.

In your letter, give us the following information:

- Your name and account number.
- The dollar amount of the suspected error.
- Describe the error and explain, if you can, why you believe there is an error. If you need more information, describe the item you are not sure about.

If you have authorized us to pay your credit card bill automatically from your savings or checking account, you can stop the payment on any amount you think is wrong. To stop the payment your letter must reach us three business days before the automatic payment is scheduled to occur.

Your Rights and Our Responsibilities After We Receive Your Written Notice

We must acknowledge your letter within 30 days, unless we have corrected the error by then. Within 90 days, we must either correct the error or explain why we believe the bill was correct.

After we receive your letter, we cannot try to collect any amount you question, or report you as delinquent. We can continue to bill you for the amount you question, including finance charges, and we can apply any unpaid amount against your credit limit. You do not have to pay any questioned amount while we are investigating, but you are still obligated to pay the parts of your bill that are not in question.

If we find that we made a mistake on your bill, you will not have to pay any finance charges related to any questioned amount. If we didn't make a mistake, you may have to pay finance charges, and you will have to make up any missed payments on the questioned amount. In either case, we will send you a statement of the amount you owe and the date that it is due.

If you fail to pay the amount that we think you owe, we may report you as delinquent. However, if our explanation does not satisfy you and you write to us within ten days telling us that you still refuse to pay, we must tell anyone we report you to that you have a question about your bill. And, we must tell you the name of anyone we reported you to. We must tell anyone we report you to that the matter has been settled between us when it finally is.

If we don't follow these rules, we can't collect the first $50 of the questioned amount, even if your bill was correct.

Special Rule for Credit Card Purchases

If you have a problem with the quality of property or services that you purchased with a credit card, and you have tried in good faith to correct the problem with the merchant, you may have the right not to pay the remaining amount due on the property or services. There are two limitations on this right:

(a) You must have made the purchase in your home state or, if not within your home state, within 100 miles of your current mailing address; and
(b) The purchase price must have been more than $50.

These limitations do not apply if we own or operate the merchant, or if we mailed you the advertisement for the property or services.

G-4—Alternative Billing Error Rights Model Form

BILLING RIGHTS SUMMARY

In Case of Errors or Questions About Your Bill

If you think your bill is wrong, or if you need more information about a transaction on your bill, write us [on a separate sheet] at [address] [the address shown on your bill] as soon as possible. We must hear from you no later than 60 days after we sent you the first bill on which the error or problem appeared. You can telephone us, but doing so will not preserve your rights.

In your letter, give us the following information:

- Your name and account number.
- The dollar amount of the suspected error.
- Describe the error and explain, if you can, why you believe there is an error. If you need more information, describe the item you are unsure about.

You do not have to pay any amount in question while we are investigating, but you are still obligated to pay the parts of your bill that are not in question. While we investigate your question, we cannot report you as delinquent or take any action to collect the amount you question.

NOTICE OF RIGHT TO CANCEL

1. Your Right to Cancel.
We have agreed to establish an open-end credit account for you, and you have agreed to give us a [mortgage/lien/security interest] [on/in] your home as security for the account. You have a legal right under federal law to cancel the account, without cost, within three business days after the latest of the following events:

(1) the opening date of your account which is

________________________; or

(2) the date you received your Truth-in-Lending disclosures; or
(3) the date you received this notice of your right to cancel the account.

If you cancel the account, the [mortgage/lien/security interest] [on/in] your home is also cancelled. Within 20 days of receiving your notice, we must take the necessary steps to reflect the fact that the [mortgage/lien/security interest] [on/in] your home has been cancelled. We must return to you any money or property you have given to us or to anyone else in connection with the account.

You may keep any money or property we have given you until we have done the things mentioned above, but you must then offer to return the money or property. If it is impractical or unfair for you to return the property, you must offer its reasonable value. You may offer to return the property at your home or at the location of the property. Money must be returned to the address shown below. If we do not take possession of the money or property within 20 calendar days of your offer, you may keep it without further obligation.

2. How to Cancel.

H-4—Variable Rate Model Clauses

The annual percentage rate may increase during the term of this transaction if:
  [the prime interest rate of (creditor) increases.]
  [the balance in your deposit account falls below $________.]
  [you terminate your employment with (employer).]

[The interest rate will not increase above ________%.]
[The maximum interest rate increase at one time will be ________%.]
[The rate will not increase more than once every (time period).]

Any increase will take the form of:
  [higher payment amounts.]
  [more payments of the same amount.]
  [a larger amount due at maturity.]

Example based on the specific transaction
[If the interest rate increases by ________% in (time period),
  [your regular payments will increase to $________.]
  [you will have to make ______ additional payments.]
  [your final payment will increase to $________.]]

Example based on a typical transaction
[If your loan were for $________ at ________% for (term) and the rate increased to ________% in (time period),
  [your regular payments would increase by $________.]
  [you would have to make ______ additional payments.]
  [your final payment would increase by $________.]]

H-5—Demand Feature Model Clauses

This obligation [is payable on demand.]
  [has a demand feature.]
[All disclosures are based on an assumed maturity of one year.]

H-6—Assumption Policy Model Clause

Assumption: Someone buying your house [may, subject to conditions, be allowed to] [cannot] assume the remainder of the mortgage on the original terms.

H-7—Required Deposit Model Clause

The annual percentage rate does not take into account your required deposit.

NOTICE OF RIGHT TO CANCEL

Your Right to Cancel

You are entering into a transaction that will result in a [mortgage/lien/ security interest] [on/in] your home. You have a legal right under federal law to cancel this transaction, without cost, within three business days from whichever of the following events occurs last:

(1) the date of the transaction, which is

______________________________; or

(2) the date you received your Truth in Lending disclosures; or

(3) the date you received this notice of your right to cancel.

If you cancel the transaction, the [mortgage/lien/security interest] is also cancelled. Within 20 calendar days after we receive your notice, we must take the steps necessary to reflect the fact that the [mortgage/lien/security interest] [on/in] your home has been cancelled, and we must return to you any money or property you have given to us or to anyone else in connection with this transaction.

You may keep any money or property we have given you until we have done the things mentioned above, but you must then offer to return the money or property. If it is impractical or unfair for you to return the property, you must offer its reasonable value. You may offer to return the property at your home or at the location of the property. Money must be returned to the address below. If we do not take possession of the money or property within 20 calendar days of your offer, you may keep it without further obligation.

How to Cancel

If you decide to cancel this transaction, you may do so by notifying us in writing, at (creditor's name and business address).

You may use any written statement that is signed and dated by you and states your intention to cancel, or you may use this notice by dating and signing below. Keep one copy of this notice because it contains important information about your rights.

If you cancel by mail or telegram, you must send the notice no later than midnight of (date)

(or midnight of the third business day following the latest of the three events listed above). If you send or deliver your written notice to cancel some other way, it must be delivered to the above address no later than that time.

NOTICE OF RIGHT TO CANCEL

Your Right to Cancel

You are entering into a new transaction to increase the amount of credit provided to you. We acquired a [mortgage/lien/security interest] [on/in] your home under the original transaction and will retain that [mortgage/lien/security interest] in the new transaction. You have a legal right under federal law to cancel the new transaction, without cost, within three business days from whichever of the following events occurs last:

(1) the date of the new transaction, which is

______________________________; or

(2) the date you received your new Truth in Lending disclosures; or

(3) the date you received this notice of your right to cancel.

If you cancel the new transaction, your cancellation will apply only to the increase in the amount of credit. It will not affect the amount that you presently owe or the [mortgage/lien/security interest] we already have [on/in] your home. If you cancel, the [mortgage/lien/security interest] as it applies to the increased amount is also cancelled. Within 20 calendar days after we receive your notice of cancellation of the new transaction, we must take the steps necessary to reflect the fact that our [mortgage/lien/security interest] [on/in] your home no longer applies to the increase of credit. We must also return any money you have given to us or anyone else in connection with the new transaction.

You may keep any money we have given you in the new transaction until we have done the things mentioned above, but you must then offer to return the money at the address below. If we do not take possession of the money within 20 calendar days of your offer, you may keep it without further obligation.

How to Cancel

APPENDIX J—ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE COMPUTATIONS FOR CLOSED-END CREDIT TRANSACTIONS

(a) Introduction. (1) Section 226.22(a) of Regulation Z provides that the annual percentage rate for other than open end credit transactions shall be determined in accordance with either the actuarial method or the United States Rule method. This appendix contains an explanation of the actuarial method as well as equations, instructions and examples of how this method applies to single advance and multiple advance transactions.

(2) Under the actuarial method, at the end of each unit-period (or fractional unit-period) the unpaid balance of the amount financed is increased by the finance charge earned during that period and is decreased by the total payment (if any) made at the end of that period. The determination of unit-periods and fractional unit-periods shall be consistent with the definitions and rules in paragraphs (b) (3), (4) and (5) of this section and the general equation in paragraph (b)(8) of this section.

(3) In contrast, under the United States Rule method, at the end of each payment period, the unpaid balance of the amount financed is increased by the finance charge earned during that payment period and is decreased by the payment made at the end of that payment period. If the payment is less than the finance charge earned, the adjustment of the unpaid balance of the amount financed is postponed until the end of the next payment period. If at that time the sum of the two payments is still less than the total earned finance charge for the two payment periods, the adjustment of the unpaid balance of the amount financed is postponed still another payment period, and so forth.

(b) Instructions and equations for the actuarial method—(1) General rule. The annual percentage rate shall be the nominal annual percentage rate determined by multiplying the unit-period rate by the number of unit-periods in a year.

(2) Term of the transaction. The term of the transaction begins on the date of its consummation, except that if the finance charge or any portion of it is earned beginning on a later date, the term begins on the later date. The term ends on the date the last payment is due, except that if an advance is scheduled after that date, the term ends on the later date. For computation purposes, the length of the term shall be equal to the time interval between any point in time on the beginning date to the same point in time on the ending date.

(3) Definitions of time intervals. (i) A period is the interval of time between advances or between payments and includes the interval of time between the date the finance charge begins to be earned and the date of the first advance thereafter or the date of the first payment thereafter, as applicable.

(ii) A common period is any period that occurs more than once in a transaction.

(iii) A standard interval of time is a day, week, semimonth, month, or a multiple of a week or a month up to, but not exceeding, 1 year.

(iv) All months shall be considered equal. Full months shall be measured from any point in time on a given date of a given month to the same point in time on the same date of another month. If a series of payments (or advances) is scheduled for the last day of each month, months shall be measured from the last day of the given month to the last day of another month. If payments (or advances) are scheduled for the 29th or 30th of each month, the last day of February shall be used when applicable.

(4) Unit-period. (i) In all transactions other than a single advance, single payment transaction, the unit-period shall be that common period, not to exceed 1 year, that occurs most frequently in the transaction, except that

(A) If 2 or more common periods occur with equal frequency, the smaller of such common periods shall be the unit-period; or

(B) If there is no common period in the transaction, the unit-period shall be that period which is the average of all periods rounded to the nearest whole standard interval of time. If the average is equally near 2 standard intervals of time, the lower shall be the unit-period.

(ii) In a single advance, single payment transaction, the unit-period shall be the term of the transaction, but shall not exceed 1 year.

(5) Number of unit-periods between 2 given dates. (i) The number of days between 2 dates shall be the number of 24-hour intervals between any point in time on the first date to the same point in time on the second date.

(ii) If the unit-period is a month, the number of full unit-periods between 2 dates shall be the number of months measured back from the later date. The remaining fraction of a unit-period shall be the number of days measured forward from the earlier date to the beginning of the first full unit-period, divided by 30. If the unit-period is a month, there are 12 unit-periods per year.

(iii) If the unit-period is a semimonth or a multiple of a month not exceeding 11 months, the number of days between 2 dates shall be 30 times the number of full months measured back from the later date, plus the number of remaining days. The number of full unit-periods and the remaining fraction of a unit-period shall be determined by dividing such number of days by 15 in the case of a semimonthly unit-period or by the appropriate multiple of 30 in the case of a multimonthly unit-period. If the unit-period is a semimonth, the number of unit-periods per year shall be 24. If the number of unit-periods is a multiple of a month, the number of unit-periods per year shall be 12 divided by the number of months per unit-period.

(iv) If the unit-period is a day, a week, or a multiple of a week, the number of full unit-periods and the remaining fractions of a unit-period shall be determined by dividing the number of days between the 2 given dates by the number of days per unit-period. If the unit-period is a day, the number of unit-periods per year shall be 365. If the unit-period is a week or a multiple of a week, the number of unit-periods per year shall be 52 divided by the number of weeks per unit-period.

(v) If the unit-period is a year, the number of full unit-periods between 2 dates shall be the number of full years (each equal to 12 months) measured back from the later date. The remaining fraction of a unit-period shall be

(A) The remaining number of months divided by 12 if the remaining interval is equal to a whole number of months, or

(B) The remaining number of days divided by 365 if the remaining interval is not equal to a whole number of months.

(vi) In a single advance, single payment transaction in which the term is less than a year and is equal to a whole number of months, the number of unit-periods in the term shall be 1, and the number of unit-periods per year shall be 12 divided by the number of months in the term or 365 divided by the number of days in the term.

(vii) In a single advance, single payment transaction in which the term is less than a year and is not equal to a whole number of months, the number of unit-periods in the term shall be 1, and the number of unit-periods per year shall be 365 divided by the number of days in the term.

(6) Percentage rate for a fraction of a unit-period. The percentage rate of finance charge for a fraction (less than 1) of a unit-period shall be equal to such fraction multiplied by the percentage rate of finance charge per unit-period.

(7) Symbols. The symbols used to express the terms of a transaction in the equation set forth in paragraph (b)(8) of this section are defined as follows:

A_k = The amount of the kth advance.

q_k = The number of full unit-periods from the beginning of the term of the transaction to the kth advance.

e_k = The fraction of a unit-period in the time interval from the beginning of the term of the transaction to the kth advance.

m = The number of advances.

P_j = The amount of the jth payment.

t_j = The number of full unit-periods from the beginning of the term of the transaction to the jth payment.

f_j = The fraction of a unit-period in the time interval from the beginning of the term of the transaction to the jth payment.

n = The number of payments.

i = The percentage rate of finance charge per unit-period, expressed as a decimal equivalent.

Symbols used in the examples shown in this appendix are defined as follows:

$\ddot{a}_{\overline{x|}}$ = The present value of 1 per unit-period for x unit-periods, first payment due immediately.

$$= 1 + \frac{1}{(1+i)} + \frac{1}{(1+i)^2} + \cdots + \frac{1}{(1+i)^{x-1}}$$

w = The number of unit-periods per year.

I = wi x 100 = The nominal annual percentage rate.

(8) General equation. The following equation sets forth the relationship among the terms of a transaction:

$$\frac{A_1}{(1+e_1 i)(1+i)^{q_1}} + \frac{A_2}{(1+e_2 i)(1+i)^{q_2}} + \ldots + \frac{A_m}{(1+e_m i)(1+i)^{q_m}} =$$

$$\frac{P_1}{(1+f_1 i)(1+i)^{t_1}} + \frac{P_2}{(1+f_2 i)(1+i)^{t_2}} + \ldots + \frac{P_n}{(1+f_n i)(1+i)^{t_n}}$$

(9) Solution of general equation by iteration process. (i) The general equation in paragraph (b)(8) of this section, when applied to a simple transaction in which a loan of $1000 is repaid by 36 monthly payments of $33.61 each, takes the special form:

$$A = \frac{33.61\ \ddot{a}_{\overline{36}|}}{(1+i)}$$

Step 1: Let I_1 = estimated annual percentage rate = 12.50 %

Evaluate expression for A, letting $i = I_1/(100w)$ = .010416667

Result (referred to as A') = 1004.674391

Step 2: Let $I_2 = I_1 + .1$ = 12.60 %

Evaluate expression for A, letting $i = I_2/(100w)$ = .010500000

Result (referred to as A'') = 1003.235366

Step 3: Interpolate for I (annual percentage rate):

$$= 12.50 + .1\left[\frac{(1000.000000 - 1004.674391)}{(1003.235366 - 1004.674391)}\right] = 12.82483042\ \%$$

Step 4: First iteration, let I_1 = 12.82483042 % and repeat

Steps 1, 2, and 3 obtaining a new I = 12.82557859 %

Second iteration, let I_1 = 12.82557859 % and repeat

Steps 1, 2, and 3 obtaining a new I = 12.82557529 %

In this case, no further iterations are required to obtain the annual percentage rate correct to two decimal places, 12.83%.

(ii) When the iteration approach is used, it is expected that calculators or computers will be programmed to carry all available decimals throughout the calculation and that enough iterations will be performed to make virtually certain that the annual percentage rate obtained, when rounded to 2 decimals, is correct. Annual percentage rates in the examples below were obtained by using a 10 digit programmable calculator and the iteration procedure described above.

(c) Examples for the actuarial method. (1) Single advance transaction, with or without an odd first period, and otherwise regular. The general equation in paragraph (b)(8) of this section can be put in the following special form for this type of transaction:

Example (i): Monthly payments (regular first period)

Amount advanced (A) = $5000. Payment (P) = $230.
Number of payments (n) = 24.
Unit-period = 1 month. Unit-periods per year (w) = 12.
Advance, 1-10-78. First payment, 2-10-78.
From 1-10-78 through 2-10-78 = 1 unit-period. (t = 1; f = 0)
Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .0969 = 9.69 %

Example (ii): Monthly payments (long first period)

Amount advanced (A) = $6000. Payment (P) = $200.
Number of payments (n) = 36.
Unit-period = 1 month. Unit-periods per year (w) = 12.
Advance, 2-10-78. First payment, 4-1-78.
From 3-1-78 through 4-1-78 = 1 unit-period. (t = 1)
From 2-10-78 through 3-1-78 = 19 days. (f = 19/30)
Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .1182 = 11.82%

Example (iii): Semimonthly payments (short first period)

Amount advanced (A) = $5000. Payment (P) = $219.17.
Number of payments (n) = 24.
Unit-period = 1/2 month. Unit-periods per year (w) = 24.
Advance, 2-23-78. First payment, 3-1-78. Payments made on 1st and 16th of each month.
From 2-23-78 through 3-1-78 = 6 days. (t = 0; f = 6/15)
Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .1034 = 10.34 %

Example (iv): Quarterly payments (long first period)

Amount advanced (A) = $10,000. Payment (P) = $385.
Number of payments (n) = 40.
Unit-period = 3 months. Unit-periods per year (w) = 4.
Advance, 5-23-78. First payment, 10-1-78.
From 7-1-78 through 10-1-78 = 1 unit-period. (t = 1)
From 6-1-78 through 7-1-78 = 1 month = 30 days. From 5-23-78 through 6-1-78 = 9 days. (f = 39/90)
Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .0897 = 8.97 %

Example (v): Weekly payments (long first period)

Amount advanced (A) = $500. Payment (P) = $17.60.
Number of payments (n) = 30.
Unit-period = 1 week. Unit-periods per year (w) = 52.
Advance, 3-20-78. First payment, 4-21-78.
From 3-24-78 through 4-21-78 = 4 unit-periods. ($t = 4$)
From 3-20-78 through 3-24-78 = 4 days. ($f = 4/7$)
Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .1496 = 14.96 %

(2) Single advance transaction, with an odd first payment, with or without an odd first period, and otherwise regular. The general equation in paragraph (b)(8) of this section can be put in the following special form for this type of transaction:

Example (i): Monthly payments (regular first period and irregular first payment)

Amount advanced (A) = $5000. First payment (P_1) = $250.
Regular payment (P) = $230. Number of payments (n) = 24.
Unit-period = 1 month. Unit-periods per year (w) = 12.
Advance, 1-10-78. First payment, 2-10-78.
From 1-10-78 through 2-10-78 = 1 unit-period. ($t = 1$; $f = 0$)
Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .1008 = 10.08%

Example (ii): Payments every 4 weeks (long first period and irregular first payment)

Amount advanced (A) = $400. First payment (P_1) = $39.50.
Regular payment (P) = $38.31. Number of payments (n) = 12.
Unit-period = 4 weeks. Unit-periods per year (w) = 52/4 = 13.
Advance, 3-18-78. First payment, 4-20-78.
From 3-23-78 through 4-20-78 = 1 unit-period. ($t = 1$)
From 3-18-78 through 3-23-78 = 5 days. ($f = 5/28$)
Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .2850 = 28.50%

(3) Single advance transaction, with an odd final payment, with or without an odd first period, and otherwise regular. The general equation in paragraph (b)(8) of this section can be put in the following special form for this type of transaction:

$$A = \frac{1}{(1+fi)(1+i)^{t}} \left[P \ddot{a}_{\overline{n-1}|} + \frac{P_n}{(1+i)^{n-1}} \right]$$

Example (i): Monthly payments (regular first period and irregular final payment)

Amount advanced (A) = $5000. Regular payment (P) = $230.
Final payment $\left(P_n\right)$ = \$280. Number of payments (n) = 24.
Unit-period = 1 month. Unit-periods per year (w) = 12.
Advance, 1-10-78. First payment, 2-10-78.
From 1-10-78 through 2-10-78 = 1 unit-period. (t = 1; f = 0)
Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .1050 = 10.50%

Example (ii): Payments every 2 weeks (short first period and irregular final payment)

Amount advanced (A) = $200. Regular payment (P) = $9.50.
Final payment $\left(P_n\right)$ = \$30. Number of payments (n) = 20.
Unit-period = 2 weeks. Unit-periods per year (w) = 52/2 = 26.
Advance, 4-3-78. First payment, 4-11-78.
From 4-3-78 through 4-11-78 = 8 days. (t = 0; f = 8/14)
Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .1222 = 12.22%

(4) Single advance transaction, with an odd first payment, odd final payment, with or without an odd first period, and otherwise regular. The general equation in paragraph (b)(8) of this section can be put in the following special form for this type of transaction:

$$A = \frac{1}{(1+fi)(1+i)^{t}}\left[P_1 + \frac{P\ddot{a}_{\overline{n-2}|}}{(1+i)} + \frac{P_n}{(1+i)^{n-1}}\right]$$

Example (i): Monthly payments (regular first period, irregular first payment, and irregular final payment)

Number of payments (n) = 24. Unit-period = 1 month.
Unit-periods per year (w) = 12.
Advance, 1-10-78. First payment, 2-10-78.
From 1-10-78 through 2-10-78 = 1 unit-period. (t = 1; f = 0)
Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .1090 = 10.90%

Example (ii): Payments every two months (short first period, irregular first payment, and irregular final payment)

Number of payments (n) = 20. Unit-period = 2 months.
Unit-periods per year (w) = 12/2 = 6.
Advance, 1-10-78. First payment, 3-1-78.
From 2-1-78 through 3-1-78 = 1 month. From 1-10-78 through 2-1-78 = 22 days. (t = 0; f = 52/60)
Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .0730 = 7.30%

(5) Single advance, single payment transaction. The general equation in paragraph (b)(8) of this section can be put in the special forms below for single advance, single payment transactions. Forms 1 through 3 are for the direct determination of the annual percentage rate under special conditions. Form 4 requires the use of the iteration procedure of paragraph (b)(9) of this section and can be used for all single advance, single payment transactions regardless of term.

Form 1 - Term less than 1 year:

Form 2 - Term more than 1 year but less than 2 years:

$$I = \frac{50}{f}\left\{\left[(1 + f)^2 + 4f\left(\frac{P}{A} - 1\right)\right]^{1/2} - (1 + f)\right\}$$

Form 3 - Term equal to exactly a year or exact multiple of a year:

$$I = 100\left[\left(\frac{P}{A}\right)^{1/t} - 1\right]$$

Form 4 - Special form for iteration procedure (no restriction on term):

$$A = \frac{P}{(1 + fi)(1 + i)^t}$$

Example (i): Single advance, single payment (term of less than 1 year, measured in days)

Amount advanced (A) = $1000. Payment (P) = $1080.
Unit-period = 255 days. Unit-periods per year (w) = 365/255.
Advance, 1-3-78. Payment, 9-15-78.
From 1-3-78 through 9-15-78 = 255 days. (t = 1; f = 0)
Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .1145 = 11.45%. (Use Form 1 or 4.)

Example (ii): Single advance, single payment (term of less than 1 year, measured in exact calendar months)

Amount advanced (A) = $1000. Payment (P) = $1044.
Unit-period = 6 months. Unit-periods per year (w) = 2.
Advance, 7-15-78. Payment, 1-15-79.
From 7-15-78 through 1-15-79 = 6 mos. (t = 1; f = 0)
Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .0880 = 8.80%. (Use Form 1 or 4.)

Example (iii): Single advance, single payment (term of more than 1 year but less than 2 years, fraction measured in exact months)

Amount advanced (A) = $1000. Payment (P) = $1135.19.
Unit-period = 1 year. Unit-periods per year (w) = 1.
Advance, 7-17-78. Payment, 1-17-80.
From 1-17-79 through 1-17-80 = 1 unit-period. (t = 1)
From 7-17-78 through 1-17-79 = 6 mos. (f = 6/12)
Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .0876 = 8.76%. (Use Form 2 or 4.)

Example (iv): Single advance, single payment (term of exactly 2 years)

Amount advanced (A) = $1000. Payment (P) = $1240.
Unit-period = 1 year. Unit-periods per year (w) = 1.
Advance, 1-3-78. Payment, 1-3-80.
From 1-3-78 through 1-3-79 = 1 unit-period. (t = 2; f = 0)
Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .1136 = 11.36%. (Use Form 3 or 4.)

(6) Complex single advance transaction.

Example (i): Skipped payment loan (payments every 4 weeks)

A loan of $2135 is advanced on 1-25-78. It is to be repaid by 24 payments of $100 each. Payments are due every 4 weeks beginning 2-20-78. However, in those months in which 2 payments would be due, only the first of the 2 payments is made and the following payment is delayed by 2 weeks to place it in the next month.
Unit-period = 4 weeks. Unit-periods per year (w) = 52/4 = 13.
First series of payments begins 26 days after 1-25-78.
($t_1 = 0$; $f_1 = 26/28$)

Second series of payments begins 9 unit-periods plus 2 weeks after start of first series. ($t_2 = 10$; $f_2 = 12/28$)

Third series of payments begins 6 unit-periods plus 2 weeks after start of second series. ($t_3 = 16$; $f_3 = 26/28$)

Last series of payments begins 6 unit-periods plus 2 weeks after start of third series. ($t_4 = 23$; $f_4 = 12/28$)

The general equation in paragraph (b)(8) of this section can be written in the special form:

$$2135 = \frac{100\,\ddot{a}_{\overline{9|}}}{(1+(26/28)i)} + \frac{100\,\ddot{a}_{\overline{6|}}}{(1+(12/28)i)(1+i)^{10}} + \frac{100\,\ddot{a}_{\overline{6|}}}{(1+(26/28)i)(1+i)^{16}} + \frac{100\,\ddot{a}_{\overline{3|}}}{(1+(12/28)i)(1+i)^{23}}$$

Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .1200 = 12.00%

Example (ii): Skipped payment loan plus single payments

A loan of $7350 on 3-3-78 is to be repaid by 3 monthly payments of $1000 each beginning 9-15-78, plus a single payment of $2000 on 3-15-79, plus 3 more monthly payments of $750 each beginning 9-15-79, plus a final payment of $1000 on 2-1-80.
Unit-period = 1 month. Unit-periods per year (w) = 12.
First series of payments begins 6 unit-periods plus 12 days after 3-3-78. ($t_1 = 6$; $f_1 = 12/30$)

Second series of payments (single payment) occurs 12 unit-periods plus 12 days after 3-3-78. ($t_2 = 12$; $f_2 = 12/30$)

Third series of payments begins 18 unit-periods plus 12 days after 3-3-78. ($t_3 = 18$; $f_3 = 12/30$)

Final payment occurs 22 unit-periods plus 29 days after 3-3-78. ($t_4 = 22$; $f_4 = 29/30$)

The general equation in paragraph (b)(8) of this section can be written in the special form:

$$7350 = \frac{1000\,\ddot{a}_{\overline{3}|}}{(1+(12/30)i)(1+i)^{6}} + \frac{2000}{(1+(12/30)i)(1+i)^{12}} + \frac{750\,\ddot{a}_{\overline{3}|}}{(1+(12/30)i)(1+i)^{18}} + \frac{1000}{(1+(29/30)i)(1+i)^{22}}$$

Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .1022 = 10.22%

Example (iii): Mortgage with varying payments

A loan of $39,688.56 (net) on 4-10-78 is to be repaid by 360 monthly payments beginning 6-1-78. Payments are the same for 12 months at a time as follows:

Year	Monthly payment	Year	Monthly payment	Year	Monthly payment
1	$291.81	11	$385.76	21	$380.43
2	300.18	12	385.42	22	379.60
3	308.78	13	385.03	23	378.68
4	317.61	14	384.62	24	377.69
5	326.65	15	384.17	25	376.60
6	335.92	16	383.67	26	375.42
7	345.42	17	383.13	27	374.13
8	355.15	18	382.54	28	372.72
9	365.12	19	381.90	29	371.18
10	375.33	20	381.20	30	369.50

Unit-period = 1 month. Unit-periods per year (w) = 12.
From 5-1-78 through 6-1-78 = 1 unit-period. (t = 1)
From 4-10-78 through 5-1-78 = 21 days. (f = 21/30)

The general equation in paragraph (b)(8) of this section can be written in the special form:

$$39{,}688.56 = \frac{\ddot{a}_{\overline{12}|}}{(1+(21/30)i)(1+i)} \left[291.81 + \frac{300.18}{(1+i)^{12}} + \frac{308.78}{(1+i)^{24}} + \cdots + \frac{369.50}{(1+i)^{348}} \right]$$

Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .0980 = 9.80%

(7) Multiple advance transactions.

Example (i): Construction loan

Three advances of $20,000 each are made on 4-10-79, 6-12-79, and 9-18-79. Repayment is by 240 monthly payments of $612.36 each beginning 12-10-79.
Unit-period = 1 month. Unit-periods per year (w) = 12.
From 4-10-79 through 6-12-79 = (2+2/30) unit-periods.
From 4-10-79 through 9-18-79 = (5+8/30) unit-periods.
From 4-10-79 through 12-10-79 = (8) unit-periods.

The general equation in paragraph (b)(8) of this section is changed to the single advance mode by treating the 2nd and 3rd advances as negative payments:

$$20{,}000 = \frac{612.36\,\ddot{a}_{\overline{240|}}}{(1+i)^{8}} - \frac{20{,}000}{(1+(2/30)i)(1+i)^{2}} - \frac{20{,}000}{(1+(8/30)i)(1+i)^{5}}$$

Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .1025 = 10.25%

Example (ii): Student loan

A student loan consists of 8 advances: $1800 on 9-5-78, 9-5-79, 9-5-80, and 9-5-81; plus $1000 on 1-5-79, 1-5-80, 1-5-81, and 1-5-82. The borrower is to make 50 monthly payments of $240 each beginning 7-1-78 (prior to first advance).
Unit-period = 1 month. Unit-periods per year (w) = 12.
Zero point is date of first payment since it precedes first advance.
From 7-1-78 to 9-5-78 = (2 + 4/30) unit-periods.
" " " 9-5-79 = (14 + 4/30) "
" " " 9-5-80 = (26 + 4/30) "
" " " 9-5-81 = (38 + 4/30) "
" " " 1-5-79 = (6 + 4/30) "
" " " 1-5-80 = (18 + 4/30) "
" " " 1-5-81 = (30 + 4/30) "
" " " 1-5-82 = (42 + 4/30) "

Since the zero point is date of first payment, the general equation in paragraph (b)(8) of this section is written in the single advance form below by treating the first payment as a negative advance and the 8 advances as negative payments:

$$-240 = \frac{240\,\ddot{a}_{\overline{49|}}}{(1+i)} - \frac{1800}{(1+(4/30)i)}\left[\frac{1}{(1+i)^{2}} + \frac{1}{(1+i)^{14}} + \frac{1}{(1+i)^{26}} + \frac{1}{(1+i)^{38}}\right]$$

$$- \frac{1000}{(1+(4/30)i)}\left[\frac{1}{(1+i)^{6}} + \frac{1}{(1+i)^{18}} + \frac{1}{(1+i)^{30}} + \frac{1}{(1+i)^{42}}\right]$$

Annual percentage rate (I) = wi = .3204 = 32.04%

SUPPLEMENT I—OFFICIAL STAFF INTERPRETATIONS

INTRODUCTION

1. Official status. This commentary is the vehicle by which the staff of the Division of Consumer and Community Affairs of the Federal Reserve Board issues official staff interpretations of Regulation Z, as revised effective April 1, 1981. Good faith compliance with this commentary affords protection from liability under 130(f) of the Truth in Lending Act. Section 130(f) (15 U.S.C. 1640) protects creditors from civil liability for any act done or omitted in good faith in conformity with any interpretation issued by a duly authorized official or employee of the Federal Reserve System.

2. Procedure for requesting interpretations. Under Appendix C of the regulation, anyone may request an official staff interpretation. Interpretations that are adopted will be incorporated in this commentary following publication in the FEDERAL REGISTER. No official staff interpretations are expected to be issued other than by means of this commentary.

3. Status of previous interpretations. All statements and opinions issued by the Federal Reserve Board and its staff interpreting previous Regulation Z remain effective until October 1, 1982, only insofar as they interpret that regulation. When compliance with revised Regulation Z becomes mandatory on October 1, 1982, the Board and staff interpretations of the previous regulation will be entirely superseded by the revised regulation and this commentary except with regard to liability under the previous regulation.

4. Rules of construction. (a) Lists that appear in the commentary may be exhaustive or illustrative; the appropriate construction should be clear from the context. In most cases, illustrative lists are introduced by phrases such as "including, but not limited to," "among other things," "for example," or "such as."

(b) Throughout the commentary and regulation, reference to the regulation should be construed to refer to revised Regulation Z, unless the context indicates that a reference to previous Regulation Z is also intended.

(c) Throughout the commentary, reference to "this section" or "this paragraph" means the section or paragraph in the regulation that is the subject of the comment.

5. Comment designations. Each comment in the commentary is identified by a number and the regulatory section or paragraph which it interprets. The comments are designated with as much specificity as possible according to the particular regulatory provision addressed. For example, some of the comments to § 226.18(b) are further divided by paragraph, such as Comment 18(b)(1)-1 and Comment 18(b)(2)-1. In other cases, comments have more general application and are designated, for example, as Comment 18-1 or Comment 18(b)-1. This introduction may be cited as Comments I-1 through I-7. The appendices may be cited as Comments App. A-1 through App. J-2.

6. Cross-references. The following cross-references to related material appear at the end of each section of the commentary: (a) "Statute"—those sections of the Truth in Lending Act on which the regulatory provision is based (and any other relevant statutes); (b) "Other sections"—other provisions in the regulation necessary to understand that section; (c) "Previous regulation"—parallel provisions in previous Regulation Z; and (d) "1981 changes"—a brief description of the major changes made by the 1981 revisions to Regulation Z. Where appropriate a fifth category ("Other regulations") provides cross-references to other regulations.

7. Transition rules. (a) Though compliance with the revised regulation is not mandatory until April 1, 1982, creditors may begin complying as of April 1, 1981. During the intervening year, a creditor may convert its entire operation to the new requirements at one time, or it may convert to the new requirements in stages. In general, however, a creditor may not mix the regulatory requirements when making disclosures for a particular closed-end transaction or open-end account; all the disclosures for a single closed-end transaction (or open-end account) must be made in accordance with the previous regulation, or all the disclosures must be made in accordance with the revised regulation. As an exception to the general rule, the revised rescission rules and the revised advertising rules may be followed even if the disclosures are based on the previous regulation. For purposes of this regulation, the creditor is not required to take any particular action beyond the requirements of the revised regulation to indicate its conversion to the revised regulation.

(b) The revised regulation may be relied on to determine if any disclosures are required for a particular transaction or to determine if a person is a "creditor" subject to Truth in Lending requirements, whether or not other operations have been converted to the revised regulation. For example, layaway plans are not subject to the revised regulation, nor are oral agreements to lend money if there is no finance charge. These provisions may be relied on even if the creditor is making other disclosures under the previous regulation. The new rules governing whether or not disclosures must be made for refinancings and assumptions are also available to a creditor that has not yet converted its operations to the revised regulation.

(c) In addition to the above rules, applicable to both open-end and closed-end credit, the following guidelines are relevant to open-end credit:

- The creditor need not remake initial disclosures that were made under the previous regulation, even if the revised periodic statements contain terminology that is inconsistent with those initial disclosures.
- A creditor may add inserts to its old open-end forms in order to convert them to the revised rules until such time as the old forms are used up.
- No change-in-terms notice is required for changes resulting from the conversion to the revised regulation.
- The previous billing rights statements are substantially similar to the revised billing rights statements and may continue to be used, except that, if the creditor has an automatic debit program, it must use the revised automatic debit provision.
- For those creditors wishing to use the annual billing rights statement, the creditor may count from the date on which it sent its last statement under the previous regulation in determining when to give the first statement under the new regulation. For example, if the creditor sent a semi-annual statement in June 1981, and converts to the new regulation in October 1981, the creditor must give the billing rights statement sometime in 1982, and it must not be fewer than 6 nor more than 18 months after the June statement.
- Section 226.11 of the revised regulation affects only credit balances that are created on or after the date the creditor converts the account to the revised regulation.

Section 226.1—Authority, Purpose, Coverage, Organization, Enforcement and Liability

1(c) Coverage.

1. Foreign applicability. Regulation Z applies to all persons (including branches of foreign banks and sellers located in the United States) that extend consumer credit to residents (including resident aliens) of any state as defined in § 226.2. If an account is located in the United States and credit is extended to a U.S. resident, the transaction is subject to the regulation. This will be the case whether or not a particular advance or purchase on the account takes place in the United States and whether or not the extender of credit is chartered or based in the United States or a foreign country. Thus, a U.S. resident's use in Europe of a credit card issued by a bank in the consumer's home town is covered by the regulation. The regulation does not apply to a foreign branch of a U.S. bank when the foreign branch extends credit to a U.S. citizen residing or visiting abroad or to a foreign national abroad.

1981 changes: A discussion of coverage has been added to § 226.1 so that the reader will understand from the start what is subject to the regulation. Language has also been added to explain the reorganization of the regulation into subparts that group together the provisions relating to general matters, open-end credit, closed-end credit, and miscellaneous rules. The provisions on consumer leasing have been issued by the Board as a separate regulation, Regulation M (12 CFR Part 213).

Section 226.2—Definitions and Rules of Construction

2(a) Definitions.

2(a)(2) "Advertisement".

1. Coverage. Only commercial messages that promote consumer credit transactions requiring disclosures are advertisements. Messages inviting, offering, or otherwise announcing generally to prospective customers the availability of credit transactions, whether in visual, oral, or print media, are covered by the regulation. Examples include:

- Messages in a newspaper, magazine, leaflet, promotional flyer, or catalog.
- Announcements on radio, television, or public address system.
- Direct mail literature or other printed material on any exterior or interior sign.
- Point-of-sale displays.
- Telephone solicitations.
- Price tags that contain credit information.
- Letters sent to customers as part of an organized solicitaion of business.
- Messages on checking account statements offering auto loans at a stated annual percentage rate.

The term does not include:

- Direct personal contacts, such as follow-up letters, cost estimates for individual consumers, or oral or written communication relating to the negotiation of a specific transaction.
- Informational material, for example, interest rate and loan term memos, distributed only to business entities.
- Notices required by federal or state law, if the law mandates that specific information be displayed and only the information so mandated is included in the notice.

- News articles the use of which is controlled by the news medium.
- Market research or educational material that do not solicit business.

2. Persons covered. All "persons" must comply with the advertising provisions in §§ 226.16 and 226.24, not just those that meet the definition of creditor in § 226.2(a)(17). Thus, home builders, merchants, and others who are not themselves creditors must comply with the advertising provisions of the regulation if they advertise consumer credit transactions. However, under section 145 of the act, the owner and the personnel of the medium, in which an advertisement appears, or through which it is disseminated, are not subject to civil liability for violations.

2(a)(3) [Reserved]

2(a)(4) "Billing cycle" or "cycle".

1. Intervals. In open-end credit plans, the billing cycle determines the intervals for which periodic disclosure statements are required; these intervals are also used as measuring points for other duties of the creditor. Typically, billing cycles are monthly, but they may be more frequent or less frequent (but not less frequent than quarterly).

2. Creditors that do not bill. The term "cycle" is interchangeable with "billing cycle" for definitional purposes, since some creditors' cycles do not involve the sending of bills in the traditional sense but only statements of account activity. This is commonly the case with financial institutions when periodic payments are made through payroll deduction or through automatic debit of the consumer's asset account.

3. Equal cycles. Although cycles must be equal, there is a permissible variance to account for weekends, holidays, and differences in the number of days in months. If the actual date of each statement does not vary by more than 4 days from a fixed "day" (for example, the third Thursday of each month) or "date" (for example, the 15th of each month) that the creditor regularly uses, the intervals between statements are considered equal. The requirement that cycles be equal applies even if the creditor applies a daily periodic rate to determine the finance charge. The requirement that intervals be equal does not apply to the transitional billing cycle that can occur when the creditor occasionally changes its billing cycles so as to establish a new statement day or date. (See the commentary to § 226.9(c).)

4. Payment reminder. The sending of a regular payment reminder (rather than a late payment notice) establishes a cycle for which the creditor must send periodic statements.

2(a)(6) "Business day".

1. Business function test. Activities that indicate that the creditor is open for substantially all of its business functions include the availability of personnel to make loan disbursements, to open new accounts, and to handle credit transaction inquiries. Activities that indicate that the creditor is not open for substantially all of its business functions include a retailer merely accepting credit cards for purchases or a bank having its customer-service windows open only for limited purposes such as deposits and withdrawals, bill paying, and related services.

2. Rescission rule. A more precise rule for what is a business day (all calendar days except Sundays and the federal legal holidays listed in 5 U.S.C. 6103(a)) applies when the right of rescission is involved.

2(a)(7) "Card issuer".

1. Agent. An agent of a card issuer is considered a card issuer. Because agency relationships are traditionally defined by contract and by state or other applicable law, the regulation does not define agent. Merely providing services relating to the production of credit cards or data processing for others, however, does not make one the agent of the card issuer. In contrast, a financial institution may become the agent of the card issuer if an agreement between the institution and the card issuer provides that the cardholder may use a line of credit with the financial institution to pay obligations incurred by use of the credit card.

2(a)(8) "Cardholder".

1. General rule. A cardholder is a natural person at whose request a card is issued for consumer credit purposes or who is a co-obligor or guarantor for such a card issued to another. The second category does not include an employee who is a co-obligor or guarantor on a card issued to the employer for business purposes, nor does it include a person who is merely the authorized user of a card issued to another.

2. Limited application of regulation. For the limited purposes of the rules on issuance of credit cards and liability for unauthorized use, a cardholder includes any person, including an organization, to whom a card is issued for any purpose—including a business, agricultural, or commercial purpose.

3. Issuance. See the commentary to § 226.12(a).

4. Dual-purpose cards and dual-card systems. Some card issuers offer dual-purpose cards that are for business as well as consumer purposes. If a card is issued to an individual for consumer purposes, the fact that an organization has guaranteed to pay the debt does not make it business credit. On the other hand, if a card is issued for business purposes, the fact that an individual sometimes uses it for consumer purchases does not subject the card issuer to the provisions on periodic statements, billing error resolution, and other protections afforded to consumer credit. Some card issuers offer dual-card systems—that is, they issue two cards to the same individual, one intended for business use, the other for consumer or personal use. With such a system, the same person may be a cardholder for general purposes when using the card issued for consumer use, and a cardholder only for the limited purposes of the restrictions on issuance and liability when using the card issued for business purposes.

2(a)(9) "Cash price".

1. Components. This amount is a starting point in computing the amount financed and the total sale price under § 226.18 for credit sales. Any charges imposed equally in cash and credit transactions may be included in the cash price, or they may be treated as other amounts financed under § 226.18(b)(2).

2. Service contracts. Service contracts include contracts for the repair or the servicing of goods, such as mechanical breakdown coverage, even if such a contract is characterized as insurance under state law.

3. Rebates. The creditor has complete flexibility in the way it treats rebates for purposes of disclosure and calculation. See the commentary to § 226.18(b).

2(a)(10) "Closed-end credit".

1. General. The coverage of this term is defined by exclusion. That is, it includes any credit arrangement that does not fall within the definition of open-end credit. Subpart C contains the disclosure rules for closed-end credit when the obligation is subject to a finance charge or is payable by written agreement in more than 4 installments.

2(a)(11) "Consumer".

1. Scope. Guarantors, endorsers, and sureties are not generally consumers for purposes of the regulation, but they may be entitled to rescind under certain circumstances and they may have certain rights if they are obligated on credit card plans.

2. Rescission rules. For purposes of rescission under §§ 226.15 and 226.23, a consumer includes any natural person whose ownership interest in his or her principal dwelling is subject to the risk of loss. Thus, if a security interest is taken in A's ownership interest in a house and that house is A's principal dwelling, A is a consumer for purposes of rescission, even if A is not liable, either primarily or secondarily, on the underlying consumer credit transaction. An ownership interest does not include, for example, leaseholds or inchoate rights, such as dower.

3. Land trusts. Credit extended to land trusts, as described in the commentary to § 226.3(a), is considered to be extended to a natural person for purposes of the definition of consumer.

2(a)(12) "Consumer credit".

1. Primary purpose. There is no precise test for what constitutes credit offered or extended for personal, family, or household purposes, nor for what constitutes the primary purpose. See, however, the discussion of business purposes in the commentary to § 226.3(a).

2(a)(13) "Consummation".

1. State law governs. When a contractual obligation on the consumer's part is created is a matter to be determined under applicable law; Regulation Z does not make this determination. A contractual commitment agreement, for example, that under applicable law binds the consumer to the credit terms would be consummation. Consummation, however, does not occur merely because the consumer has made some financial investment in the transaction (for example, by paying a nonrefundable fee) unless, of course, applicable law holds otherwise.

2. Credit v. sale. Consummation does not occur when the consumer becomes contractually committed to a sale transaction, unless the consumer also becomes legally obligated to accept a particular credit arrangement. For example, when a consumer pays a nonrefundable deposit to purchase an automobile, a purchase contact may be created, but consummation for purposes of the regulation does not occur unless the consumer also contracts for financing at that time.

2(a)(14) "Credit".

1. Exclusions. The following situations are not considered credit for purposes of the regulation:

- Layaway plans, unless the consumer is contractually obligated to continue making payments. Whether the consumer is so obligated is a matter to be determined under applicable law. The fact that the consumer is not entitled to a refund of any amounts paid towards the cash price of the merchandise does not bring layaways within the definition of credit.
- Tax liens, tax assessments, court judgments, and court approvals of reaffirmation of debts in bankruptcy. However, third-party financing of such obligations (for example, a bank loan obtained to pay off a tax lien) is credit for purposes of the regulation.
- Insurance premium plans that involve payment in installments with each installment representing the payment for insurance coverage for a certain future period of time, unless the consumer is contractually obligated to continue making payments.
- Home improvement transactions that involve progress payments, if the consumer pays, as the work progresses, only for work completed and has no contractual obligation to continue making payments.
- "Borrowing" against the accrued cash value of an insurance policy or a pension account, if there is no independent obligation to repay.

- Letters of credit.
- The execution of option contracts. However, there may be an extension of credit when the option is exercised, if there is an agreement at that time to defer payment of a debt.
- Investment plans in which the party extending capital to the consumer risks the loss of the capital advanced. This includes, for example, an arrangement with a home purchaser in which the investor pays a portion of the downpayment and of the periodic mortgage payments in return for an ownership interest in the property, and shares in any gain or loss of property value.
- Mortgage assistance plans administered by a government agency in which a portion of the consumer's monthly payment amount is paid by the agency. No finance charge is imposed on the subsidy amount and that amount is due in a lump-sum payment on a set date or upon the occurrence of certain events. (If payment is not made when due, a new note imposing a finance charge may be written, which may then be subject to the regulation.)

2(a)(15) "Credit card".

1. Usable from time to time. A credit card must be usable from time to time. Since this involves the possibility of repeated use of a single device, checks and similar instruments that can be used only once to obtain a single credit extension are not credit cards.

2. Examples. Examples of credit cards include:

- A card that guarantees checks or similar instruments, if the asset account is also tied to an overdraft line or if the instrument directly accesses a line of credit
- A card that accesses both a credit and an asset account (that is, a debit-credit card)
- An identification card that permits the consumer to defer payment on a purchase
- An identification card indicating loan approval that is presented to a merchant or to a lender, whether or not the consumer signs a separate promissory note for each credit extension

In contrast, credit card does not include, for example:

- A check guarantee or debit card with no credit feature or agreement, even if the creditor occasionally honors an inadvertent overdraft.
- Any card, key, plate, or other device that is used in order to obtain petroleum products for business purposes from a wholesale distribution facility or to gain access to that facility, and that is required to be used without regard to payment terms.

2(a)(16) "Credit sale".

1. Special disclosure. If the seller is a creditor in the transaction, the transaction is a credit sale and the special credit sale disclosures (that is, the disclosures under § 226.18(j)) must be given. This applies even if there is more than one creditor in the transaction and the creditor making the disclosures is not the seller. See the commentary to § 226.17(d).

2. Sellers who arrange credit. If the seller of the property or services involved arranged for financing but is not a creditor as to that sale, the transaction is not a credit sale. Thus, if a seller assists the consumer in obtaining a direct loan from a financial institution and the consumer's note is payable to the financial institution, the transaction is a loan and only the financial institution is a creditor.

3. Refinancings. Generally, when a credit sale is refinanced within the meaning of § 226.20(a), loan disclosures should be made. However, if a new sale of goods or services is also involved, the transaction is a credit sale.

4. Incidental sales. Some lenders "sell" a product or service—such as credit, property, or health insurance—as part of a loan transaction. Section 226.4 contains the rules on whether the cost of credit life, disability or property insurance is part of the finance charge. If the insurance is financed, it may be disclosed as a separate credit sale transaction or disclosed as part of the primary transaction; if the latter approach is taken, either loan or credit sale disclosures may be made. See the commentary to § 226.17(c)(1) for further discussion of this point.

5. Credit extensions for educational purposes. A credit extension for educational purposes in which an educational institution is the creditor may be treated as either a credit sale or a loan, regardless of whether the funds are given directly to the student, credited to the student's account, or disbursed to other persons on the student's behalf. The disclosure of the total sale price need not be given if the transaction is treated as a loan.

2(a)(17) "Creditor".

1. General. The definition contains four independent tests. If any one of the tests is met, the person is a creditor for purposes of that particular test.

Paragraph 2(a)(17)(i).

1. Prerequisites. This test is composed of 2 requirements, both of which must be met in order for a particular credit extension to be subject to the regulation and for the credit extension to count towards satisfaction of the numerical tests mentioned in footnote 3 to § 226.2(a)(17). First, there must be either or both of the following:

- A written (rather than oral) agreement to pay in more than 4 installments. A letter that merely confirms an oral agreement does not constitute a written agreement for purposes of the definition.

- A finance charge imposed for the credit. The obligation to pay the finance charge need not be in writing.

Second, the obligation must be payable to the person in order for that person to be considered a creditor. If an obligation is made payable to "bearer," the creditor is the one who initially accepts the obligation.

2. Assignees. If an obligation is initially payable to one person, that person is the creditor even if the obligation by its terms is simultaneously assigned to another person. For example:

- An auto dealer and a bank have a business relationship in which the bank supplies the dealer with credit sale contracts that are initially made payable to the dealer and provide for the immediate assignment of the obligation to the bank. The dealer and purchaser execute the contract only after the bank approves the creditworthiness of the purchaser. Because the obligation is initially payable on its face to the dealer, the dealer is the only creditor in the transaction.

3. Numerical tests. The examples below illustrate how the numerical tests of footnote 3 are applied. The examples assume that consumer credit with a finance charge or written agreement for more than 4 installments was extended in the years in question and that the person did not extend such credit in 1982.

4. Counting transactions. For purposes of closed-end credit, the creditor counts each credit transaction. For open-end credit, "transactions" means accounts, so that outstanding accounts are counted instead of individual credit extensions. Normally the number of transactions is measured by the preceding calendar year; if the requisite number is met, then the person is a creditor for all transactions in the current year. However, if the person did not meet the test in the preceding year, the number of transactions is measured by the current calendar year. For example, if the person extends consumer credit 26 times in 1983, it is a creditor for purposes of the regulation for the last extension of credit in 1983 and for all extensions of consumer credit in 1984. On the other hand, if a business begins in 1983 and extends consumer credit 20 times, it is not a creditor for purposes of the regulation in 1983. If it extends consumer credit 75 times in 1984, however, it becomes a creditor for purposes of the regulation (and must begin making disclosures) after the 25th extension of credit in that year and is a creditor for all extensions of consumer credit in 1985.

5. Relationship between consumer credit in general and credit secured by a dwelling. Extensions of credit secured by a dwelling are counted towards the 25-extensions test. For example, if in 1983 a person extends unsecured consumer credit 23 times and consumer credit secured by a dwelling twice, it becomes a creditor for the succeeding extensions of credit, whether or not they are secured by a dwelling. On the other hand, extensions of consumer credit not secured by a dwelling are not counted towards the number of credit extensions secured by a dwelling. For example, if in 1983 a person extends credit not secured by a dwelling 8 times and credit secured by a dwelling 3 times, it is not a creditor.

6. Effect of satisfying one test. Once one of the numerical tests is satisfied, the person is also a creditor for the other type of credit. For example, in 1983 a person extends consumer credit secured by a dwelling 5 times. That person is a creditor for all succeeding credit extensions, whether they involve credit secured by a dwelling or not.

7. Trusts. In the case of credit extended by trusts, each individual trust is considered a separate entity for purposes of applying the criteria. For example:

- A bank is the trustee for 3 trusts: Trust A makes 15 extensions of consumer credit annually; Trust B makes 10 extensions of consumer credit annually; and Trust C makes 30 extensions of consumer credit annually. Only Trust C is a creditor for purposes of the regulation.

8. Loans from employee savings plans. Some employee savings plans permit participants to borrow money up to a certain percentage of their account balances. Unless each participant's account is an individual trust, the numerical tests should be applied to the plan as a whole rather than to the individual accounts, even if the loan amount is determined by reference to the balance in an individual account and the repayments are credited to the individual account.

Paragraph 2(a)(17)(ii). [Reserved]

Paragraph 2(a)(17)(iii).

1. Card issuers subject to Subpart B. Section 226.2(a)(17)(iii) makes certain card issuers creditors for purposes of the open-end credit provisions of the regulation. This includes, for example, the issuers of so-called travel and entertainment cards that expect repayment at the first billing and do not impose a finance charge. Since all disclosures are to be made only as applicable, such card issuers would omit finance charge disclosures. Other provisions of the regulation regarding such areas as scope, definitions, determination of which charges are finance charges, Spanish language disclosures, record retention, and use of model forms, also apply to such card issuers.

Paragraph 2(a)(17)(iv).

1. Card issuers subject to Subparts B and C. Section 226.2(a)(17)(iv) includes as creditors card issuers extending closed-end credit in which there is a finance charge or an agreement to pay in more than 4 installments. These card issuers are subject to the appropriate provisions of Subparts B and C, as well as to the general provisions.

2(a)(18) "Downpayment".

1. Allocation. If a consumer makes a lump-sum payment, partially to reduce the cash price and partially to pay prepaid finance charges, only the portion attributable to reducing the cash price is part of the downpayment. (See the commentary to § 226.2(a)(23).)

2. Pick-up payments. Creditors may treat the deferred portion of the down-payment, often referred to as "pick-up payments," in a number of ways. If the pick-up payment is treated as part of the downpayment:

- It is subtracted in arriving at the amount financed under § 226.18(b).
- It may, but need not, be reflected in the payment schedule under § 226.18(g).

If the pick-up payment does not meet the definition (for example, if it is payable after the second regularly scheduled payment) or if the creditor chooses not to treat it as part of the downpayment:

- It must be included in the amount financed.
- It must be shown in the payment schedule.

Whichever way the pick-up payment is treated, the total of payments under § 226.18(h) must equal the sum of the payments disclosed under § 226.18(g).

2(a)(19) "Dwelling".

1. Scope. A dwelling need not be the consumer's principal residence to fit the definition and thus a vacation or second home could be a dwelling. However, for purposes of the definition of residential mortgage transaction and the right to rescind, a dwelling must be the principal residence of the consumer. See the commentary to §§ 226.2(a)(24), 226.15, and 226.23.

2. Use as a residence. Mobile homes, boats, and trailers are dwellings if they are in fact used as residences, just as are condominium and cooperative units. Recreational vehicles, campers, and the like not used as residences are not dwellings.

3. Relation to exemptions. Any transaction involving a security interest in a consumer's principal dwelling (as well as in any real property) remains subject to the regulation despite the general exemption in § 226.3(b) for credit extensions over $25,000.

2(a)(20) "Open-end credit".

1. General. This definition describes the characteristics of open-end credit (for which the applicable disclosure and other rules are contained in Subpart B), as distinct from closed-end credit. Open-end credit is consumer credit that is extended under a plan and meets all 3 criteria set forth in the definition.

2. Existence of a plan. The definition requires that there be a plan, which connotes a contractual arrangement between the creditor and the consumer. Some creditors offer programs containing a number of different credit features. The consumer has a single account with the institution that can be accessed repeatedly via a number of sub-accounts established for the different program features and rate structures. Some features of the program might be used repeatedly (for example, an overdraft line) while others might be used infrequently (such as the part of the credit line available for secured credit). If the program as a whole is subject to prescribed terms and otherwise meets the definition of open-end credit, such a program would be considered a single, multi-featured plan.

3. Repeated transactions. Under this criterion, the creditor must reasonably contemplate repeated transactions. This means that the credit plan must be usable from time to time and the creditor must legitimately expect that there will be repeat business rather than a one-time credit extension. The creditor must expect repeated dealings with the consumer under the credit plan as a whole, and need not believe the consumer will reuse a particular feature of the plan. A standard based on reasonable belief by a creditor necessarily includes some margin for judgmental error. The fact that a particular consumer does not return for further credit extensions does not prevent a plan from having been properly characterized as open-end. For example, if much of the customer base of a clothing store makes repeat purchases, the fact that some consumers only use the plan once would not affect the characterization of the store's plan as open-end credit. The criterion regarding repeated transactions is a question of fact to be decided in the context of the creditor's type of business and the creditor's relationship with the consumer. For example:

- It would be more reasonable for a thrift institution chartered for the benefit of its members to contemplate repeated transactions with a member, than for a seller of aluminum siding to make the same assumption about its customers.
- It would be more reasonable for a bank to make advances from a line of credit for the purchase of an automobile than for an automobile dealer to sell a car under an open-end plan.

4. Finance charge on an outstanding balance. The requirement that a finance charge may be computed and imposed from time to time on the outstanding balance means that there is no specific amount financed for the plan for which the finance charge, total of payments, and payment schedule can be calculated. A plan does not meet this criterion if there is no possibility that a periodic finance charge will be imposed on the outstanding balance. Some plans, such as certain "china club" plans, feature free-ride periods if the consumer pays all or a specified portion of the outstanding balance within a given time period. For example, the creditor might not impose finance charges in any month in which the consumer pays 1/10 of the balance. Thus, a plan could meet this finance charge criterion even though the consumer actually pays no finance charges during the existence of the plan because the consumer takes advantage of the option to pay the balance (either in its entirety or in installments) within the time necessary to avoid finance charges.

5. Reusable line. The total amount of credit that may be extended during the existence of an open-end plan is unlimited because available credit is generally replenished as earlier advances are repaid. A line of credit is self-replenishing even though the plan itself has a fixed expiration date, as long as during the plan's existence the consumer may use the line, repay, and reuse the credit. The creditor may verify credit information such as the consumer's continued income and employment status or information for security purposes. This criterion of unlimited credit distinguishes open-end credit from a series of advances made pursuant to a close-end credit loan commitment. For example:

- Under a closed-end commitment, the creditor might agree to lend a total of $10,000 in a series of advances as needed by the consumer. When a consumer has borrowed the full $10,000, no more is advanced under that particular agreement, even if there has been repayment of a portion of the debt.

This criterion does not mean that the creditor must establish a specific credit limit for the line of credit or that the line of credit must always be replenished to its original amount. The creditor may reduce a credit limit or refuse to extend new credit in a particular case due to changes in the economy, the creditor's financial condition, or the consumer's creditworthiness. While consumers should have a reasonable expectation of obtaining credit as long as they remain current and within any preset credit limits, further extensions of credit need not be an absolute right in order for the plan to meet the self-replenishing criterion.

6. Open-end real estate mortgages. Some credit plans call for negotiated advances under so-called open-end real estate mortgages. Each such plan must be independently measured against the definition of open-end credit, regardless of the terminology used in the industry to describe the plan. The fact that a particular plan is called an open-end real estate mortgage, for example, does not, by itself, mean that it is open-end credit under the regulation.

2(a)(21) "Periodic rate".

1. Basis. The periodic rate may be stated as a percentage (for example, 1½% per month) or as a decimal equivalent (for example, .015 monthly). It may be based on any portion of a year the creditor chooses. Some creditors use 1/360 of an annual rate as their periodic rate. These creditors:

- May disclose a 1/360 rate as a "daily" periodic rate, without further explanation, if it is in fact only applied 360 days per year. But if the creditor applies that rate for 365 days, the creditor must note that fact and, of course, disclose the true annual percentage rate.
- Would have to apply the rate to the balance to disclose the annual percentage rate with the degree of accuracy required in the regulation (that is, within 1/8 of 1 percentage point of the rate based on the actual 365 days in the year).

2. Transaction charges. "Periodic rate" does not include initial one-time transaction charges, even if the charge is computed as a percentage of the transaction amount.

2(a)(22) "Person".

1. Joint ventures. A joint venture is an organization and is therefore a person.

2. Attorneys. An attorney and his or her client are considered to be the same person for purposes of this regulation when the attorney is acting within the scope of the attorney-client relationship with regard to a particular transaction.

3. Trusts. A trust and its trustee are considered to be the same person for purposes of this regulation.

2(a)(23) "Prepaid finance charge".

1. General. Prepaid finance charges must be taken into account under § 226.18(b) in computing the disclosed amount financed, and must be disclosed if the creditor provides an itemization of the amount financed under § 226.18(c).

2. Examples. Common examples of prepaid finance charges include:

- Buyer's points.
- Service fees.
- Loan fees.
- Finder's fees.
- Loan guarantee insurance.
- Credit investigation fees.

However, in order for these or any other finance charges to be considered prepaid, they must be either paid separately in cash or check or withheld from the proceeds. Prepaid finance charges include any portion of the finance charge paid prior to or at closing or settlement.

3. Exclusions. "Add-on" and "discount" finance charges are not prepaid finance charges for purposes of this regulation. Finance charges are not "prepaid" merely because they are precomputed, whether or not a portion of the charge will be rebated to the consumer upon prepayment. See the commentary to § 226.18(b).

4. Allocation of lump-sum payments. In a credit sale transaction involving a lump-sum payment by the consumer and a discount or other item that is a finance charge under § 226.4, the discount or other item is a prepaid finance charge to the extent the lump-sum payment is not applied to the cash price. For example, a seller sells property to a consumer for $10,000, requires the consumer to pay $3,000 at the time of the purchase, and finances the remainder as a closed-end credit transaction. The cash price of the property is $9,000. The seller is the creditor in the transaction and therefore the $1,000 difference between the credit and cash prices (the discount) is a finance charge. (See the commentary to §§ 226.4(b)(9) and 226.4(c)(5).) If the creditor applies the entire $3,000 to the cash price and adds the $1,000 finance charge to the interest on the $6,000 to arrive at the total finance charge, all of the $3,000 lump-sum payment is a downpayment and the discount is not a prepaid finance charge. However, if the creditor only applies $2,000 of the lump-sum payment to the cash price, then $2,000 of the $3,000 is a downpayment and the $1,000 discount is a prepaid finance charge.

2(a)(24) "Residential mortgage transaction".

1. Relation to other sections. This term is important in six provisions in the regulation:

- Section 226.4(c)(7)—exclusions from the finance charge.
- Section 226.15(f)—exemption from the right of rescission.
- Section 226.18(q)—whether or not the obligation is assumable.
- Section 226.19—special timing rules.
- Section 226.20(b)—disclosure requirements for assumptions.
- Section 226.23(f)—exemption from the right of rescission.

2. Lien status. The definition is not limited to first lien transactions. For example, a consumer might assume a paid-down first mortgage (or borrow part of the purchase price) and borrow the balance of the purchase price from a creditor who takes a second mortgage. The second mortgage transaction is a "residential mortgage transaction" if the dwelling purchased is the consumer's principal residence.

3. Principal dwelling. A consumer can only have one principal dwelling at a time. Thus, a vacation or other second home would not be a principal dwelling. However, if a consumer buys or builds a new dwelling that will become the consumer's principal dwelling within a year or upon the completion of construction, the new dwelling is considered the principal dwelling for purposes of applying this definition to a particular transaction. See the commentary to §§ 226.15(a) and 226.23(a).

4. Construction financing. If a transaction meets the definition of a residential mortgage transaction and the creditor chooses to disclose it as several transactions under § 226.17(c)(6), each one is considered to be a residential mortgage transaction, even if different creditors are involved. For example:

- The creditor makes a construction loan to finance the initial construction of the consumer's principal dwelling, and the loan will be disbursed in 5 advances. The creditor gives 6 sets of disclosures (5 for the construction phase and 1 for the permanent phase). Each one is a residential mortgage transaction.
- One creditor finances the initial construction of the consumer's principal dwelling and another creditor makes a loan to satisfy the construction loan and provide permanent financing. Both transactions are residential mortgage transactions.

5. Acquisition. A transaction is not "to finance the acquisition" of the consumer's principal dwelling (and therefore is not a residential mortgage transaction) if the consumer had previously purchased the dwelling and acquired some title to the dwelling, even though the consumer has not acquired full legal title. Thus, the following types of transactions are not residential mortgage transactions:

- The financing of a balloon payment due under a land sale contract.
- An extension of credit made to a joint owner of property to buy out the other joint owner's interest.

As a result, in giving the disclosures for these transactions several provisions of the regulation are not applicable, for example, the exceptions to the right of rescission (§§ 226.23(f)(1) and 226.15(f)(1)), the early disclosure requirement (§ 226.19(a)), and the disclosure concerning assumability (§ 226.18(q)). In the following situation, by contrast, since the transaction is not a residential mortgage transaction, no disclosures are required by § 226.20(b) and therefore the right of rescission does not apply:

- A written agreement between a creditor holding a seller's mortgage and the buyer of the property which allows the buyer to assumer the mortgage, where the buyer previously purchased the property and agreed with the seller to make the mortgage payments.

2(a)(25) "Security interest".

1. Threshold test. The threshold test is whether a particular interest in property is recognized as a security interest under applicable law. The regulation does not determine whether a particular interest is a security interest under applicable law. If the creditor is unsure whether a particular interest is a security interest under applicable law (for example, if statutes and case law are either silent or inconclusive on the issue), the creditor may at its option consider such interests as security interests for Truth in Lending purposes. However, the regulation and the commentary do exclude specific interests, such as after-acquired property and accessories, from the scope of the definition regardless of their categorization under applicable law, and these named exclusions may not be disclosed as security interests under the regulation. (But see the discussion of exclusions elsewhere in the commentary to § 226.2(a)(25).)

2. Exclusions. The general definition of security interest excludes three groups of interests: incidental interests, interests in after-acquired property, and interests that arise solely by operation of law. These interests may not be disclosed with the disclosures required under § 226.18, but the creditor is not precluded from preserving these rights elsewhere in the contract documents, or invoking and enforcing such rights, if it is otherwise lawful to do so. If the creditor is unsure whether a particular interest is one of the excluded interests, the creditor may, at its option, consider such interests as security interests for Truth in Lending purposes.

3. Incidental interests. Incidental interests in property that are not security interests include, among other things:

- Assignment of rents.
- Right to condemnation proceeds.
- Interests in accessories and replacements.
- Interests in escrow accounts, such as for taxes and insurance.
- Waiver of homestead or personal property rights.

The notion of an "incidental interest" does not encompass an explicit security interest in an insurance policy if that policy is the primary collateral for the transaction—for example, in an insurance premium financing transaction.

4. Operation of law. Interests that arise solely by operation of law are excluded from the general definition. Also excluded are interests arising by operation of law that are merely repeated or referred to in the contract. However, if the creditor has an interest that arises by operation of law, such as a vendor's lien, and takes an independent security interest in the same property, such as a UCC security interest, the latter interest is a disclosable security interest unless otherwise provided.

5. Rescission rules. Security interests that arise solely by operation of law are security interests for purposes of rescission. Examples of such interests are mechanics' and materialmen's liens.

2(b) Rules of construction.

1. Footnotes. Footnotes are used extensively in the regulation to provide special exceptions and more detailed explanations and examples. Material that appears in a footnote has the same legal weight as material in the body of the regulation.

Statute: Section 103.

Other sections: None.

Other regulations: Regulation E (12 CFR 205.2(d)).

Previous regulation: Sections 226.2, 226.8, and 226.9.

1981 changes: Section 226.2 implements amended section 103 of the act. Separate definitions for "comparative index of credit cost," "discount," "organization," "period," "real property," "real property transaction," "regular price," and "surcharge" have been deleted. The definitions relating specifically to consumer leases are now found in the separate consumer leasing regulation, Regulation M (12 CFR Part 213).

Several terms are now defined elsewhere in the regulation or commentary rather than in § 226.2. For example, "finance charge" is described and explained in § 226.4, and "agricultural purpose" is discussed in the commentary to § 226.3. Some terms, such as "unauthorized use," are now defined as part of the substantive sections to which they apply. Other terms previously defined, such as "customer" and "organization," are merged into new definitions. Section 226.2 contains new definitions for "arranger of credit," "business day," "closed-end credit," "consumer," "consummation," "downpayment," "prepaid finance charge," and "residential mortgage transaction."

The major changes in the definitions are as follows:

"Arranger of credit" has a significantly different meaning. It reflects the statutory amendment that limits "arrangers" to those who regularly arrange credit extensions for persons who are not themselves creditors. This definition was deleted effective October 1, 1982.

"Billing cycle" largely restates the prior definition, but requires cycles to be regular, and allows the four-day variance to be measured from a regular day as well as date. The definition also incorporates an interpretation that cycles may be no longer than quarterly.

"Business day" is new in the sense that the term previously appeared only in a footnote to the rescission provision, but it is now of general applicability. The general rule that it is a day when the creditor is open for business is new, but the rule for rescission purposes is the same as in the previous regulation.

"Cash price" now explicitly permits inclusion of various incidental charges imposed equally in cash and credit transactions.

"Consumer" has a narrower meaning in that guarantors, sureties, and endorsers are excluded from the general definition.

"Consumer credit" reflects the new statutory exemption for agricultural credit.

"Consummation" is a significant departure from longstanding interpretations of the previous definition. It now focuses only on the time the consumer becomes contractually obligated, rather than the time the consumer pays a nonrefundable fee or suffers an economic penalty for failing to go forward with the credit transaction.

"Credit" generally parallels the previous definition, but modifies the previous interpretations of the definition by excluding more transactions.

"Creditor" reflects the statutory amendments to the act that were intended to eliminate the problem of multiple creditors in a transaction. The "regularly" standard is still used, but it is now defined in terms of the frequency of the credit extensions. The new definition also requires that there be a written agreement to pay in more than 4 installments if no finance charge is imposed. Finally, the obligation must be initially payable to a person for that person to be the creditor.

"Dwelling" reflects the statutory amendment that expanded the scope of the definition to include any residential structure, whether or not it is real property under state law.

"Open-end credit" reflects the amended statutory definition requiring that the creditor reasonably contemplate repeated transactions. The new definition no longer requires the consumer to have the privilege of paying either in installments or in full.

"Periodic rate" combines the previous definitions of "period" and "periodic rate" with clarification in the commentary concerning transaction charges and 360-day-year factors.

"Security interest" is much narrower than the previous definition. Reflecting the legislative history of the simplification amendments, incidental interests are expressly excluded from the definition. Except for purposes of rescission, interests that arise solely by operation of law are also excluded.

Section 226.3—Exempt Transactions

3(a) Business, commercial, agricultural, or organizational credit.

1. Primary purposes. A creditor must determine in each case if the transaction is primarily for an exempt purpose. If some question exists as to the primary purpose for a credit extension, the creditor is, of course, free to make the disclosures, and the fact that disclosures are made under such circumstances is not controlling on the question of whether the transaction was exempt.

2. Factors. In determining whether credit to finance an acquisition—such as securities, antiques, or art—is primarily for business or commercial purposes (as opposed to a consumer purpose), the following factors should be considered:

- The relationship of the borrower's primary occupation to the acquisition. The more closely related, the more likely it is to be business purpose.
- The degree to which the borrower will personally manage the acquisition. The more personal involvement there is, the more likely it is to be business purpose.
- The ratio of income from the acquisition to the total income of the borrower. The higher the ratio, the more likely it is to be business purpose.
- The size of the transaction. The larger the transaction, the more likely it is to be business purpose.
- The borrower's statement of purpose for the loan.

Examples of business-purpose credit include:

- A loan to expand a business, even if it is secured by the borrower's residence or personal property.
- A loan to improve a principal residence by putting in a business office.
- A business account used occasionally for consumer purposes.

Examples of consumer-purpose credit include:

- Credit extensions by a company to its employees or agents if the loans are used for personal purposes.
- A loan secured by a mechanic's tools to pay a child's tuition.
- A personal account used occasionally for business purposes.

3. Non-owner-occupied rental property. Credit extended to acquire, improve, or maintain rental property (regardless of the number of housing units) that is not owner-occupied is deemed to be for business purposes. This includes, for example, the acquisition of a warehouse that will be leased or a single-family house that will be rented to another person to live in. If the owner expects to occupy the property for more than 14 days during the coming year, the property cannot be considered non-owner-occupied and this special rule will not apply. For example, a beach house that the owner will occupy for a month in the coming summer and rent out the rest of the year is owner occupied and is not governed by this special rule. See Comment 3(a)-4, however, for rules relating to owner-occupied rental property.

4. Owner-occupied rental property. If credit is extended to acquire, improve, or maintain rental property that is or will be owner-occupied within the coming year, different rules apply:

- Credit extended to acquire the rental property is deemed to be for business purposes if it contains more than 2 housing units.
- Credit extended to improve or maintain the rental property is deemed to be for business purposes if it contains more than 4 housing units. Since the amended statute defines "dwelling" to include 1 to 4 housing units, this rule preserves the right of rescission for credit extended for purposes other than acquisition.

Neither of these rules means that an extension of credit for property containing fewer than the requisite number of units is necessarily consumer credit. In such cases, the determination of whether it is business or consumer credit should be made by considering the factors listed in Comment 3(a)-2.

5. Business credit later refinanced. Business-purpose credit that is exempt from the regulation may later be rewritten for consumer purposes. Such a transaction is consumer credit requiring disclosures only if the existing obligation is satisfied and replaced by a new obligation made for consumer purposes undertaken by the same obligor.

6. Agricultural purpose. An "agricultural purpose" includes the planting, propagating, nurturing, harvesting, catching, storing, exhibiting, marketing, transporting, processing, or manufacturing of food, beverages (including alcoholic beverages), flowers, trees, livestock, poultry, bees, wildlife, fish, or shellfish by a natural person engaged in farming, fishing, or growing crops, flowers, trees, livestock, poultry, bees, or wildlife. The exemption also applies to a transaction involving real property that includes a dwelling (for example, the purchase of a farm with a homestead) if the transaction is primarily for agricultural purposes.

7. Organizational credit. The exemption for transactions in which the borrower is not a natural person applies, for example, to loans to corporations, partnerships, associations, churches, unions, and fraternal organizations. The exemption applies regardless of the purpose of the credit extension and regardless of the fact that a natural person may guarantee or provide security for the credit.

8. Land trusts. Credit extended for consumer purposes to a land trust is considered to be credit extended to a natural person rather than credit extended to an organization. In some jurisdictions, a financial institution financing a residential real estate transaction for an individual uses a land trust mechanism. Title to the property is conveyed to the land trust for which the financial institution itself is trustee. The underlying installment note is executed by the financial institution in its capacity as trustee and payment is secured by a trust deed, reflecting title in the financial institution as trustee. In some instances, the consumer executes a personal guaranty of the indebtedness. The note provides that it is payable only out of the property specifically described in the trust deed and that the trustee has no personal liability on the note. Assuming the transactions are for personal, family, or household purposes, these transactions are subject to the regulation since in substance (if not form) consumer credit is being extended.

3(b) Credit over $25,000 not secured by real property or a dwelling.

1. Coverage. Since a mobile home can be a dwelling under § 226.2(a)(19), this exemption does not apply to a credit extension secured by a mobile home used or expected to be used as the principal dwelling of the consumer, even if the credit exceeds $25,000. A loan commitment for closed-end credit in excess of $25,000 is exempt even though the amounts actually drawn never actually reach $25,000.

2. Open-end credit. An open-end credit plan is exempt under § 226.3(b) (unless secured by real property or personal property used or expected to be used as the consumer's principal dwelling) if either of the following conditions is met:

- The creditor makes a firm commitment to lend over $25,000 with no requirement of additional credit information for any advances.
- The initial extension of credit on the line exceeds $25,000.

3. Refinanced obligations. A closed-end loan for over $25,000 may later be rewritten for less than $25,000 or a security interest in real property may be added to an extension of credit for over $25,000. Such a transaction is consumer credit requiring disclosures only if the existing obligation is satisfied and replaced by a new obligation made for consumer purposes undertaken by the same obligor.

3(c) Public utility credit.

1. Examples. Examples of public utility services include:

- Gas, water, or electrical services.
- Cable television services.
- Installation of new sewer lines, water lines, conduits, telephone poles, or metering equipment in an area not already serviced by the utility.

The exemption does not apply to extensions of credit, for example:

- To purchase appliances such as gas or electric ranges, grills, or telephones.

- To finance home improvements such as new heating or air conditioning systems.

3(d) Securities or commodities accounts.

1. Coverage. This exemption does not apply to a transaction with a broker registered solely with the state, or to a separate credit extension in which the proceeds are used to purchase securities.

3(e) Home fuel budget plans.

1. Definition. Under a typical home fuel budget plan, the fuel dealer estimates the total cost of fuel for the season, bills the customer for an average monthly payment, and makes an adjustment in the final payment for any difference between the estimated and the actual cost of the fuel. Fuel is delivered as needed, no finance charge is assessed, and the customer may withdraw from the plan at any time. Under these circumstances, the arrangement is exempt from the regulation, even if a charge to cover the billing costs is imposed.

3(f) Student loan programs.

1. Coverage. This exemption applies to the Guaranteed Student Loan program (administered by the Federal government, State, and private non-profit agencies), the Auxiliary Loans to Assist Students (also known as PLUS) program, and the National Direct Student Loan program.

Statute: Sections 103 (s) and (t) and 104.

Other sections: Section 226.12 (a) and (b).

Previous regulation: Section 226.3 and Interpretations §§ 226.301 and 226.302.

1981 changes: The business credit exemption has been expanded to include credit for agricultural purposes. The rule of Interpretation § 226.302, concerning credit relating to structures containing more than 4 housing units, has been modified and somewhat expanded by providing more exclusions for transactions involving rental property.

The exemption for transactions above $25,000 secured by real estate has been narrowed; all transactions secured by the consumer's principal dwelling (even if not considered real property) are now subject to the regulation.

The public utility exemption now covers the financing of the extension of a utility into an area not earlier served by the utility, in addition to the financing of services.

The securities credit exemption has been extended to broker-dealers registered with the CFTC as well as the SEC.

A new exemption has been created for home fuel budget plans.

Section 226.4—Finance Charge

4(a) Definition.

1. Charges in comparable cash transactions. Charges imposed uniformly in cash and credit transactions are not finance charges. In determining whether an item is a finance charge, the creditor should compare the credit transaction in question with a similar cash transaction. A creditor financing the sale of property or services may compare charges with those payable in a similar cash transaction by the seller of the property or service. For example, the following items are not finance charges:

- Taxes, license fees, or registration fees paid by both cash and credit customers.
- Discounts that are available to cash and credit customers, such as quantity discounts.
- Discounts available to a particular group of consumers because they meet certain criteria, such as being members of an organization or having accounts at a particular financial institution. This is the case even if an individual must pay cash to obtain the discount, provided credit customers who are members of the group and don't qualify for the discount pay no more than the nonmember cash customers.
- Charges for a service policy, auto club membership, or policy of insurance against latent defects offered to or required of both cash and credit customers for the same price.

In contrast, the following items are finance charges:

- Inspection and handling fees for the staged disbursement of construction loan proceeds.
- Fees for preparing a Truth in Lending disclosure statement.
- Charges for a required maintenance or service contract imposed only in a credit transaction.

If the charge in a credit transaction exceeds the charge imposed in a comparable cash transaction, only the difference is a finance charge. For example:

- If an escrow agent is used in both cash and credit sales of real estate and the agent's charge is $100 in a cash transaction and $150 in a credit transaction, only $50 is a finance charge.

2. Costs of doing business. Charges absorbed by the creditor as a cost of doing business are not finance charges, even though the creditor may take such costs into consideration in determining the interest rate to be charged or the cash price of the property or service sold. However, if the creditor separately imposes a charge on the consumer to cover certain costs, the charge is a finance charge if it otherwise meets the definition. For example:

- A discount imposed on a credit obligation when it is assigned by a seller-creditor to another party is not a finance charge as long as the discount is not separately imposed on the consumer. (See § 226.4(b)(6).)

3. Charges by third parties. Charges imposed on the consumer by someone other than the creditor for services not required by the creditor are not finance charges, as long as the creditor does not retain the charges.

For example:

- A fee charged by a loan broker to a consumer, provided the creditor does not require the use of a broker (even if the creditor knows of the loan broker's involvement or compensates the broker)
- A tax imposed by a state or other governmental body on the credit transaction that is payable by the consumer (even if the tax is collected by the creditor)

4. Forfeitures of interest. If the creditor reduces the interest rate it pays or stops paying interest on the consumer's deposit account or any portion of it for the term of a credit transaction (including, for example, an overdraft on a checking account or a loan secured by a certificate of deposit), the interest lost is a finance charge. (See the commentary to § 226.4(c)(6).) For example:

- A consumer borrows $5,000 for 90 days and secures it with a $10,000 certificate of deposit paying 15% interest. The creditor charges the consumer an interest rate of 6% on the loan and stops paying interest on $5,000 of the $10,000 certificate for the term of the loan. The interest lost is a finance charge and must be reflected in the annual percentage rate on the loan.

However, the consumer must be entitled to the interest that is not paid in order for the lost interest to be a finance charge. For example:

- A consumer wishes to buy from a financial instititution a $10,000 certificate of deposit paying 15% interest but has only $4,000. The financial institution offers to lend the consumer $6,000 at an interest rate of 6%, but will pay the 15% interest only on the amount of the consumer's deposit, $4,000. The creditor's failure to pay interest on the $6,000 does not result in an additional finance charge on the extension of credit, provided the consumer is entitled by the deposit agreement with the financial institution to interest only on the amount of the consumer's deposit.
- A consumer enters into a combined time deposit/credit agreement with a financial institution that establishes a time deposit account and an open-end line of credit. The line of credit may be used to borrow against the funds in the time deposit. The agreement provides for an interest rate on any credit extension of, for example, 1%. In addition, the agreement states that the creditor will pay 0% interest on the amount of the time deposit that corresponds to the amount of the credit extension(s). The interest that is not paid on the time deposit by the financial institution is not a finance charge (and therefore does not affect the annual percentage rate computation).

5. Treatment of fees for use of automated teller machines. Any charge imposed on a cardholder by a card issuer for the use of an automated teller machine (ATM) to obtain a cash advance (whether in a proprietary, shared, interchange, or other system) is not a finance charge to the extent that it does not exceed the charge imposed by the card issuer on its cardholders for using the ATM to withdraw cash from a consumer asset account, such as a checking or savings account. (See the commentary to § 226.6(b).)

4(b) Examples of finance charges.

1. Relationship to other provisions. Charges or fees shown as examples of finance charges in § 226.4(b) may be excludable under § 226.4(c), (d), or (e). For example:

- Premiums for credit life insurance, shown as an example of a finance charge under § 226.4(b)(7), may be excluded if the requirements of § 226.4(d)(1) are met.
- Appraisal fees mentioned in § 226.4(b)(4) are excluded for real property or residential mortgage transactions under § 226.4(c)(7).

Paragraph 4(b)(2).

1. Checking account charges. The checking or transaction account charges discussed in § 226.4(b)(2) include, for example, the following situations:

- An account with an overdraft line of credit incurs a $4.50 service charge while an account without a credit feature has a $2.50 service charge; the $2.00 difference is a finance charge. If the difference is not related to account activity, however, it may be excludable as a participation fee. (See the commentary to § 226.4(c)(4).)
- A service charge of $5.00 for each item that triggers an overdraft credit line is a finance charge. However, a charge imposed uniformly for any item that overdraws a checking account, regardless of whether the items are paid or returned and whether the account has a credit feature or not, is not a finance charge.

Paragraph 4(b)(3).

1. Assumption fees. The assumption fees mentioned in § 226.4(b)(3) are finance charges only when the assumption occurs and the fee is imposed on the new buyer. The assumption fee is a finance charge in the new buyer's transaction.

Paragraph 4(b)(5).

1. Credit loss insurance. Common examples of the insurance against credit loss mentioned in § 226.4(b)(5) are mortgage guaranty insurance, holder in due course insurance, and repossession insurance. Such premiums must be included in the finance charge only for the period that the creditor requires the insurance to be maintained.

Paragraphs 4(b) (7) and (8).

1. Pre-existing insurance policy. The insurance discussed in § 226.4(b) (7) and (8) does not include an insurance policy (such as a life or an automobile collision insurance policy) that is already owned by the consumer, even if the policy is assigned to or otherwise made payable to the creditor to satisfy an insurance requirement. Such a policy is not "written in connection with" the transaction, as long as the insurance was not purchased for use in that credit extension, since it was previously owned by the consumer.

2. Insurance written after consummation. In closed-end credit transactions, insurance sold after consummation is not "written in connection with" the credit transaction if the insurance is written because of the consumer's default (for example, by failing to obtain or maintain required property insurance) or because the consumer requests insurance after consummation (although credit sale disclosures may be required for the insurance if it is financed).

3. Substitution of life insurance. The premium for a life insurance policy purchased and assigned to satisfy a credit life insurance requirement must be included in the finance charge, but only to the extent of the cost of the credit life insurance if purchased from the creditor or the actual cost of the policy (if that is less than the cost of the insurance available from the creditor). If the creditor does not offer the required insurance, the premium to be included in the finance charge is the cost of a policy of insurance of the type, amount, and term required by the creditor.

4. Other insurance. Fees for required insurance not of the types described in § 226.4(b) (7) and (8) are finance charges and are not excludable. For example:

- The premium for a hospitalization insurance policy, if it is required to be purchased only in a credit transaction, is a finance charge.

Paragraph 4(b)(9).

1. Discounts for payment by other than credit. The discounts to induce payment by other than credit mentioned in § 226.4(b)(9) include, for example, the following situation:

- The seller of land offers individual tracts for $10,000 each. If the purchaser pays cash, the price is $9,000, but if the purchaser finances the tract with the seller the price is $10,000. The $1,000 difference is a finance charge for those who buy the tracts on credit.

2. Exception for cash discounts. Discounts offered to induce consumers to pay for property or services by cash, check, or other means not involving the use of either an open-end credit plan or a credit card (whether open-end or closed-end credit is extended on the card) may be excluded from the finance charge under section 167(b) of the Act (as amended by Pub. L. 97-25, July 27, 1981). The discount may be in whatever amount the seller desires, either as a percentage of the regular price (as defined in section 103(z) of the Act, as amended) or a dollar amount. This provision applies only to transactions involving an open-end credit plan or a credit card. The merchant must offer the discount to prospective buyers whether or not they are cardholders or members of the open-end credit plan. The merchant may, however, make other distinctions. For example:

- The merchant may limit the discount to payment by cash, and not offer it for payment by check or by use of a debit card.
- The merchant may establish a discount plan that allows a 15% discount for payment by cash, a 10% discount for payment by check, and a 5% discount for payment by a particular credit card. None of these discounts is a finance charge.

Section 171(c) of the Act excludes section 167(b) discounts from treatment as a finance charge or other charge for credit under any state usury or disclosure laws.

3. Determination of the regular price. The "regular price" is critical in determining whether the difference between the price charged to cash customers and credit customers is a "discount" or a "surcharge," as these terms are defined in amended section 103 of the Act. The "regular price" is defined in section 103 of the Act as "the tag or posted price charged for the property or service if a single price is tagged or posted, or the price charged for the property or service when payment is made by use of an open-end credit account or a credit card if either (1) no price is tagged or posted, or (2) two prices are tagged or posted. . . ." For example, in the sale of motor vehicle fuel, the tagged or posted price is the price displayed at the pump. As a result, the higher price (the open-end credit or credit card price) must be displayed at the pump, either alone or along with the cash price. Service station operators may designate separate pumps or separate islands as being for either cash or credit purchases and display only the appropriate prices at the various pumps. If a pump is capable of displaying on its meter either a cash or a credit price depending upon the consumer's means of payment, both the cash price and the credit price must be displayed at the pump. A service station operator may display the cash price of fuel by itself on a curb sign, as long as the sign clearly indicates that the price is limited to cash purchases.

4(c) Charges excluded from the finance charge.

Paragraph 4(c)(1).

1. Application fees. An application fee that is excluded from the finance charge is a charge to recover the costs associated with processing applications for credit. The fee may cover the costs of services such as credit reports, credit investigations, and appraisals. The creditor is free to impose the fee in only certain of its loan programs, such as mortgage loans. However, if the fee is to be excluded from the finance charge under § 226.4(c)(1), it must be charged to all applicants, not just to applicants who are approved or who actually receive credit.

Paragraph 4(c)(2).

1. Late payment charges. Late payment charges can be excluded from the finance charge under § 226.4(c)(2) whether or not the person imposing the charge continues to extend credit on the account or continues to provide property or services to the consumer. In determining whether a charge is for actual unanticipated late payment on a 30-day account, for example, factors to be considered include:

- The terms of the account. For example, is the consumer required by the account terms to pay the account balance in full each month? If not, the charge may be a finance charge.
- The practices of the creditor in handling the accounts. For example, regardless of the terms of the account, does the creditor allow consumers to pay the accounts over a period of time without demanding payment in full or taking other action to collect? If no effort is made to collect the full amount due, the charge may be a finance charge.

Section 226.4(c)(2) applies to late payment charges imposed for failure to make payments as agreed, as well as failure to pay an account in full when due.

2. Other excluded charges. Charges for "delinquency, default, or a similar occurrence" include, for example, charges for reinstatement of credit privileges or for submitting as payment a check that is later returned unpaid.

Paragraph 4(c)(3).

1. Assessing interest on an overdraft balance. A charge on an overdraft balance computed by applying a rate of interest to the amount of the overdraft is not a finance charge, even though the consumer agrees to the charge in the account agreement, unless the financial institution agrees in writing that it will pay such items.

Paragraph 4(c)(4).

1. Participation fees. The participation fees mentioned in § 226.4(c)(4) do not necessarily have to be formal membership fees, nor are they limited to credit card plans. The provision applies to any credit plan in which payment of a fee is a condition of access to the plan itself, but it does not apply to fees imposed separately on individual closed-end transactions. The fee may be charged on a monthly or other periodic basis as well as annually; however, minimum monthly charges or other charges based on current account activity are not excluded from the finance charge by § 226.4(c)(4). (See the commentary to § 226.4(b)(2).)

Paragraph 4(c)(5).

1. Seller's points. The seller's points mentioned in § 226.4(c)(5) include any charges imposed by the creditor upon the non-creditor seller of property for providing credit to the buyer or for providing credit on certain terms. These charges are excluded from the finance charge even if they are passed on to the buyer, for example, in the form of a higher sales price. Seller's points are frequently involved in real estate transactions guaranteed or insured by governmental agencies. A "commitment fee" paid by a non-creditor seller (such as a real estate developer) to the creditor should be treated as seller's points. Buyer's points (that is, points charged to the buyer by the creditor), however, are finance charges.

2. Other seller-paid amounts. Mortgage insurance premiums and other charges are sometimes paid at or before consummation or settlement on the borrower's behalf by a noncreditor seller. In such cases, the creditor should treat the payment made by the seller as seller's points and exclude it from the finance charge. A creditor who gives disclosures before the payment has been made should base them on the best information reasonably available, as called for by the estimate provisions of the regulation.

Paragraph 4(c)(6).

1. Lost interest. Certain federal and state laws mandate a percentage differential between the interest rate paid on a deposit and the rate charged on a loan secured by that deposit. In some situations because of usury limits the creditor must reduce the interest rate paid on the deposit and, as a result, the consumer loses some of the interest that would otherwise have been earned. Under § 226.4(c)(6), such "lost interest" need not be included in the finance charge. This rule applies only to an interest reduction imposed because a rate differential is required by law and a usury limit precludes compliance by any other means. If the creditor imposes a differential that exceeds that required, only the lost interest attributable to the excess amount is a finance charge. (See the commentary to § 226.4(a).)

Paragraph 4(c)(7).

1. Real estate or residential mortgage transaction charges. The list of charges in § 226.4(c)(7) applies both to residential mortgage transactions (which may include, for example, the purchase of a mobile home) and to other transactions secured by real estate. The fees are excluded from the finance charge even if the services for which the fees are imposed are performed by the creditor's employees rather than by a third party. In addition, credit report fees include not only the cost of the report itself, but also the cost of verifying information in the report. If a lump sum is charged for several services and includes a charge that is not excludable, a portion of the total should be allocated to that service and included in the finance charge. A charge for a lawyer's attendance at the closing or a charge for conducting the closing (for example, by a title company) is excluded from the finance charge if the charge is primarily for services related to items listed in § 226.4(c)(7) (for example, reviewing or completing documents), even if other incidental services, such as explaining various documents or disbursing funds for the parties, are performed. In all cases, charges excluded under § 226.4(c)(7) must be bona fide and reasonable.

4(d) Insurance.

1. General. Section 226.4(d) permits insurance premiums and charges to be excluded from the finance charge. The required disclosures must be made in writing. The rules on location of insurance disclosures for closed-end transactions are in § 226.17(a).

2. Timing of disclosures. If disclosures are given early, for example under § 226.17(f) or § 226.19(a), the creditor need not redisclose if the actual premium is different at the time of consummation. If insurance disclosures are not given at the time of early disclosure and insurance is in fact written in connection with the transaction, the disclosures under § 226.4(d) must be made in order to exclude the premiums from the finance charge.

3. Premium rate increases. The creditor should disclose the premium amount based on the rates currently in effect and need not designate it as an estimate even if the premium rates may increase. An increase in insurance rates after consummation of a closed-end credit transaction or during the life of an open-end credit plan does not require redisclosure in order to exclude the additional premium from treatment as a finance charge.

4. Unit-cost disclosures. One of the transactions for which unit-cost disclosures (such as 50 cents per year for each $100 of the amount financed) may be used in place of the total insurance premium involves a particular kind of insurance plan. For example, a consumer with a current indebtedness of $8,000 is covered by a plan of credit life insurance coverage with a maximum of $10,000. The consumer requests an additional $4,000 loan to be covered by the same insurance plan. Since the $4,000 loan exceeds, in part, the maximum amount of indebtedness that can be covered by the plan, the creditor may properly give the insurance cost disclosures on the $4,000 loan on a unit-cost basis.

5. Required credit life insurance. Credit life, accident, health, or loss-of-income insurance must be voluntary in order for the premiums or charges to be excluded from the finance charge. Whether the insurance is in fact required or optional is a factual question. If the insurance is required, the premiums must be included in the finance charge, whether the insurance is purchased from the creditor or from a third party. If the only option the creditor gives the consumer is to purchase credit life insurance from the creditor or to assign an existing life insurance policy, and the consumer purchases the credit life insurance, the premium must be included in the finance charge. (If the consumer assigns a pre-existing policy instead, no premium is included in the finance charge. See the commentary to § 226.4(b)(7) and (8).)

6. Other types of voluntary insurance. Insurance is not credit life, accident, health, or loss-of-income insurance if the creditor or the credit account of the consumer is not the beneficiary of the insurance coverage. If such insurance is not required by the creditor as an incident to or a condition of credit, it is not covered by § 226.4.

7. Signatures. If the creditor offers a number of insurance options under § 226.4(d), the creditor may provide a means for the consumer to sign or initial for each option, or it may provide for a single authorizing signature or initial with the options selected designated by some other means, such as a check mark. The insurance authorization may be signed or initialed by any consumer, as defined in § 226.2(a)(11), or by an authorized user on a credit card account.

8. Property insurance. To exclude property insurance premiums or charges from the finance charge, the creditor must allow the consumer to choose the insurer and disclose that fact. This disclosure must be made whether or not the property insurance is available from or through the creditor. The requirement that an option be given does not require that the insurance be readily available from other sources. The premium or charge must be disclosed only if the consumer elects to purchase the insurance from the creditor; in such a case, the creditor must also disclose the term of the property insurance coverage if it is less than the term of the obligation.

9. Single interest insurance. Blanket and specific single interest coverage are treated the same for purposes of the regulation. A charge for either type of single interest insurance may be excluded from the finance charge if:

- The insurer waives any right of subrogation.
- The other requirements of § 226.4(d)(2) are met. This includes, of course, giving the consumer the option of obtaining the insurance from a person of the consumer's choice. The creditor need not ascertain whether the consumer is able to purchase the insurance from someone else.

10. Single-interest insurance defined. The term "single-interest insurance"as used in the regulation refers only to the types of coverage traditionally included in the term "vendor's single-interest insurance" (or "VSI"), that is, protection of tangible property against normal property damage, concealment, confiscation, conversion, embezzlement, and skip. Some comprehensive insurance policies may include a variety of additional coverages, such as repossession insurance and holder-in-due-course insurance. These types of coverage do not constitute single-interest insurance for purposes of the regulation, and premiums for them do not qualify for exclusion from the finance charge under § 226.4(d). If a policy that is primarily VSI also provides coverages that are not VSI or other property insurance, a portion of the premiums must be allocated to the nonexcludable coverages and included in the finance charge. However, such allocation is not required if the total premium in fact attributable to all of the non-VSI coverages included in the policy is $1.00 or less (or $5.00 or less in the case of a multiyear policy).

11. Initial term. The initial term of insurance coverage determines the period for which a premium amount must be disclosed. In some cases the initial term is clear, for example, a property insurance policy on an automobile written for one year (even though the term of the credit transaction is four years) or a credit life insurance policy for the term of the credit transaction purchased by paying or financing a single premium. In other cases, however, it may not be clear what the initial term of the insurance is, for example, when the consumer agrees to pay a premium that is assessed periodically and the consumer is under no obligation to continue making the payments. In cases such as this, the cost disclosure may be made on the basis of a premium for one year of insurance coverage. The premium must be clearly labeled as being for one year.

12. Loss-of-income insurance. The loss-of-income insurance mentioned in § 226.4(d) includes involuntary unemployment insurance, which provides that some or all of the consumer's payments will be made if the consumer becomes unemployed involuntarily.

4(e) Certain security interest charges.

1. Examples. Examples of charges excludable from the finance charge under § 226.4(e)(1) include:

- Charges for filing or recording security agreements, mortgages, continuation statements, termination statements, and similar documents.
- Stamps evidencing payment of taxes on property if the stamps are required to file a security agreement on the property.

Only sums actually paid to public officials are excludable under § 226.4(e)(1).

2. Itemization. The various charges described in § 226.4(e)(1) may be totaled and disclosed as an aggregate sum, or they may be itemized by the specific fees and taxes imposed. If an aggregate sum is disclosed, a general term such as security interest fees or "filing fees" may be used.

3. Notary fees. In order for a notary fee to be excluded under § 226.4(e)(1), all of the following conditions must be met:

- The document to be notarized is one used to perfect, release, or continue a security interest.
- The document is required by law to be notarized.
- A notary is considered a public official under applicable law.
- The amount of the fee is set or authorized by law.

4. Non-filing insurance. The exclusion in § 226.4(e)(2) is available only if non-filing insurance is purchased. If the creditor collects and simply retains a fee as a sort of "self-insurance" against non-filing it may not be excluded from the finance charge. If the non-filing insurance premium exceeds the amount of the fees excludable from the finance charge under § 226.4(e)(1), only the excess is a finance charge. For example:

- The fee for perfecting a security interest is $5.00 and the fee for releasing the security interest is $3.00. The creditor charges $10.00 for non-filing insurance. Only $8.00 of the $10.00 is excludable from the finance charge.

4(f) Prohibited offsets.

1. Earnings on deposits or investments. The rule that the creditor shall not deduct any earnings by the consumer or deposits or investments applies whether or not the creditor has a security interest in the property.

1981 changes: While generally continuing the rules under the previous regulation, § 226.4 reflects amendments to section 106 of the act and makes certain other changes in the rules for determining the finance charge. For example, § 226.4(a) expressly excludes from the finance charge amounts payable in comparable cash transactions. Section 226.8(o) of the previous regulation, dealing with discounts for prompt payment of a credit sale, was deleted in the revised regulation since the general test for a finance charge now focuses on a comparison of cash and credit transactions. With respect to various exclusions from the finance charge: application fees imposed on all applicants are no longer finance charges; continuing to extend credit to a consumer is no longer a controlling test for determining whether a late payment charge is bona fide; seller's points are not to be included in the finance charge; and the special exclusions for real estate transactions apply to all "residential mortgage transactions."

The simplified rules for excluding insurance from the finance charge allow unit-cost disclosure in certain closed-end credit transactions; permit initials as well as signatures on the authorization; permit any consumer to authorize insurance for other consumers; and delete the requirement that the authorization be separately dated.

SUBPART B—OPEN-END CREDIT

Section 226.5—General Disclosure Requirements

5(a) Form of disclosures.

Paragraph 5(a)(1).

1. Clear and conspicuous. The "clear and conspicuous" standard requires that disclosures be in a reasonably understandable form. It does not require that disclosures be segregated from other material or located in any particular place on the disclosure statement, or that numerical amounts or percentages be in any particular type size. The standard does not prohibit:

- Pluralizing required terminology ("finance charge" and "annual percentage rate").
- Adding to the required disclosures such items as contractual provisions, explanations of contract terms, state disclosures, and translations.
- Sending promotional material with the required disclosures.
- Using commonly accepted or readily understandable abbreviations (such as "mo." for "month" or "Tx." for "Texas") in making any required disclosures.
- Using codes or symbols such as "APR" (for annual percentage rate), "FC" (for finance charge), or "Cr" (for credit balance), so long as a legend or description of the code or symbol is provided on the disclosure statement.

2. Integrated document. The creditor may make both the initial disclosures (§ 226.6) and the periodic statement disclosures (§ 226.7) on more than one page, and use both the front and the reverse sides, so long as the pages constitute an integrated document. An integrated document would not include disclosure pages provided to the consumer at different times or disclosures interspersed on the same page with promotional material. An integrated document would include, for example:

- Multiple pages provided in the same envelope that cover related material and are folded together, numbered consecutively, or clearly labelled to show that they relate to one another.
- A brochure that contains disclosures and explanatory material about a range of services the creditor offers, such as credit, checking account, and electronic fund transfer features.

Paragraph 5(a)(2).

1. When disclosures must be "more conspicuous." The terms "finance charge" and "annual percentage rate", when required to be used with a number, must be disclosed more conspicuously than other required disclosures, except in the two cases provided in footnote 9. At the creditor's option, "finance charge" and "annual percentage rate" may also be disclosed more conspicuously than the other required disclosures even when the regulation does not so require. The following examples illustrate these rules:

- In disclosing the annual percentage rate as required by § 226.6(a)(2), the term "annual percentage rate" is subject to the "more conspicuous" rule.
- In disclosing the amount of the finance charge, required by § 226.7(f), the term "finance charge" is subject to the "more conspicuous" rule.
- Although neither "finance charge" nor "annual percentage rate" need be emphasized when used as part of general informational material or in textual descriptions of other terms, emphasis is permissible in such cases. For example, when the terms appear as part of the explanations required under § 226.6(a) (3) and (4), they may be equally conspicuous as the disclosures required under §§ 226.6(a)(2) and 226.7(g).

2. Making disclosures more conspicuous. In disclosing the terms "finance charge" and "annual percentage rate" more conspicuously, only the words "finance charge" and "annual percentage rate" should be accentuated. For example, if the term "total finance charge" is used, only "finance charge" should be emphasized. The disclosures may be made more conspicuous by, for example:

- Capitalizing the words when other disclosures are printed in lower case.
- Putting them in bold print or a contrasting color.
- Underlining them.
- Setting them off with asterisks.
- Printing them in larger type.

3. Disclosure of figures—exception to "more conspicuous" rule. The terms

"annual percentage rate" and "finance charge" need not be more conspicuous than figures (including, for example, numbers, percentages, and dollar signs).

5(b) Time of disclosures.

5(b)(1) Initial disclosures.

1. Disclosure before the first transaction. The rule that the initial disclosure statement must be furnished "before the first transaction" requires delivery of the initial disclosure statement before the consumer becomes obligated on the plan (for example, before the consumer makes the first purchase, receives the first advance, or pays a fee under the plan).

- If the consumer pays a membership fee before receiving the Truth in Lending disclosures, or the consumer agrees to the imposition of a membership fee at the time of application and the Truth in Lending disclosure statement is not given at that time, disclosures are timely as long as the consumer, after receiving the disclosures, can reject the plan. The creditor must refund the membership fee if it has been paid, or clear the account if it has been debited to the consumer's account.
- If the consumer receives a cash advance check at the same time the Truth in Lending disclosures are provided, disclosures are still timely if the consumer can, after receiving the disclosures, return the cash advance check to the creditor without obligation (for example, without paying finance charges).
- Initial disclosures need not be given before the imposition of an application fee under § 226.4(c)(1).
- If, after receiving the disclosures, the consumer uses the account, pays a fee, or negotiates a cash advance check, the creditor may consider the account not rejected for purposes of this section.

2. Reactivation of suspended account. If an account is temporarily suspended (for example, because the consumer has exceeded a credit limit, or because a credit card is reported lost or stolen) and then is reactivated, no new initial disclosures are required.

3. Reopening closed account. If an account has been closed (for example, due to inactivity, cancellation, or expiration) and then is reopened, new initial disclosures are required. No new initial disclosures are required, however, when the account is closed merely to assign it a new number (for example, when a credit card is reported lost or stolen) and the "new" account then continues on the same terms.

4. Converting closed-end to open-end credit. If a closed-end credit transaction is converted to an open-end credit account under a written agreement with the consumer, the initial disclosures under § 226.6 must be given before the consumer becomes obligated on the open-end credit plan. (See the commentary to § 226.17 on converting open-end credit to closed-end credit.)

5(b)(2) Periodic statements.

Paragraph 5(b)(2)(i).

1. Periodic statements not required. Periodic statements need not be sent in the following cases:

- If the creditor adjusts an account balance so that at the end of the cycle the balance is less than $1—so long as no finance charge has been imposed on the account for that cycle.
- If a statement was returned as undeliverable. If a new address is provided, however, within a reasonable time before the creditor must send a statement, the creditor must resume sending statements. Receiving the address at least 20 days before the end of a cycle would be a reasonable amount of time to prepare the statement for that cycle. For example, if an address is received 22 days before the end of the June cycle, the creditor must send the periodic statement for the June cycle. (See § 226.13(a)(7).)

2. Termination of credit privileges. When an open-end account is terminated without being converted to closed-end credit under a written agreement, the creditor must continue to provide periodic statements to those consumers entitled to receive them under § 226.5(b)(2)(i) (for example, when an open-end credit plan ends and consumers are paying off outstanding balances) and must continue to follow all of the other open-end credit requirements and procedures in Subpart B.

Paragraph 5(b)(2)(ii).

1. 14-day rule. The 14-day rule for mailing or delivering periodic statements does not apply if charges (for example, transaction or activity charges) are imposed regardless of the timing of a periodic statement. The 14-day rule does apply, for example:

- If current debits retroactively become subject to finance charges when the balance is not paid in full by a specified date.
- If charges other than finance charges will accrue when the consumer does not make timely payments (for example, late payment charges or charges for exceeding a credit limit).

2. Computer malfunction. Footnote 10 does not extend to the failure to provide a periodic statement because of computer malfunction.

3. Calling for periodic statements. The creditor may permit consumers to call for their periodic statements, but may not require them to do so. If the consumer wishes to pick up the statement and the plan has a free-ride period, the statement must be made available in accordance with the 14-day rule.

5(c) Basis of disclosures and use of estimates.

1. Legal obligation. The disclosures should reflect the credit terms to which the parties are legally bound at the time of giving the disclosures.

- The legal obligation is determined by applicable state or other law.
- The fact that a term or contract may later be deemed unenforceable by a court on the basis of equity or other grounds does not, by itself, mean that disclosures based on that term or contract did not reflect the legal obligation.
- The legal obligation normally is presumed to be contained in the contract that evidences the agreement. But this may be rebutted if another agreement between the parties legally modifies that contract.

2. Estimates—obtaining information. Disclosures may be estimated when the exact information is unknown at the time disclosures are made. Information is unknown if it is not reasonably available to the creditor at the time disclosures are made. The "reasonably available" standard requires that the creditor, acting in good faith, exercise due diligence in obtaining information. In using estimates, the creditor is not required to disclose the basis for the estimated figures, but may include such explanations as additional information. The creditor normally may rely on the representations of other parties in obtaining information. For example, the creditor might look to insurance companies for the cost of insurance.

3. Estimates—redisclosure. If the creditor makes estimated disclosures, redisclosure is not required for that consumer, even though more accurate information becomes available before the first transaction. For example, in an open-end plan to be secured by real estate, the creditor may estimate the appraisal fees to be charged; such an estimate might reasonably be based on the prevailing market rates for similar appraisals. If the exact appraisal fee is determinable after the estimate is furnished but before the consumer receives the first advance under the plan, no new disclosure is necessary.

5(d) Multiple creditors; multiple consumers.

1. Multiple creditors. Under § 226.5(d):

- Creditors must choose which of them will make the disclosures.
- A single, complete set of disclosures must be provided, rather than partial disclosures from several creditors.
- All disclosures for the open-end credit plan must be given, even if the disclosing creditor would not otherwise have been obligated to make a particular disclosure.
- In some open-end credit programs involving multiple creditors, the consumer has the option (for example, at the end of a billing cycle) to pay creditor A directly or to transfer to creditor B all or part of the amount owing. If the consumer elects the latter option, the consumer no longer is obligated to creditor A for the specific amount(s) transferred. In such a case, creditor A and creditor B may send separate periodic statements that reflect the separate obligations owed to each.

2. Multiple consumers. Disclosures may be made to either obligor on a joint account. Disclosure responsibilities are not satisfied by giving disclosures to only a surety or guarantor for a principal obligor or to an authorized user. In rescindable transactions, however, separate disclosures must be given to each consumer who has the right to rescind under § 226.15.

5(e) Effect of subsequent events.

1. Events causing inaccuracies. Inaccuracies in disclosures are not violations if attributable to events occurring after disclosures are made. For example, when the consumer fails to fulfill a prior commitment to keep the collateral insured and the creditor then provides the coverage and charges the consumer for it, such a change does not make the original disclosures inaccurate. The creditor may, however, be required to provide a new disclosure(s) under § 226.9(c).

2. Use of inserts. When changes in a creditor's plan affect required disclosures, the creditor may use inserts with outdated disclosure forms. Any insert:

- Should clearly refer to the disclosure provision it replaces.
- Need not be physically attached or affixed to the basic disclosure statement.
- May be used only until the supply of outdated forms is exhausted.

Previous regulation: Sections 226.6 (a) and (c) through (g), and 226.7 (a) through (e).

1981 changes: Section 226.5 implements amendments to the act and reflects several simplifying changes to the regulation. The use of required terminology, except for "finance charge" and "annual percentage rate," is no longer required. Type size requirements have been deleted. Initial and periodic statement disclosures may be multipage, so long as they constitute an integrated statement. New rules are provided for the basis of disclosures and for the use of estimates. The rules for credit plans involving multiple creditors or multiple consumers now provide that only one creditor need make the disclosures and that the disclosures need be made to only one primarily liable consumer.

Section 226.6—Initial Disclosure Statement

1. Consistent terminology. Language on the initial and periodic disclosure statements must be close enough in meaning to enable the consumer to relate the 2 sets of disclosures; however, the language need not be identical. For example, in making the disclosure under § 226.6(a)(3), the creditor may refer to the "outstanding balance at the end of the billing cycle," while the disclosure for § 226.7(i) refers to the "ending balance" or "new balance."

2. Separate initial disclosures permitted. In a certain open-end credit program involving more than one creditor—a card issuer of travel-and-entertainment cards and a financial institution—the consumer has the option to pay the card issuer directly or to transfer to the financial institution all or part of the amount owing. In this case, the creditors may send separate initial disclosure statements.

6(a) Finance charge.

Paragraph 6(a)(1)

1. When finance charges accrue. Creditors may provide a general explanation about finance charges beginning to run and need not disclose a specific date. For example, a disclosure that the consumer has 30 days from the closing date to pay the new balance before finance charges will accrue on the account would describe when finance charges begin to run.

2. Free-ride periods. In disclosing whether or not a free-ride period exists, the creditor need not use "free period," "free-ride period," or any other particular descriptive phrase or term. For example, a statement that "the finance charge begins on the date the transaction is posted to your account" adequately discloses that no free-ride period exists. In the same fashion, a statement that "finance charges will be imposed on any new purchases only if they are not paid in full within 25 days after the close of the billing cycle" indicates that a free-ride period exists in the interim.

Paragraph 6(a)(2).

1. Range of balances. The range of balances disclosure is inapplicable:

- If only one periodic rate may be applied to the entire account balance.
- If only one periodic rate may be applied to the entire balance for a feature (for example, cash advances), even though the balance for another feature (purchases) may be subject to 2 rates (a 1.5% periodic rate on purchase balances of $0-$500, while balances above $500 are subject to a 1% periodic rate). Of course, the creditor must give a range of balances disclosure for the purchase feature.

2. Variable-rate disclosures—coverage. This section covers open-end credit plans under which rate changes are part of the plan and are tied to an index or formula. A creditor would use variable-rate disclosures (and thus be excused from the requirement of giving a change-in-terms notice when rate increases occur as disclosed) for plans involving rate changes such as the following:

- Rate changes that are tied to the rate the creditor pays on its 6-month money market certificates.
- Rate changes that are tied to Treasury bill rates.
- Rate changes that are tied to changes in the creditor's commercial lending rate.

In contrast, the creditor's contract reservation to increase the rate without reference to such an index or formula (for example, a plan that simply provides that the creditor reserves the right to raise its rates) would not be considered a variable-rate plan for Truth in Lending disclosure purposes. Moreover, an open-end credit plan in which the employee receives a lower rate contingent upon employment (that is, with the rate to be increased upon termination of employment) is not a variable-rate plan. (With regard to such employee preferential-rate plans, however, see comment 9(c)-1, which provides that if the specific change that would occur is disclosed on the initial disclosure statement, no notice of a change in terms need be given when the term later changes as disclosed.)

3. Variable rate plan—rate(s) in effect. In disclosing the rate(s) in effect at the time of the initial disclosures (as is required by § 226.6(a)(2)), the creditor may use an insert showing the current rate; may give the rate as of a specified date and then update the disclosure from time to time, for example, each calendar month; or may disclose an estimated rate under § 226.5(c).

4. Variable rate plan—additional disclosures required. In addition to disclosing the rates in effect at the time of the initial disclosures, the disclosures under footnote 12 also must be made.

5. Variable rate plan—index. The index to be used must be clearly identified; the creditor need not give, however, an explanation of how the index is determined or provide instructions for obtaining it.

6. Variable rate plan—circumstances for increase. Circumstances under which the rate(s) may increase include, for example:

- An increase in the Treasury bill rate.
- An increase in the Federal Reserve discount rate.

The creditor must disclose when the increase will take effect; for example,

- "An increase will take effect on the day that the Treasury bill rate increases," or
- "An increase in the Federal Reserve discount rate will take effect on the first day of the creditor's billing cycle."

7. Variable rate plan—limitations on increase. In disclosing any limitations on rate increases, limitations such as the maximum increase per year or the maximum increase over the duration of the plan must be disclosed. When there are no limitations, the creditor may, but need not, disclose that fact. Legal limits such as usury or rate ceilings under State or Federal statutes or regulations need not be disclosed. Examples of limitations that must be disclosed include:

- "The rate on the plan will not exceed 25% annual percentage rate."
- "Not more than ½% increase in the annual percentage rate per year will occur."

8. Variable rate plan—effects of increase. Examples of effects that must be disclosed include:

- Any requirement for additional collateral if the annual percentage rate increases beyond a specified rate.
- Any increase in the scheduled minimum periodic payment amount.

9. Variable rate plan—change-in-terms notice not required. No notice of a change in terms is required for a rate increase under a variable rate plan as defined in Comment 6(a)(2)-2.

10. Discounted variable-rate plans. In some variable-rate plans, creditors may set an initial interest rate that is not determined by the index or formula used to make later interest rate adjustments. Typically, this initial rate is lower than the rate would be if it were calculated using the index or formula.

- For example, a creditor may calculate interest rates according to a formula using the six-month Treasury bill rate plus a 2 percent margin. If the current Treasury bill rate is 10 percent, the creditor may forego the 2 percent spread and charge only 10 percent for a limited time, instead of setting an initial rate of 12 percent, or the creditor may disregard the index or formula and set the initial rate at 9 percent.
- When creditors use an initial rate that is not calculated using the index or formula for later rate adjustments, the initial disclosure statement should reflect: (1) The initial rate (expressed as a periodic rate and a corresponding annual percentage rate), together with a statement of how long it will remain in effect; (2) the current rate that would have been applied using the index or formula (also expressed as a periodic rate and a corresponding annual percentage rate); and (3) the other variable-rate information required by footnote 12 to § 226.6(a)(2).
- In disclosing the current periodic and annual percentage rates that would be applied using the index or formula, the creditor may use any of the disclosure options described in comment 6(a)(2)-3.

Paragraph 6(a)(3).

1. Explanation of balance computation method. A shorthand phrase such as "previous balance method" does not suffice in explaining the balance computation method. (See Appendix G-1 for model clauses.)

2. Allocation of payments. Disclosure about the allocation of payments and other credits is not required. For example, the creditor need not disclose that payments are applied to late charges, overdue balances, and finance charges before being applied to the principal balance; or in a multifeatured plan, that payments are applied first to finance charges, then to purchases, and then to cash advances. (See Comment 7-1 for definition of multifeatured plan.)

Paragraph 6(a)(4).

1. Finance charges. In addition to disclosing the periodic rate(s) under § 226.6(a)(2), disclosure is required of any other type of finance charge that may be imposed, such as minimum, fixed, transaction, and activity charges; required insurance; or appraisal or credit report fees (unless excluded from the finance charge under § 226.4(c)(7)).

6(b) Other charges.

1. General; examples of other charges. Under § 226.6(b), significant charges related to the plan (that are not finance charges) must also be disclosed. For example:

- Late payment and over-the-credit-limit charges.
- Fees for providing documentary evidence of transactions requested under §226.13 (billing error resolution).
- Charges imposed in connection with real estate transactions. (See § 226.4(c)(7).)
- Taxes and filing or notary fees excluded from the finance charge under § 226.4(e).
- A tax imposed on the credit transaction by a state or other governmental body, such as a documentary stamp tax on cash advances. (See the commentary to § 226.4(a).)
- Membership or participation fees for a package of services that includes an open-end credit feature, unless the fee is required whether or not the open-end credit feature is included. For example, a membership fee to join a credit union would not be an "other charge," even if membership is required to apply for credit.
- Automated teller machine (ATM) charges described in comment 4(a)-5 that are not finance charges.

2. Exclusions. The following are examples of charges that are not "other charges":

- Fees charged for documentary evidence of transactions for income tax purposes.
- Amounts payable by a consumer for collection activity after default; attorney's fees, whether or not automatically imposed; foreclosure costs; post-judgment interest rates imposed by law; and reinstatement or reissuance fees.
- Premiums for voluntary credit life or disability insurance, or for property insurance, that are not part of the finance charge.

- Application fees under § 226.4(c)(1).
- A monthly service charge for a checking account with overdraft protection that is applied to all checking accounts, whether or not a credit feature is attached.
- Charges for submitting as payment a check that is later returned unpaid. (See the commentary to § 226.4(c)(2).)
- Charges imposed on a cardholder by an institution other than the card issuer for the use of the other institution's ATM in a shared or interchange system. (See also comment 7(b)-2.)

6(c) Security interests.

1. General. Disclosure is not required about the type of security interest, or about the creditor's rights with respect to that collateral. In other words, the creditor need not expand on the term "security interest." Also, since no specified terminology is required, the creditor may designate its interest by using, for example, "pledge," "lien," or "mortgage" (instead of "security interest").

2. Identification of property. Identification of the collateral by type is satisfied by stating, for example, "motor vehicle" or "household appliances." The creditor may, at its option, provide a more specific identification (for example, a model and serial number).

3. Spreader clause. The fact that collateral for pre-existing credit extensions with the institution is being used to secure the present obligation constitutes a security interest and must be disclosed. (Such security interests may be known as "spreader" or "dragnet" clauses, or as "cross-collateralization" clauses.) A specific identification of that collateral is unnecessary, but a reminder of the interest arising from the prior indebtedness is required. This may be accomplished by using language such as "collateral securing other loans with us may also secure this loan." At the creditor's option, a more specific description of the property involved may be given.

4. Additional collateral. If collateral is required when advances reach a certain amount, the creditor should disclose the information available at the time of the initial disclosures. For example, if the creditor knows that a security interest will be taken in household goods if the consumer's balance exceeds $1,000, the creditor should disclose accordingly. If the creditor knows that security will be required if the consumer's balance exceeds $1,000, but the creditor does not know what security will be required, the creditor must disclose on the initial disclosure statement that security will be required if the balance exceeds $1,000, and the creditor must provide a change-in-terms notice under § 226.9(c) at the time the security is taken.

5. Collateral from third party. In certain situations, the consumer's obligation may be secured by collateral belonging to a third party. For example, an open-end credit plan may be secured by an interest in property owned by the consumer's parents. In such cases, the security interest is taken in connection with the plan and must be disclosed, even though the property encumbered is owned by someone other than the consumer.

6(d) Statement of billing rights.

See the commentary to Appendix G-3.

Previous regulation: Section 226.7(a) and Interpretation § 226.706.

1981 changes: Section 226.6 implements the amended statute which requires disclosure of the fact that no free period exists. Disclosures about the minimum periodic payment and the Comparative Index of Credit Cost have been eliminated. The security interest disclosures have been simplified. "Other charges" no longer include voluntary credit life or disability insurance, required property insurance premiums, default charges, or fees for collection activity. Disclosures for variable rate plans are now required by the regulation, replacing Interpretation § 226.707. The regulation no longer specifies the exact language to be used for the billing rights notice; creditors may use any version "substantially similar" to the one in Appendix G.

Section 226.7—Periodic Statement

1. Multifeatured plans. Some plans involve a number of different features, such as purchases, cash advances, or overdraft checking. Groups of transactions subject to different finance charge terms because of the dates on which the transactions took place are treated like different features for purposes of disclosures on the periodic statements. The commentary includes some special rules for multifeatured plans.

2. Separate periodic statements permitted. In a certain open-end credit program involving more than one creditor—a card issuer of travel-and-entertainment cards and a financial institution—the consumer has the option to pay the card issuer directly or to transfer to the financial institution all or part of the amount owing. In this case, the creditors may send separate periodic statements that reflect the separate obligations owed to each.

7(a) Previous balance.

1. Credit balances. If the previous balance is a credit balance, it must be disclosed in such a way so as to inform the consumer that it is a credit balance, rather than a debit balance.

2. Multifeatured plans. In a multifeatured plan, the previous balance may be disclosed either as an aggregate balance for the account or as separate balances for each feature (for example, a previous balance for purchases and a previous balance for cash advances). If separate balances are disclosed, a total previous balance is optional.

3. Accrued finance charges allocated from payments. Some open-end credit plans provide that the amount of the finance charge that has accrued since the consumer's last payment is directly deducted from each new payment, rather than being separately added to each statement and reflected as an increase in the obligation. In such a plan, the previous balance need not reflect finance charges accrued since the last payment.

7(b) Identification of transactions.

1. Multifeatured plans. In identifying transactions under § 226.7(b) for multifeatured plans, creditors may, for example, choose to arrange transactions by feature (such as disclosing sale transactions separately from cash advance transactions) or in some other clear manner, such as by arranging the transactions in general chronological order.

2. Automated teller machine (ATM) charges imposed by other institutions in shared or interchange systems. A charge imposed on the cardholder by an institution other than the card issuer for the use of the other institution's ATM in a shared or interchange system and included by the terminal-operating institution in the amount of the transaction need not be separately disclosed on the periodic statement.

7(c) Credits.

1. Identification—sufficiency. The creditor need not describe each credit by type (returned merchandise, rebate of finance charge, etc.)—"credit" would suffice—except if the creditor is using the periodic statement to satisfy the billing error correction notice requirement. (See the commentary to § 226.13 (e) and (f).)

2. Format. A creditor may list credits relating to credit extensions (payments, rebates, etc.) together with other types of credits (such as deposits to a checking account), as long as the entries are identified so as to inform the consumer which type of credit each entry represents.

3. Date. If only one date is disclosed (that is, the crediting date as required by the regulation), no further identification of that date is necessary. More than one date may be disclosed for a single entry, as long as it is clear which date represents the date on which credit was given.

7(d) Periodic rates.

1. Disclosure of periodic rates—whether or not actually applied. Any periodic rate that may be used to compute finance charges (and its corresponding annual percentage rate) must be disclosed whether or not it is applied during the billing cycle. For example:

- If the consumer's account has both a purchase feature and a cash advance feature, the creditor must disclose the rate for each, even if the consumer only makes purchases on the account during the billing cycle.
- If the rate varies (such as when it is tied to a particular index), the creditor must disclose each rate in effect during the cycle for which the statement was issued.

2. Disclosure of periodic rates required only if imposition possible. With regard to the periodic rate disclosure (and its corresponding annual percentage rate), only rates that could have been imposed during the billing cycle reflected on the periodic statement need to be disclosed. For example:

- If the creditor is changing rates effective during the next billing cycle (either because it is changing terms or because of a variable rate plan), the rates required to be disclosed under § 226.7(d) are only those in effect during the billing cycle reflected on the periodic statement. For example, if the monthly rate applied during May was 1.5 percent, but the creditor will increase the rate to 1.8 percent effective June 1, 1.5 percent (and its corresponding annual percentage rate) is the only required disclosure under § 226.7(d) for the periodic statement reflecting the May account activity.
- If the consumer has an overdraft line that might later be expanded upon the consumer's request to include secured advances, the rates for the secured advance feature need not be given until such time as the consumer has requested and received access to the additional feature.
- If rates applicable to a particular type of transaction changed after a certain date, and the old rate is only being applied to transactions that took place prior to that date, the creditor need not continue to disclose the old rate for those consumers that have no outstanding balances to which that rate could be applied.

3. Multiple rates—same transaction. If two or more periodic rates are applied to the same balance for the same type of transaction (for example, if the finance charge consists of a monthly periodic rate of 1.5% applied to the outstanding balance and a required credit life insurance component calculated at .1% per month on the same outstanding balance), the creditor may do either of the following:

- Disclose each periodic rate, the range of balances to which it is applicable, and the corresponding annual percentage rate for each. (For example, 1.5% monthly, 18% annual percentage rate; .1% monthly, 1.2% annual percentage rate.)

- Disclose one composite periodic rate (that is, 1.6% per month) along with the applicable range of balances and corresponding annual percentage rate.

4. Corresponding annual percentage rate. In disclosing the annual percentage rate that corresponds to each periodic rate, the creditor may use "corresponding annual percentage rate," "nominal annual percentage rate," "corresponding nominal annual percentage rate," or similar phrases.

5. Rate same as actual annual percentage rate. When the corresponding rate is the same as the actual annual percentage rate (historical rate) required to be disclosed (§ 226.7(g)), the creditor need disclose only one annual percentage rate, but must use the phrase "annual percentage rate."

6. Ranges of balances. See Comment 6(a)(2)-1.

7(e) Balance on which finance charge computed.

1. Limitation to periodic rates. Section 226.7(e) only requires disclosure of the balance(s) to which a periodic rate was applied and does not apply to balances on which other kinds of finance charges (such as transaction charges) were imposed. For example, if a consumer obtains a $1,500 cash advance subject to both a 1% transaction fee and a 1% monthly periodic rate, the creditor need only disclose the balance subject to the monthly rate (which might include portions of earlier cash advances not paid off in previous cycles).

2. Split rates applied to balance ranges. If split rates were applied to a balance because different portions of the balance fall within two or more balance ranges, the creditor need not separately disclose the portions of the balance subject to such different rates since the range of balances to which the rates apply has been separately disclosed. For example, a creditor could disclose a balance of $700 for purchases even though a monthly periodic rate of 1.5 percent applied to the first $500, and a monthly periodic rate of 1 percent to the remainder. This option to disclose a combined balance does not apply when the finance charge is computed by applying the split rates to each day's balance (in contrast, for example, to applying the rates to the average daily balance). In that case, the balances must be disclosed using any of the options that are available if two or more daily rates are imposed. (See comment 7(e)-5.)

3. Monthly rate on average daily balance. If a creditor computes a finance charge on the average daily balance by application of a monthly periodic rate or rates, the balance is adequately disclosed if the statement gives the amount of the average daily balance on which the finance charge was computed, and also states how the balance is determined.

4. Multifeatured plans. In a multifeatured plan, the creditor must disclose a separate balance (or balances, as applicable) to which a periodic rate was applied for each feature or group of features subject to different periodic rates or different balance computation methods. Separate balances are not required, however, merely because a "free-ride" period is available for some features but not others. A total balance for the entire plan is optional. This does not affect how many balances the creditor must disclose—or may disclose—within each feature. (See, for example, comment 7(e)-5.)

5. Daily rate on daily balance. If the finance charge is computed on the balance each day by application of one or more daily periodic rates, the balance on which the finance charge was computed may be disclosed in any of the following ways for each feature:

- If a single daily periodic rate is imposed, the balance to which it is applicable may be stated as:
  —A balance for each day in the billing cycle
  —A balance for each day in the billing cycle on which the balance in the account changes
  —The sum of the daily balances during the billing cycle
  —The average daily balance during the billing cycle, in which case the creditor shall explain that the average daily balance is or can be multiplied by the number of days in the billing cycle and the periodic rate applied to the product to determine the amount of the finance charge.
- If two or more daily periodic rates may be imposed, the balances to which the rates are applicable may be stated as:
  —A balance for each day in the billing cycle
  —A balance for each day in the billing cycle on which the balance in the account changes
  —Two or more average daily balances, each applicable to the daily periodic rates imposed for the time that those rates were in effect, as long as the creditor explains that the finance charge is or may be determined by (1) multiplying each of the average balances by the number of days in the billing cycle (or if the daily rate varied during the cycle, by multiplying by the number of days the applicable rate was in effect), (2) multiplying each of the results by the applicable daily periodic rate, and (3) adding these products together.

6. Explanation of balance computation method. See the commentary to § 226.6(a)(3).

7. Information to compute balance. In connection with disclosing the finance charge balance, the creditor need not give the consumer all of the information necessary to compute the balance if that information is not otherwise required to be disclosed. For example, if current purchases are included from the date they are posted to the account, the posting date need not be disclosed.

8. Non-deduction of credits. The creditor need not specifically identify the total dollar amount of credits not deducted in computing the finance charge balance. Disclosure of the amount of credits not deducted is accomplished by listing the credits (§ 226.7(c)) and indicating which credits will not be deducted in determining the balance (for example, "credits after the 15th of the month are not deducted in computing the finance charge.")

9. Use of one balance computation method explanation when multiple balances disclosed. Sometimes the creditor will disclose more than one balance to which a periodic rate was applied even though each balance was computed using the same balance computation method. For example, if a plan involves purchases and cash advances that are subject to different rates, more than one balance must be disclosed even though the same computation method is used for determining the balance for each feature. In these cases, one explanation of the balance computation method is sufficient. Sometimes the creditor separately discloses the portions of the balance that are subject to different rates because different portions of the balance fall within two or more balance ranges, even when a combined balance disclosure would be permitted under comment 7(e)-2. In these cases, one explanation of the balance computation method is also sufficient (assuming, of course, that all portions of the balance were computed using the same method).

7(f) Amount of finance charge.

1. Total. A total finance charge amount for the plan is not required.

2. Itemization—types of finance charges. Each type of finance charge (such as periodic rates, transaction charges, and minimum charges) imposed during the cycle must be separately itemized; for example, disclosure of only a combined finance charge attributable to both a minimum charge and transaction charges would not be permissible. Finance charges of the same type may be disclosed, however, individually or as a total. For example, 5 transaction charges of $1 may be listed separately or as $5.

3. Itemization—different periodic rates. Whether different periodic rates are applicable to different types of transactions or to different balance ranges, the creditor may give the finance charge attributable to each rate or may give a total finance charge amount. For example, if a creditor charges 1.5% per month on the first $500 of a balance and 1% per month on amounts over $500, the creditor may itemize the two components ($7.50 and $1.00) of the $8.50 charge, or may disclose $8.50.

4. Multifeatured plans. In a multifeatured plan, in disclosing the amount of the finance charge attributable to the application of periodic rates no total periodic rate disclosure for the entire plan need be given.

5. Finance charges not added to account. A finance charge that is not included in the new balance because it is payable to a third party (such as required life insurance) must still be shown on the periodic statement as a finance charge.

6. Finance charges other than periodic rates. See Comment 6(a)(4)-1 for examples.

7. Accrued finance charges allocated from payments. Some plans provide that the amount of the finance charge that has accrued since the consumer's last payment is directly deducted from each new payment, rather than being separately added to each statement and therefore reflected as an increase in the obligation. In such a plan, no disclosure is required of finance charges that have accrued since the last payment.

7(g) Annual percentage rate.

1. Rate same as corresponding annual percentage rate. See Comment 7(d)-5.

2. Multifeatured plans. In a multifeatured plan, the actual annual percentage rate that reflects the finance charge imposed during the cycle may be separately stated for each feature, or may be described as a composite for the whole plan. If separate rates are given, a composite annual percentage rate for the entire plan is optional.

7(h) Other charges.

1. Identification. In identifying any "other charges" actually imposed during the billing cycle, the type is adequately described as "late charge" or "membership fee," for example. (See Comment 6(b)-1 for examples of "other charges.")

2. Date. The date of imposing or debiting "other charges" need not be disclosed.

3. Total. Disclosure of the total amount of other charges is optional.

4. Itemization—types of "other charges". Each type of "other charge" (such as late payment charges, over-the-credit-limit charges, ATM fees that are not finance charges, and membership fees) imposed during the cycle must be separately itemized; for example, disclosure of only a total of "other charges" attributable to both an over-the-credit-limit charge and a late payment charge would not be permissible. "Other charges" of the same type may be disclosed, however, individually or as a total.

For example, three ATM fees of $1 may be listed separately or as $3.

7(i) Closing date of billing cycle; new balance.

1. Credit balances. See Comment 7(a)-1.

2. Multifeatured plans. In a multifeatured plan, the new balance may be disclosed for each feature or for the plan as a whole. If separate new balances are disclosed, a total new balance is optional.

3. Accrued finance charges allocated from payments. Some plans provide that the amount of the finance charge that has accrued since the consumer's last payment is directly deducted from each new payment, rather than being separately added to each statement and therefore reflected as an increase in the obligation. In such a plan, the new balance need not reflect finance charges accrued since the last payment.

7(j) Free-ride period.

1. Wording. Although the creditor is required to indicate any time period the consumer may have to pay the balance outstanding without incurring additional finance charges, no specific wording is required, so long as the language used is consistent with that used on the initial disclosure statement. For example, "To avoid additional finance charges, pay the new balance before ———" would suffice.

7(k) Address for notice of billing errors.

1. Wording. The periodic statement must contain the address for consumers to use in asserting billing errors under § 226.13. Since all disclosures must be "clear," the statement should indicate the general purpose for the address, although no elaborate explanation or particular wording is required.

2. Telephone number. A telephone number may be included, but the address for billing error inquiries, which is the required disclosure, must be clear and conspicuous. One way to ensure that the address is clear and conspicuous is to include a precautionary instruction that telephoning will not preserve the consumer's billing error rights. Both of the billing rights statements in Appendix G contain such a precautionary instruction, so that a creditor could, by including either of these statements with each periodic statement, ensure that the required address is provided in a clear and conspicuous manner.

Other sections: Sections 226.4 through 226.6, 226.8, 226.14, and Appendix G.

1981 changes: Under § 226.7, required terminology is no longer mandated except for the terms "finance charge" and "annual percentage rate." The requirement in the previous regulation about the location of disclosures has been deleted.

Under the revised § 226.7, disclosure of credits to the account no longer have to indicate the type of credit. A short disclosure for variable rate plans must be included on the periodic statement. Disclosures relating to multifeatured accounts have been clarified.

Section 226.7 now specifically requires a periodic statement disclosure of "other charges" (non-finance charges related to the plan) that are actually imposed during the billing cycle.

Disclosures about minimum charges that might be imposed on the account and about the Comparative Index of Credit Cost have been deleted.

Section 226.8—Identification of Transactions

1. Application of identification rules. Section 226.8 deals with the requirement (imposed by § 226.7(b)) for identification of each credit transaction made during the billing cycle. The rules for identifying transactions on periodic statements vary, depending on whether:

- The transaction involves sale credit (purchases) or nonsale credit (cash advances, for example).
- An actual copy of the credit document reflecting the transaction accompanies the statement (this is the distinction between so-called "country club" and "descriptive" billing).
- The creditor and seller are the same or related persons.

2. Sale credit. The term "sale credit" refers to a purchase in which the consumer uses a credit card or otherwise directly accesses an open-end line of credit (see Comment 8-3 if access is by means of a check) to obtain goods or services from a merchant, whether or not the merchant is the card issuer. "Sale credit" even includes:

- Premiums for voluntary credit life insurance whether sold by the card issuer or another person.
- The purchase of funds-transfer services (such as telegrams) from an intermediary.

3. Nonsale credit. The term "nonsale credit" refers to any form of loan credit including, for example:

- Cash advances.
- Overdraft checking.
- The use of a "supplemental credit device" in the form of a check or draft or the use of the overdraft feature of a debit card, even if such use is in connection with a purchase of goods or services.
- Miscellaneous debits to remedy mispostings, returned checks, and similar entries.

4. Actual copy. An actual copy does not include a recreated document. It includes, for example, a duplicate, carbon, or photographic copy, but does not include a so-called "facsimile draft" in which the required information is typed, printed, or otherwise recreated. If a facsimile draft is used, the creditor must follow the rules that apply when a copy of the credit document is not furnished.

5. Same or related persons. The term "same or related persons" refers to, for example:

- Franchised or licensed sellers of a creditor's product or service.
- Sellers who assign or sell open-end sales accounts to a creditor or arrange for such credit under a plan that allows the consumer to use the credit only in transactions with that seller.

A person is not related to the creditor merely because, for example:

- The person and the creditor have an agreement by which the person is authorized to honor the creditor's credit card under the terms specified in the agreement.
- The person and the creditor have a corporate connection, such as subsidiary-parent, if that connection is not obvious from the names they use. For example, if XYZ card issuer owns the ABC hotel, the card issuer and the hotel are not "related."

6. Transactions resulting from promotional material. In describing transactions with third-party sellers resulting from promotional material mailed by the creditor, creditors may use the rules either for "related" or for "non-related" sellers and creditors.

7. Credit insurance offered through the creditor. When credit insurance that is not part of the finance charge (for example, voluntary credit life insurance) is offered to the consumer through the creditor, but is actually provided by another company, the creditor has the option of identifying the premiums in one of two ways on the periodic statement. The creditor may describe the premiums using either the rule in § 226.8(a)(2) for "related" sellers and creditors, or the rule in § 226.8(a)(3) for "non-related" sellers and creditors. This means, therefore, that the creditor may identify the insurance either by providing, under § 226.8(a)(2), a brief identification of the services provided (for example, "credit life insurance"), or by disclosing, under § 226.8(a)(3), the name and address of the company providing the insurance (for example, ABC Insurance Company, New York, New York). In either event, the creditor would, of course, also provide the amount and the date of the transaction.

8(a) Sale credit.

1. Date—disclosure of only one date. If only the required date is disclosed for a transaction, the creditor need not identify it as the "transaction date." If the creditor discloses more than one date (for example, the transaction date and the posting date), the creditor must identify each.

2. Date—disclosure of month and day only. The month and day are sufficient disclosure of the date on which the transaction took place, unless the posting of the transaction is delayed so long that the year is needed for a clear disclosure to the consumer.

3. When transaction takes place. If the consumer conducts the transaction in person, the date of the transaction is the calendar date on which the consumer made the purchase or order, or secured the advance. For transactions billed to the account on an ongoing basis (other than installments to pay a precomputed amount), the date of the transaction is the date on which the amount is debited to the account. This might include, for example, monthly insurance premiums. For mail or telephone orders, a creditor may disclose as the transaction date either the invoice date, the debiting date, or the date the order was placed by telephone.

4. Transactions not billed in full. If sale transactions are not billed in full on any single statement, but are billed periodically in precomputed installments, the first periodic statement reflecting the transaction must show either the full amount of the transaction together with the date the transaction actually took place; or the amount of the first installment that was debited to the account together with the date of the transaction or the date on which the first installment was debited to the account. In any event, subsequent periodic statements should reflect each installment due, together with either any other identifying information required by § 226.8(a) (such as the seller's name and address in a three-party situation) or other appropriate identifying information relating the transaction to the first billing. The debiting date for the particular installment, or the date the transaction took place, may be used as the date of the transaction on these subsequent statements.

8(a)(1) Copy of credit document provided.

1. Format. The information required by § 226.8(a)(1) may appear either on the copy of the credit document reflecting the transaction or on the periodic statement.

8(a)(2) Copy of credit document not provided—creditor and seller same or related person(s).

1. Property identification—sufficiency of description. The "brief identification" provision in § 226.8(a)(2) requires a designation that will enable the consumer to reconcile the periodic statement with the consumer's own records. In determining the sufficiency of the description, the following rules apply:

- While item-by-item descriptions are not necessary, reasonable precision is required.

For example, "merchandise," "miscellaneous," "second-hand goods," or "promotional items" would not suffice.

- A reference to a department in a sales establishment that accurately conveys the identification of the types of property or services available in the department is sufficient—for example, "jewelry," "sporting goods."

2. Property identification—number or symbol. The "brief identification" may be made by disclosing on the periodic statement a number or symbol that is related to an identification list printed elsewhere on the statement.

3. Property identification—additional document. In making the "brief identification" required by § 226.8(a)(2), the creditor may identify the property by describing the transaction on a document accompanying the periodic statement (for example, on a facsimile draft). (See also footnote 17.)

4. Small creditors. Under footnote 18, which provides a further identification alternative to a creditor with fewer than 15,000 accounts, the creditor need count only its own accounts and not others serviced by the same data processor or other shared-service provider.

5. Date of transaction—foreign transactions. In a foreign transaction, the debiting date may be considered the transaction date.

8(a)(3) Copy of credit document not provided—creditor and seller not same or related person(s).

1. Seller's name. The requirement contemplates that the seller's name will appear on the periodic statement in essentially the same form as it appears on transaction documents provided to the consumer at the time of the sale. The seller's name may also be disclosed as, for example:

- A more complete spelling of the name that was alphabetically abbreviated on the receipt or other credit document.
- An alphabetical abbreviation of the name on the periodic statement even if the name appears in a more complete spelling on the receipt or other credit document.

Terms that merely indicate the form of a business entity, such as "Inc.," "Co.," or "Ltd.," may always be omitted.

2. Location of transaction. The disclosure of the location where the transaction took place generally requires an indication of both the city, and the state or foreign country. If the seller has multiple stores or branches within that city, the creditor need not identify the specific branch at which the sale occurred.

3. No fixed location. When no meaningful address is available because the consumer did not make the purchase at any fixed location of the seller, the creditor:

- May omit the address.
- May provide some other identifying designation, such as "aboard plane," "ABC Airways Flight," "customer's home," "telephone order," or "mail order."

4. Date of transaction—foreign transactions. See Comment 8(a)(2)-5.

8(b) Nonsale credit.

1. Date of transaction. If only one of the required dates is disclosed for a transaction, the creditor need not identify it. If the creditor discloses more than one date (for example, transaction date and debiting date), the creditor must identify each.

2. Amount of transaction. If credit is extended under an overdraft checking account plan or by means of a debit card with an overdraft feature, the amount to be disclosed is that of the credit extension, not the face amount of the check or the total amount of the debit/credit transaction.

3. Amount—disclosure on cumulative basis. If credit is extended under an overdraft checking account plan or by means of a debit card with an overdraft feature, the creditor may disclose the amount of the credit extensions on a cumulative daily basis, rather than the amount attributable to each check or each use of the debit/credit card.

4. Identification of transaction type. The creditor may identify a transaction by describing the type of advance it represents, such as cash advance, loan, overdraft loan, or any readily understandable trade name for the credit program.

1981 changes: Section 226.8 has been streamlined and reorganized to facilitate its use. Technical detail has been deleted from the Regulation for inclusion in the commentary. The Regulation implements the amended section 127(b)(2) of the Act by providing for protection from civil liability under certain circumstances when required information is not provided and by reducing disclosure responsibilities for certain small creditors. For descriptive billing of nonsale transactions, the regulation now permits the use of the debiting date in all cases.

Section 226.9—Subsequent Disclosure Requirements

9(a) Furnishing statement of billing rights.

9(a)(1) Annual statement.

1. General. The creditor may provide the annual billing rights statement:

- By sending it in one billing period per year to each consumer that gets a periodic statement for that period; or

- By sending a copy to all of its account holders sometime during the calendar year but not necessarily all in one billing period (for example, sending the annual notice in connection with renewal cards or when imposing annual membership fees).

2. Substantially similar. See the commentary to Appendix G-3.

9(a)(2) Alternative summary statement.

1. Changing from long-form to short-form statement and vice versa. If the creditor has been sending the long-form annual statement, and subsequently decides to use the alternative summary statement, the first summary statement must be sent no later than 12 months after the last long-form statement was sent. Conversely, if the creditor wants to switch to the long-form, the first long-form statement must be sent no later than 12 months after the last summary statement.

2. Substantially similar. See the commentary to Appendix G-4.

9(b) Disclosures for supplemental credit devices and additional features.

1. Credit device—examples. "Credit device" includes, for example, a blank check, payee-designated check, blank draft or order, or authorization form for issuance of a check; it does not include a check issued payable to a consumer representing loan proceeds or the disbursement of a cash advance.

2. Credit feature—examples. A new credit "feature" would include, for example:

- The addition of overdraft checking to an existing account (although the regular checks that could trigger the overdraft feature are not themselves "devices").
- The option to use an existing credit card to secure cash advances, when previously the card could only be used for purchases.

Paragraph 9(b)(1).

1. Same finance charge terms. If the new means of accessing the account is subject to the same finance charge terms as those previously disclosed, the creditor:

- Need only provide a reminder that the new device or feature is covered by the earlier disclosures. (For example, in mailing special checks that directly access the credit line, the creditor might give a disclosure such as "Use this as you would your XYZ card to obtain a cash advance from our bank"); or
- May remake the § 226.6(a) finance charge disclosures.

Paragraph 9(b)(2).

1. Different finance charge terms. If the finance charge terms are different from those previously disclosed, the creditor may satisfy the requirement to give the finance charge terms either by giving a complete set of new initial disclosures reflecting the terms of the added device or feature or by giving only the finance charge disclosures for the added device or feature.

9(c) Change in terms:

1. "Changes" initially disclosed. No notice of a change in terms need be given if the specific change is set forth initially, such as: Rate increases under a properly disclosed variable-rate plan, a rate increase that occurs when an employee has been under a preferential rate agreement and terminates employment, or an increase that occurs when the consumer has been under an agreement to maintain a certain balance in a savings account in order to keep a particular rate and the account balance falls below the specified minimum. In contrast, notice must be given if the contract allows the creditor to increase the rate at its discretion but does not include specific terms for an increase (for example, when an increase may occur under the creditor's contract reservation right to increase the periodic rate).

2. State law issues. Examples of issues not addressed by § 226.9(c) because they are controlled by State or other applicable law include:

- The types of changes a creditor may make.
- How changed terms affect existing balances, such as when a periodic rate is changed and the consumer does not pay off the entire existing balance before the new rate takes effect.

3. Change in billing cycle. Whenever the creditor changes the consumer's billing cycle, it must give a change-in-terms notice if the change either affects any of the terms required to be disclosed under § 226.6 or increases the minimum payment, unless an exception under § 226.9(c)(2) applies; for example, the creditor must give advance notice if the creditor initially disclosed a 25-day free-ride period on purchases and the consumer will have fewer days during the billing cycle change.

9(c)(1) Written notice required.

1. Affected consumers. Change-in-terms notices need only go to those consumers who may be affected by the change. For example, a change in the periodic rate for check overdraft credit need not be disclosed to consumers who do not have that feature on their accounts.

2. Timing—effective date of change. The rule that the notice of the change in terms be provided at least 15 days before the change takes effect permits mid-cycle changes when there is clearly no retroactive effect, such as the imposition of a transaction fee. Any change in the balance computation method, in contrast, would need to be disclosed at least 15 days prior to the billing cycle in which the change is to be implemented.

3. Timing—advance notice not required. Advance notice of 15 days is not necessary—that is, a notice of change in terms is required, but it may be mailed or delivered as late as the effective date of the change—in two circumstances:

- If there is an increased periodic rate or any other finance charge attributable to the consumer's delinquency or default.
- If the consumer agrees to the particular change. This provision is intended for use in the unusual instance when a consumer substitutes collateral or when the creditor can advance additional credit only if a change relatively unique to that consumer is made, such as the consumer's providing additional security or paying an increased minimum payment amount. Therefore, the following are not "agreements" between the consumer and the creditor for purposes of § 226.9(c)(1): The consumer's general acceptance of the creditor's contract reservation of the right to change terms; the consumer's use of the account (which might imply acceptance of its terms under State law); and the consumer's acceptance of a unilateral term change that is not particular to that consumer, but rather is of general applicability to consumers with that type of account.

4. Form of change-in-terms notice. A complete new set of the initial disclosures containing the changed term complies with § 226.9(c) if the change is highlighted in some way on the disclosure statement, or if the disclosure statement is accompanied by a letter or some other insert that indicates or draws attention to the term change.

5. Security interest change—form of notice. A copy of the security agreement that describes the collateral securing the consumer's account may be used as the notice, when the term change is the addition of a security interest or the addition or substitution of collateral.

9(c)(2) Notice not required.

1. Changes not requiring notice. The following are examples of changes that do not require a change-in-terms notice:

- A change in the consumer's credit limit.
- A change in the name of the credit card or credit card plan.
- The substitution of one insurer for another.
- A termination or suspension of credit privileges.
- Changes arising merely by operation of law; for example, if the creditor's security interest in a consumer's car automatically extends to the proceeds when the consumer sells the car.

2. Skip features. If a credit program allows consumers to skip or reduce one or more payments during the year, or involves temporary reductions in finance charges, no notice of the change in terms is required either prior to the reduction or upon resumption of the higher rates or payments if these features are explained on the initial disclosure statement (including an explanation of the terms upon resumption). For example, a merchant may allow consumers to skip the December payment to encourage holiday shopping, or a teachers' credit union may not require payments during summer vacation. Otherwise, the creditor must give notice prior to resuming the original schedule or rate, even though no notice is required prior to the reduction. The change-in-terms notice may be combined with the notice offering the reduction. For example, the periodic statement reflecting the reduction or skip feature may also be used to notify the consumer of the resumption of the original schedule or rate, either by stating explicitly when the higher payment or charges resume, or by indicating the duration of the skip option. Language such as "You may skip your October payment," or "We will waive your finance charges for January," may serve as the change-in-terms notice.

9(d) Finance Charge Imposed at Time of Transaction

1. Disclosure prior to imposition. A person imposing a finance charge at the time of honoring a consumer's credit card must disclose the amount of the charge, or an explanation of how the charge will be determined, prior to its imposition. This must be disclosed before the consumer becomes obligated for property or services that may be paid for by use of a credit card. For example, disclosure must be given before the consumer has dinner at a restaurant, stays overnight at a hotel, or makes a deposit guaranteeing the purchase of property or services.

Previous regulation: Section 226.7 (d) through (f) and (j) and Interpretation §§ 226.705 and 226.708.

1981 changes: Section 226.9(a) implements the statutory change that the long-form statement of billing rights be provided only once a year. The provision now permits two rather than one means of providing the long-form statement to consumers. The verbatim text of the annual statement is no longer required; creditors may use any version "substantially similar" to the one in Appendix G. If the creditor elects to use the alternative summary statement, the new regulation no longer requires that the long-form statement be sent upon receiving a billing error notice and at the consumer's request. The rules in § 226.708 on switching the type of billing rights statement used have been modified.

Under § 226.9(b) disclosure requirements have been streamlined when supplemental credit devices or new credit features are added to an existing open-end plan.

Section 226.9(c) substantially changes the change-in-terms rules. Change-in-terms disclosures must now be made 15 days before the effective date of the change, rather than 15 days before the billing cycle in which the change will take effect. The kinds of changes that will trigger disclosures have been reduced: change-in-terms notices are no longer required for the types of changes described in § 226.9(c)(2). But the provision reverses Interpretation § 226.705, which indicated that certain changes in the balance computation method did not require disclosure because they could result in lowered finance charges; now, any change in the balance computation method requires disclosure.

When a finance charge is imposed at the time of a transaction, § 226.9(d) only requires disclosure of the finance charge at point of sale; the amount financed and annual percentage rate figured in accordance with the closed-end credit provisions need no longer be disclosed. Furthermore, the finance charge disclosure now may be made orally by the person honoring the card.

Section 226.10—Prompt Crediting of Payments

10(a) General rule.

1. Crediting date. Section 226.10(a) does not require the creditor to post the payment to the consumer's account on a particular date; the creditor is only required to credit the payment as of the date of receipt.

2. Date of receipt. The "date of receipt" is the date that the payment instrument or other means of completing the payment reaches the creditor. For example:

- Payment by check is received when the creditor gets it, not when the funds are collected.
- In a payroll deduction plan in which funds are deposited to an asset account held by the creditor, and from which payments are made periodically to an open-end credit account, payment is received on the date when it is debited to the asset account (rather than on the date of the deposit), provided the payroll deduction method is voluntary and the consumer retains use of the funds until the contractual payment date.
- If the consumer elects to have payment made by a third-party payor such as a financial institution, through a preauthorized payment or telephone bill-payment arrangement, payment is received when the creditor gets the third-party payor's check or other transfer medium, such as an electronic fund transfer, as long as the payment meets the creditor's requirements as specified under § 226.10(b).

10(b) Specific requirements for payments.

1. Payment requirements. The creditor may specify requirements for making payments, such as:

- Requiring that payments be accompanied by the account number or the payment stub.
- Setting a cut-off hour for payment to be received, or set different hours for payment by mail and payments made in person.
- Specifying that only checks or money orders should be sent by mail.
- Specifying that payment is to be made in U.S. dollars.
- Specifying one particular address for receiving payments, such as a post office box.

The creditor may be prohibited, however, from specifying payment by preauthorized electronic fund transfer. (See section 913 of the Electronic Fund Transfer Act.)

2. Payment requirements—limitations. Requirements for making payments must be reasonable; it should not be difficult for most consumers to make conforming payments. For example, it would not be reasonable to require that all payments be made in person between 10 a.m. and 11 a.m., since this would require consumers to take time off from their jobs to deliver payments.

3. Acceptance of non-conforming payments. If the creditor accepts a non-conforming payment (for example, payment at a branch office, when it had specified that payment be sent to headquarters), finance charges may accrue for the period between receipt and crediting of payments.

4. Implied guidelines for payments. In the absence of specified requirements for making payments (see § 226.10(b)):

- Payments may be made at any location where the creditor conducts business.
- Payments may be made any time during the creditor's normal business hours.
- Payments may be made by cash, money order, draft, or other similar instrument in properly negotiable form, or by electronic fund transfer if the creditor and consumer have so agreed.

Previous regulation: Section 226.7(g).

1981 changes: Much of the explanatory detail of the previous regulation is now in the commentary. The revised regulation gives the creditor 5 days in which to credit non-conforming payments, whereas the previous regulation required the crediting of such payments promptly, with an outside limit of 5 days. The 5 days in which to credit are available whenever the creditor accepts payment that does not conform to the creditor's disclosed specifications, in contrast to the previous regulation, which only allowed deferred crediting for payments made at the wrong location.

Section 226.11—Treatment of Credit Balances

1. Timing of refund. The creditor may also fulfill its obligations under § 226.11 by:

- Refunding any credit balance to the consumer immediately.
- Refunding any credit balance prior to receiving a written request (under § 226.11(b)) from the consumer.
- Making a good faith effort to refund any credit balance before 6 months have passed. If that attempt is unsuccessful, the creditor need not try again to refund the credit balance at the end of the 6-month period.

2. Amount of refund. The phrase "any part of the credit balance remaining in the account" in § 226.11(b) and (c) means the amount of the credit balance at the time the creditor is required to make the refund. The creditor may take into consideration intervening purchases or other debits to the consumer's account (including those that have not yet been reflected on a periodic statement) that decrease or eliminate the credit balance.

Paragraph 11(b).

1. Written requests—standing orders. The creditor is not required to honor standing orders requesting refunds of any credit balance that may be created on the consumer's account.

Paragraph 11(c).

1. Good faith effort to refund. The creditor must take positive steps to return any credit balance that has remained in the account for over 6 months. This includes, if necessary, attempts to trace the consumer through the consumer's last known address or telephone number, or both.

2. Good faith effort unsuccessful. Section 226.11 imposes no further duties on the creditor if a good faith effort to return the balance is unsuccessful. The ultimate disposition of the credit balance (or any credit balance of $1 or less) is to be determined under other applicable law.

Statute: Section 165.

Previous regulation: Section 226.7(h).

1981 changes: Under the previous regulation, the creditor's duty to refund credit balances applied only to "excess payments"; § 226.11 of the revised regulation implements the amendments to section 165 of the statute which impose refunding duties on the creditor whatever the source of the credit balance. The revised regulation permits the creditor, in computing the refund, to take account of intervening debits, not just the difference between the previous balance and the overpayment as is provided in the previous regulation. The revised regulation gives the creditor 7 business days in which to make the refund after receiving the consumer's written request, whereas the previous regulation required the creditor to make the refund promptly, with an outside limit of 5 business days. This provision also implements the amended statute by requiring a good faith effort to refund the credit balance after 6 months.

Section 226.12—Special Credit Card Provisions

1. Scope. Sections 226.12(a) and (b) deal with the issuance and liability rules for credit cards, whether the card is intended for consumer, business, or any other purposes. Sections 226.12(a) and (b) are exceptions to the general rule that the regulation applies only to consumer credit. (See §§ 226.1 and 226.3.)

12(a) Issuance of credit cards.

Paragraph 12(a)(1).

1. Explicit request. A request or application for a card must be explicit. For example, a request for overdraft privileges on a checking account does not constitute an application for a credit card with overdraft checking features.

2. Addition of credit features. If the consumer has a non-credit card, the addition of credit features to the card (for example, the granting of overdraft privileges on a checking account when the consumer already has a check guarantee card) constitutes issuance of a credit card.

3. Variance of card from request. The request or application need not correspond exactly to the card that is issued. For example:

- The name of the card requested may be different when issued.
- The card may have features in addition to those reflected in the request or application.

4. Permissible form of request. The request or application may be oral (in response to a telephone solicitation by a card issuer, for example) or written.

5. Time of issuance. A credit card may be issued in response to a request made before any cards are ready for issuance (for example, if a new program is established), even if there is some delay in issuance.

6. Persons to whom cards may be issued. A card issuer may issue a credit card to the person who requests it, and to anyone else for whom that person requests a card and who will be an authorized user on the requester's account. In other words, cards may be sent to consumer A on A's request, and also (on A's request) to consumers B and C, who will be authorized users on A's account. In these circumstances, the following rules apply:

- The additional cards may be imprinted in either A's name or in the names of B and C.
- No liability for unauthorized use (by persons other than B and C), not even the $50, may be imposed on B or C since they are merely users and not "cardholders" as that term is defined in § 226.2 and used in § 226.12(b); of course, liability of up to $50 for unauthorized use of B's and C's cards may be imposed on A.
- Whether B and C may be held liable for their own use, or on the account generally, is a matter of state or other applicable law.

7. Issuance of non-credit cards. The issuance of an unsolicited device that is not, but may become, a credit card, is not prohibited provided:

- The device has some substantive purpose other than obtaining credit, such as access to non-credit services offered by the issuer;
- It cannot be used as a credit card when issued; and
- A credit capability will be added only on the recipient's request.

For example, the card issuer could send a check guarantee card on an unsolicited basis, but could not add a credit feature to that card without the consumer's specific request. The re-encoding of a debit card or other existing card that had no credit privileges when issued would be appropriate after the consumer has specifically requested a card with credit privileges. Similarly, the card issuer may add a credit feature, for example, by reprogramming the issuer's computer program or automated teller machines, or by a similar program adjustment.

8. Unsolicited issuance of PINs. A card issuer may issue personal identification numbers (PINs) to existing credit cardholders without a specific request from the cardholders, provided the PINs cannot be used alone to obtain credit. For example, the PINs may be necessary if consumers wish to use their existing credit cards at automated teller machines or at merchant locations with point-of-sale terminals that require PINs.

Paragraph 12(a)(2).

1. Renewal. "Renewal" generally contemplates the regular replacement of existing cards because of, for example, security reasons or new technology or systems. It also includes the re-issuance of cards that have been suspended temporarily, but does not include the opening of a new account after a previous account was closed.

2. Substitution—examples. "Substitution" encompasses the replacement of one card with another because the underlying account relationship has changed in some way—such as when the card issuer has:

- Changed its name.
- Changed the name of the card.
- Changed the credit or other features available on the account. For example, the original card could be used to make purchases and obtain cash advances at teller windows. The substitute card might be usable, in addition, for obtaining cash advances through automated teller machines. (If the substitute card constitutes an access device, as defined in Regulation E, then the Regulation E issuance rules would have to be followed.)
- Substituted a card user's name on the substitute card for the cardholder's name appearing on the original card.
- Changed the merchant base. However, the new card must be honored by at least one of the persons that honored the original card.

3. Substitution—successor card issuer. "Substitution" also occurs when a successor card issuer replaces the original card issuer (for example, when a new card issuer purchases the accounts of the original issuer and issues its own card to replace the original one). A permissible substitution exists even if the original issuer retains the existing receivables and the new card issuer acquires the right only to future receivables, provided use of the original card is cut off when use of the new card becomes possible.

4. Substitution—non-credit-card plan. A credit card that replaces a retailer's open-end credit plan not involving a credit card is not considered a substitute for the retailer's plan—even if the consumer used the retailer's plan. A credit card cannot be issued in these circumstances without a request or application.

5. One-for-one rule. An accepted card may be replaced by no more than one renewal or substitute card. For example, the card issuer may not replace a credit card permitting purchases and cash advances with two cards, one for the purchases and another for the cash advances.

6. One-for-one rule—exception. The regulation does not prohibit the card issuer from replacing a debit/credit card with a credit card and another card with only debit functions (or debit functions plus an associated overdraft capability), since the latter card could be issued on an unsolicited basis under Regulation E.

7. Methods of terminating replaced card. The card issuer need not physically retrieve the original card, provided the old card is voided in some way; for example:

- The issuer includes with the new card a notification that the existing card is no longer valid and should be destroyed immediately.
- The original card contained an expiration date.
- The card issuer, in order to preclude use of the card, reprograms computers or issues instructions to authorization centers.

8. Incomplete replacement. If a consumer has duplicate credit cards on the same account (Card A—one type of bank credit card, for example), the card issuer may not replace the duplicate cards with one Card A and one Card B (Card B—another type of bank credit card) unless the consumer requests Card B.

12(b) Liability of cardholder for unauthorized use.

1. Meaning of "cardholder." For purposes of this provision, "cardholder" includes any person (including organizations) to whom a credit card is issued for any purpose, including business. When a corporation is the cardholder, required disclosures should be provided to the corporation (as opposed to an employee user).

12(b)(1) Limitation on amount.

1. Meaning of "authority." Footnote 22 defines unauthorized use in terms of whether the user has "actual, implied, or apparent authority." Whether such authority exists must be determined under state or other applicable law.

2. Liability limits—dollar amounts. As a general rule, the cardholder's liability for a series of unauthorized uses cannot exceed either $50 or the value obtained through the unauthorized use before the care issuer is notified, whichever is less.

12(b)(2) Conditions of liability.

1. Issuer's option not to comply. A card issuer that chooses not to impose any liability on cardholders for unauthorized use need not comply with the disclosure and identification requirements discussed below.

Paragraph 12(b)(2)(ii).

1. Disclosure of liability and means of notifying issuer. The disclosures referred to in § 226.12(b)(2)(ii) may be given, for example, with the initial disclosures under § 226.6, on the credit card itself, or on periodic statements. They may be given at any time preceding the unauthorized use of the card.

Paragraph 12(b)(2)(iii).

1. Means of identifying cardholder or user. To fulfill the condition set forth in § 226.12(b)(2)(iii), the issuer must provide some method whereby the cardholder or the authorized user can be identified. This could include, for example, signature, photograph, or fingerprint on the card, or electronic or mechanical confirmation.

2. Identification by magnetic strip. Unless a magnetic strip (or similar device not readable without physical aids) must be used in conjunction with a secret code or the like, it would not constitute sufficient means of identification. Sufficient identification also does not exist if a "pool" or group card, issued to a corporation and signed by a corporate agent who will not be a user of the card, is intended to be used by another employee for whom no means of identification is provided.

3. Transactions not involving card. The cardholder may not be held liable under § 226.12(b) when the card itself (or some other sufficient means of identification of the cardholder) is not presented. Since the issuer has not provided a means to identify the user under these circumstances, the issuer has not fulfilled one of the conditions for imposing liability. For example, when merchandise is ordered by telephone by a person without authority to do so, using a credit card account number or other number only (which may be widely available), no liability may be imposed on the cardholder.

12(b)(3) Notification to card issuer.

1. How notice must be provided. Notice given in a normal business manner—for example, by mail, telephone, or personal visit—is effective even though it is not given to, or does not reach, some particular person within the issuer's organization. Notice also may be effective even though it is not given at the address or phone number disclosed by the card issuer under § 226.12(b)(2)(ii).

2. Who must provide notice. Notice of loss, theft, or possible unauthorized use need not be initiated by the cardholder. Notice is sufficient so long as it gives the "pertinent information" which would include the name or card number of the cardholder and an indication that unauthorized use has or may have occurred.

3. Relationship to § 226.13. The liability protections afforded to cardholders in § 226.12 do not depend upon the cardholder's following the error resolution procedures in § 226.13. For example, the written notification and time limit requirements of § 226.13 do not affect the section 226.12 protections.

12(b)(5) Business use of credit cards.

1. Agreement for higher liability for business use cards. The card issuer may not rely on § 226.12(b)(5) if the business is clearly not in a position to provide 10 or more cards to employees (for example, if the business has only 3 employees). On the other hand, the issuer need not monitor the personnel practices of the business to make sure that it has at least 10 employees at all times.

2. Unauthorized use by employee. The protection afforded to an employee against liability for unauthorized use in excess of the limits set in § 226.12(b) applies only to unauthorized use by someone other then the employee. If the employee uses the card in an unauthorized manner, the regulation sets no restriction on the employee's potential liability for such use.

12(c) Right of cardholder to assert claims or defenses against card issuer.

1. Relationship to § 226.13. The § 226.12(c) credit card "holder in due course" provision deals with the consumer's right to assert against the card issuer a claim or defense concerning property or services purchased with a credit card, if the merchant has been unwilling to resolve the dispute. Even though certain merchandise disputes, such as non-delivery of goods, may also constitute "billing errors" under § 226.13, that section operates independently of § 226.12(c). The cardholder whose asserted billing error involves undelivered goods may institute the error resolution procedures of § 226.13; but whether or not the cardholder has done so, the cardholder may assert claims or defenses under § 226.12(c). Conversely, the consumer may pay a disputed balance and thus have no further right to assert claims and defenses, but still may assert a billing error if notice of that billing error is given in the proper time and manner. An assertion that a particular transaction resulted from unauthorized use of the card could also be both a "defense" and a billing error.

2. Claims and defenses assertible. Section 226.12(c) merely preserves the consumer's right to assert against the card issuer any claims or defenses that can be asserted against the merchant. It does not determine what claims or defenses are valid as to the merchant; this determination must under be made under state or other applicable law.

12(c)(1) General rule.

1. Situations excluded and included. The consumer may assert claims or defenses only when the goods or services are "purchased with the credit card." This could include:

- Mail or telephone orders, if the purchase is charged to the credit card account.

But it would exclude:

- Use of a credit card to obtain a cash advance, even if the consumer then uses the money to purchase goods or services. Such a transaction would not involve "property or services purchased with the credit card."
- The purchase of goods or services by use of a check accessing an overdraft account and a credit card used solely for identification of the consumer. (On the other hand, if the credit card is used to make partial payment for the purchase and not merely for identification, the right to assert claims or defenses would apply to credit extended via the credit card, although not to the credit extended on the overdraft line.)
- Purchases made by use of a check guarantee card in conjunction with a cash advance check (or by cash advance checks alone). See footnote 24. A cash advance check is a check that, when written, does not draw on an asset account; instead, it is charged entirely to an open-end credit account.
- Purchases effected by use of either a check guarantee card or a debit card when used to draw on overdraft credit lines (see footnote 24). The debit card exemption applies whether the card accesses an asset account via point-of-sale terminals, automated teller machines, or in any other way, and whether the card qualifies as an "access device" under Regulation E or is only a paper-based debit card. If a card serves both as an ordinary credit card and also as check guarantee or debit card, a transaction will be subject to this rule on asserting claims and defenses when used as an ordinary credit card, but not when used as a check guarantee or debit card.

12(c)(2) Adverse credit reports prohibited.

1. Scope of prohibition. Although an amount in dispute may not be reported as delinquent until the matter is resolved:

- That amount may be reported as disputed.
- Nothing in this provision prohibits the card issuer from undertaking its normal collection activities for delinquent accounts.

12(c)(3) Limitations.

Paragraph 12(c)(3)(i).

1. Resolution with merchant. The consumer must have tried to resolve the dispute with the merchant. This does not require any special procedures or correspondence between them, and is a matter for factual determination in each case. The consumer is not required to seek satisfaction from the manufacturer of the goods involved. When the merchant is in bankruptcy proceedings, the consumer is not required to file a claim in those proceedings.

Paragraph 12(c)(3)(ii).

1. Geographic limitation. The question of where as transaction occurs (as in the case of mail or telephone orders, for example) is to be determined under state or other applicable law.

2. Merchant honoring card. The exceptions (stated in footnote 26) to the amount and geographic limitations do not apply if the merchant merely honors, or indicates through signs or advertising that it honors, a particular credit card.

12(d) Offsets by card issuer prohibited.

Paragraph 12(d)(1).

1. "Holds" on accounts. "Freezing" or placing a hold on funds in the cardholder's deposit account is the functional equivalent of an offset and would contravene the prohibition in § 226.12(d)(1), unless done in the context of one of the exceptions specified in § 226.12(d)(2). For example, if the terms of a security agreement permitted the card issuer to place a hold on the funds, the hold would not violate the offset prohibition. Similarly, if an order of a bankruptcy court required the card issuer to turn over deposit account funds to the trustee in bankruptcy, the issuer would not violate the regulation by placing a hold on the funds in order to comply with the court order.

2. Funds intended as deposits. If the consumer tenders funds as a deposit (to a checking account, for example), the card issuer may not apply the funds to repay indebtedness on the consumer's credit card account.

3. Types of indebtedness; overdraft accounts. The offset prohibition applies to any indebtedness arising from transactions under a credit card plan, including accrued finance charges and other charges on the account. The prohibition also applies to balances arising from transactions not using the credit card itself but taking place under plans that involve credit cards. For example, if the consumer writes a check that accesses an overdraft line of credit, the resulting indebtedness is subject to the offset prohibition since it is incurred through a credit card plan, even though the consumer did not use an associated check guarantee or debit card.

4. When prohibition applies in case of termination of account. The offset prohibition applies even after the card issuer terminates the cardholder's credit card privileges, if the indebtedness was incurred prior to termination. If the indebtedness was incurred after termination, the prohibition does not apply.

Paragraph 12(d)(2).

1. Security interest—limitations. In order to qualify for the exception stated in § 226.12(d)(2), a security interest must be affirmatively agreed to by the consumer, must be disclosed in the issuer's initial disclosures under § 226.6, and must be obtained and enforced only through procedures equally available to other creditors. For example, the consumer may offer a savings account (as an alternative to other personal property, such as an automobile) as security for credit card indebtedness. Another example of a permissible security interest in deposit account funds would be one granted by the consumer in return for an incentive offered by the issuer (for example, lower rates on the credit card account).

2. Security interest—after-acquired property. As used in § 226.12(d), the term "security interest" does not exclude (as it does for other Regulation Z purposes) interests in after-acquired property. Thus, a consensual security interest in deposit-account funds, including funds deposited after the granting of the security interest, would constitute a permissible exception to the prohibition on offsets.

3. Court order. If the card issuer obtains a judgment against the cardholder, and if State and other applicable law and the terms of the judgment do not so prohibit, the card issuer may offset the indebtedness against the cardholder's deposit account.

Paragraph 12(d)(3).

1. Automatic payment plans—scope of exception. With regard to automatic debit plans under § 226.12(d)(3), the following rules apply:

- The cardholder's authorization must be in writing and signed or initialed by the cardholder.
- The authorizing language need not appear directly above or next to the cardholder's signature or initials, provided it appears on the same document and that it clearly spells out the terms of the automatic debit plan.
- If the cardholder has the option to accept or reject the automatic debit feature (such option may be required under section 913 of the Electronic Fund Transfer Act), the fact that the option exists should be clearly indicated.

2. Automatic payment plans—additional exceptions. The following practices are not prohibited by § 226.12(d)(1):

- Automatically deducting charges for participation in a program of banking services (one aspect of which may be a credit card plan).
- Debiting the cardholder's deposit account on the cardholder's specific request rather than on an automatic periodic basis (for example, a cardholder might check a box on the credit card bill stub, requesting the issuer to debit the cardholder's account to pay that bill).

12(e) Prompt notification of returns and crediting of refunds.

Paragraph 12(e)(1).

1. Normal channels. The term "normal channels" refers to any network or interchange system used for the processing of the original charge slips (or equivalent information concerning the transaction).

Paragraph 12(e)(2).

1. Crediting account. The card issuer need not actually post the refund to the consumer's account within 3 business days after receiving the credit statement, provided that it credits the account as of a date within that time period.

Previous regulation: Section 226.13.

1981 changes: The issuance rules in § 226.12(a) make clear that cards may be sent to the person making the request and also to any other person for whom a card is requested, except that no liability for unauthorized use may be imposed on persons who are only authorized users.

The principal differences in § 226.12(b) about conditions of liability are as follows: the requirement that the cardholder be given a postage-paid, preaddressed card or envelope for notification of loss or theft has been deleted (corresponding to an amendment to the act); the required disclosures of maximum liability and of means of notification have been simplified; and the required provision of a means of identification has been changed in that the issuer now may provide a means to identify either the cardholder or the authorized user. Finally, anyone may provide the notification to the card issuer, not just the cardholder.

Section 226.12(d) on offsets clarifies that the offset prohibition does not apply to consensual security interests. The separate promptness standard which used to apply in addition to the 7-business-day and 3-business-day standards has been deleted from § 226.12(e) on prompt notification of returns. Section 226.12(f) now clarifies rules on clearing accounts.

Section 226.12(g), dealing with the relationship of the regulation to Regulation E (Electronic Fund Transfers), has been added.

Section 226.13—Billing Error Resolution

1. General prohibitions. Footnote 27 prohibits a creditor from responding to a consumer's billing error allegation by accelerating the debt or closing the account, and reflects protections authorized by section 161(d) of the Truth in Lending Act and section 701 of the Equal Credit Opportunity Act. The footnote also alerts creditors that failure to comply with the error resolution procedures may result in the forfeiture of disputed amounts as prescribed in section 161(e) of the act. (Any failure to comply may also be a violation subject to the liability provisions of section 130 of the act.)

2. Charges for error resolution. If a billing error occurred, whether as alleged or in a different amount or manner, the creditor may not impose a charge related to any aspect of the error resolution process (including charges for documentation or investigation) and must credit the consumer's account if such a charge was assessed pending resolution. Since the act grants the consumer error resolution rights, the creditor should avoid any chilling effect on the good faith assertion of errors that might result if charges are assessed when no billing error has occurred.

13(a) Definition of billing error.

1. Actual, implied, or apparent authority. Whether use of a credit card or open-end credit plan is authorized is determined by state or other applicable law.

Paragraph 13(a)(3).

1. Coverage. Section 226.13(a)(3) covers disputes about goods or services that are "not accepted" or "not delivered . . . as agreed"; for example:

- The appearance on a periodic statement of a purchase, when the consumer refused to take delivery of goods because they did not comply with the contract.
- Delivery of property or services different from that agreed upon.
- Delivery of the wrong quantity.
- Late delivery.
- Delivery to the wrong location.

Section 226.13(a)(3) does not apply to a dispute relating to the quality of property or services that the consumer accepts. Whether acceptance occurred is determined by state or other applicable law.

Paragraph 13(a)(5).

1. Computational errors. In periodic statements that are combined with other information, the error resolution procedures are triggered only if the consumer asserts a computational billing error in the credit-related portion of the periodic statement. For example:

- If a bank combines a periodic statement reflecting the consumer's credit card transactions with the consumer's monthly checking statement, a computational error in the checking account portion of the combined statement is not a billing error.

Paragraph 13(a)(6).

1. Documentation requests. A request for documentation such as receipts or sales slips, unaccompanied by an allegation of an error under § 226.13(a) or a request for additional clarification under § 226.13(a)(6), does not trigger the error resolution procedures. For example, a request for documentation merely for purposes such as tax preparation or recordkeeping does not trigger the error resolution procedures.

13(b) Billing error notice.

1. Withdrawal. The consumer's withdrawal of a billing error notice may be oral or written.

Paragraph 13(b)(1).

1. Failure to send periodic statement—timing. If the creditor has failed to send a periodic statement, the 60-day period runs from the time the statement should have been sent. Once the statement is provided, the consumer has another 60 days to assert any billing errors reflected on it.

2. Failure to reflect credit—timing. If the periodic statement fails to reflect a credit to the account, the 60-day period runs from transmittal of the statement on which the credit should have appeared.

3. Transmittal. If a consumer has arranged for periodic statements to be held at the financial institution until called for, the statement is "transmitted" when it is first made available to the consumer.

Paragraph 13(b)(2).

1. Identity of the consumer. The billing error notice need not specify both the name and the account number if the information supplied enables the creditor to identify the consumer's name and account.

13(c) Time for resolution; general procedures.

1. Temporary or provisional corrections. A creditor may temporarily correct the consumer's account in response to a billing error notice, but is not excused from complying with the remaining error resolution procedures within the time limits for resolution.

2. Correction without investigation. A creditor may correct a billing error in the manner and amount asserted by the consumer without the investigation or the determination normally required. The creditor must comply, however, with all other applicable provisions. If a creditor follows this procedure, no presumption is created that a billing error occurred.

Paragraph 13(c)(2).

1. Time for resolution. The phrase "two complete billing cycles" means 2 actual billing cycles occurring after receipt of the billing error notice, not a measure of time equal to 2 billing cycles. For example, if a creditor on a monthly billing cycle receives a billing error notice mid-cycle, it has the remainder of that cycle plus the next 2 full billing cycles to resolve the error.

13(d) Rules pending resolution.

1. Disputed amount. "Disputed amount" is the dollar amount alleged by the consumer to be in error. When the allegation concerns the description or identification of the transaction (such as the date or the seller's name) rather than a dollar amount, the disputed amount is the amount of the transaction or charge that corresponds to the disputed transaction identification. If the consumer alleges a failure to send a periodic statement under § 226.13(a)(7),the disputed amount is the entire balance owing.

13(d)(1) Consumer's right to withhold disputed amount; collection action prohibited.

1. Prohibited collection actions. During the error resolution period, the creditor is prohibited from trying to collect the disputed amount from the consumer. Prohibited collection actions include, for example, instituting court action, taking a lien, or instituting attachment proceedings.

2. Right to withhold payment. If the creditor reflects any disputed amount or related finance or other charges on the periodic statement, and is therefore required to make the disclosure under footnote 30, the creditor may comply with that disclosure requirement by indicating that payment of any disputed amount is not required pending resolution. Making a disclosure that only refers to the disputed amount would, of course, in no way affect the consumer's right under § 226.13(d)(1) to withhold related finance and other charges. The disclosure under footnote 30 need not appear in any specific place on the periodic statement, need not state the specific amount that the consumer may withhold, and may be preprinted on the periodic statement.

3. Imposition of additional charges on undisputed amounts. The consumer's withholding of a disputed amount from the total bill cannot subject undisputed balances (including new purchases or cash advances made during the present or subsequent cycles) to the imposition of finance or other charges. For example, if on an account with a free-ride period (that is, an account in which paying the new balance in full allows the consumer to avoid the imposition of additional finance charges), a consumer disputes a $2 item out of a total bill of $300 and pays $298 within the free-ride period, the consumer would not lose the free-ride as to any undisputed amounts, even if the creditor determines later that no billing error occurred. Furthermore, finance or other charges may not be imposed on any new purchases or advances that, absent the unpaid disputed balance, would not have finance or other charges imposed on them. Finance or other charges that would have been incurred even if the consumer had paid the disputed amount would not be affected.

4. Automatic payment plans—coverage. The coverage of this provision is limited to the card issuer's intra-institutional payment plans. It does not apply to:

- Inter-institutional payment plans that permit a cardholder to pay automatically any credit card indebtedness from an asset account not held by the card issuer receiving payment.
- Intra-institutional automatic payment plans offered by financial institutions that are not credit card issuers.

5. Automatic payment plans—time of notice. While the card issuer does not have to restore or prevent the debiting of a disputed amount if the billing error notice arrives after the 3-business-day cut-off, the card issuer must, however, prevent the automatic debit of any part of the disputed amount that is still outstanding and unresolved at the time of the next scheduled debit date.

13(d)(2) Adverse credit reports prohibited.

1. Report of dispute. Although the creditor must not issue an adverse credit report because the consumer fails to pay the disputed amount or any related charges, the creditor may report that the amount or the account is in dispute. Also, the creditor may report the account as delinquent if undisputed amounts remain unpaid.

2. "Person." During the error resolution period, the creditor is prohibited from making an adverse credit report about the disputed amount to any person—including employers, insurance companies, other creditors, and credit bureaus.

3. Creditor's agent. Whether an agency relationship exists between a creditor and an issuer of an adverse credit report is determined by State or other applicable law.

13(e) Procedures if billing error occurred as asserted.

1. Correction of error. The phrase "as applicable" means that the necessary corrections vary with the type of billing error that occurred. For example, a misidentified transaction (or a transaction that is identified by one of the alternative methods in § 226.8) is cured by properly identifying the transaction and crediting related finance and any other charges imposed. The creditor is not required to cancel the amount of the underlying obligation incurred by the consumer.

2. Form of correction notice. The written correction notice may take a variety of forms. It may be sent separately, or it may be included on or with a periodic statement that is mailed within the time for resolution. If the periodic statement is used, the amount of the billing error must be specifically identified.

If a separate billing error correction notice is provided, the accompanying or subsequent periodic statement reflecting the corrected amount may simply identify it as "credit."

13(f) Procedures if different billing error or no billing error occurred.

1. Different billing error. Examples of a "different billing error" include:

- Differences in the amount of an error (for example, the customer asserts a $55.00 error but the error was only $53.00).
- Differences in other particulars asserted by the consumer (such as when a consumer asserts that a particular transaction never occurred, but the creditor determines that only the seller's name was disclosed incorrectly).

2. Form of creditor's explanation. The written explanation (which also may notify the consumer of corrections to the account) may take a variety of forms. It may be sent separately, or it may be included on or with a periodic statement that is mailed within the time for resolution. If the creditor uses the periodic statement for the explanation and correction(s), the corrections must be specifically identified. If a separate explanation, including the correction notice, is provided, the enclosed or subsequent periodic statement reflecting the corrected amount may simply identify it as a "credit." The explanation may be combined with the creditor's notice to the consumer of amounts still owing, which is required under § 226.13(g)(1), provided it is sent within the time limit for resolution. (See Commentary to § 226.13(e).)

13(g) Creditor's rights and duties after resolution.

Paragraph 13(g)(1).

1. Amounts owed by consumer. Amounts the consumer still owes may include both minimum periodic payments and related finance and other charges that accrued during the resolution period. As explained in the commentary to § 226.13(d)(1), even if the creditor later determines that no billing error occurred, the creditor may not include finance or other charges that are imposed on undisputed balances solely as a result of a consumer's withholding payment of a disputed amount.

2. Time of notice. The creditor need not send the notice of amount owed within the time period for resolution, although it is under a duty to send the notice promptly after resolution of the alleged error. If the creditor combines the notice of the amount owed with the explanation required under § 226.13(f)(1), the combined notice must be provided within the time limit for resolution.

Paragraph 13(g)(2).

1. The creditor need not allow any free-ride period disclosed under §§ 226.6(a)(1) and 226.7(j) to pay the amount due under § 226.13(g)(1) if no error occurred and the consumer was not entitled to a free-ride period at the time the consumer asserted the error.

Paragraph 13(g)(3).

1. Time for payment. The consumer has a minimum of 10 days to pay (measured from the time the consumer could reasonably be expected to have received notice of the amount owed) before the creditor may issue an adverse credit report; if an initially disclosed free-ride period allows the consumer a longer time in which to pay, the consumer has the benefit of that longer period.

Paragraph 13(g)(4).

1. Credit reporting. Under § 226.13(g)(4)(i) and (iii) the creditor's additional credit reporting responsibilities must be accomplished promptly. The creditor need not establish costly procedures to fulfill this requirement. For example, a creditor that reports to a credit bureau on scheduled updates need not transmit corrective information by an unscheduled computer or magnetic tape; it may provide the credit bureau with the correct information by letter or other commercially reasonable means when using the scheduled update would not be "prompt." The creditor is not responsible for ensuring that the credit bureau corrects its information immediately.

2. Adverse report to credit bureau. If a creditor made an adverse report to a credit bureau that disseminated the information to other creditors, the creditor fulfills its § 226.13(g)(4)(ii) obligations by providing the consumer with the name and address of the credit bureau.

13(i) Relation to Electronic Fund Transfer Act and Regulation E.

1. Coverage. Credit extended directly from a non-overdraft credit line is governed solely by Regulation Z, even though a combined credit card/access device is used to obtain the extension.

2. Incidental credit under agreement. Credit extended incident to an electronic fund transfer under an agreement between the consumer and the financial institution is governed by § 226.13(i), which provides that certain error resolution procedures in both this regulation and Regulation E apply. Incidental credit that is not extended under an agreement between the consumer and the financial institution is governed solely by the error resolution procedures in Regulation E. For example:

- Credit inadvertently extended incident to an electronic fund transfer is governed solely by the Regulation E error resolution procedures, if the bank and the consumer do not have an agreement to extend credit when the consumer's account is overdrawn.

3. Application to debit/credit transactions—examples. If a consumer withdraws money at an automated teller machine and activates an overdraft credit feature on the checking account:

- An error asserted with respect to the transaction is subject, for error resolution purposes, to the applicable Regulation E provisions (such as timing and notice) for the entire transaction.
- The creditor need not provisionally credit the consumer's account, under § 205.11(c)(2)(i) of Regulation E, for any portion of the unpaid extension of credit.
- The creditor must credit the consumer's account under § 205.11(e) with any finance or other charges incurred as a result of the alleged error.
- The provisions of § 226.13 (d) and (g) apply only to the credit portion of the transaction.

Other regulations: Regulation E (12 CFR 205).

Previous regulation: Sections 226.2(j) and (cc), and 226.14.

1981 changes: Section 226.13 reflects several substantive changes from the previous regulation and a complete restructuring of the error resolution provisions. The new organization, for example, arranges the creditor's responsibilities in chronological sequence.

Section 226.13(a)(7) implements amended § 161(b) of the act, and provides that the creditor's failure to send a periodic statement to the consumer's current address is a billing error, unless the creditor received written notice of the address change fewer than 20 days (instead of 10 days) before the end of the billing cycle.

Several provisions regarding the creditor's duties after a billing error is alleged have been revised. The previous regulation immunized a creditor from liability for inadvertently taking collection action or making an adverse credit report within 2 days after receiving a billing error notice; these provisions are deleted from the revised regulation. The revised regulation no longer requires placement "on the face" of the periodic statment of the disclosure about payment of disputed amounts.

The revised regulation changes the rule in the previous regulation that a card issuer must prevent or restore an automatic debit of a disputed amount if it receives a billing error notice within 16 days after transmitting the periodic statement that reflects the alleged error. Under the revised regulation, the card issuer must prevent an automatic debit if it receives a billing error notice up to 3 days before the scheduled payment date (provided that the notice is received within the 60 days for the consumer to assert the error).

Section 226.14—Determination of Annual Percentage Rate

14(a) General rule.

1. Tolerance. The tolerance of ⅛ of 1 percentage point above or below the annual percentage rate applies to any required disclosure of the annual percentage rate. The disclosure of the annual percentage rate is required in §§ 226.6, 226.7, 226.9, 226.15, 226.16, and 226.26.

2. Rounding. The regulation does not require that the annual percentage rate be calculated to any particular number of decimal places; rounding is permissible within the ⅛ of 1 percent tolerance. For example, an exact annual percentage rate of 14.33333% may be stated as 14.33% or as 14.3%, or even as 14⅓%; but it could not be stated as 14.2% or 14%, since each varies by more than the permitted tolerance.

3. Periodic rates. No explicit tolerance exists for any periodic rate as such; a disclosed periodic rate may vary from precise accuracy (for example, due to rounding) only to the extent that its annualized equivalent is within the tolerance permitted by § 226.14(a). Further, a periodic rate need not be calculated to any particular number of decimal places.

4. Finance charges. The regulation does not prohibit creditors from assessing finance charges on balances that include prior, unpaid finance charges; state or other applicable law may do so, however.

5. Good faith reliance on faulty calculation tools. Footnote 31a absolves a creditor of liability for an error in the annual percentage rate or finance charge that resulted from a corresponding error in a calculation tool used in good faith by the creditor. Whether or not the creditor's use of the tool was in good faith must be determined on a case-by-case basis, but the creditor must in any case have taken reasonable steps to verify the accuracy of the tool, including any instructions, before using it. Generally, the footnote is available only for errors directly attributable to the calculation tool itself, including software programs; it is not intended to absolve a creditor of liability for its own errors, or for errors arising from improper use of the tool, from incorrect data entry, or from misapplication of the law.

14(b) Annual percentage rate for initial disclosures and for advertising purposes.

1. Corresponding annual percentage rate computation. For initial disclosures (under § 226.6) and for advertising (under § 226.16), the annual percentage rate is determined by multiplying the periodic rate by the number of periods in the year. This computation reflects the fact that, in such disclosures, the rate (known as the corresponding annual percentage rate) is prospective and does not involve any particular finance charge or periodic balance. This computation also is used to determine any annual percentage rate for oral disclosures under § 226.26(a).

14(c) Annual percentage rate for periodic statements.

1. General rule. Section 226.14(c) requires disclosure of the corresponding annual percentage rate for each periodic rate (under § 226.7(d)). It is figured by multiplying each periodic rate by the number of periods per year. This disclosure is like that provided on the initial disclosure statement. The periodic statement also must reflect (under § 226.7(g)) the annualized equivalent of the rate actually applied during a particular cycle (the historical rate); this rate may differ from the corresponding annual percentage rate because of the inclusion of fixed, minimum, or transaction charges. Sections 226.14 (c)(1) through (c)(4) state the computation rules for the historical rate.

2. Periodic rates. Section 226.14(c)(1) applies if the only finance charge imposed is due to the application of a periodic rate to a balance. The creditor may compute the annual percentage rate either:

- By multiplying each periodic rate by the number of periods in the year; or
- By the "quotient" method. This method refers to a composite annual percentage rate when different periodic rates apply to different balances. For example, a particular plan may involve a periodic rate of 1½% on balances up to $500, and 1% on balances over $500. If, in a given cycle, the consumer has a balance of $800, the finance charge would consist of $7.50 (500×.015) plus $3.00 (300×.01), for a total finance charge of $10.50. The annual percentage rate for this period may be disclosed either as 18% on $500 and 12% on $300, or as 15.75% on a balance of $800 (the quotient of $10.50 divided by $800, multiplied by 12).

3. Charges not based on periodic rates. Section 226.14(c)(2) applies if the finance charge imposed includes a charge not due to the application of a periodic rate (other than a charge relating to a specific transaction). For example, if the creditor imposes a minimum $1 finance charge on all balances below $50, and the consumer's balance was $40 in a particular cycle, the creditor would disclose an annual percentage rate of 30% (1/40×12).

4. No balance. Footnote 32 to § 226.14(c)(2) would apply not only when minimum charges are imposed on an account with no balance, but also to a plan in which a periodic rate is applied to advances from the date of the transaction. For example, if on May 19 the consumer pays the new balance in full from a statement dated May 1, and has no further transactions reflected on the June 1 statement, that statement would reflect a finance charge with no account balance.

5. Transaction charges. Section 226.14(c)(3) transaction charges include, for example:

- A loan fee of $10 imposed on a particular advance.
- A charge of 3% of the amount of each transaction.

The reference to avoiding duplication in the computation requires that the amounts of transactions on which transaction charges were imposed not be included both in the amount of total balances and in the "other amounts on which a finance charge was imposed" figure. For further explanation and examples of how to determine the components of this formula, see Appendix F.

6. Daily rate with specific transaction charge. Section 226.14(c)(3) sets forth an acceptable method for calculating the annual percentage rate if the finance charge results from a charge relating to a specific transaction and the application of a daily periodic rate. This section includes the requirement that the creditor follow the rules in Appendix F in calculating the annual percentage rate, especially footnote 1 to Appendix F which addresses the daily rate/transaction charge situation by providing that the "average of daily balances" shall be used instead of the "sum of the balances."

7. Charges related to opening account. Footnote 33 is applicable to § 226.14(c)(2) and (c)(3). The charges involved here do not relate to a specific transaction or to activity on the account, but relate solely to the opening of the account. Inclusion of these charges in the annual percentage rate calculation results in significant distortions of the annual percentage rate and delivery of a possibly misleading disclosure to consumers. The rule in footnote 33 applies even if the loan fee, points, or similar charges are billed on a subsequent periodic statement or withheld from the proceeds of the first advance on the account.

8. Classification of charges. If the finance charge includes a charge not due to the application of a periodic rate, the creditor must determine the proper annual percentage rate computation method according to the type of charge imposed. If the charge is tied to a specific transaction (for example, 3% of the amount of each transaction), then the method in § 226.14(c)(3) must be used. If a fixed or minimum charge is applied, that is, one not tied to any specific transaction, then the formula in § 226.14(c)(2) is appropriate.

9. Small finance charges. Section 226.14(c)(4) gives the creditor an alternative to § 226.14(c)(2) and (c)(3) if small finance charges (50 cents or less) are involved; that is, if the finance charge includes minimum or fixed fees not due to the application of a periodic rate and the total finance charge for the cycle does not exceed 50 cents. For example, while a monthly activity fee of 50 cents on a balance of $20 would produce an annual percentage rate of 30 percent under the rule in § 226.14(c)(2), the creditor may disclose an annual percentage rate of 18 percent if the periodic rate generally applicable to all balances is 1½ percent per month. This option is consistent with the provision in footnote 11 to §§ 226.6 and 226.7 permitting the creditor to disregard the effect of minimum charges in disclosing the ranges of balances to which periodic rates apply.

14(d) Calculations where daily periodic rate applied.

1. Quotient Method. Section 226.14(d) addresses use of a daily periodic rate(s) to determine some or all of the finance charge and use of the quotient method to determine the annual percentage rate. Since the quotient formula in § 226.14(c)(1)(ii) does not work when a daily rate is being applied to a series of daily balances, § 226.14(d) gives the creditor 2 alternative ways to figure the annual percentage rate—either of which satisfies the requirement in § 226.7(g).

2. Daily rate with specific transaction charge. If the finance charge results from a charge relating to a specific transaction and the application of a daily periodic rate, see comment 14(c)-6 for guidance on an appropriate calculation method.

Section 226.15—Right of Rescission

1. Transactions not covered. Credit extensions that are not subject to the regulation are not covered by § 226.15 even if the customer's principal dwelling is the collateral securing the credit. For this purpose, "credit extensions" also would include the occurrences listed in Comment 15(a)(1)-1. For example, the right of rescission does not apply to the opening of a business-purpose credit line, even though the loan is secured by the customer's principal dwelling.

15(a) Consumer's right to rescind.

Paragraph 15(a)(1).

1. Occurrences subject to right. Under an open-end credit plan secured by the consumer's principal dwelling, the right of rescission generally arises with each of the following occurrences:

- Opening the account.
- Each credit extension.
- Increasing the credit limit.
- Adding to an existing account a security interest in the consumer's principal dwelling.
- Increasing the dollar amount of the security interest taken in the dwelling to secure the plan. For example, a consumer may open an account with a $10,000 credit limit, $5,000 of which is initially secured by the consumer's principal dwelling. The consumer has the right to rescind at that time and (except as noted in § 226.15(a)(1)(ii)) with each extension on the account. Later, if the creditor decides that it wants the credit line fully secured, and increases the amount of its interest in the consumer's dwelling, the consumer has the right to rescind the increase.

2. Exceptions. Although the consumer generally has the right to rescind with each transaction on the account, section 125(e) of the Act provides an exception: the creditor need not provide the right to rescind at the time of each credit extension made under an open-end credit plan secured by the consumer's principal dwelling to the extent that the credit extended is in accordance with a previously established credit limit for the plan. This limited rescission option is available whether or not the plan existed prior to the effective date of the Act.

3. Security interest arising from transaction. In order for the right of rescission to apply, the security interest must be retained as part of the credit transaction. For example:

- A security interest that is acquired by a contractor who is also extending the credit in the transaction.
- A mechanic's or materialman's lien that is retained by a subcontractor or supplier of a contractor-creditor, even when the latter has waived its own security interest in the consumer's home.

The security interest is not part of the credit transaction, and therefore the transaction is not subject to the right of rescission when, for example:

- A mechanic's or materialman's lien is obtained by a contractor who is not a party to the credit transaction but merely is paid with the proceeds of the consumer's cash advance.
- All security interests that may arise in connection with the credit transaction are validly waived.
- The creditor obtains a lien and completion bond that in effect satisfies all liens against the consumer's principal dwelling as a result of the credit transaction.

Although liens arising by operation of law are not considered security interests for purposes of disclosure under § 226.2, that section specifically includes them in the definition for purposes of the right of rescission. Thus, even though an interest in the consumer's principal dwelling is not a required disclosure under § 226.6(c), it may still give rise to the right of rescission.

4. Consumer. To be a consumer within the meaning of § 226.2, that person must at least have an ownership interest in the dwelling that is encumbered by the creditor's security interest, although that person need not be a signatory to the credit agreement. For example, if only one spouse enters into a secured plan, the other spouse is a consumer if the ownership interest of that spouse is subject to the security interest.

5. Principal dwelling. A consumer can only have one principal dwelling at a time. A vacation or other second home would not be a principal dwelling. A transaction secured by a second home (such as a vacation home) that is not currently being used as the consumer's principal dwelling is not rescindable, even if the consumer intends to reside there in the future. When a consumer buys or builds a new dwelling that will become the consumer's principal dwelling within one year or upon completion of construction, the new dwelling is considered the principal dwelling when it secures the open-end credit line. Dwelling, as defined in § 226.2, includes structures that are classified as personalty under state law. For example, a transaction secured by a mobile home, trailer, or houseboat used as the consumer's principal dwelling may be rescindable.

6. Special rule for principal dwelling. When the consumer is acquiring or constructing a new principal dwelling, any credit plan or extension secured by the equity in the consumer's current principal dwelling (for example, an advance to be used as a bridge loan) is still subject to the right of rescission.

Paragraph 15(a)(2).

1. Consumer's exercise of right. The consumer must exercise the right of rescission in writing, but not necessarily on the notice supplied under § 226.15(b). Whatever the means of sending the notification of rescission—mail, telegram, or other written means—the time period for the creditor's performance under § 226.15(d)(2) does not begin to run until the notification has been received. The creditor may designate an agent to receive the notification so long as the agent's name and address appear on the notice provided to the consumer under § 226.15(b).

Paragraph 15 (a)(3).

1. Rescission period. the period within which the consumer may exercise the right to rescind runs for 3 business days from the last of 3 events:

- The occurrence that gives rise to the right of rescission.
- Delivery of all material disclosures that are relevant to the plan.
- Delivery to the consumer of the required rescission notice.

For example, an account is opened on Friday, June 1, and the disclosures and notice of the right to rescind were given on Thursday, May 31; the rescission period will expire at midnight of the third business day after June 1—that is, Tuesday June 5. In another example, if the disclosures are given and the account is opened on Friday, June 1, and the rescission notice is given on Monday, June 4, the rescission period expires at midnight of the third business day after June 4—that is Thursday, June 7. The consumer must place the rescission notice in the mail, file it for telegraphic transmission, or deliver it to the creditor's place of business within that period in order to exercise the right.

2. Material disclosures. Footnote 36 sets forth the material disclosures that must be provided before the rescission period can begin to run. The creditor must provide sufficient information to satisfy the requirements of § 226.6 for these disclosures. A creditor may satisfy this requirement by giving an initial disclosure statement that complies with the regulation. Failure to give the other required initial disclosures (such as the billing rights statement) does not prevent the running of the rescission period, although that failure may result in civil liability or administrative sanctions.

3. Material disclosures—variable rate program. For a variable rate program, the material disclosures also include the disclosures listed in footnote 12 to § 226.6(a)(2): the circumstances under which the rate may increase; the limitations on the increase; and the effect of an increase.

4. Unexpired right of rescission. When the creditor has failed to take the action necessary to start the three-day rescission period running the right to rescind automatically lapses on the occurrence of the earliest of the following three events:

- The expiration of three years after the occurrence giving rise to the right of rescission
- Transfer of all the consumer's interest in the property
- Sale of the consumer's interest in the property, including a transaction in which the consumer sells the dwelling and takes back a purchase money note and mortgage or retains legal title through a device such as an installment sale contract

Transfer of all the consumer's interest includes such transfers as bequests and gifts. A sale or transfer of the property need not be voluntary to terminate the right to rescind. For example, a foreclosure sale would terminate an unexpired right to rescind. As provided in section 125 of the act, the three-year limit may be extended by an administrative proceeding to enforce the provisions of § 226.15. A partial transfer of the consumer's interest, such as a transfer bestowing co-ownership on a spouse, does not terminate the right of rescission.

Paragraph 15(a)(4).

1. Joint owners. When more than one consumer has the right to rescind a transaction, any one of them may exercise that right and cancel the transaction on behalf of all. For example, if both a husband and wife have the right to rescind a transaction, either spouse acting alone may exercise the right and both are bound by the rescission.

15(b) Notice of right to rescind.

1. Who receives notice. Each consumer entitled to rescind must be given:

- Two copies of the rescission notice.
- The material disclosures.

In a transaction involving joint owners, both of the whom are entitled to rescind, both must receive the notice of the right to rescind and disclosures. For example, if both spouses are entitled to rescind a transaction, each must receive 2 copies of the rescission notice and one copy of the disclosures.

2. Format. The rescission notice may be physically separated from the material disclosures or combined with the material disclosures, so long as the information required to be included on the notice is set forth in a clear and conspicuous manner. See the model notices in Appendix G.

3. Content. The notice must include all of the information outlined in § 226.15(b)(1) through (5). The requirement in § 226.15(b) that the transaction or occurrence be identified may be met by providing the date of the transaction or occurrence. The notice may include additional information related to the required information, such as:

- A description of the property subject to the security interest.
- A statement that joint owners may have the right to rescind and that a rescission by one is effective for all.
- The name and address of an agent of the creditor to receive notice of rescission.

4. Time of providing notice. The notice required by § 226.15(b) need not be given before the occurrence giving rise to the right of rescission. The creditor may deliver the notice after the occurrence, but the rescission period will not begin to run until the notice is given. For example, if the creditor provides the notice on May 15, but disclosures were given and the credit limit was raised on May 10, the 3-business-day rescission period will run from May 15.

15(c) Delay of creditor's performance.

1. General rule. Until the rescission period has expired and the creditor is reasonably satisfied that the consumer has not rescinded, the creditor must not, either directly or through a third party:

- Disburse advances to the consumer.
- Begin performing services for the consumer.
- Deliver materials to the consumer.

2. Escrow. The creditor may disburse advances during the rescission period in a valid escrow arrangement. The creditor may not, however, appoint the consumer as "trustee" or "escrow agent" and distribute funds to the consumer in that capacity during the delay period.

3. Permissible actions. Section 226.15(c) does not prevent the creditor from taking other steps during the delay, short of beginning actual performance. The creditor may, for example:

- Prepare the cash advance check.
- Perfect the security interest.
- Accrue finance charges during the delay period.

4. Performance by third party. The creditor is relieved from liability for failure to delay performance if a third party with no knowledge that the rescission right has been activated provides materials or services, as long as any debt incurred for materials or services obtained by the consumer during the rescission period is not secured by the security interest in the consumer's dwelling. For example, if a consumer uses a bank credit card to purchase materials from a merchant in an amount below the floor limit, the merchant might not contact the card issuer for authorization and therefore would not know that materials should not be provided.

5. Delay beyond rescission period. The creditor must wait until it is reasonably satisfied that the consumer has not rescinded. For example, the creditor may satisfy itself by doing one of the following:

- Waiting a reasonable time after expiration of the rescission period to allow for delivery of a mailed notice.
- Obtaining a written statement from the consumer that the right has not been exercised.

When more than one consumer has the right to rescind, the creditor cannot reasonably rely on the assurance of only one consumer, because other consumers may exercise the right.

15(d) Effects of rescission.

Paragraph 15(d)(1).

1. Termination of security interest. Any security interest giving rise to the right of rescission becomes void when the consumer exercises the right of rescission. The security interest is automatically negated, regardless of its status and whether or not it was recorded or perfected. Under § 226.15(d)(2), however, the creditor must take any action necessary to reflect the fact that the security interest no longer exists.

2. Extent of termination. The creditor's security interest is void to the extent that it is related to the occurrence giving rise to the right of rescission. For example, upon rescission:

- If the consumer's right to rescind is activated by the opening of a plan, any security interest in the principal dwelling is void.
- If the right arises due to an increase in the credit limit, the security interest is void as to the amount of credit extensions over the prior limit, but the security interest in amounts up to the original credit limit is unaffected.
- If the right arises with each individual credit extension, then the interest is void as to that extension, and other extensions are unaffected.

Paragraph 15(d)(2).

1. Refunds to consumer. The consumer cannot be required to pay any amount in the form of money or property either to the creditor or to a third party as part of the occurrence subject to the right of rescission. Any amounts of this nature already paid by the consumer must be refunded. "Any amount" includes finance charges already accrued, as well as other charges such as application and commitment fees or fees for a title search or appraisal, whether paid to the creditor, paid directly to a third party, or passed on from the creditor to the third party. It is irrelevant that these amounts may not represent profit to the creditor. For example:

- If the occurrence is the opening of the plan, the creditor must return any membership or application fee paid.
- If the occurrence is the increase in a credit limit or the addition of a security interest, the creditor must return any fee imposed for a new credit report or filing fees.
- If the occurrence is a credit extension, the creditors must return fees such as application, title, and appraisal or survey fees, as well as any finance charges related to the credit extension.

2. Amounts not refundable to consumer. Creditors need not return any money given by the consumer to a third party outside of the occurrence, such as costs incurred for a building permit or for a zoning variance. Similarly, the term "any amount" does not apply to money or property given by the creditor to the consumer; those amounts must be tendered by the consumer to the creditor under § 226.15(d)(3).

3. Reflection of security interest termination. The creditor must take whatever steps are necessary to indicate that the security interest is terminated. Those steps include the cancellation of documents creating the security interest, and the filing of release or termination statements in the public record. In a transaction involving subcontractors or suppliers that also hold security interests related to the occurrence rescinded by the consumer, the creditor must insure that the termination of their security interests is also reflected. The 20-day period for the creditor's action refers to the time within which the creditor must begin the process. It does not require all necessary steps to have been completed within that time, but the creditor is responsible for seeing the process through to completion.

Paragraph 15(d)(3).

1. Property exchange. Once the creditor has fulfilled its obligation under § 226.15(d)(2), the consumer must tender to the creditor any property or money the creditor has already delivered to the consumer. At the consumer's option, property may be tendered at the location of the property. For example, if fixtures or furniture have been delivered to the consumer's home, the consumer may tender them to the creditor by making them available for pick-up at the home, rather than physically returning them to the creditor's premises. Money already given to the consumer must be tendered at the creditor's place of business. For purpose of property exchange, the following additional rules apply:

- A cash advance is considered money for purposes of this section even if the creditor knows what the consumer intends to purchase with the money.
- In a 3-party open-end credit plan (that is, if the creditor and seller are not the same or related persons), extensions by the creditor that are used by the consumer for purchases from third-party sellers are considered to be the same as cash advances for purposes of tendering value to the creditor, even though the transaction is a purchase for other purposes under the regulation. For example, if a consumer exercises the unexpired right to rescind after using a 3-party credit card for one year, the consumer would tender the amount of the purchase price for the items charged to the account, rather than tendering the items themselves to the creditor.

2. Reasonable value. If returning the property would be extremely burdensome to the consumer, the consumer may offer the creditor its reasonable value rather than returning the property itself. For example, if building materials have already been incorporated into the consumer's dwelling, the consumer may pay their reasonable value.

Paragraph 15(d)(4).

1. Modifications. The procedures outlined in § 226.15(d)(2) and (d)(3) may be modified by a court. For example, when a consumer is in bankruptcy proceedings and prohibited from returning anything to the creditor, or when the equities dictate, a modification might be made.

15(e) Consumer's waiver of right to rescind.

1. Need for waiver. To waive the right to rescind, the consumer must have a bona fide personal financial emergency that must be met before the end of the rescission period. The existence of the consumer's waiver will not, of itself, automatically insulate the creditor from liability for failing to provide the right of rescission.

2. Procedure. To waive or modify the right to rescind, the consumer must give a written statement that specifically waives or modifies the right, and also includes a brief description of the emergency. Each consumer entitled to rescind must sign the waiver statement. In a transaction involving multiple consumers, such as a husband and wife using their home as collateral, the waiver must bear the signatures of both spouses.

15(f) Exempt transactions.

1. Residential mortgage transaction. Although residential mortgage transactions would seldom be made on bona fide open-end credit plans (under which repeated transactions must be reasonably contemplated), an advance on an open-end plan could be for a downpayment for the purchase of a dwelling that would then secure the remainder of the line. In such a case, only the particular advance for the downpayment would be exempt from the rescission right.

2. State creditors. Cities and other political subdivisions of states acting as creditors are not exempt from § 226.15.

3. Spreader clause. When the creditor holds a mortgage or deed of trust on the consumer's principal dwelling and that mortgage or deed of trust contains a "spreader clause" (also known as a "dragnet" or cross-collateralization clause), subsequent occurrences such as the opening of a plan or individual credit extensions are subject to the right of rescission to the same degree as if the security interest were taken directly to secure the open-end plan, unless the creditor effectively waives its security interest under the spreader clause with respect to the subsequent open-end credit extensions.

Other sections: Section 226.2 and Appendix G.

Previous regulation: Section 226.9.

1981 Changes: Section 226.15 reflects the statutory amendments of 1980, providing for a limited right of rescission when individual credit extensions are made in accordance with a previously established credit limit for an open-end credit plan. The 1980 amendments provided that this limited rescission right be available for a three-year trial period. However, Pub. L. 98-479 now permanently exempts such individual credit extensions from the right of rescission.

The right to rescind applies not only to real property used as the consumer's principal dwelling, but to personal property as well. The regulation provides no specific text or format for the rescission notice.

When a consumer exercises the right to rescind, the creditor now has 20 days to return a consumer's money or property and take the necessary action to terminate the security interest. The creditor has 20 days to take possession of the money or property after the consumer's tender before the consumer may keep it without further obligation.

Under the revised regulation, the waiver provision has been relaxed. The lien status of the mortgage is irrelevant for purposes of the residential mortgage transaction exemption. The exemption for agricultural loans from the right to rescind has been deleted.

Section 226.16—Advertising

1. Clear and conspicuous standard. Section 226.16 is subject to the general "clear and conspicuous" standard for Subpart B (see § 226.5(a)(1)) but prescribes no specific rules for the format of the necessary disclosures. The credit terms need not be printed in a certain type size nor need they appear in any particular place in the advertisement.

2. Expressing the annual percentage rate in abbreviated form. Whenever the annual percentage rate is used in an advertisement for open-end credit, it may be expressed using a readily understandable abbreviation such as "APR".

16(a) Actually available terms.

1. General rule. To the extent that an advertisement mentions specific credit terms, it may state only those terms that the creditor is actually prepared to offer. For example, a creditor may not advertise a very low annual percentage rate that will not in fact be available at any time. Section 226.16(a) is not intended to inhibit the promotion of new credit programs, but to bar the advertising of terms that are not and will not be available. For example, a creditor may advertise terms that will be offered for only a limited period, or terms that will become available at a future date.

2. Specific credit terms. "Specific credit terms" is not limited to the disclosures required by the regulation but would include any specific components of a credit plan, such as the minimum periodic payment amount or seller's points in a plan secured by real estate.

16(b) Advertisement of terms that require additional disclosures.

1. Use of positive terms. An advertisement must state a credit term as a positive number in order to trigger additional disclosures. For example, "no annual membership fee" would not trigger the additional disclosures required by § 226.16(b).

2. Implicit terms. Section 226.16(b) applies even if the triggering term is not stated explicitly, but may be readily determined from the advertisement. For example, a statement that "the equity in your home becomes spendable with an XYZ line of credit" implicitly states that the creditor will take a security interest in the consumer's home.

3. Membership fees. A membership fee is not a triggering term nor need it be disclosed under § 226.16(b)(3) if it is required for participation in the plan whether or not an open-end credit feature is attached. (See Comment 6(b)-1.)

4. Variable-rate plans. In disclosing the annual percentage rate in an advertisement for a variable-rate plan, as required by § 226.16(b)(2), the creditor may use an insert showing the current rate; may give the rate as of a specified recent date; or may disclose an estimated rate under § 226.5(c). The additional requirement in § 226.16(b)(2) to disclose the variable-rate feature may be satisfied by disclosing that "the annual percentage rate may vary" or a similar statement, but the advertisement need not include the information required by footnote 12 to § 226.6(a)(2).

5. Discounted variable-rate plans—disclosure of the annual percentage rates. The advertised annual percentage rates for discounted variable-rate plans must, in accordance with comment 6(a)(2)-10, include both the initial rate (with the statement of how long it will remain in effect) and the current indexed rate (with the statement that this second rate may vary). The options listed in comment 16(b)-4 may be used in disclosing the current indexed rate.

6. Triggering terms. The following are examples of terms that trigger additional disclosures:

- "Small monthly service charge on the remaining balance."
- "12 percent Annual Percentage Rate."
- "A $15 annual membership fee buys you $2,000 in credit."

7. Minimum, fixed, transaction, activity, or similar charge. The charges to be disclosed under § 226.16(b)(1) are those that are considered finance charges under § 226.4.

16(c) Catalogs and multiple-page advertisements.

1. Definition. The multiple-page advertisements to which § 226.16(c) refers are advertisements consisting of a series of sequentially numbered pages—for example, a supplement to a newspaper. A mailing consisting of several separate flyers or pieces of promotional material in a single envelope does not constitute a single multiple-page advertisement for purposes of § 226.16(c).

Paragraph 16(c)(1).

1. General. Section 226.16(c)(1) permits creditors to put credit information together in one place in a catalog or multiple-page advertisement. The rule applies only if the catalog or multiple-page advertisement contains one or more of the triggering terms from § 226.16(b).

Paragraph 16(c)(2).

1. Table or schedule if credit terms depend on outstanding balance. If the credit terms of a plan vary depending on the amount of the balance outstanding, rather than the amount of any property purchased, a table or schedule complies with § 226.16(c)(2) if it includes the required disclosures for representative balances. For example, a creditor would disclose that a periodic rate of 1.5% is applied to balances of $500 or less, and a 1% rate is applied to balances greater than $500.

SUBPART C—CLOSED-END CREDIT

Section 226.17—General Disclosure Requirements

17(a) Form of disclosures.

Paragraph 17(a)(1).

1. Clear and conspicuous. This standard requires that disclosures be in a reasonably understandable form. For example, while the regulation requires no mathematical progression or format, the disclosures must be presented in a way that does not obscure the relationship of the terms to each other. In addition, although no minimum type size is mandated, the disclosures must be legible, whether typewritten, handwritten, or printed by computer.

2. Segregation of disclosures. The disclosures may be grouped together and segregated from other information in a variety of ways. For example, the disclosures may appear on a separate sheet of paper or may be set off from other information on the contract or other documents:

- By outlining them in a box.
- By bold print dividing lines.
- By a different color background.
- By a different type style.

3. Location. The regulation imposes no specific location requirements on the segregated disclosures. For example:

- They may appear on a disclosure statement separate from all other material.
- They may be placed on the same document with the credit contract or other information, so long as they are segregated from that information.
- They may be shown on the front or back of a document.
- They need not begin at the top of a page.
- They may be continued from one page to another.

4. Content of segregated disclosures. Footnotes 37 and 38 contain exceptions to the requirement that the disclosures under § 226.18 be segregated from material that is not directly related to those disclosures. Footnote 37 lists the items that may be added to the segregated disclosures, even though not directly related to those disclosures. Footnote 38 lists the items required under § 226.18 that may be deleted from the segregated disclosures and appear elsewhere. Any one or more of these additions or deletions may be combined and appear either together with or separate from the segregated disclosures. The itemization of the amount financed under § 226.18(c), however, must be separate from the other segregated disclosures under § 226.18.

5. Directly related. The segregated disclosures may, at the creditor's option, include any information that is directly related to those disclosures. Directly related information includes, for example, the following:

- A description of a grace period after which a late payment charge will be imposed. For example, the disclosure given under § 226.18(l) may state that a late charge will apply to "any payment received more than 15 days after the due date."
- A statement that the transaction is not secured. For example, the creditor may add a category labelled "unsecured" or "not secured" to the security interest disclosures given under § 226.18(m).
- The basis for any estimates used in making disclosures. For example, if the maturity date of a loan depends solely on the occurrence of a future event, the creditor may indicate that the disclosures assume that event will occur at a certain time.
- The conditions under which a demand feature may be exercised. For example, in a loan subject to demand after five years, the disclosures may state that the loan will become payable on demand in five years.
- When a variable-rate feature is disclosed on other documents under footnote 43 to § 226.18(f), a reference to the variable-rate feature and/or to other documents on which the variable-rate disclosures are made.
- An explanation of the use of pronouns or other references to the parties to the transaction. For example, the disclosures may state,

"'You' refers to the customer and 'we' refers to the creditor."

- Instructions to the creditor or its employees on the use of a multiple-purpose form. For example, the disclosures may state, "Check box if applicable."
- A statement that the borrower may pay a minimum finance charge upon prepayment in a simple interest transaction. For example, when state law prohibits penalties, but would allow a minimum finance charge in the event of prepayment, the creditor may make the § 226.18(k)(1) disclosure by stating "You may be charged a minimum finance charge."
- A brief reference to negative amortization in variable-rate transactions. For example, in the variable-rate disclosure, the creditor may include a short statement such as "Unpaid interest will be added to principal." (See the Commentary to § 226.18(f)(3).)
- A brief caption identifying the disclosures. For example, the disclosures may bear a general title such as "Federal Truth in Lending Disclosures" or a descriptive title such as "Real Estate Loan Disclosures."
- A statement that a due-on-sale clause or other conditions on assumption are contained in the loan document. For example, the disclosure given under § 226.18(q) may state, "Someone buying your home may, subject to conditions in the due-on-sale clause contained in the loan document, assume the remainder of the mortgage on the original terms."

6. Multiple-purpose forms. The creditor may design a disclosure statement that can be used for more than one type of transaction, so long as the required disclosures for individual transactions are clear and conspicuous. (See the Commentary to Appendices G and H for a discussion of the treatment of disclosures that do not apply to specific transactions.) Any disclosure listed in § 226.18 (except the itemization of the amount financed under § 226.18(c)) may be included on a standard disclosure statement even though not all of the creditor's transactions include those features. For example, the statement may include:

- The variable rate disclosure under § 226.18(f).
- The demand feature disclosure under § 226.18(i).
- A reference to the possibility of a security interest arising from a spreader clause, under § 226.18(m).
- The assumption policy disclosure under § 226.18(q).
- The required deposit disclosure under § 226.18(r).

Paragraph 17(a)(2).

1. When disclosures must be more conspicuous. The following rules apply to the requirement that the terms "annual percentage rate" and "finance charge" be shown more conspicuously:

- The terms must be more conspicuous only in relation to the other required disclosures under § 226.18. For example, when the disclosures are included on the contract document, those 2 terms need not be more conspicuous as compared to the heading on the contract document or information required by state law.
- The terms need not be more conspicuous except as part of the finance charge and annual percentage rate disclosures under § 226.18 (d) and (e), although they may, at the creditor's option, be highlighted wherever used in the required disclosures. For example, the terms may, but need not, be highlighted when used in disclosing a prepayment penalty under § 226.18(k) or a required deposit under § 226.18(r).
- The creditor's identity under § 226.18(a) may, but need not, be more prominently displayed than the finance charge and annual percentage rate.
- The terms need not be more conspicuous than figures (including, for example, numbers, percentages, and dollar signs)

2. Making disclosures more conspicuous. The terms "finance charge" and "annual percentage rate" may be made more conspicuous in any way that highlights them in relation to the other required disclosures. For example, they may be:

- Capitalized when other disclosures are printed in capital and lower case.
- Printed in larger type, bold print or different type face.
- Printed in a contrasting color.
- Underlined.
- Set off with asterisks.

17(b) Time of disclosures.

1. Consummation. As a general rule, disclosures must be made before "consummation" of the transaction. The disclosures need not be given by any particular time before consummation, except in certain mortgage transactions under § 226.19. (See the commentary to § 226.2(a)(13) regarding the definition of consummation.)

2. Converting open-end to closed-end credit. If an open-end credit account is converted to a closed-end transaction under a written agreement with the consumer, the creditor must provide a set of closed-end credit disclosures before consummation of the closed-end transaction. If consummation of the closed-end transaction occurs at the same time as the consumer enters into the open-end agreement, the closed-end credit disclosures may be given at the time of conversion. If disclosures are delayed until conversion and the closed-end transaction has a variable-rate feature, disclosures should be based on the rate in effect at the time of conversion. (See the commentary to § 226.5 regarding conversion of closed-end to open-end credit.)

17(c) Basis of disclosures and use of estimates.

Paragraph 17(c)(1).

1. Legal obligation. The disclosures should reflect the credit terms to which the parties are legally bound at the outset of the transaction. The legal obligation is determined by applicable state law or other law. (Certain transactions are specifically addressed in this commentary. See, for example, the discussion of buydown transactions elsewhere in the commentary to § 226.17(c).)

- The fact that a term or contract may later be deemed unenforceable by a court on the basis of equity or other grounds does not, by itself, mean that disclosures based on that term or contract did not reflect the legal obligation.

2. Modification of obligation. The legal obligation normally is presumed to be contained in the note or contract that evidences the agreement. But this presumption is rebutted if another agreement between the parties legally modifies that note or contract. If the parties informally agree to a modification of the legal obligation, the modification should not be reflected in the disclosures unless it rises to the level of a change in the terms of the legal obligation. For example:

- If the creditor-employer offers a preferential employee rate, the disclosures should reflect the terms of the legal obligation. (See the commentary to § 226.18(f) for an example of a preferred-rate employee transaction that is a variable-rate transaction.)
- If the contract provides for a certain monthly payment schedule but payments are made on a voluntary payroll deduction plan or an informal principal-reduction agreement, the disclosures should reflect the schedule in the contract.
- If the contract provides for regular monthly payments but the creditor informally permits the consumer to defer payments from time to time, for instance, to take account of holiday seasons or seasonal employment, the disclosures should reflect the regular monthly payments.

3. Third-party buydowns. In certain transactions, a seller or other third party may pay an amount, either to the creditor or to the consumer, in order to reduce the consumer's payments or buy down the interest rate for all or a portion of the credit term. For example, a consumer and a bank agree to a mortgage with an interest rate of 15% and level payments over 25 years. By a separate agreement, the seller of the property agrees to subsidize the consumer's payments for the first 2 years of the mortgage, giving the consumer an effective rate of 12% for that period.

- If the lower rate is reflected in the credit contract between the consumer and the bank, the disclosures must take the buydown into account. For example, the annual percentage rate must be a composite rate that takes account of both the lower initial rate and the higher subsequent rate, and the payment schedule disclosures must reflect the 2 payment levels. However, the amount paid by the seller would not be specifically reflected in the disclosures given by the bank, since that amount constitutes seller's points and thus is not part of the finance charge.
- If the lower rate is not reflected in the credit contract between the consumer and the bank and the consumer is legally bound to the 15% rate from the outset, the disclosures given by the bank must not reflect the seller buydown in any way. For example, the annual percentage rate and payment schedule would not take into account the reduction in the interest rate and payment level for the first 2 years resulting from the buydown.

4. Consumer buydowns. In certain transactions, the consumer may pay an amount to the creditor to reduce the payments or obtain a lower interest rate on the transaction. Consumer buydowns must be reflected in the disclosures given for that transaction. To illustrate, in a mortgage transaction, the creditor and consumer agree to a note specifying a 14 percent interest rate. However, in a separate document, the consumer agrees to pay an amount to the creditor at consummation in return for a reduction in the interest rate to 12 percent for a portion of the mortgage term. The amount paid by the consumer may be deposited in an escrow account or may be retained by the creditor. Depending upon the buydown plan, the consumer's prepayment of the obligation may or may not result in a portion of the amount being credited or refunded to the consumer. In the disclosures given for the mortgage, the creditor must reflect the terms of the buydown agreement. For example:

- The amount paid by the consumer is a prepaid finance charge (even if deposited in an escrow account).
- A composite annual percentage rate must be calculated, taking into account both interest rates, as well as the effect of the prepaid finance charge.
- The payment schedule must reflect the multiple payment levels resulting from the buydown.

5. Split buydowns. In certain transactions, a third party (such as a seller) and a consumer both pay an amount tc the creditor to reduce the interest rate. The creditor must include the portion paid by the consumer in the finance charge and disclose the corresponding multiple payment levels and composite annual percentage rate. The portion paid by the third party and the corresponding reduction in interest rate, however, should not be reflected in the disclosures unless the lower rate is reflected in the credit contract. (See the discussion on third-party and consumer buydown transactions elsewhere in the commentary to § 226.17(c).)

6. Wrap-around financing. Wrap-around transactions, usually loans, involve the creditor's wrapping the outstanding balance on an existing loan and advancing additional funds to the consumer. The pre-existing loan, which is wrapped, may be to the same consumer or to a different consumer. In either case, the consumer makes a single payment to the new creditor, who makes the payments on the pre-existing loan to the original creditor. Wrap-around loans or sales are considered new single-advance transactions, with an amount financed equalling the sum of the new funds advanced by the wrap creditor and the remaining principal owed to the original creditor on the pre-existing loan. In disclosing the itemization of the amount financed, the creditor may use a label such as "the amount that will be paid to creditor X" to describe the remaining principal balance on the pre-existing loan. This approach to Truth in Lending calculations has no effect on calculations required by other statutes, such as state usury laws.

7. Wrap-around financing with balloon payments. For wrap-around transactions involving a large final payment of the new funds before the maturity of the pre-existing loan, the amount financed is the sum of the new funds and the remaining principal on the pre-existing loan. The disclosures should be based on the shorter term of the wrap loan, with a large final payment of both the new funds and the total remaining principal on the pre-existing loan (although only the wrap loan will actually be paid off at that time).

8. Graduated payment adjustable rate mortgages. These mortgages involve both a variable interest rate and scheduled variations in payment amounts during the loan term. For example, under these plans, a series of graduated payments may be scheduled before rate adjustments affect payment amounts, or the initial scheduled payment may remain constant for a set period before rate adjustments affect the payment amount. In any case, the initial payment amount may be insufficient to cover the scheduled interest, causing negative amortization from the outset of the transaction. In these transactions, the disclosures should treat these features as follows:

- The finance charge includes the amount of negative amortization based on the assumption that the rate in effect at consummation remains unchanged.
- The amount financed does not include the amount of negative amortization.
- As in any variable-rate transaction, the annual percentage rate is based on the terms in effect at consummation.
- The schedule of payments discloses the amount of any scheduled initial payments followed by an adjusted level of payments based on the initial interest rate. Since some mortgage plans contain limits on the amount of the payment adjustment, the payment schedule may require several different levels of payments, even with the assumption that the original interest rate does not increase.

9. Morris Plan transactions. When a deposit account is created for the sole purpose of accumulating payments and then is applied to satisfy entirely the consumer's obligation in the transaction, each deposit made into the account is considered the same as a payment on a loan for purposes of making disclosures.

10. Number of transactions. Creditors have flexibility in handling credit extensions that may be viewed as multiple transactions. For example:

- When a creditor finances the credit sale of a radio and a television on the same day, the creditor may disclose the sales as either 1 or 2 credit sale transactions.
- When a creditor finances a loan along with a credit sale of health insurance, the creditor may disclose in one of several ways: a single credit sale transaction, a single loan transaction, or a loan and a credit sale transaction.
- The separate financing of a downpayment in a credit sale transaction may, but need not, be disclosed as 2 transactions (a credit sale and a separate transaction for the financing of the downpayment).

Paragraph 17(c)(2).

1. Basis for estimates. Disclosures may be estimated when the exact information is unknown at the time disclosures are made. Information is unknown if it is not reasonably available to the creditor at the time the disclosures are made. The "reasonably available" standard requires that the creditor, acting in good faith, exercise due diligence in obtaining information. For example, the creditor must at a minimum utilize generally accepted calculation tools, but need not invest in the most sophisticated computer program to make a particular type of calculation. The creditor normally may rely on the representations of other parties in obtaining information. For example, the creditor might look to the consumer for the time of consummation, to insurance companies for the cost of insurance, or to realtors for taxes and escrow fees. The creditor may utilize estimates in making disclosures even though the creditor knows that more precise information will be available by the point of consummation. However, new disclosures may be required under § 226.17(f) or § 226.19.

2. Labelling estimates. Estimates must be designated as such in the segregated disclosures. Even though other disclosures are based on the same assumption on which a specific estimated disclosure was based, the creditor has some flexibility in labelling the estimates. Generally, only the particular disclosure for which the exact information is unknown is labelled as an estimate. However, when several disclosures are affected because of the unknown information, the creditor has the option of labelling either every affected disclosure or only the disclosure primarily affected. For example, when the finance charge is unknown because the date of consummation is unknown, the creditor must label the finance charge as an estimate and may also label as estimates the total of payments and the payment schedule. When many disclosures are estimates, the creditor may use a general statement, such as "all numerical disclosures except the late payment disclosure are estimates," as a method to label those disclosures as estimates.

Paragraph 17(c)(3)

1. Minor variations. Section 226.17(c)(3) allows creditors to disregard certain factors in calculating and making disclosures. For example:

- Creditors may ignore the effects of collecting payments in whole cents. Because payments cannot be collected in fractional cents, it is often difficult to amortize exactly an obligation with equal payments; the amount of the last payment may require adjustment to account for the rounding of the other payments to whole cents.
- Creditors may base their disclosures on calculation tools that assume that all months have an equal number of days, even if their practice is to take account of the variations in months for purposes of collecting interest. For example, a creditor may use a calculation tool based on a 360-day year, when it in fact collects interest by applying a factor of 1/365 of the annual rate to 365 days. This rule does not, however, authorize creditors to ignore, for disclosure purposes, the effects of applying 1/360 of an annual rate to 365 days.

2. Use of special rules. A creditor may utilize the special rules in § 226.17(c)(3) for purposes of calculating and making all disclosures for a transaction or may, at its option, use the special rules for some disclosures and not others.

Paragraph 17(c)(4).

1. Payment schedule irregularities. When one or more payments in a transaction differ from the others because of a long or short first period, the variations may be ignored in disclosing the payment schedule, finance charge, annual percentage rate, and other terms. For example:

- A 36-month auto loan might be consummated on June 8 with payments due on July 1 and the first of each succeeding month. The creditor may base its calculations on a payment schedule that assumes 36 equal intervals and 36 equal installment payments, even though a precise computation would produce slightly different amounts because of the shorter first period.
- By contrast, in the same example, if the first payment were not scheduled until August 1, the irregular first period would exceed the limits in § 226.17(c)(4); the creditor could not use the special rule and could not ignore the extra days in the first period in calculating its disclosures.

2. Measuring odd periods. In determining whether a transaction may take advantage of the rule in § 226.17(c)(4), the creditor must measure the variation against a regular period. For purposes of that rule:

- The first period is the period from the date on which the finance charge begins to be earned to the date of the first payment.
- The term is the period from the date on which the finance charge begins to be earned to the date of the final payment.
- The regular period is the most common interval between payments in the transaction.

In transactions involving regular periods that are monthly, semimonthly or multiples of a month, the length of the irregular and regular periods may be calculated on the basis of either the actual number of days or an assumed 30-day month. In other transactions, the length of the periods is based on the actual number of days.

3. Use of special rules. A creditor may utilize the special rules in § 226.17(c)(4) for purposes of calculating and making some disclosures but may elect not to do so for all of the disclosures. For example, the variations may be ignored in calculating and disclosing the annual percentage rate but taken into account in calculating and disclosing the finance charge and payment schedule.

Paragraph 17(c)(5).

1. Demand disclosures. Disclosures for demand obligations are based on an assumed 1-year term, unless an alternate maturity date is stated in the legal obligation. Whether an alternate maturity date is stated in the legal obligation is determined by applicable law. An alternate maturity date is not inferred from an informal principal reduction agreement or a similar understanding between the parties. However, when the note itself specifies a principal reduction schedule (for example, "payable on demand or $2,000 plus interest quarterly"), an alternate maturity is stated and the disclosures must reflect that date.

2. Future event as maturity date. An obligation whose maturity date is determined solely by a future event, as for example, a loan payable only on the sale of property, is not a demand obligation. Because no demand feature is contained in the obligation, demand disclosures under § 226.18(i) are inapplicable. The disclosures should be based on the creditor's estimate of the time at which the specified event will occur, and may indicate the basis for the creditor's estimate, as noted in the commentary to § 226.17(a).

3. Demand after stated period. Most demand transactions contain a demand feature that may be exercised at any point during the term, but certain transactions convert to demand status only after a fixed period. For example, in States prohibiting due-on-sale clauses, the Federal National Mortgage Association (FNMA) requires mortgages that it purchases to include a call option rider that may be exercised after 7 years. These mortgages are generally written as long-term obligations, but contain a demand feature that may be exercised only within a 30-day period at 7 years. The disclosures for these transactions should be based upon the legally agreed-upon maturity date. Thus, if a mortgage containing the 7-year FNMA call option is written as a 20-year obligation, the disclosures should be based on the 20-year term, with the demand feature disclosed under § 226.18(i).

4. Balloon mortgages. Balloon payment mortgages, with payments based on a long-term amortization schedule and a large final payment due after a shorter term, are not demand obligations unless a demand feature is specifically contained in the contract. For example, a mortgage with a term of 5 years and a payment schedule based on 20 years would not be treated as a mortgage with a demand feature, in the absence of any contractual demand provisions. In this type of mortgage, disclosures should be based on the 5-year term.

Paragraph 17(c)(6).

1. Series of advances. Section 226.17(c)(6)(i) deals with a series of advances under an agreement to extend credit up to a certain amount. A creditor may treat all of the advances as a single transaction or disclose each advance as a separate transaction. If these advances are treated as 1 transaction and the timing and amounts of advances are unknown, creditors must make disclosures based on estimates, as provided in § 226.17(c)(2). If the advances are disclosed separately, disclosures must be provided before each advance occurs, with the disclosures for the first advance provided by consummation.

2. Construction loans. Section 226.17(c)(6)(ii) provides a flexible rule for disclosure of construction loans that may be permanently financed. These transactions have 2 distinct phases, similar to 2 separate transactions. The construction loan may be for initial construction or subsequent construction, such as rehabilitation or remodelling. The construction period usually involves several disbursements of funds at times and in amounts that are unknown at the beginning of that period, with the consumer paying only accrued interest until construction is completed. Unless the obligation is paid at that time, the loan then converts to permanent financing in which the loan amount is amortized just as in a standard mortgage transaction. Section 226.17(c)(6)(ii) permits the creditor to give either one combined disclosure for both the construction financing and the permanent financing, or a separate set of disclosures for the 2 phases. This rule is available whether the consumer is initially obligated to accept construction financing only or is obligated to accept both construction and permanent financing from the outset. If the consumer is obligated on both phases and the creditor chooses to give 2 sets of disclosures, both sets must be given to the consumer initially, because both transactions would be consummated at that time. (Appendix D provides a method of calculating the annual percentage rate and other disclosures for construction loans, which may be used, at the creditor's option, in disclosing construction financing.)

3. Multiple-advance construction loans. Section 226.17(c)(6)(i) and (ii) are not mutually exclusive. For example, in a transaction that finances the construction of a dwelling that may be permanently financed by the same creditor, the construction phase may consist of a series of advances under an agreement to extend credit up to a certain amount. In these cases, the creditor may disclose the construction phase as either 1 or more than 1 transaction and also disclose the permanent financing as a separate transaction.

4. Residential mortgage transaction. See the commentary to § 226.2(a)(24) for a discussion of the effect of § 226.17(c)(6) on the definition of a residential mortgage transaction.

5. Allocation of points. When a creditor utilizes the special rule in § 226.17(c)(6) to disclose credit extensions as multiple transactions, buyers points or similar amounts imposed on the consumer must be allocated for purposes of calculating disclosures. While such amounts should not be taken into account more than once in making calculations, they may be allocated between the transactions in any manner the creditor chooses. For example, if a construction-permanent loan is subject to 5 points imposed on the consumer and the creditor chooses to disclose the 2 phases separately, the 5 points may be allocated entirely to the construction loan, entirely to the permanent loan, or divided in any manner between the two. However, the entire 5 points may not be applied twice, that is, to both the construction and the permanent phases.

17(d) Multiple Creditors; Multiple Consumers.

1. Multiple creditors. If a credit transaction involves more than one creditor:

- The creditors must choose which of them will make the disclosures.
- A single, complete set of disclosures must be provided, rather than partial disclosures from several creditors.
- All disclosures for the transaction must be given, even if the disclosing creditor would not otherwise have been obligated to make a particular disclosure. For example, if one of the creditors is the seller, the total sale price disclosure under § 226.18(j) must be made, even though the disclosing creditor is not the seller.

2. Multiple consumers. When 2 consumers are joint obligors with primary liability on an obligation, the disclosures may be given to either one of them. If one consumer is merely a surety or guarantor, the disclosures must be given to the principal debtor. In rescindable transactions, however, separate disclosures must be given to each consumer who has the right to rescind under § 226.23.

17(e) Effect of subsequent events.

1. Events causing inaccuracies. Inaccuracies in disclosures are not violations if attributable to events occurring after the disclosures are made. For example, when the consumer fails to fulfill a prior commitment to keep the collateral insured and the creditor then provides the coverage and charges the consumer for it, such a change does not make the original disclosures inaccurate. The creditor may, however, be required to make new disclosures under § 226.17(f) or § 226.19 if the events occurred between disclosure and consummation or under § 226.20 if the events occurred after consummation.

17(f) Early disclosures.

1. Change in rate. No redisclosure is required for changes that occur between the time disclosures are made and consummation, unless the annual percentage rate in the consummated transaction exceeds the limits prescribed in § 226.22(a) (⅛ of 1 percentage point in regular transactions and ¼ of 1 percentage point in irregular transactions). To illustrate:

- If disclosures are made in a regular transaction on July 1, the transaction is consummated on July 15, and the actual annual percentage rate varies by more than ⅛ of 1 percentage point from the disclosed annual percentage rate, the creditor must either redisclose the changed terms or furnish a complete set of new disclosures before consummation. Redisclosure is required even if the disclosures made on July 1 are based on estimates and marked as such.

2. Variable rate. The addition of a variable rate feature to the credit terms, after early disclosures are given, requires new disclosures.

3. Content of new disclosures. If redisclosure is required, the creditor has the option of either providing a complete set of new disclosures, or providing disclosures of only the terms that vary from those originally disclosed. (See the commentary to § 226.19(b).)

4. Special rules. In residential mortgage transactions subject to § 226.19, the creditor must redisclose if, between the delivery of the required early disclosures and consummation, the annual percentage rate changes by more than a stated tolerance. When subsequent events occur after consummation, new disclosures are required only if there is a refinancing or an assumption within the meaning of § 226.20.

17(g) Mail or telephone orders—delay in disclosures.

1. Conditions for use. When the creditor receives a mail or telephone request for credit, the creditor may delay making the disclosures until the first payment is due if the following conditions are met:

- The credit request is initiated without face-to-face or direct telephone solicitation. (Creditors may, however, use the special rule when credit requests are solicited by mail.)
- The creditor has supplied the specified credit information about its credit terms either to the individual consumer or to the public generally. That information may be distributed through advertisements, catalogs, brochures, special mailers, or similar means.

2. Insurance. The location requirements for the insurance disclosures under § 226.18(n) permit them to appear apart from the other disclosures. Therefore, a creditor may mail an insurance authorization to the consumer and then prepare the other disclosures to reflect whether or not the authorization is completed by the consumer. Creditors may also disclose the insurance cost on a unit-cost basis, if the transaction meets the requirements of § 226.17(g).

17(h) Series of sales—delay in disclosures.

1. Applicability. The creditor may delay the disclosures for individual credit sales in a series of such sales until the first payment is due on the current sale, assuming the 2 conditions in this paragraph are met. If those conditions are not met, the general timing rules in § 266.17(b) apply.

2. Basis of disclosures. Creditors structuring disclosures for a series of sales under § 226.17(h) may compute the total sale price as either:

- The cash price for the sale plus that portion of the finance charge and other charges applicable to that sale; or
- The cash price for the sale, other charges applicable to the sale, and the total finance charge and outstanding principal.

17(i) Interim student credit extensions.

1. Definition. Student credit plans involve extensions of credit for education purposes where the repayment amount and schedule are not known at the time credit is advanced. These plans include loans made under any student credit plan, whether government or private, where the repayment period does not begin immediately. (Certain student credit plans that meet this definition are exempt from Regulation Z. See § 226.3(f).) Creditors in interim student credit extensions need not disclose the terms set forth in this paragraph at the time the credit is actually extended but must make complete disclosures at the time the creditor and consumer agree upon the repayment schedule for the total obligation. At that time, a new set of disclosures must be made of all applicable items under § 226.18.

2. Basis of disclosures. The disclosures given at the time of execution of the interim note should reflect two annual percentage rates, one for the interim period and one for the repayment period. The use of § 226.17(i) in making disclosures does not, by itself, make those disclosures estimates. Any portion of the finance charge, such as statutory interest, that is attributable to the interim period and is paid by the student (either as a prepaid finance charge, periodically during the interim period, in one payment at the end of the interim period, or capitalized at the beginning of the repayment period) must be reflected in the interim annual percentage rate. Interest subsidies, such as payments made by either a state or the Federal government on an interim loan, must be excluded in computing the annual percentage rate on the interim obligation, when the consumer has no contingent liability for payment of those amounts. Any finance charges that are paid separately by the student at the outset or withheld from the proceeds of the loan are prepaid finance charges. An example of this type of charge is the loan guarantee fee. The sum of the prepaid finance charges is deducted from the loan proceeds to determine the amount financed and included in the calculation of the finance charge.

3. Consolidation. Consolidation of the interim student credit extensions through a renewal note with a set repayment schedule is treated as a new transaction with disclosures made as they would be for a refinancing. Any unearned portion of the finance charge must be reflected in the new finance charge and annual percentage rate, and is not added to the new amount financed. In itemizing the amount financed under § 226.18(c), the creditor may combine the principal balances remaining on the interim extensions at the time of consolidation and categorize them as the amount paid on the consumer's account.

4. Approved student credit forms. See the commentary to Appendix H regarding disclosure forms approved for use in certain student credit programs.

Other sections: Section 226.2 and Appendix H.

Previous regulation: Sections 226.6 and 226.8.

1981 changes: With few exceptions, the disclosures must now appear apart from all other information, and may not be interspersed with that information. The disclosures must be based on the legal obligation between the parties, rather than any side agreement.

The assumed maturity period for demand loans has been increased from 6 months to 1 year. Any alternate maturity date must be stated in the legal obligation rather than inferred from the documents, in order to form a basis for disclosures.

In multiple-advance transactions, a series of advances up to a certain amount and construction loans that may be permanently financed may be disclosed, at the creditor's option, as either a single transaction or several transactions. Appendix D is applicable only to multiple advances for the construction of a dwelling, whereas its predecessor, Interpretation § 226.813, could be used for all multiple-advance transactions.

If disclosures are made before the date of consummation, the creditor need not provide updated disclosures at consummation unless the annual percentage rate has changed beyond certain limits or a variable rate feature has been added.

Section 226.18—Content of Disclosures

1. As applicable. The disclosures required by this section need be made only as applicable. Any disclosure not relevant to a particular transaction may be eliminated entirely. For example:

- In a loan transaction, the creditor may delete disclosure of the total sale price.
- In a credit sale requiring disclosure of the total sale price under § 226.18(j), the creditor may delete any reference to a downpayment where no downpayment is involved.

Where the amounts of several numerical disclosures are the same, the "as applicable" language also permits creditors to combine the terms, so long as it is done in a clear and conspicuous manner. For example:

- In a transaction in which the amount financed equals the total of payments, the creditor may disclose "amount financed/total of payments," together with descriptive language, followed by a single amount.
- However, if the terms are separated on the disclosure statement and separate space is provided for each amount, both disclosures must be completed, even though the same amount is entered in each space.

2. Format. See the commentary to § 226.17 and Appendix H for a discussion of the format to be used in making these disclosures, as well as acceptable modifications.

18(a) Creditor.

1. Identification of creditor. The creditor making the disclosures must be identified. This disclosure may, at the creditor's option, appear apart from the other disclosures. Use of the creditor's name is sufficient, but the creditor may also include an address and/or telephone number. In transactions with multiple creditors, any one of them may make the disclosures; the one doing so must be identified.

18(b) Amount financed.

1. Disclosure required. The net amount of credit extended must be disclosed using the term "amount financed" and a descriptive explanation similar to the phrase in the regulation.

2. Rebates and loan premiums. In a loan transaction, the creditor may offer a premium in the form of cash or merchandise to prospective borrowers. Similarly, in a credit sale transaction, a seller's or manufacturer's rebate may be offered to prospective purchasers of the creditor's goods or services. At the creditor's option, these amounts may be either reflected in the Truth in Lending disclosures or disregarded in the disclosures. If the creditor chooses to reflect them in the § 226.18 disclosures, rather than disregard them, they may be taken into account in any manner as part of those disclosures.

Paragraph 18(b)(1).

1. Downpayments. A downpayment is defined in § 226.2(a)(18) to include, at the creditor's option, certain deferred downpayments or pick-up payments. A deferred downpayment that meets the criteria set forth in the definition may be treated as part of the downpayment, at the creditor's option.

- Deferred downpayments that are not treated as part of the downpayment (either because they do not meet the definition or because the creditor simply chooses not to treat them as downpayments) are included in the amount financed.
- Deferred downpayments that are treated as part of the downpayment are not part of the amount financed under § 226.18(b)(1).

Paragraph 18(b)(2).

1. Adding other amounts. Fees or other charges that are not part of the finance charge and that are financed rather than paid separately at consummation of the transaction are included in the amount financed. Typical examples are real estate settlement charges and premiums for voluntary credit life and disability insurance excluded from the finance charge under § 226.4. This paragraph does not include any amounts already accounted for under § 226.18(b)(1), such as taxes, tag and title fees, or the costs of accessories or service policies that the creditor includes in the cash price.

Paragraph 18(b)(3).

1. Prepaid finance charges. Prepaid finance charges, as defined in § 226.2, must be deducted in calculating the amount financed. Under § 226.2, add-on and discount charges are not considered prepaid finance charges. Other types of finance charges added to the face amount of the note, such as loan fees financed by the creditor, need not be treated as prepaid finance charges. The computational step called for by this paragraph should not duplicate any subtraction accounted for under § 226.18(b)(1). To illustrate:

- A consumer applies for a loan of $2500, subject to simple interest, with a $40 loan fee. The creditor assesses the $40 loan fee by increasing the face amount of the obligation to $2540. If the creditor chooses not to treat the loan fee as a prepaid finance charge, the principal for purposes of § 226.18(b)(1) is $2500 and no amounts are deducted under § 226.18(b)(3). If the creditor chooses to treat the loan fee as a prepaid finance charge, the principal for purposes of § 226.18(b)(1) is $2540 and $40 is deducted under § 226.18(b)(3).

2. Add-on or discount charges. All finance charges must be deducted from the amount of credit in calculating the amount financed. If the principal loan amount reflects finance charges that meet the definition of a prepaid finance charge in § 226.2, those charges are included in the § 226.18(b)(1) amount and deducted under § 226.18(b)(3). However, if the principal loan amount includes finance charges that do not meet the definition of a prepaid finance charge, the § 226.18(b)(1) amount must exclude those finance charges. The following examples illustrate the application of § 226.18(b) to these types of transactions. Each example assumes a loan request of $1000 for 1 year, subject to a 6 percent precomputed interest rate, with a $10 loan fee paid separately at consummation.

- The creditor assesses add-on interest of $60 which is added to the $1000 in loan proceeds for an obligation with a face amount of $1060. The principal for purposes of § 226.18(b)(1) is $1000, no amounts are added under § 226.18(b)(2), and the $10 loan fee is a prepaid finance charge to be deducted under § 226.18(b)(3). The amount financed is $990.
- The creditor assesses discount interest of $60 and distributes $940 to the consumer, who is liable for an obligation with a face amount of $1000. The principal under § 226.18(b)(1) is $940, which results in an amount financed of $930, after deduction of the $10 prepaid finance charge under § 226.18(b)(3).
- The creditor assesses $60 in discount interest by increasing the face amount of the obligation to $1060, with the consumer receiving $1000. The principal under § 226.18(b)(1) is thus $1000 and the amount financed $990, after deducting the $10 prepaid finance charge under § 226.18(b)(3).

18(c) Itemization of amount financed.

1. Disclosure required. The creditor has 2 alternatives in complying with § 226.18(c):

- The creditor may inform the consumer, on the segregated disclosures, that a written itemization of the amount financed will be provided on request, furnishing the itemization only if the customer in fact requests it.
- The creditor may provide an itemization as a matter of course, without notifying the consumer of the right to receive it or waiting for a request.

Whether given as a matter of course or only on request, the itemization must be provided at the same time as the other disclosures required by § 226.18, although separate from those disclosures.

2. Additional information. Section 226.18(c) establishes only a minimum standard for the material to be included in the itemization of the amount financed. Creditors have considerable flexibility in revising or supplementing the information listed in § 226.18(c) and shown in model form H-3, although no changes are required. The creditor may, for example, do one or more of the following:

- Include amounts that reflect payments not part of the amount financed. For example, escrow items and certain insurance premiums may be included, as discussed in the commentary to § 226.18(g).
- Organize the categories in any order. For example, the creditor may rearrange the terms in a mathematical progression that depicts the arithmetic relationship of the terms.
- Add categories. For example, in a credit sale, the creditor may include the cash price and the downpayment.
- Further itemize each category. For example, the amount paid directly to the consumer may be subdivided into the amount given by check and the amount credited to the consumer's savings account.
- Label categories with different language from that shown in § 226.18(c). For example, an amount paid on the consumer's account may be revised to specifically identify the account as "your auto loan with us."
- Delete, leave blank, mark "N/A" or otherwise note inapplicable categories in the itemization. For example, in a credit sale with no prepaid finance charges or amounts paid to others, the amount financed may consist of only the cash price less downpayment. In this case, the itemization may be composed of only a single category and all other categories may be eliminated.

3. Amounts appropriate to more than one category. When an amount may appropriately be placed in any of several categories and the creditor does not wish to revise the categories shown in § 226.18(c), the creditor has considerable flexibility in determining where to show the amount. For example:

- In a credit sale, the portion of the purchase price being financed by the creditor may be viewed as either an amount paid to the consumer or an amount paid on the consumer's account.

4. RESPA transactions. The Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA) requires creditors to provide good faith estimates of closing costs. Transactions subject to RESPA are exempt from the requirements of § 226.18(c), when the creditor complies with the good faith estimates requirement of RESPA. The itemization of the amount financed need not be given, even though the content and timing of the good faith estimates under RESPA differ from the § 226.18(c) requirement.

Paragraph 18(c)(1)(i).

1. Amounts paid to consumer. This encompasses funds given to the consumer in the form of cash or a check, including joint proceeds checks, as well as funds placed in an asset account. It may include money in an interest-bearing account even if that amount is considered a required deposit under § 226.18(r). For example, in a transaction with total loan proceeds of $500, the consumer receives a check for $300 and $200 is required by the creditor to be put into an interest-bearing account. Whether or not the $200 is a required deposit, it is part of the amount financed. At the creditor's option, it may be broken out and labeled in the itemization of the amount financed.

Paragraph 18(c)(1)(ii).

1. Amounts credited to consumer's account. The term "consumer's account" refers to an account in the nature of a debt with that creditor. It may include, for example, an unpaid balance on a prior loan, a credit sale balance or other amounts owing to that creditor. It does not include asset accounts of the consumer such as savings or checking accounts.

Paragraph 18(c)(1)(iii).

1. Amounts paid to others. This includes, for example, tag and title fees; amounts paid to insurance companies for insurance premiums; security interest fees, and amounts paid to credit bureaus, appraisers or public officials. When several types of insurance premiums are financed, they may, at the creditor's option, be combined and listed in one sum, labeled "insurance" or similar term. This includes, but is not limited to, different types of insurance premiums paid to 1 company and different types of insurance premiums paid to different companies. Except for insurance companies and other categories noted in footnote 40, third parties must be identified by name.

Paragraph 18(c)(1)(iv).

1. Prepaid finance charge. The prepaid finance charges must be shown as a total amount but may, at the creditor's option, also be further itemized and described. All amounts must be reflected in this total, even if portions of the prepaid finance charge are also reflected elsewhere. For example, if at consummation the creditor collects interim interest of $30 and a credit report fee of $10, a total prepaid finance charge of $40 must be shown. At the creditor's option, the credit report fee paid to a third party may also be shown elsewhere as an amount included in § 226.18(c)(1)(iii). The creditor may also further describe the 2 components of the prepaid finance charge, although no itemization of this element is required by § 226.18(c)(1)(iv).

18(d) Finance charge.

1. Disclosure required. The creditor must disclose the finance charge as a dollar amount, using the term "finance charge," and must include a brief description similar to that in § 226.18(d). The creditor may, but need not, further modify the descriptor for variable rate transactions with a phrase such as "which is subject to change." The finance charge must be shown on the disclosures only as a total amount; the elements of the finance charge must not be itemized in the segregated disclosures, although the regulation does not prohibit their itemization elsewhere.

2. Tolerance. A tolerance for the finance charge is provided in footnote 41.

18(e) Annual percentage rate.

1. Disclosure required. The creditor must disclose the cost of the credit as an annual rate, using the term "annual percentage rate," plus a brief descriptive phrase comparable to that used in § 226.18(e). For variable rate transactions, the descriptor may be further modified with a phrase such as "which is subject to change." Under § 226.17(a), the terms "annual percentage rate" and "finance charge" must be more conspicuous than the other required disclosures.

2. Exception. Footnote 42 provides an exception for certain transactions in which no annual percentage rate disclosure is required.

18(f) Variable rate.

1. Coverage. The requirements of § 226.18(f) apply to all transactions in which the terms of the legal obligation allow the creditor to increase the rate originally disclosed to the consumer. It includes not only increases in the interest rate but also increases in other components, such as the rate of required credit life insurance. The provisions, however, do not apply tc increases resulting from delinquency (including late payment), default, assumption, acceleration or transfer of the collateral.

2. Basis for disclosures. For transactions subject to the requirements of § 226.18(f), the disclosures must be given for the full term of the transaction and must be based on the terms in effect at the time of consummation. However, in a variable rate transaction with either the seller buydown that is reflected in the credit contract or a consumer buydown, disclosures should not be based solely on the initial terms. In those transactions, the disclosed annual percentage rate should be a composite rate based on the lower rate for the buydown period and the rate that is the basis of the variable rate feature for the remainder of the term. (See the Commentary to § 226.17(c) for a discussion of buydown transactions.)

3. Use of estimates. The variable rate feature does not, by itself, make the disclosures estimates. (See the Commentary to § 226.17(c) for a discussion of basis for estimates.)

4. Terms used in disclosure. In describing the variable rate feature, the creditor need not use any prescribed terminology. For example, limitations and hypothetical examples may be described in terms of interest rates rather than annual percentage rates. The model forms in Appendix H provide examples of ways in which the variable rate disclosures may be made.

5. Other variable-rate regulations. Transactions in which the creditor is required to comply with and has complied with variable-rate regulations of other Federal agencies are exempt from the requirements of § 226.18(f), by virtue of footnote 43. Those variable-rate regulations include the adjustable mortgage loan instrument regulation issued by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board (12 CFR 545.33), the adjustable-rate mortgage regulation issued by the Comptroller of the Currency (12 CFR Part 29) and the adjustable-rate mortgage regulations issued by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (24 CFR Parts 203 and 234). The exception in footnote 43 is also available to creditors that are required by state law to comply with the Federal variable-rate regulations noted above and to creditors that are authorized by title VIII of the Depository Institutions Act of 1982 (Pub. L. 97-320) to make loans in accordance with those regulations. Creditors using this exception should comply with the timing requirements of those regulations rather than the timing requirements of Regulation Z in making the variable-rate disclosures.

6. Examples of variable rate transactions. The following transactions constitute variable rate transactions:

- Renegotiable rate mortgage instruments that involve a series of short-term loans secured by a long-term obligation, where the lender is obligated to renew the short-term loans at the consumer's option. At the time of renewal, the lender has the option of increasing the interest rate. Disclosures must be given for the longer term of the obligation, with all disclosures calculated on the basis of the rate in effect at the time of consummation of the transaction.
- "Shared equity" or "shared appreciation" mortgages that have a fixed rate of interest and an appreciation share based on the consumer's equity in the mortgaged property. The appreciation share is payable in a lump sum at a specified time. Disclosures must be based on the fixed interest rate. The shared appreciation feature, including the conditions for its imposition, the time at which it would be collected, and the limitation on the creditor's share, must be described under § 226.18(f). (As discussed in § 226.2, other types of shared-equity arrangements are not considered "credit" and are not subject to Regulation Z.)
- Preferred rate employee loans where the terms of the legal obligation provide that the rate will increase only if the employee leaves the employ of the creditor and the note reflects the preferred rate. The disclosures are to be based on that rate, with the hypothetical example based on the increase from the preferred rate.

Graduated payment mortgages and step-rate transactions without a variable rate feature are not considered variable rate transactions.

7. Growth equity mortgages. Also referred to as payment escalated mortgages, these mortgage plans involve scheduled payment increases to prematurely amortize the loan. The initial payment amount is determined as for a long-term loan with a fixed interest rate. Payment increases are scheduled periodically, based on changes in an index. The larger payments result in accelerated amortization of the loan. In disclosing these mortgage plans, creditors may either:

- Estimate the amount of payment increases, based on the best information reasonably available; or
- Disclose by analogy to the variable rate disclosures, indicating that the payments are subject to increase, describing the circumstances under which the payments would increase, together with limitations on the increase, and providing an example of the increase.

(This discussion does not apply to growth equity mortages in which the amount of payment increases can be accurately determined at the time of disclosure. For these mortages, as for graduated payment mortages, disclosures should reflect the scheduled increases in payments.)

8. Discounted variable-rate transactions. In some variable-rate transactions, creditors may set an initial interest rate that is not determined by the index or formula used to make later interest rate adjustments. Typically, this initial rate charged to consumers is lower than the rate would be if it were calculated using the index or formula. However, in some cases the initial rate may be higher. In a discounted transaction, for example, a creditor may calculate interest rates according to a formula using the six-month Treasury bill rate plus a 2 percent margin. If the Treasury bill rate at consummation is 10 percent, the creditor may forego the 2 percent spread and charge only 10 percent for a limited time, instead of setting an initial rate of 12 percent.

- When creditors use an initial interest rate that is not calculated using the index or formula for later rate adjustments, the disclosures should reflect a composite annual percentage rate based on the initial rate for as long as it is charged and, for the remainder of the term, the rate that would have been applied using the index or formula at the time of consummation. The rate at consummation need not be used if a contract provides for a delay in the implementation of changes in an index value. For example, if the contract specifies that rate changes are based on the index value in effect 45 days before the change date, creditors may use the index value in effect not more than 45 days before consummation in calculating a composite annual percentage rate.
- The effect of the multiple rates must also be reflected in the calculation and disclosure of the finance charge, total of payments, and payment schedule.
- If a loan contains a rate or payment cap that would prevent the initial rate or payment, at the time of the first adjustment, from changing to the rate determined by the index or formula at consummation, the effect of that rate or payment cap should be reflected in the disclosures.

- Because these transactions involve irregular payment amounts, an annual percentage rate tolerance of ¼ of 1 percent applies, in accordance with section § 226.22(a)(3) of the regulation.
- Examples of discounted variable-rate transactions include:

—A 30-year loan for $100,000 with no prepaid finance charges and rates determined by the Treasury bill rate plus 2 percent. Rate and payment adjustments are made annually. Although the Treasury bill rate at the time of consummation is 10 percent, the creditor sets the interest rate for one year at 9 percent, instead of 12 percent according to the formula. The disclosures should reflect a composite annual percentage rate of 11.63 percent based on 9 percent for one year and 12 percent for 29 years. Reflecting those two rate levels, the payment schedule should show 12 payments of $804.62 and 348 payments of $1,025.31. The finance charge should be $266,463.32 and the total of payments $366,463.32.

—Same loan as above, except with a 2 percent rate cap on periodic adjustments. The disclosures should reflect a composite annual percentage rate of 11.53 percent based on 9 percent for the first year, 11 percent for the second year, and 12 percent for the remaining 28 years. Reflecting those three rate levels, the payment schedule should show 12 payments of $804.62, 12 payments of $950.09, and 336 payments of $1,024.34. The finance charge should be $265,234.76, and the total of payments $365,234.76.

—Same loan as above, except with a 7½ percent cap on payment adjustments. The disclosures should reflect a composite annual percentage rate of 11.64 percent, based on 9 percent for one year and 12 percent for 29 years. Because of the payment cap, five levels of payments should be reflected. The payment schedule should show 12 payments of $804.62, 12 payments of $864.97, 12 payments of $929.86, 12 payments of $999.60, and 312 payments of $1,070.03. The finance charge should be $277,037.96, and the total of payments $377,037.96.

This paragraph does not apply to variable-rate loans in which the initial interest rate is set according to the index or formula used for later adjustments, but is not set at the value of the index or formula at consummation. For example, if a creditor commits to an initial rate based on the formula on a date prior to consummation, but the index has moved during the period between that time and consummation, a creditor should base its disclosures on the initial rate.

Paragraph 18(f)(1).

1. Circumstances. The circumstances under which the rate may increase include identification of any index to which the rate is tied, as well as any conditions or events on which the increase is contingent.

- When no specific index is used, any identifiable factors used to determine whether to increase the rate must be disclosed.
- When the increase in the rate is purely discretionary, the fact that any increase is within the creditor's discretion must be disclosed.
- When the index is internally defined (for example, by that creditor's prime rate), the creditor may comply with this requirement by either a brief description of that index or a statement that any increase is in the discretion of the creditor. An externally defined index, however, must be identified.

Paragraph 18(f)(2).

1. Limitations. This includes any maximum imposed on the amount of an increase in the rate at any time, as well as any maximum on the total increase over the life of the transaction. When there are no limitations, the creditor may, but need not, disclose that fact. Limitations do not include legal limits in the nature of usury or rate ceilings under state or federal statutes or regulations.

Paragraph 18(f)(3).

1. Effects. Disclosure of the effect of an increase refers to an increase in the number or amount of payments or an increase in the final payment. In addition, the creditor may make a brief reference to negative amortization that may result from a rate increase. (See the commentary to § 226.17(a)(1) regarding directly related information.) If the effect cannot be determined, the creditor must provide a statement of the possible effects. For example, if the exercise of the variable-rate feature may result in either more or larger payments, both possibilities must be noted.

Paragraph 18(f)(4).

1. Hypothetical example. The example may, at the creditor's option, appear apart from the other disclosures. The creditor may provide either a standard example that illustrates the terms and conditions of that type of credit offered by that creditor or an example that directly reflects the terms and conditions of the particular transaction.

2. Hypothetical example not required. The creditor need not provide a hypothetical example in the following transactions with a variable-rate feature:

- Demand obligations with no alternate maturity date.
- Interim student credit extensions.

- Multiple-advance construction loans disclosed pursuant to Appendix D, Part I.

18(g) Payment schedule.

1. Amounts included in repayment schedule. The repayment schedule should reflect all components of the finance charge, not merely the portion attributable to interest. A prepaid finance charge, however, should not be shown in the repayment schedule as a separate payment. The payments may include amounts beyond the amount financed and finance charge. For example, the disclosed payments may, at the creditor's option, reflect certain insurance premiums where the premiums are not part of either the amount financed or the finance charge, as well as real estate escrow amounts such as taxes added to the payment in mortage transactions.

2. Deferred downpayments. As discussed in the commentary to § 226.2(a)(18), deferred downpayments or pick-up payments that meet the conditions set forth in the definition of downpayment may be treated as part of the downpayment. Even if treated as a downpayment, that amount may nevertheless be disclosed as part of the payment schedule, at the creditor's option.

3. Total number of payments. In disclosing the number of payments for transactions with more than one payment level, creditors may but need not disclose as a single figure the total number of payments for all levels. For example, in a transaction calling for 108 payments of $350, 240 payments of $335, and 12 payments of $330, the creditor need not state that there will be a total of 360 payments.

Paragraph 18(g)(1).

1. Demand obligations. In demand obligations with no alternate maturity date, the creditor has the option of disclosing only the due dates or periods of scheduled interest payments in the first year (for example, "interest payable quarterly" or "interest due the first of each month"). The amounts of the interest payments need not be shown.

Paragraph 18(g)(2).

1. Abbreviated disclosure. The creditor may disclose an abbreviated payment schedule when the amount of each regularly scheduled payment (other than the first or last payment) includes an equal amount to be applied on principal and a finance charge computed by application of a rate to the decreasing unpaid balance. This option is also available when mortage-guarantee insurance premiums, paid either monthly or annually, cause variations in the amount of the scheduled payments, reflecting the continual decrease or increase in the premium due. The creditor using this alternative must disclose the dollar amount of the highest and lowest payments and make reference to the variation in payments.

2. Combined payment schedule disclosures. Creditors may combine the option in this paragraph with the general payment schedule requirements in transactions where only a portion of the payment schedule meets the conditions of § 226.18(g)(2). For example, in a graduated payment mortgage where payments rise sharply for 5 years and then decline over the next 25 years because of decreasing mortgage insurance premiums, the first 5 years would be disclosed under the general rule in § 226.18(g) and the next 25 years according to the abbreviated schedule in § 226.18(g)(2).

3. Effect on other disclosures. Section 226.18(g)(2) applies only to the payment schedule disclosure. The actual amounts of payments must be taken into account in calculating and disclosing the finance charge and the annual percentage rate.

18(h) Total of payments.

1. Disclosure required. The total of payments must be disclosed using that term, along with a descriptive phrase similar to the one in the regulation. The descriptive explanation may be revised to reflect a variable rate feature with a brief phrase such as "based on the current annual percentage rate which may change."

2. Calculation of total of payments. The total of payments is the sum of the payments disclosed under § 226.18(g). For example, if the creditor disclosed a deferred portion of the downpayment as part of the payment schedule, that payment must be reflected in the total disclosed under this paragraph.

3. Exception. Footnote 44 permits creditors to omit disclosure of the total of payments in single-payment transactions. This exception does not apply to a transaction calling for a single payment of principal combined with periodic payments of interest.

4. Demand obligations. In demand obligations with no alternate maturity date, the creditor may omit disclosure of payment amounts under § 226.18(g)(1). In those transactions, the creditor need not disclose the total of payments.

18(i) Demand feature.

1. Disclosure requirements. The disclosure requirements of this provision apply not only to transactions payable on demand from the outset, but also to transactions that are not payable on demand at the time of consummation but convert to a demand status after a stated period. In demand obligations in which the disclosures are based on an assumed maturity of 1 year under § 226.17(c)(5), that fact must also be stated. Appendix H contains model clauses that may be used in making this disclosure.

2. Covered demand features. The type of demand feature triggering the disclosures required by § 226.18(i) includes only those demand features contemplated by the parties as part of the legal obligation. For example, this provision does not apply to transactions that covert to a demand status as a result of the consumer's default. A due-on-sale clause is not considered a demand feature.

3. Relationship to payment schedule disclosures. As provided in § 226.18(g)(1), in demand obligations with no alternate maturity date, the creditor need only disclose the due dates or payment periods of any scheduled interest payments for the first year. If the demand obligation states an alternate maturity, however, the disclosed payment schedule must reflect that stated term; the special rule in § 226.18(g)(1) is not available.

18(j) Total sale price.

1. Disclosure required. In a credit sale transaction, the "total sale price" must be disclosed using that term, along with a descriptive explanation similar to the one in the regulation. For variable rate transactions, the descriptive phrase may, at the creditor's option, be modified to reflect the variable rate feature. For example, the descriptor may read: "The total cost of your purchase on credit, which is subject to change, including your downpayment of * * *." The reference to a downpayment may be eliminated in transactions calling for no downpayment.

2. Calculation of total sale price. The figure to be disclosed is the sum of the cash price, other charges added under § 226.18(b)(2), and the finance charge disclosed under § 226.18(d).

18(k) Prepayment.

1. Disclosure required. The creditor must give a definitive statement of whether or not a penalty will be imposed or a rebate will be given.

- The fact that no penalty will be imposed may not simply be inferred from the absence of a penalty disclosure; the creditor must indicate that prepayment will not result in a penalty.
- If a penalty or refund is possible for one type of prepayment, even though not for all, a positive disclosure is required. This applies to any type of prepayment, whether voluntary or involuntary as in the case of prepayments resulting from acceleration.
- Any difference in rebate or penalty policy, depending on whether prepayment is voluntary or not, must not be disclosed with the segregated disclosures.

2. Rebate-penalty disclosure. A single transaction may involve both a precomputed finance charge and a finance charge computed by application of a rate to the unpaid balance (for example, mortgages with mortgage-guarantee insurance). In these cases, disclosures about both prepayment rebates and penalties are required. Sample form H-15 in appendix H illustrates a mortgage transaction in which both rebate and penalty disclosures are necessary.

3. Prepaid finance charge. The existence of a prepaid finance charge in a transaction does not, by itself, require a disclosure under § 226.18(k). A prepaid finance charge is not considered a penalty under § 226.18(k)(1), nor does it require a disclosure under § 226.18(k)(2). At its option, however, a creditor may consider a prepaid finance charge to be under § 226.18(k)(2). If a disclosure is made under § 226.18(k)(2) with respect to a prepaid finance charge or other finance charge, the creditor may further identify that finance charge. For example, the disclosure may state that the borrower "will not be entitled to a refund of the prepaid finance charge" or some other term that describes the finance charge.

Paragraph 18(k)(1).

1. Penalty. This applies only to those transactions in which the interest calculation takes account of all scheduled reductions in principal, as well as transactions in which interest calculations are made daily. The term "penalty" as used here encompasses only those charges that are assessed strictly because of the prepayment in full of a simple-interest obligation, as an addition to all other amounts. Items which are not penalties include, for example:

- Loan guarantee fees.
- Interim interest on a student loan.

However, a minimum finance charge is a penalty in a simple-interest transaction. (See the commentary to § 226.17(a)(1) regarding the disclosure of a minimum finance charge as directly related information.)

Paragraph 18(k)(2).

1. Rebate of finance charge. This applies to any finance charges that do not take account of each reduction in the principal balance of an obligation. This category includes, for example:

- Precomputed finance charges such as add-on charges.
- Charges that take account of some but not all reductions in principal, such as mortgage guarantee insurance assessed on the basis of an annual declining balance, when the principal is reduced on a monthly basis.

No description of the method of computing earned or unearned finance charges is required or permitted as part of the segregated disclosures under this section.

18(l) Late payment.

1. Definition. This paragraph requires a disclosure only if charges are added to individual delinquent installments by a creditor who otherwise considers the transaction ongoing on its original terms. Late payment charges do not include:

- The right of acceleration.

- Fees imposed for actual collection costs, such as repossession charges or attorney's fees.
- Deferral and extension charges.
- The continued accrual of simple interest at the contract rate after the payment due date. However, an increase in the interest rate is a late payment charge to the extent of the increase.

2. Content of disclosure. Many state laws authorize the calculation of late charges on the basis of either a percentage or a specified dollar amount, and permit imposition of the lesser or greater of the 2 charges. The disclosure made under § 226.18(l) may reflect this alternative. For example, stating that the charge in the event of a late payment is 5% of the late amount, not to exceed $5.00, is sufficient. Many creditors also permit a grace period during which no late charge will be assessed; this fact may be disclosed as directly related information. (See the commentary to § 226.17(a).)

18(m) Security interest.

1. Purchase money transactions. When the collateral is the item purchased as part of, or with the proceeds of, the credit transaction, § 226.18(m) requires only a general identification such as "the property purchased in this transaction." The creditor may give a more specific identification of the collateral, although only the abbreviated disclosure is necessary. Any transaction in which the credit is being used to purchase the collateral is considered a purchase money transaction and the abbreviated property identification may be used, whether the obligation is treated as a loan or a credit sale.

2. Non-purchase money transactions. In non-purchase money transactions, the property subject to the security interest must be identified by item or type. This disclosure is satisfied by a general disclosure of the category of property subject to the security interest, such as "household goods," "motor vehicles," or "securities." At the creditor's option, however, a more precise identification of the property or goods may be provided.

3. Mixed collateral. In some transactions in which the credit is used to purchase the collateral, the creditor may also take other property of the consumer as security. In those cases, a combined disclosure must be provided, consisting of the abbreviated property identification for the purchase money collateral (although more detail may be given, at the creditor's option) and a more specific identification of the other collateral.

4. After-acquired property. An after-acquired property clause is not a security interest to be disclosed under § 226.18(m).

5. Spreader clause. The fact that collateral for pre-existing credit with the institution is being used to secure the present obligation constitutes a security interest and must be disclosed. (Such security interests may be known as "spreader" or "dragnet" clauses, or as "cross-collateralization" clauses.) A specific identification of that collateral is unnecessary but a reminder of the interest arising from the prior indebtedness is required. The disclosure may be made by using language such as "collateral securing other loans with us may also secure this loan." At the creditor's option, a more specific description of the property involved may be given.

6. Terms used in disclosure. No specified terminology is required in disclosing a security interest. Although the disclosure may, at the creditor's option, use the term "security interest," the creditor may designate its interest by using, for example, "pledge," "lien," or "mortgage."

7. Collateral from third party. In certain transactions, the consumer's obligation may be secured by collateral belonging to a third party. For example, a loan to a student may be secured by an interest in the property of the student's parents. In such cases, the security interest is taken in connection with the transaction and must be disclosed, even though the property encumbered is owned by someone other than the consumer.

18(n) Insurance.

1. Location. This disclosure may, at the creditor's option, appear apart from the other disclosures. It may appear with any other information, including the amount financed itemization, any information prescribed by state law, or other supplementary material. When this information is disclosed with the other segregated disclosures, however, no additional explanatory material may be included.

18(o) Certain security interest charges.

1. Format. No special format is required for these disclosures; under § 226.4(e), taxes and fees paid to government officials with respect to a security interest may be aggregated, or may be broken down by individual charge. For example, the disclosure could be labelled "filing fees and taxes" and all funds disbursed for such purposes may be aggregated in a single disclosure. This disclosure may appear, at the creditor's option, apart from the other required disclosures. The inclusion of this information on a statement required under the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act is sufficient disclosure for purposes of Truth in Lending.

18(p) Contract reference.

1. Content. Creditors may substitute, for the phrase "appropriate contract document," a reference to specific transaction documents in which the additional information is found, such as "promissory note" or "retail installment sale contract." A creditor may, at its option, delete inapplicable items in the contract reference, as for example when the contract documents contain no information regarding the right of acceleration.

18(q) Assumption policy.

1. Policy statement. In many mortgages, the creditor cannot determine, at the time disclosure must be made, whether a loan may be assumable at a future date on its original terms. For example, the assumption clause commonly used in mortgages sold to the Federal National Mortgage Association and the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation conditions an assumption on a variety of factors such as the creditworthiness of the subsequent borrower, the potential for impairment of the lender's security, and execution of an assumption agreement by the subsequent borrower. In cases where uncertainty exists as to the future assumability of a mortgage, the disclosure under § 226.18(q) should reflect that fact. In making disclosures in such cases, the creditor may use phrases such as "subject to conditions," "under certain circumstances," or "depending on future conditions." The creditor may provide a brief reference to more specific criteria such as a due-on-sale clause, although a complete explanation of all conditions is not appropriate. For example, the disclosure may state, "Someone buying your home may be allowed to assume the mortgage on its original terms, subject to certain conditions, such as payment of an assumption fee." See comment 17(a)(1)-5 for an example for a reference to a due-on-sale clause.

2. Original terms. The phrase "original terms" for purposes of § 226.18(q) does not preclude the imposition of an assumption fee, but a modification of the basic credit agreement, such as a change in the contract interest rate, represents different terms.

18(r) Required deposit.

1. Disclosure required. The creditor must inform the consumer of the existence of a required deposit. (Appendix H provides a model clause that may be used in making that disclosure.) Footnote 45 describes 3 types of deposits that need not be considered required deposits. Use of the phrase "need not" permits creditors to include the disclosure even in cases where there is doubt as to whether the deposit constitutes a required deposit.

2. Pledged account mortgages. In these transactions, a consumer pledges as collateral funds that the consumer deposits in an account held by the creditor. The creditor withdraws sums from that account to supplement the consumer's periodic payments. Creditors may treat these pledged accounts as required deposits or they may treat them as consumer buydowns in accordance with the commentary to § 226.17(c)(1).

3. Escrow accounts. The escrow exception in footnote 45 applies, for example, to accounts for such items as maintenance fees, repairs, or improvements, whether in a realty or a nonrealty transaction. (See the commentary to § 226.17(c)(1) regarding the use of escrow accounts in consumer buydown transactions.)

4. Interest-bearing accounts. When a deposit earns at least 5 percent interest per year, no disclosure is required under § 226.18(r). This exception applies whether the deposit is held by the creditor or by a third party.

5. Morris Plan transactions. A deposit under a Morris Plan, in which a deposit account is created for the sole purpose of accumulating payments and this is applied to satisfy entirely the consumer's obligation in the transaction, is not a required deposit.

6. Examples of amounts excluded. The following are among the types of deposits that need not be treated as required deposits:

- Requirement that a borrower be a customer or a member even if that involves a fee or a minimum balance.
- Required property insurance escrow on a mobile home transaction.
- Refund of interest when the obligation is paid in full.
- Deposits that are immediately available to the consumer.
- Funds deposited with the creditor to be disbursed (for example, for construction) before the loan proceeds are advanced.
- Escrow of condominium fees.
- Escrow of loan proceeds to be released when the repairs are completed.

1981 changes: Five of the required disclosures must be explained to the consumer in a manner similar to the descriptive phrases shown in the regulation. A written itemization of the amount financed need not be provided unless the consumer requests it. The finance charge must be provided in all transactions, including real estate transactions, but must be shown only as a total amount. The disclosed finance charge is considered accurate if it is within a specified range.

The variable rate hypothetical is required in all variable rate transactions and may be either general or transaction-specific. The penalty and rebate disclosures in the event of prepayment have been modified and combined. The requirement of an explanation of how the rebates or penalties are computed has been eliminated. The late payment disclosure has also been narrowed to include only charges imposed before maturity for late payments.

The information required in the security interest disclosure has been decreased by the deletion of the type of security interest and a reduction in the property description requirement. The disclosure of the required deposit is limited to a statement that the annual percentage rate does not reflect the required deposit; the presence of a required deposit has no effect on the annual percentage rate.

Two disclosure requirements have been added: A reference to the contract documents for additional information and, in a residential mortgage transaction, a statement of the creditor's assumption policy.

Section 226.19—Certain Residential Mortgage Transactions

19(a) Time of disclosure.

1. Coverage. This section requires early disclosure of credit terms in residential mortgage transactions that are also subject to the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA) and its implementing Regulation X, administered by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). To be covered by this section, a transaction must be both a residential mortgage transaction under § 226.2(a) and a federally related mortgage loan under RESPA. "Federally related mortgage loan" is defined under RESPA (12 USC 2602) and Regulation X (24 CFR 3500.5(b)), and is subject to any interpretations by HUD.

2. Timing and use of estimates. Truth in Lending disclosures must be given (a) before consummation or (b) within three business days after the creditor receives the consumer's written application, whichever is earlier. The three-day period for disclosing credit terms coincides with the time period within which creditors subject to RESPA must provide good faith estimates of settlement costs. If the creditor does not know the precise credit terms, the creditor must base the disclosures on the best information reasonably available and indicate that the disclosures are estimates under § 226.17(c)(2). If many of the disclosures are estimates, the creditor may include a statement to that effect (such as "all numerical disclosures except the late-payment disclosure are estimates") instead of separately labelling each estimate. In the alternative, the creditor may label as an estimate only the items primarily affected by unknown information. (See the Commentary to § 226.17(c)(2).) The creditor may provide explanatory material concerning the estimates and the contingencies that may affect the actual terms, in accordance with the commentary to § 226.17(a)(1).

3. Written application. Creditors may rely on RESPA and Regulation X (including any interpretations issued by HUD) in deciding whether a "written application" has been received. In general, Regulation X requires disclosures "to every person from whom the Lender receives or for whom it prepares a written application on an application form or forms normally used by the Lender for a Federally Related Mortgage Loan" (24 CFR 3500.6(a)). An application is received when it reaches the creditor in any of the ways applications are normally transmitted—by mail, hand delivery, or through an intermediary agent or broker. If an application reaches the creditor through an intermediary agent or broker, the application is received when it reaches the creditor, rather than when it reaches the agent or broker.

4. Exceptions. The creditor may determine within the 3-day period that the application will not or cannot be approved on the terms requested, as, for example, when a consumer applies for a type or amount of credit that the creditor does not offer, or the consumer's application cannot be approved for some other reason. In that case, the creditor need not make the disclosures under this section. If the creditor fails to provide early disclosures and the transaction is later consummated on the original terms, the creditor will be in violation of this provision. If, however, the consumer amends the application because of the creditor's unwillingness to approve it on its original terms, no violation occurs for not providing disclosures based on the original terms. But the amended application is a new application subject to this section.

5. Itemization of amount financed. In many residential mortgage transactions, the itemization of the amount financed required by § 226.18(c) will contain items, such as origination fees or points, that also must be disclosed as part of the good faith estimates of settlement costs required under RESPA. Creditors furnishing the RESPA good faith estimates need not give consumers any itemization of the amount financed, either with the disclosures provided within 3 days after application or with the disclosures given at consummation or settlement.

19(b) Redisclosure required.

1. Conditions for redisclosure. Creditors must make new disclosures if the annual percentage rate at consummation differs from the estimate originally disclosed by more than ⅛ of 1 percentage point in regular transactions or ¼ of 1 percentage point in irregular transactions, as defined in § 226.22. The creditor must also redisclose if a variable rate feature is added to the credit terms after the original disclosures have been made. The creditor has the option of redisclosing information under other circumstances, if it wishes to do so.

2. Content of new disclosures. If redisclosure is required, the creditor may provide a complete set of new disclosures, or may redisclose only the terms that vary from those originally disclosed. If the creditor chooses to provide a complete set of new disclosures, the creditor may but need not highlight the new terms, provided that the disclosures comply with the format requirements of § 226.17(a). If the creditor chooses to disclose only the new terms, all the new terms must be disclosed. For example, a different annual percentage rate will almost always produce a different finance charge, and often a new schedule of payments; all of these changes would have to be disclosed. If, in addition, unrelated terms such as the amount financed or prepayment penalty vary from those originally disclosed, the accurate terms must be disclosed. However, no new disclosures are required if the only inaccuracies involve estimates other than the annual percentage rate, and no variable rate feature has been added.

3. Timing. Redisclosures, when necessary, must be given no later than "consummation or settlement." "Consummation" is defined in § 226.2(a). "Date of settlement" is defined in Regulation X (24 CFR 3500.2(a)) and is subject to any interpretations issued under RESPA and Regulation X.

Section 226.20—Subsequent Disclosure Requirements

20(a) Refinancings.

1. Definition. A refinancing is a new transaction requiring a complete new set of disclosures. Whether a refinancing has occurred is determined by reference to whether the original obligation has been satisfied or extinguished and replaced by a new obligation, based on the parties' contract and applicable law. The refinancing may involve the consolidation of several existing obligations, disbursement of new money to the consumer or on the consumer's behalf, or the rescheduling of payments under an existing obligation. In any form, the new obligation must completely replace the prior one.

- Changes in the terms of an existing obligation, such as the deferral of individual installments, will not constitute a refinancing unless accomplished by the cancellation of that obligation and the substitution of a new obligation.
- A substitution of agreements that meets the refinancing definition will require new disclosures, even if the substitution does not substantially alter the prior credit terms.

2. Exceptions. A transaction is subject to § 226.20(a) only if it meets the general definition of a refinancing. Section 226.20(a) (1) through (5) lists 5 events that are not treated as refinancings, even if they are accomplished by cancellation of the old obligation and substitution of a new one.

3. Variable rate. If a variable-rate feature was properly disclosed under the regulation, a rate change in accord with those disclosures is not a refinancing. For example, a renegotiable rate mortgage that was disclosed as a variable-rate transaction is not subject to new disclosure requirements when the variable-rate feature is invoked. However, even if it is not accomplished by the cancellation of the old obligation and substitution of a new one, a new transaction subject to new disclosures results if the creditor either:

- Increases the rate based on a variable-rate feature that was not previously disclosed, or
- Adds a variable-rate feature to the obligation.

4. Unearned finance charge. In a transaction involving precomputed finance charges, the creditor must include in the finance charge on the refinanced obligation any unearned portion of the original finance charge that is not rebated to the consumer or credited against the underlying obligation. For example, in a transaction with an add-on finance charge, a creditor advances new money to a consumer in a fashion that extinguishes the original obligation and replaces it with a new one. The creditor neither refunds the unearned finance charge on the original obligation to the consumer nor credits it to the remaining balance on the old obligation. Under these circumstances, the unearned finance charge must be included in the finance charge on the new obligation and reflected in the annual percentage rate disclosed on refinancing. Accrued but unpaid finance charges are included in the amount financed in the new obligation.

5. Coverage. Section 226.20(a) applies only to refinancings undertaken by the original creditor or a holder or servicer of the original obligation. A "refinancing" by any other person is a new transaction under the regulation, not a refinancing under this section.

Paragraph 20(a)(1).

1. Renewal. This exception applies both to obligations with a single payment of principal and interest and to obligations with periodic payments of interest and a final payment of principal. In determining whether a new obligation replacing an old one is a renewal of the original terms or a refinancing, the creditor may consider it a renewal even if:

- Accrued unpaid interest is added to the principal balance.
- Changes are made in the terms of renewal resulting from the factors listed in § 226.17(c)(3).
- The principal at renewal is reduced by a curtailment of the obligation.

Paragraph 20(a)(2).

1. Annual percentage rate reduction. A reduction in the annual percentage rate with a corresponding change in the payment schedule is not a refinancing. A corresponding change in the payment schedule could include, for example, a change in the maturity or a reduction in the payment amount or the number of payments. If the annual percentage rate is subsequently increased (even though it remains below its original level) and the increase is effected in such a way that the old obligation is satisfied and replaced, new disclosures must then be made.

Paragraph 20(a)(3).

1. Court agreements. This exception includes, for example, agreements such as reaffirmations of debts discharged in bankruptcy, settlement agreements, and post-judgment agreements. (See the commentary to § 226.2(a)(14) for a discussion of court-approved agreements that are not considered "credit.")

Paragraph 20(a)(4).

1. Workout agreements. A workout agreement is not a refinancing unless the annual percentage rate is increased or additional credit is advanced beyond amounts already accrued plus insurance premiums.

Paragraph 20(a)(5).

1. Insurance renewal. The renewal of optional insurance added to an existing credit transaction is not a refinancing, assuming that appropriate Truth in Lending disclosures were provided for the initial purchase of the insurance.

20(b) Assumptions.

1. General definition. An assumption as defined in § 226.20(b) is a new transaction and new disclosures must be made to the subsequent consumer. An assumption under the regulation requires the following three elements:

- A residential mortgage transaction.
- An express acceptance of the subsequent consumer by the creditor.
- A written agreement.

The assumption of a nonexempt consumer credit obligation requires no disclosures unless all three elements are present. For example, an automobile dealer need not provide Truth in Lending disclosures to a customer who assumes an existing obligation secured by an automobile. However, a residential mortgage transaction with the elements described in § 226.20(b) is an assumption that calls for new disclosures; the disclosures must be given whether or not the assumption is accompanied by changes in the terms of the obligation. (See comment 2(a)(24)-5 for a discussion of assumptions that are not considered residential mortgage transactions.)

2. Existing residential mortgage transaction. A transaction may be a residential mortgage transaction as to one consumer and not to the other consumer. In that case, the creditor must look to the assuming consumer in determining whether a residential mortgage transaction exists. To illustrate:

- The original consumer obtained a mortgage to purchase a home for vacation purposes. The loan was not a residential mortgage transaction as to that consumer. The mortgage is assumed by a consumer who will use the home as a principal dwelling. As to that consumer, the loan is a residential mortgage transaction. For purposes of § 226.20(b), the assumed loan is an "existing residential mortgage transaction" requiring disclosures, if the other criteria for an assumption are met.

3. Express agreement. "Expressly agrees" means that the creditor's agreement must relate specifically to the new debtor and must unequivocally accept that debtor as a primary obligor. The following events are not construed to be express agreements between the creditor and the subsequent consumer:

- Approval of creditworthiness.
- Notification of a change in records.
- Mailing of a coupon book to the subsequent consumer.
- Acceptance of payments from the new consumer.

4. Retention of original consumer. The retention of the original consumer as an obligor in some capacity does not prevent the change from being an assumption, provided the new consumer becomes a primary obligor. But the mere addition of a guarantor to an obligation for which the original consumer remains primarily liable does not give rise to an assumption. However, if neither party is designated as the primary obligor but the creditor accepts payment from the subsequent consumer, an assumption exists for purposes of § 226.20(b).

5. Status of parties. Section 226.20(b) applies only if the previous debtor was a consumer and the obligation is assumed by another consumer. It does not apply, for example, when an individual takes over the obligation of a corporation.

6. Disclosures. For transactions that are assumptions within this provision, the creditor must make disclosures based on the "remaining obligation." For example:

- The amount financed is the remaining principal balance plus any arrearages or other accrued charges from the original transaction.
- If the finance charge is computed from time to time by application of a percentage rate to an unpaid balance, in determining the amount of the finance charge and the annual percentage rate to be disclosed, the creditor should disregard any prepaid finance charges paid by the original obligor, but must include in the finance charge any prepaid finance charge imposed in connection with the assumption.
- If the creditor requires the assuming consumer to pay any charges as a condition of the assumption, those sums are prepaid finance charges as to that consumer, unless exempt from the finance charge under § 226.4.

If a transaction involves add-on or discount finance charges, the creditor may make abbreviated disclosures, as outlined in § 226.20(b)(1) through (5).

7. Abbreviated disclosures. The abbreviated disclosures permitted for assumptions of transactions involving add-on or discount finance charges must be made clearly and conspicuously in writing in a form that the consumer may keep. However, the creditor need not comply with the segregation requirement of § 226.17(a)(1). The terms "annual percentage rate" and "total of payments," when disclosed according to § 226.20(b) (4) and (5), are not subject to the description requirements of § 226.18 (e) and (h). The term "annual percentage rate" disclosed under § 226.20(b)(4) need not be more conspicuous than other disclosures.

1981 changes: While the previous regulation treated virtually any change in terms as a refinancing requiring new disclosures, this regulation limits refinancings to transactions in which the entire original obligation is extinguished and replaced by a new one. Redisclosure is no longer required for deferrals or extensions.

The assumption provision retains the substance of § 226.8(k) and Interpretation § 226.807 of the previous regulation, but limits its scope to residential mortgage transactions.

Section 226.21—Treatment of Credit Balances

1. Credit balance. A credit balance arises whenever the creditor receives or holds funds in an account in excess of the total balance due from the consumer on that account. A balance might result, for example, from the debtor's paying off a loan by transmitting funds in excess of the total balance owed on the account, or from the early payoff of a loan entitling the consumer to a rebate of insurance premiums and finance charges. However, § 226.21 does not determine whether the creditor in fact owes or holds sums for the consumer. For example, if a creditor has no obligation to rebate any portion of precomputed finance charges on prepayment, the consumer's early payoff would not create a credit balance with respect to those charges. Similarly, nothing in this provision interferes with any rights the creditor may have under the contract or under state law with respect to set-off, cross collateralization, or similar provisions.

2. Total balance due. The phrase "total balance due" refers to the total outstanding balance. Thus, this provision does not apply where the consumer has simply paid an amount in excess of the payment due for a given period.

3. Timing of refund. The creditor may also fulfill its obligation under this section by:

- Refunding any credit balance to the consumer immediately.
- Refunding any credit balance prior to a written request from the consumer.
- Making a good faith effort to refund any credit balance before 6 months have passed. If that attempt is unsuccessful, the creditor need not try again to refund the credit balance at the end of the 6-month period.

Paragraph 21(b).

1. Written requests—standing orders. The creditor is not required to honor standing orders requesting refunds of any credit balance that may be created on the consumer's account.

Paragraph 21(c).

1. Good faith effort to refund. The creditor must take positive steps to return any credit balance that has remained in the account for over 6 months. This includes, if necessary, attempts to trace the consumer through the consumer's last known address or telephone number, or both.

2. Good faith effort unsuccessful. Section 226.21 imposes no further duties on the creditor if a good faith effort to return the balance is unsuccessful. The ultimate disposition of the credit balance (or any credit balance of $1 or less) is to be determined under other applicable law.

Section 226.22—Determination of the Annual Percentage Rate

22(a) Accuracy of the annual percentage rate.

Paragraph 22(a)(1).

1. Calculation method. The regulation recognizes both the actuarial method and the United States Rule Method (U.S. Rule) as measures of an exact annual percentage rate. Both methods yield the same annual percentage rate when payment intervals are equal. They differ in their treatment of unpaid accrued interest.

2. Actuarial method. When no payment is made, or when the payment is insufficient to pay the accumulated finance charge, the actuarial method requires that the unpaid finance charge be added to the amount financed and thereby capitalized. Interest is computed on interest since in succeeding periods the interest rate is applied to the unpaid balance including the unpaid finance charge. Appendix J provides instructions and examples for calculating the annual percentage rate using the actuarial method.

3. U.S. Rule. The U.S. Rule produces no compounding of interest in that any unpaid accrued interest is accumulated separately and is not added to principal. In addition, under the U.S. Rule, no interest calculation is made until a payment is received.

4. Basis for calculations. When a transaction involves "step rates" or "split rates"—that is, different rates applied at different times or to different portions of the principal balance—a single composite annual percentage rate must be calculated and disclosed for the entire transaction. Assume, for example, a step-rate transaction in which a $10,000 loan is repayable in 5 years at 10 percent interest for the first 2 years, 12 percent for years 3 and 4, and 14 percent for year 5. The monthly payments are $210.71 during the first 2 years of the term, $220.25 for years 3 and 4, and $222.59 for year 5. The composite annual percentage rate, using a calculator with a "discounted cash flow analysis" or "internal rate of return" function, is 10.75 percent.

5. Good faith reliance on faulty calculation tools. Footnote 45a absolves a creditor of liability for an error in the annual percentage rate or finance charge that resulted from a corresponding error in a calculation tool used in good faith by the creditor. Whether or not the creditor's use of the tool was in good faith must be determined on a case-by-case basis, but the creditor must in any case have taken reasonable steps to verify the accuracy of the tool, including any instructions, before using it. Generally, the footnote is available only for errors directly attributable to the calculation tool itself, including software programs; it is not intended to absolve a creditor of liability for its own errors, or for errors arising from improper use of the tool, from incorrect data entry, or from misapplication of the law.

Paragraph 22(a)(2).

1. Regular transactions. The annual percentage rate for a regular transaction is considered accurate if it varies in either direction by not more than ⅛ of 1 percentage point from the actual annual percentage rate. For example, when the exact annual percentage rate is determined to be 10⅛%, a disclosed annual percentage rate from 10% to 10¼%, or the decimal equivalent, is deemed to comply with the regulation.

Paragraph 22(a)(3).

1. Irregular transactions. The annual percentage rate for an irregular transaction is considered accurate if it varies in either direction by not more than ¼ of 1 percentage point from the actual annual percentage rate. This tolerance is intended for more complex transactions that do not call for a single advance and a regular series of equal payments at equal intervals. The ¼ of 1 percentage point tolerance may be used, for example, in a construction loan where advances are made as construction progresses, or in a transaction where payments vary to reflect the consumer's seasonal income. It may also be used in transactions with graduated payment schedules where the contract commits the consumer to several series of payments in different amounts. It does not apply, however, to loans with variable rate features where the initial disclosures are based on a regular amortization schedule over the life of the loan, even though payments may later change because of the variable rate feature.

22(b) Computation tools.

Paragraph 22(b)(1).

1. Board tables. Volumes I and II of the Board's Annual Percentage Rate Tables provide a means of calculating annual percentage rates for regular and irregular transactions, respectively. An annual percentage rate computed in accordance with the instructions in the tables is deemed to comply with the regulation, even where use of the tables produces a rate that falls outside the general standard of accuracy. To illustrate:

- Volume I may be used for single advance transactions with completely regular payment schedules or with payment schedules that are regular except for an odd first payment, odd first period or odd final payment. When used for a transaction with a large final balloon payment, Volume I may produce a rate that is considerably higher than the exact rate produced using a computer program based directly on Appendix J. However, the Volume I rate—produced using certain adjustments in that volume—is considered to be in compliance.

Paragraph 22(b)(2).

1. Other calculation tools. Creditors need not use the Board tables in calculating the annual precentage rates. Any computation tools may be used, so long as they produce annual percentage rates within ⅛ or ¼ of 1 percentage point, as applicable, of the precise actuarial or U.S. Rule annual percentage rate.

22(c) Single add-on rate transactions.

1. General rule. Creditors applying a single add-on rate to all transactions up to 60 months in length may disclose the same annual percentage rate for all those transactions, although the actual annual percentage rate varies according to the length of the transaction. Creditors utilizing this provision must show the highest of those rates. For example:

- An add-on rate of 10 percent converted to an annual percentage rate produce the following actual annual percentage rates at various maturities: at 3 months, 14.94 percent; at 21 months, 18.18 percent; and at 60 months, 17.27 percent. The creditor must disclose an annual percentage rate of 18.18 percent (the highest annual percentage rate) for any transaction up to 5 years, even though that rate is precise only for a transaction of 21 months.

22(d) Certain transactions involving ranges of balances.

1. General rule. Creditors applying a fixed dollar finance charge to all balances within a specified range of balances may understate the annual percentage rate by up to 8 percent of that rate, by disclosing for all those balances the annual percentage rate computed on the median balance within that range. For example:

- If a finance charge of $9 applies to all balances between $91 and $100, an annual percentage rate of 10 percent (the rate on the median balance) may be disclosed as the annual percentage rate for all balances, even though a $9 finance charge applied to the lowest balance ($91) would actually produce an annual percentage rate of 10.7 percent.

Section 226.23—Right of Rescission

1. Transactions not covered. Credit extensions that are not subject to the regulation are not covered by § 226.23 even if a customer's principal dwelling is the collateral securing the credit. For example, the right of rescission does not apply to a business purpose loan, even though the loan is secured by the customer's principal dwelling.

23(a) Consumer's right to rescind.

Paragraph 23(a)(1).

1. Security interest arising from transaction. In order for the right of rescission to apply, the security interest must be retained as part of the credit transaction. For example:

- A security interest that is acquired by a contractor who is also extending the credit in the transaction.
- A mechanic's or materialman's lien that is retained by a subcontractor or supplier of the contractor-creditor, even when the latter has waived its own security interest in the consumer's home.

The security interest is not part of the credit transaction and therefore the transaction is not subject to the right of rescission when, for example:

- A mechanic's or materialman's lien is obtained by a contractor who is not a party to the credit transaction but is merely paid with the proceeds of the consumer's unsecured bank loan.
- All security interests that may arise in connection with the credit transaction are validly waived.
- The creditor obtains a lien and completion bond that in effect satisfies all liens against the consumer's principal dwelling as a result of the credit transaction.

Although liens arising by operation of law are not considered security interests for purposes of disclosure under § 226.2, that section specifically includes them in the definition for purposes of the right of rescission. Thus, even though an interest in the consumer's principal dwelling is not a required disclosure under § 226.18(m), it may still give rise to the right of rescission.

2. Consumer. To be a consumer within the meaning of § 226.2, that person must at least have an ownership interest in the dwelling that is encumbered by the creditor's security interest, although that person need not be a signatory to the credit agreement. For example, if only one spouse signs a credit contract, the other spouse is a consumer if the ownership interest of that spouse is subject to the security interest.

3. Principal dwelling. A consumer can only have one principal dwelling at a time. A vacation or other second home would not be a principal dwelling. A transaction secured by a second home (such as a vacation home) that is not currently being used as the consumer's principal dwelling is not rescindable, even if the consumer intends to reside there in the future. When a consumer buys or builds a new dwelling that will become the consumer's principal dwelling within one year or upon completion of construction, the new dwelling is considered the principal dwelling when it secures the acquisition or construction loan. Dwelling, as defined in § 226.2, includes structures that are classified as personalty under state law. For example, a transaction secured by a mobile home, trailer or houseboat used as the consumer's principal dwelling may be rescindable.

4. Special rule for principal dwelling. When the consumer is acquiring or constructing a new principal dwelling, any loan secured by the equity in the consumer's current principal dwelling (for example, a bridge loan) is still subject to the right of rescission regardless of the purpose of that loan.

5. Addition of a security interest. Under footnote 47, the addition of a security interest to a pre-existing obligation is rescindable. The right of rescission applies only to the added security interest, however, and not to the original obligation. In those situations, only the § 226.23(b) notice need be delivered, not new material disclosures; the rescission period will begin to run from the delivery of the notice.

Paragraph 23(a)(2).

1. Consumer's exercise of right. The consumer must exercise the right of rescission in writing but not necessarily on the notice supplied under § 226.23(b). Whatever the means of sending the notification of rescission—mail, telegram or other witten means—the time period for the creditor's performance under § 226.23(d)(2) does not begin to run until the notification has been received. The creditor may designate an agent to receive the notification so long as the agent's name and address appear on the notice provided to the consumer under § 226.23(b).

Paragraph 23(a)(3).

1. Rescission period. The period within which the consumer may exercise the right to rescind runs for 3 business days from the last of 3 events:

- Consummation of the transaction.
- Delivery of all material disclosures.
- Delivery to the consumer of the required rescission notice.

For example, if a transaction is consummated on Friday, June 1, and the disclosures and notice of the right to rescind were given on Thursday, May 31, the rescission period will expire at midnight of the third business day after June 1—that is, Tuesday, June 5. In another example, if the disclosures are given and the transaction consummated on Friday, June 1, and the rescission notice is given on Monday, June 4, the rescission period expires at midnight of the third business day after June 4—that is, Thursday, June 7. The consumer must place the rescission notice in the mail, file it for telegraphic transmission, or deliver it to the creditor's place of business within that period in order to exercise the right.

2. Material disclosures. Footnote 48 sets forth the material disclosures that must be provided before the rescission period can begin to run. Failure to provide information regarding the annual pecentage rate also includes failure to inform the consumer of the existence of a variable rate feature. Failure to give the other required disclosures does not prevent the running of the rescission period, although that failure may result in civil liability or administrative sanctions.

3. Unexpired right of rescission. When the creditor has failed to take the action necessary to start the three-business day rescission period running, the right to rescind automatically lapses on the occurrence of the earliest of the following three events:

- The expiration of three years after consummation of the transaction.
- Transfer of all the consumer's interest in the property.
- Sale of the consumer's interest in the property, including a transaction in which the consumer sells the dwelling and takes back a purchase money note and mortgage or retains legal title through a device such as an installment sale contract.

Transfer of all the consumers' interest includes such transfers as bequests and gifts. A sale or transfer of the property need not be voluntary to terminate the right to rescind. For example, a foreclosure sale would terminate an unexpired right to rescind. As provided in section 125 of the Act, the three-year limit may be extended by an administrative proceeding to enforce the provisions of this section. A partial transfer of the consumer's interest, such as a transfer bestowing co-ownership on a spouse, does not terminate the right of rescission.

Paragraph 23(a)(4).

1. Joint owners. When more than one consumer has the right to rescind a transaction, any of them may exercise that right and cancel the transaction on behalf of all. For example, if both husband and wife have the right to rescind a transaction, either spouse acting alone may exercise the right and both are bound by the rescission.

23(b) Notice of right to rescind.

1. Who receives notice. Each consumer entitled to rescind must be given:

- Two copies of the rescission notice.
- The material disclosures.

In a transaction involving joint owners, both of whom are entitled to rescind, both must receive the notice of the right to rescind and disclosures. For example, if both spouses are entitled to rescind a transaction, each must receive 2 copies of the rescission notice and one copy of the disclosures.

2. Format. The notice must be on a separate piece of paper, but may appear with other information such as the itemization of the amount financed. The material must be clear and conspicuous, but no minimum type size or other technical requirements are imposed. The notices in Appendix H provide models that creditors may use in giving the notice.

3. Content. The notice must include all of the information outlined in § 226.23(b) (1) through (5). The requirement in § 226.23(b) that the transaction be identified may be met by providing the date of the transaction. The creditor may provide a separate form that the consumer may use to exercise the right of rescission, or that form may be combined with the other rescission disclosures, as illustrated in Appendix H. The notice may include additional information related to the required information, such as:

- A description of the property subject to the security interest.
- A statement that joint owners may have the right to rescind and that a rescission by one is effective for all.
- The name and address of an agent of the creditor to receive notice of rescission.

4. Time of providing notice. The notice required by § 226.23(b) need not be given before consummation of the transaction. The creditor may deliver the notice after the transaction is consummated, but the rescission period will not begin to run until the notice is given. For example, if the creditor provides the notice on May 15, but disclosures were given and the transaction was consummated on May 10, the 3-business day rescission period will run from May 15.

23(c) Delay of creditor's performance.

1. General rule. Until the rescission period has expired and the creditor is reasonably satisfied that the consumer has not rescinded, the creditor must not, either directly or through a third party:

- Disburse loan proceeds to the consumer.
- Begin performing services for the consumer.
- Deliver materials to the consumer.

2. Escrow. The creditor may disburse loan proceeds during the rescission period in a valid escrow arrangement. The creditor may not, however, appoint the consumer as "trustee" or "escrow agent" and distribute funds to the consumer in that capacity during the delay period.

3. Permissible actions. Section 226.23(c) does not prevent the creditor from taking other steps during the delay, short of beginning actual performance. The creditor may, for example:

- Prepare the loan check.
- Perfect the security interest.
- Prepare to discount or assign the contract to a third party.
- Accrue finance charges during the delay period.

4. Delay beyond rescission period. The creditor must wait until it is reasonably satisfied that the consumer has not rescinded. For example, the creditor may satisfy itself by doing one of the following:

- Waiting a reasonable time after expiration of the rescission period to allow for delivery of a mailed notice.
- Obtaining a written statement from the consumer that the right has not been exercised.

When more than one consumer has the right to rescind, the creditor cannot reasonably rely on the assurance of only one consumer, because other consumers may exercise the right.

23(d) Effects of rescission.

Paragraph 23(d)(1).

1. Termination of security interest. Any security interest giving rise to the right of rescission becomes void when the consumer exercises the right of rescission. The security interest is automatically negated regardless of its status and whether or not it was recorded or perfected. Under § 226.23(d)(2), however, the creditor must take any action necessary to reflect the fact that the security interest no longer exists.

Paragraph 23(d)(2).

1. Refunds to consumer. The consumer cannot be required to pay any amount in the form of money or property either to the creditor or to a third party as part of the credit transaction. Any amounts of this nature already paid by the consumer must be refunded. "Any amount" includes finance charges already accrued, as well as other charges such as application and commitment fees or fees for a title search or appraisal, whether paid to the creditor, paid directly to a third party, or passed on from the creditor to the third party. It is irrelevant that these amounts may not represent profit to the creditor.

2. Amounts not refundable to consumer. Creditors need not return any money given by the consumer to a third party outside of the credit transaction, such as costs incurred for a building permit or for a zoning variance. Similarly, the term "any amount" does not apply to any money or property given by the creditor to the consumer; those amounts must be tendered by the consumer to the creditor under § 226.23(d)(3).

3. Reflection of security interest termination. The creditor must take whatever steps are necessary to indicate that the security interest is terminated. Those steps include the cancellation of documents creating the security interest, and the filing of release or termination statements in the public record. In a transaction involving subcontractors or suppliers that also hold security interests related to the credit transaction, the creditor must insure that the termination of their security interests is also reflected. The 20-day period for the creditor's action refers to the time within which the creditor must begin the process. It does not require all necessary steps to have been completed within that time, but the creditor is responsible for seeing the process through to completion.

Paragraph 23(d)(3).

1. Property exchange. Once the creditor has fulfilled its obligations under § 226.23(d)(2), the consumer must tender to the creditor any property or money the creditor has already delivered to the consumer. At the consumer's option, property may be tendered at the location of the property. For example, if lumber or fixtures have been delivered to the consumer's home, the consumer may tender them to the creditor by making them available for pick-up at the home, rather than physically returning them to the creditor's premises. Money already given to the consumer must be tendered at the creditor's place of business.

2. Reasonable value. If returning the property would be extremely burdensome to the consumer, the consumer may offer the creditor its reasonable value rather than returning the property itself. For example, if building materials have already been incorporated into the consumer's dwelling, the consumer may pay their reasonable value.

Paragraph 23(d)(4).

1. Modifications. The procedures outlined in § 226.23(d) (2) and (3) may be modified by a court. For example, when a consumer is in bankruptcy proceedings and prohibited from returning anything to the creditor, or when the equities dictate, a modification might be made.

23(e) Consumer's waiver of right to rescind.

1. Need for waiver. To waive the right to rescind, the consumer must have a bona fide personal financial emergency that must be met before the end of the rescission period. The existence of the consumer's waiver will not, of itself, automatically insulate the creditor from liability for failing to provide the right of rescission.

2. Procedure. To waive or modify the right to rescind, the consumer must give a written statement that specifically waives or modifies the right, and also includes a brief description of the emergency. Each consumer entitled to rescind must sign the waiver statement. In a transaction involving multiple consumers, such as a husband and wife using their home as collateral, the waiver must bear the signatures of both spouses.

23(f) Exempt transactions.

1. Residential mortgage transaction. Any transaction to construct or acquire a principal dwelling, whether considered real or personal property, is exempt. (See the commentary to § 226.23(a).) For example, a credit transaction to acquire a mobile home or houseboat to be used as the consumer's principal dwelling would not be rescindable.

2. Lien status. The lien status of the mortgage is irrelevant for purposes of the exemption in § 226.23(f)(1); the fact that a loan has junior lien status does not by itself preclude application of this exemption. For example, a home buyer may assume the existing first mortgage and create a second mortgage to finance the balance of the purchase price. Such a transaction would not be rescindable.

3. Combined-purpose transaction. A loan to acquire a principal dwelling and make improvements to that dwelling is exempt if treated as one transaction. If, on the other hand, the loan for the acquisition of the principal dwelling and the subsequent advances for improvements are treated as more than one transaction, then only the transaction that finances the acquisition of that dwelling is exempt.

4. New advances. The exemption in § 226.23(f)(2) applies only to refinancings or consolidations by the original creditor. If the transaction involves the advance of new money, then only the amount of the new money is rescindable. For example, if the sum of the outstanding principal balance plus the earned finance charge is $1,000 and the new amount financed is $1,000, then the refinancing would be exempt. On the other hand, if the new amount financed exceeds $1,000, then the amount in excess of that $1,000 would be rescindable. A model rescission notice applicable to transactions involving new money appears in Appendix H.

5. State creditors. Cities and other political subdivisions of states acting as creditors are not exempted from this section.

6. Multiple advances. Just as new disclosures need not be made for subsequent advances when treated as one transaction, no new rescission rights arise so long as the appropriate notice and disclosures are given at the outset of the transaction. For example, the creditor extends credit for home improvements secured by the consumer's principal dwelling, with advances made as repairs progress. As permitted by § 226.17(c)(6), the creditor makes a single set of disclosures at the beginning of the construction period, rather than separate disclosures for each advance. The right of rescission does not arise with each advance. However, if the advances are treated as separate transactions, the right of rescission applies to each advance.

7. Spreader clauses. When the creditor holds a mortgage or deed of trust on the consumer's principal dwelling and that mortgage or deed of trust contains a "spreader clause," subsequent loans made are separate transactions and are subject to the right of rescission. Those loans are rescindable unless the creditor effectively waives its security interest under the spreader clause with respect to the subsequent transactions.

8. Converting open-end to closed-end credit. Under certain state laws, consummation of a closed-end credit transaction may occur at the time a consumer enters into the initial open-end credit agreement. As provided in the commentary to § 226.17(b), closed-end credit disclosures may be delayed under these circumstances until the conversion of the open-end account to a closed-end transaction. In accounts secured by the consumer's principal dwelling, no new right of rescission arises at the time of conversion, assuming that the right of rescission was previously provided on the open-end account pursuant to § 226.15.

1981 changes: The right to rescind applies not only to real property used as the consumer's principal dwelling, but to personal property as well. The regulation provides no specific text or format for the notice of the right to rescind.

Section 226.24—Advertising

1. Clear and conspicuous standard. This section is subject to the general "clear and conspicous" standard for this subpart but prescribes no specific rules for the format of the necessary disclosures. The credit terms need not be printed in a certain type size nor need they appear in any particular place in the advertisment. For example, a merchandise tag that is an advertisement under the regulation complies with this section if the necessary credit terms are on both sides of the tag, so long as each side is accessible.

24(a) Actually available terms.

1. General rule. To the extent that an advertisement mentions specific credit terms, it may state only those terms that the creditor is actually prepared to offer. For example, a creditor may not advertise a very low annual percentage rate that will not in fact be available at any time. This provision is not intended to inhibit the promotion of new credit programs, but to bar the advertising of terms that are not and will not be available. For example, a creditor may advertise terms that will be offered for only a limited period, or terms that will become available at a future date.

24(b) Advertisment of rate of finance charge.

1. Annual percentage rate. Advertised rates must be stated in terms of an "annual percentage rate," as defined in § 226.22. Even though state or local law permits the use of add-on, discount, time-price differential, or other methods of stating rates, advertisements must state them as annual percentage rates. Unlike the transactional disclosure of the annual percentage rate under § 226.18(e), the advertised annual percentage rate need not include a descriptive explanation of the term. The advertisement must state that the rate is subject to increase after consummation if that is the case, but the advertisement need not describe the rate increase, its limits, or how it would affect the payment schedule. As under § 226.18(f), relating to disclosure of a variable rate, the rate increase disclosure requirement in this provision does not apply to any rate increase due to delinquency (including late payment), default, acceleration, assumption, or transfer of collateral.

2. Simple or periodic rates. The advertisement may not simultaneously state any other rate, except that a simple annual rate or periodic rate applicable to an unpaid balance may appear along with (but not more conspicuously than) the annual percentage rate. For example:

- In an advertisement for real estate, a simple interest rate may be shown in the same type size as the annual percentage rate for the advertised credit.

3. Buydowns. When a third party (such as a seller) or a creditor wishes to promote the availability of reduced interest rates (consumer or seller buydowns), the advertised annual percentage rate must be determined in accordance with the rules in the commentary to § 226.17(c) regarding the basis of transactional disclosures for buydowns. The seller or creditor may advertise the reduced simple interest rate, provided the advertisement shows the limited term to which the reduced rate applies and states the simple interest rate applicable to the balance of the term. The advertisement may also show the effect of the buydown agreement on the payment schedule for the buydown period without triggering the additional disclosures under § 226.24(c)(2). For example, the advertisement may state that "with this buydown arrangement, your monthly payments for the first 3 years of the mortgage term will be only $350" or "this buydown arrangement will reduce your monthly payments for the first 3 years of the mortgage term by $150."

4. Effective rates. In some transactions the consumer's payments may be based upon an interest rate lower than the rate at which interest is accruing. The lower rate may be referred to as the effective rate, payment rate or qualifying rate. A creditor or seller may advertise such rates by stating: The term of the reduced payment schedule, the interest rate upon which the reduced payments are calculated, the rate at which the interest is in fact accruing, and the annual percentage rate. The advertised annual percentage rate that must accompany this rate must take into account the interest that will accrue but will not be paid during this period. For example, an advertisement may state "An effective first year interest rate of 10 percent. Interest being earned at 14 percent. Annual percentage rate 15 percent."

5. Discounted variable-rate transactions. The advertised annual percentage rate for discounted variable-rate transactions must be determined in accordance with comment 18(f)-8 regarding the basis of transactional disclosures for such financing. A creditor or seller may promote the availability of the initial rate reduction in such transactions by advertising the reduced initial rate, provided the advertisement shows the limited term to which the reduced rate applies.

- Limits or caps on periodic rate or payment adjustments need not be stated. To illustrate using the second example in comment 18(f)-8, the fact that the rate is presumed to be 11 percent in the second year and 12 percent for the remaining 28 years need not be included in the advertisement.
- The advertisement may also show the effect of the discount on the payment schedule for the discount period without triggering the additional disclosures under § 226.24(c). For example, the advertisement may state that "with this discount, your monthly payments for the first year of the mortgage term will be only $577" or "this discount will reduce your monthly payments for the first year of the mortgage term by $223."

24(c) Advertisement of terms that require additional disclosures.

1. General rule. Under § 226.24(c)(1), whenever certain triggering terms appear in credit advertisements, the additional credit terms enumerated in § 226.24(c)(2) must also appear. These provisions apply even if the triggering term is not stated explicitly, but may be readily determined from the advertisement. For example, an advertisement may state "80% financing available," which is in fact indicating that a 20% downpayment is required.

Paragraph 24(c)(1).

1. Downpayment. The dollar amount of a downpayment or a statement of the downpayment as a percentage of the price requires further information. By virtue of the definition of "downpayment" in § 226.2, this triggering term is limited to credit sale transactions. It includes such statements as:

- "Only 5% down."
- "As low as $100 down."
- "Total move-in costs of $800."

This provision applies only if a downpayment is actually required; statements such as "no downpayment" or "no trade-in required" do not trigger the additional disclosures under this paragraph.

2. Payment period. The number of payments required or the total period of repayment includes such statements as:

- "48-month payment terms."
- "30-year mortgage."
- "Repayment in as many as 36 monthly installments."

But it does not include such statements as "pay weekly," "monthly payment terms arranged," or "take years to repay," since these statements do not indicate a time period over which a loan may be financed.

3. Payment amount. The dollar amount of any payment includes statements such as:

- "Payable in installments of $103."
- "$25 weekly."
- "$1,200 balance payable in 10 equal installments."

In the last example, the amount of each payment is readily determinable, even though not explicitly stated. But statements such as "monthly payments to suit your needs" or "regular monthly payments" are not covered.

4. Finance charge. The dollar amount of the finance charge or any portion of it includes statements such as:

- "$500 total cost of credit."
- "$2 monthly carrying charge."
- "$50,000 mortgages, 2 points to the borrower."

In the last example, the $1,000 prepaid finance charge can be readily determined from the information given. Statements of the annual percentage rate or statements that there is no particular charge for credit (such as "no closing costs") are not triggering terms under this paragraph.

Paragraph 24(c)(2).

1. Disclosure of downpayment. The total downpayment as a dollar amount or percentage must be shown, but the word "downpayment" need not be used in making this disclosure. For example, "10% cash required from buyer" or "credit terms require minimum $100 trade-in" would suffice.

2. Disclosure of repayment terms. While the phrase "terms of repayment" generally has the same meaning as the "payment schedule" required to be disclosed under § 226.18(g), § 226.24(c)(2)(ii) provides greater flexibility to creditors in making this disclosure for advertising purposes. Repayment terms may be expressed in a variety of ways in addition to an exact repayment schedule; this is particularly true for advertisements that do not contemplate a single specific transaction. For example:

- A creditor may use a unit-cost approach in making the required disclosure, such as "48 monthly payments of $27.83 per $1,000 borrowed."
- In an advertisement for credit secured by a dwelling, when any series of payments varies because of a graduated payment feature or because of the inclusion of mortgage insurance premiums, a creditor may state the number and timing of payments, the amounts of the largest and smallest of those payments, and the fact that other payments will vary between those amounts.

3. Annual percentage rate. The advertisement must also state, if applicable, that the annual percentage rate is subject to increase after consummation.

4. Use of examples. Footnote 49 authorizes the use of illustrative credit transactions to make the necessary disclosures under § 226.24(c)(2). That is, where a range of possible combinations of credit terms is offered, the advertisement may use examples of typical transactions, so long as each example contains all of the applicable terms required by § 226.24(c). The examples must be labelled as such and must reflect representative credit terms that are made available by the creditor to present and prospective customers.

24(d) Catalogs and multiple-page advertisements.

1. Definition. The multiple-page advertisements to which this section refers are advertisements consisting of a series of sequentially numbered pages—for example, a supplement to a newspaper. A mailing consisting of several separate flyers or pieces of promotional material in a single envelope does not constitute a single multiple-page advertisement for purposes of § 226.24(d).

2. General. Section 226.24(d) permits creditors to put credit information together in one place in a catalog or multiple-page advertisement. The rule applies only if the catalog or multiple-page advertisement contains one or more of the triggering terms from § 226.24(c)(1). A list of different annual percentage rates applicable to different balances, for example, does not trigger further disclosures under § 226.24(c)(2) and so is not covered by § 226.24(d).

3. Representative examples. The table or schedule must state all the necessary information for a representative sampling of amounts of credit. This must reflect amounts of credit the creditor actually offers, up to and including the higher-priced items. This does not mean that the chart must make the disclosures for the single most expensive item the seller offers, but only that the chart cannot be limited to information about less expensive sales when the seller commonly offers a distinct level of more expensive goods or services. The range of transactions shown in the table or schedule in a particular catalog or multiple-page advertisement need not exceed the range of transactions actually offered in that advertisement.

Previous regulation: Section 226.10 (a), (b), and (d).

1981 changes: This section retains the advertising rules in a form very similar to the previous regulation, but with certain changes to reflect the 1980 statutory amendments. For example, if triggering terms appear in any advertisement, the additional disclosures required no longer include the cash price. The special rule for FHA section 235 financing has been eliminated, as well as the rule for advertising credit payable in more than four installments with no identified finance charge. Interpretation § 226.1002, requiring disclosure of representative amounts of credit in catalogs and multiple-page advertisements, has been incorporated in simplified form in § 226.24(d).

Unlike the previous regulation, if the advertised annual percentage rate is subject to increase, that fact must now be disclosed.

SUBPART D—MISCELLANEOUS

Section 226.25—Record Retention

25(a) General rule.

1. Evidence of required actions. The creditor must retain evidence that it performed the required actions as well as made the required disclosures. This includes, for example, evidence that the creditor properly handled adverse credit reports in connection with amounts subject to a billing dispute under § 226.13, and properly handled the refunding of credit balances under §§ 226.11 and 226.21.

2. Methods of retaining evidence. Adequate evidence of compliance does not necessarily mean actual paper copies of disclosure statements or other business records. The evidence may be retained on microfilm, microfiche, or by any other method that reproduces records accurately (including computer programs). The creditor need retain only enough information to reconstruct the required disclosures or other records. Thus, for example, the creditor need not retain each open-end periodic statement, so long as the specific information on each statement can be retrieved.

1981 changes: Section 226.25 substitutes a uniform 2-year record-retention rule for the previous requirement that certain creditors retain records through at least one compliance examination. It also states more explicitly that the record-retention requirements apply to evidence of required actions.

Section 226.26—Use of Annual Percentage Rate in Oral Disclosures

1. Application of rules. The restrictions of § 226.26 apply only if the creditor chooses to respond orally to the consumer's request for credit cost information. Nothing in the regulation requires the creditor to supply rate information orally. If the creditor volunteers information (including rate information) through oral solicitations directed generally to prospective customers, as through a telephone solicitation, those communications may be advertisements subject to the rules in §§ 226.16 and 226.24.

26(a) Open-end credit.

1. Information that may be given. The creditor may state periodic rates in addition to the required annual percentage rate, but it need not do so. If the annual percentage rate is unknown because transaction charges, loan fees, or similar finance charges may be imposed, the creditor must give the corresponding annual percentage rate (that is, the periodic rate multiplied by the number of periods in a year, as described in §§ 226.6(a)(2) and 226.7(d)). In such cases, the creditor may, but need not, also give the consumer information about other finance charges and other charges.

26(b) Closed-end credit.

1. Information that may be given. The creditor may state other annual or periodic rates that are applied to an unpaid balance, along with the required annual percentage rate. This rule permits disclosure of a simple interest rate, for example, but not an add-on, discount, or similar rate. If the creditor cannot give a precise annual percentage rate in its oral response because of variables in the transaction, it must give the annual percentage rate for a comparable sample transaction; in this case, other cost information may, but need not, be given. For example, the creditor may be unable to state a precise annual percentage rate for a mortgage loan without knowing the exact amount to be financed, the amount of loan fees or mortgage insurance premiums, or similar factors. In this situation, the creditor should state an annual percentage rate for a sample transaction; it may also provide information about the consumer's specific case, such as the contract interest rate, points, other finance charges, and other charges.

Section 226.27—Spanish Language Disclosures

1. Subsequent disclosures. If a creditor in Puerto Rico provides initial disclosures in Spanish, subsequent disclosures need not be in Spanish. For example, if the creditor gave Spanish-language initial disclosures, periodic statements and change-in-terms notices may be made in English.

2. Permissible uses. If a creditor other than in Puerto Rico provides translations of the required disclosures—either because it is required to do so by state, federal, or local law, or because it chooses to do so—the translations are not inconsistent per se with the disclosures under this regulation and they may be provided as additional information. In both cases, the English language disclosures required by this regulation must be clear and conspicuous, and the closed-end disclosures in English must be properly segregated in accordance with § 226.17(a)(1).

Section 226.28—Effect on State Laws

28(a) Inconsistent disclosure requirements

1. General. There are 3 sets of preemption criteria: 1 applies to the general disclosure and advertising rules of the regulation, and 2 apply to the credit billing provisions. Section 226.28 also provides for Board determinations of preemption.

2. Rules for chapters 1, 2, and 3. The standard for judging whether State laws that cover the types of requirements in chapters 1 (General provisions), 2 (Credit transactions), and 3 (Credit advertising) of the Act are inconsistent and therefore preempted, is contradiction of the Federal law. Examples of laws that would be preempted include:

- A State law that requires use of the term "finance charge," but defines the term to include fees that the Federal law excludes, or to exclude fees the Federal law includes.
- A State law that requires a label such as "nominal annual interest rate" to be used for what the Federal law calls the "annual percentage rate."

3. Laws not contradictory to chapters 1, 2, and 3. Generally, State law requirements that call for the disclosure of items of information not covered by the Federal law, or that require more detailed disclosures, do not contradict the Federal requirements. Examples of laws that are not preempted include:

- A State law that requires disclosure of the minimum periodic payment for open-end credit, even though not required by § 226.7.
- A State law that requires contracts to contain warnings such as: "Read this contract before you sign. Do not sign if any spaces are left blank. You are entitled to a copy of this contract."

Similarly, a State law that requires itemization of the amount financed does not automatically contradict the permissive itemization under § 226.18(c). However, a State law requirement that the itemization appear with the disclosure of the amount financed in the segregated closed-end credit disclosures is inconsistent, and this location requirement would be preempted.

4. Creditor's options. Before the Board makes a determination about a specific State law, the creditor has certain options. Since the prohibition against giving the State disclosures does not apply until the Board makes its determination, the creditor may choose to give State disclosures until the Board formally determines that the State law is inconsistent. (The Board will provide sufficient time for creditors to revise forms and procedures as necessary to conform to its determinations.)

- Under this first approach, as in all cases, the Federal disclosures must be clear and conspicuous, and the closed-end disclosures must be properly segregated in accordance with § 226.17(a)(1).
- This ability to give State disclosures relieves any uncertainty that the creditor might have prior to Board determinations of inconsistency.

As a second option, the creditor may apply the preemption standards to a State law, conclude that it is inconsistent, and choose not to give the state-required disclosures. However, nothing in § 226.28(a) provides the creditor with immunity for violations of State law if the creditor chooses not to make State disclosures and the Board later determines that the State law is not preempted.

5. Rules for correction of billing errors and regulation of credit reports. The preemption criteria for the fair credit billing provisions set forth in § 226.28 have 2 parts. With respect to the rules on correction of billing errors and regulation of credit reports (which are in § 226.13), § 226.28(a)(2)(i) provides that a State law is inconsistent and preempted if its requirements are different from the Federal law. An exception is made, however, for State laws that allow the consumer to inquire about an account and require the creditor to respond to such inquiries beyond the time limits in the Federal law. Such a State law is not preempted with respect to the extra time period. For example, § 226.13 requires the consumer to submit a written notice of billing error within 60 days after transmittal of the periodic statement showing the alleged error. If a State law allows the consumer 90 days to submit a notice, the State law remains in effect to provide the extra 30 days. Any State law disclosures concerning this extended state time limit must reflect the qualifications and conform to the format specified in § 226.28(a)(2)(i). Examples of laws that would be preempted include:

- A State law that has a narrower or broader definition of "billing error."
- A State law that requires the creditor to take different steps to resolve errors.
- A State law that provides different timing rules for error resolution (subject to the exception discussed above).

6. Rules for other fair credit billing provisions. The second part of the criteria for fair credit billing relates to the other rules implementing chapter 4 of the Act (addressed in §§ 226.4(c)(8), 226.5(b)(2)(ii), 226.6(d), 226.7(k), 226.9(a), 226.10, 226.11, 226.12 (c) through (f), 226.13, and 226.21). Section 226.28(a)(2)(ii) provides that the test of inconsistency is whether the creditor can comply with State law without violating Federal law. For example:

- A State law that allows the card issuer to offset the consumer's credit-card indebtedness against funds held by the card issuer would be preempted, since § 226.12(d) prohibits such action.
- A State law that requires periodic statements to be sent more than 14 days before the end of a free-ride period would not be preempted.
- A State law that permits consumers to assert claims and defenses against the card issuer without regard to the $50 and 100-mile limitations of § 226.12(c)(3)(ii) would not be preempted.

In the last 2 cases, compliance with State law would involve no violation of the Federal law.

7. Who may receive a chapter 4 determination. Only states (through their authorized officials) may request and receive determinations on inconsistency with respect to the fair credit billing provisions.

8. Preemption determination—Arizona. Effective October 1, 1983, the Board has determined that the following provisions in the State law of Arizona are preempted by the Federal law:

- Section 44-287 B.5—Disclosure of final cash price balance. This provision is preempted in those transactions in which the amount of the final cash price balance is the same as the Federal amount financed, since in such transactions the State law requires the use of a term different from the Federal term to represent the same amount.
- Section 44-287 B.6—Disclosure of finance charge. This provision is preempted in those transactions in which the amount of the finance charge is different from the amount of the Federal finance charge, since in such transactions the State law requires the use of the same term as the Federal law to represent a different amount.
- Section 44-287 B.7—Disclosure of the time balance. The time balance disclosure provision is preempted in those transactions in which the amount is the same as the amount of the Federal total of payments, since in such transactions the State law requires the use of a term different from the Federal term to represent the same amount.

9. Preemption determination—Florida. Effective October 1, 1983, the Board has determined that the following provisions in the State law of Florida are preempted by the Federal law:

- Sections 520.07(2)(f) and 520.34(2)(f)—Disclosure of amount financed. This disclosure is preempted in those transactions in which the amount is different from the Federal amount financed, since in such transactions the State law requires the use of the same term as the Federal law to represent a different amount.
- Sections 520.07(2)(g), 520.34(2)(g), and 520.35(2)(d)—Disclosure of finance charge and a description of its components. The finance charge disclosure is preempted in those transactions in which the amount of the finance charge is different from the Federal amount, since in such transactions the State law requires the use of the same term as the Federal law to represent a different amount. The requirement to describe or itemize the components of the finance charge, which is also included in these provisions, is not preempted.
- Sections 520.07(2)(h) and 520.34(2)(h)—Disclosure of total of payments. The total of payments disclosure is preempted in those transactions in which the amount differs from the amount of the Federal total of payments, since in such transactions the State law requires the use of the same term as the Federal law to represent a different amount than the Federal law.
- Sections 520.07(2)(i) and 520.34(2)(i)—Disclosure of deferred payment price. This disclosure is preempted in those transactions in which the amount is the same as the Federal total sale price, since in such transactions the State law requires the use of a different term than the Federal law to represent the same amount as the Federal law.

10. Preemption determination—Missouri. Effective October 1, 1983, the Board has determined that the following provisions in the State law of Missouri are preempted by the Federal law:

- Sections 365.070-6(9) and 408.260-5(6)—Disclosure of principal balance. This disclosure is preempted in those transactions in which the amount of the principal balance is the same as the Federal amount financed, since in such transactions the State law requires the use of a term different from the Federal term to represent the same amount.
- Sections 365.070-6(10) and 408.260-5(7)—Disclosure of time price differential and time charge, respectively. These disclosures are preempted in those transactions in which the amount is the same as the Federal finance charge, since in such transactions the State law requires the use of a term different from the Federal law to represent the same amount.
- Sections 365.070-2 and 408.260-2—Use of the terms "time price differential" and "time charge" in certain notices to the buyer. In those transactions in which the State disclosure of the time price differential or time charge is preempted, the use of the terms in this notice also is preempted. The notice itself is not preempted.
- Sections 365.070-6(11) and 408.260-5(8)—Disclosure of time balance. The time balance disclosure is preempted in those transactions in which the amount is the same as the amount of the Federal total of payments, since in such transactions the State law requires the use of a different term than the Federal law to represent the same amount.
- Sections 365.070-6(12) and 408.260-5(9)—Disclosure of time sale price. This disclosure is preempted in those transactions in which the amount is the same as the Federal total sale price, since in such transactions the State law requires the use of a different term from the Federal law to represent the same amount.

11. Preemption determination—Mississippi. Effective October 1, 1984, the Board has determined that the following provision in the State law of Mississippi is preempted by the Federal law:

- Section 63-19-31(2)(g)—Disclosure of finance charge. This disclosure is preempted in those cases in which the term "finance charge" would be used under State law to describe a different amount than the finance charge disclosed under Federal law.

12. Preemption determination—South Carolina. Effective October 1, 1984, the Board has determined that the following provision in the State law of South Carolina is preempted by the Federal law.

- Section 37-10-102(c)—Disclosure of due-on-sale clause. This provision is preempted, but only to the extent that the creditor is required to include the disclosure with the segregated federal disclosures. If the creditor may comply with the State law by placing the due-on-sale notice apart from the Federal disclosures, the state law is not preempted.

28(b) Equivalent disclosure requirements.

1. General. A state disclosure may be substituted for a Federal disclosure only after the Board has made a finding of substantial similarity. Thus, the creditor may not unilaterally choose to make a state disclosure in place of a Federal disclosure, even if it believes that the state disclosure is substantially similar. Since the rule stated in § 226.28(b) does not extend to any requirement relating to the finance charge or annual percentage rate, no state provision on computation, description, or disclosure of these terms may be substituted for the Federal provision.

Previous regulation: Section 226.6 (b) and (c), and Interpretation § 226.604.

1981 changes: Section 226.28 implements amended section 111 of the act. The test for preemption of state laws relating to disclosure and advertising is now whether the state law "contradicts" the Federal, rather than whether state requirements are "different."

The revised regulation contains no counterpart to § 226.6(c) of the previous regulation concerning placement of inconsistent disclosures. It also reflects the statutory amendment providing that once the Board determines that a state-required disclosure is inconsistent with Federal law, the creditor may not make the state disclosure.

Section 226.29—State Exemptions

29(a) General rule.

1. Classes eligible. The state determines the classes of transactions for which it will request an exemption, and makes its application for those classes. Classes might be, for example, all open-end credit transactions, all open-end and closed-end transactions, or all transactions in which the creditor is a bank.

2. Substantial similarity. The "substantially similar" standard requires that state statutory or regulatory provisions and state interpretations of those provisions be generally the same as the Federal Act and Regulation Z. This includes the requirement that state provisions for reimbursement to consumers for overcharges be at least equivalent to those required in section 108 of the act. A State will be eligible for an exemption even if its law covers classes of transactions not covered by the Federal law. For example, if a state's law covers agricultural credit, this will not prevent the Board from granting an exemption for consumer credit, even though agricultural credit is not covered by the Federal law.

3. Adequate enforcement. The standard requiring adequate provision for enforcement generally means that appropriate state officials must be authorized to enforce the state law through procedures and sanctions comparable to those available to Federal enforcement agencies. Furthermore, state law must make adequate provision for enforcement of the reimbursement rules.

4. Exemptions granted. Effective October 1, 1982, the Board has granted the following exemptions from portions of the revised Truth in Lending Act:

- Maine. Credit or lease transactions subject to the Maine Consumer Credit Code and its implementing regulations are exempt from chapters 2, 4 and 5 of the Federal Act. (The exemption does not apply to transactions in which a federally chartered institution is a creditor or lessor.)
- Connecticut. Credit transactions subject to the Connecticut Truth in Lending Act are exempt from chapters 2 and 4 of the Federal Act. (The exemption does not apply to transactions in which a federally chartered institution is a creditor.)
- Massachusetts. Credit transactions subject to the Massachusetts Truth in Lending Act are exempt from chapters 2 and 4 of the Federal Act. (The exemption does not apply to transactions in which a federally chartered institution is a creditor.)
- Oklahoma. Credit or lease transactions subject to the Oklahoma Consumer Credit Code are exempt from chapters 2 and 5 of the Federal Act. (The exemption does not apply to sections 132 through 135 of the Federal Act, nor does it apply to transactions in which a federally chartered institution is a creditor or lessor.)
- Wyoming. Credit transactions subject to the Wyoming Consumer Credit Code are exempt from chapter 2 of the Federal Act. (The exemption does not apply to transactions in which a federally chartered institution is a creditor.)

29(b) Civil liability.

1. Not eligible for exemption. The provision that an exemption may not extend to sections 130 and 131 of the Act assures that consumers retain access to both Federal and State courts in seeking damages or civil penalties for violations, while creditors retain the defenses specified in those sections.

APPENDIX A—EFFECT ON STATE LAWS

1. Who may make requests. Appendix A sets forth the procedures for preemption determinations. As discussed in § 226.28, which contains the standards for preemption, a request for a determination of whether a state law is inconsistent with the requirements of chapters 1, 2, or 3 may be made by creditors, states, or any interested party. However, only states may request and receive determinations in connection with the fair credit billing provisions of chapter 4.

APPENDIX D—MULTIPLE-ADVANCE CONSTRUCTION LOANS

1. General rule. Appendix D provides a special procedure that creditors may use, at their option, to estimate and disclose the terms of multiple-advance construction loans when the amounts or timing of advances is unknown at consummation of the transaction. This appendix reflects the approach taken in § 226.17(c)(6)(ii), which permits creditors to provide separate or combined disclosures for the construction period and for the permanent financing, if any; i.e., the construction phase and the permanent phase may be treated as one transaction or more than one transaction. Appendix D may also be used in multiple-advance transactions other than construction loans, when the amounts or timing of advances is unknown at consummation.

2. Variable-rate multiple-advance loans. The hypothetical disclosure required in most variable-rate transactions by § 226.18(f)(4) is not required for multiple-advance loans disclosed pursuant to Appendix D, Part I.

3. Calculation of the total of payments. When disclosures are made pursuant to Appendix D, the total of payments may reflect either the sum of the payments or the sum of the amount financed and the finance charge.

4. Annual percentage rate. Appendix D does not require the use of Volume I of the Board's Annual Percentage Rate Tables for calculation of the annual percentage rate. Creditors utilizing Appendix D in making calculations and disclosures may use other computation tools to determine the estimated annual percentage rate, based on the finance charge and payment schedule obtained by use of the Appendix.

APPENDICES G AND H—OPEN-END AND CLOSED-END MODEL FORMS AND CLAUSES

1. Permissible changes. Although use of the model forms and clauses is not required, creditors using them properly will be deemed to be in compliance with the regulation with regard to those disclosures. Creditors may make certain changes in the format or content of the forms and clauses and may delete any disclosures that are inapplicable to a transaction or a plan without losing the act's protection from liability. The rearrangement of the model forms and clauses may not be so extensive as to affect the substance, clarity, or meaningful sequence of the forms and clauses. Creditors making revisions with that effect will lose their protection from civil liability. Acceptable changes include, for example:

- Using the first person, instead of the second person, in referring to the borrower.
- Using "borrower" and "creditor" instead of pronouns.
- Rearranging the sequence of the disclosures.
- Not using bold type for headings.
- Incorporating certain state "plain English" requirements.
- Deleting inapplicable disclosures by whiting out, blocking out, filling in "N/A" (not applicable) or "0", crossing out, leaving blanks, checking a box for applicable items, or circling applicable items. (This should permit use of multi-purpose standard forms.)
- Substituting appropriate references, such as "bank," "we," or a specific name, for "creditor" in the initial open-end disclosures.
- Using a vertical, rather than a horizontal, format for the boxes in the closed-end disclosures.

APPENDIX G—OPEN-END MODEL FORMS AND CLAUSES

1. Model G-1. The model disclosures in G-1 (different balance computation methods) may be used in both the initial disclosures under § 226.6 and the periodic disclosures under § 226.7. As is clear from the models given, "short-hand" descriptions of the balance computation methods are not sufficient. The phrase "a portion of" the finance charge should be included if the total finance charge includes other amounts, such as transaction charges, that are not due to the application of a periodic rate. In addition, if unpaid finance charges are subtracted in calculating the balance, that fact must be stated so that the disclosure of the computation method is accurate. Only Model G-1(b) contains a final sentence appearing in brackets which reflects the total dollar amount of payments and credits received during the billing cycle. The other models do not contain this language because they reflect plans in which payments and credits received during the billing cycle are subtracted. If this is not the case, however, the language relating to payments and credits should be changed, and the creditor should add either the disclosure of the dollar amount as in Model G-1(b) or an indication of which credits (disclosed elsewhere on the periodic statement) will not be deducted in determining the balance. (Such an indication may also substitute for the bracketed sentence in Model G-1(b)). See the commentary to § 226.7(e).

2. Model G-2. This model contains the notice of liability for unauthorized use of a credit card.

3. Models G-3 and G-4. These set out models for the long form billing error rights statement (for use with the initial disclosures and as an annual disclosure or, at the creditor's option, with each periodic statement) and the alternative billing error rights statement (for use with each periodic statement), respectively. Creditors must provide the billing error rights statements in a form substantially similar to the models in order to comply with the regulation. The model billing rights statements may be modified in any of the ways set forth in the first paragraph to the commentary on Appendices G and H. The models may, furthermore, be modified by deleting inapplicable information, such as:

- The paragraph concerning stopping a debit in relation to a disputed amount, if the creditor does not have the ability to debit automatically the consumer's saving or checking account for payment.
- The rights stated in the special rule for credit card purchases and any limitations on those rights.

The model billing rights statements also contain optional language that creditors may use. For example, the creditor may:

- Include a statement to the effect that notice of a billing error must be submitted on something other than the payment ticket or other material accompanying the periodic disclosures.
- Insert its address or refer to the address that appears elsewhere on the bill.

Additional information may be included on the statements as long as it does not detract from the required disclosures. For instance, information concerning the reporting of errors in connection with a checking account may be included on a combined statement as long as the disclosures required by the regulation remain clear and conspicuous.

4. Models G-5 through G-9. These models set out notices of the right to rescind that would be used at different times in an open-end plan. The last paragraph of each of the rescission model forms contains a blank for the date by which the consumer's notice of cancellation must be sent or delivered. A parenthetical is included to address the situation in which the consumer's right to rescind the transaction exists beyond 3 business days following the date of the transaction, for example, when the notice or material disclosures are delivered late or when the date of the transaction in paragraph 1 of the notice is an estimate. The language of the parenthetical is not optional.

APPENDIX H—CLOSED-END MODEL FORMS AND CLAUSES

1. Models H-1 and H-2. Creditors may make several types of changes to closed-end model forms H-1 (credit sale) and H-2 (loan) and still be deemed to be in compliance with the regulation, provided that the required disclosures are made clearly and conspicuously. Permissible changes include the addition of the information permitted by footnote 37 to § 226.17 and "directly related" information as set forth in the commentary to § 226.17(a).

The creditor may also delete or, on multipurpose forms, indicate inapplicable disclosures, such as:

- The itemization of the amount financed option. (See Samples H-12 through H-15.)
- The credit life and disability insurance disclosures. (See Samples H-11 and H-12.)
- The property insurance disclosures. (See Samples H-10 through H-12, and H-14.)
- The "filing fees" and "non-filing insurance" disclosures. (See Samples H-11 and H-12.)
- The prepayment penalty or rebate disclosures. (See Samples H-12 and H-14.)
- The total sale price. (See Samples H-11 through H-15.)

Other permissible changes include:

- Adding the creditor's address or telephone number. (See the commentary to § 226.18(a).)
- Combining required terms where several numerical disclosures are the same, for instance, if the "total of payments" equals the "total sale price." (See the commentary to § 226.18.)
- Rearranging the sequence or location of the disclosures—for instance, by placing the descriptive phrases outside the boxes containing the corresponding disclosures, or by grouping the descriptors together as a glossary of terms in a separate section of the segregated disclosures; by placing the payment schedule at the top of the form; or by changing the order of the disclosures in the boxes, including the annual percentage rate and finance charge boxes.
- Using brackets, instead of checkboxes, to indicate inapplicable disclosures.
- Using a line for the consumer to initial, rather than a checkbox, to indicate an election to receive an itemization of the amount financed.
- Deleting captions for disclosures.
- Using a symbol, such as an asterisk, for estimated disclosures, instead of an "e."
- Adding a signature line to the insurance disclosures to reflect joint policies.
- Separately itemizing the filing fees.
- Revising the late charge disclosure in accordance with the commentary to § 226.18(l).

2. Model H-3. Creditors have considerable flexibility in filling out Model H-3 (itemization of the amount financed). Appropriate revisions, such as those set out in the commentary to § 226.18(c), may be made to this form without loss of protection from civil liability for proper use of the model forms.

3. Models H-4 through H-7. The model clauses are not included in the model forms although they are mandatory for certain transactions. Creditors using the model clauses when applicable to a transaction are deemed to be in compliance with the regulation with regard to that disclosure.

4. Model H-4. This model contains the variable rate model clauses and is intended to give creditors considerable flexibility in structuring variable rate disclosures to fit individual plans. The information about circumstances, limitations, and effects of an increase may be given in terms of the contract interest rate or the annual percentage rate. Clauses are shown for hypothetical examples based on the specific amount of the transaction and based on a representative amount. Creditors may preprint the variable rate disclosures based on a representative amount for similar types of transactions, instead of constructing an individualized example for each transaction. In both representative examples and transaction-specific examples, creditors may refer either to the incremental change in rate, payment amount, or number of payments, or to the resulting rate, payment amount, or number of payments. For example, creditors may state that the rate will increase by 2%, with a corresponding $150 increase in the payment, or creditors may state that the rate will increase to 16%, with a corresponding payment of $850.

5. Model H-5. This contains the demand feature clause.

6. Model H-6. This contains the assumption clause.

7. Model H-7. This contains the required deposit clause.

8. Models H-8 and H-9. These models contain the rescission notices for a typical closed-end transaction and a refinancing, respectively. The last paragraph of each model form contains a blank for the date by which the consumer's notice of cancellation must be sent or delivered. A parenthetical is included to address the situation in which the consumer's right to rescind the transaction exists beyond 3 business days following the date of the transaction, for example, where the notice or material disclosures are delivered late or where the date of the transaction in paragraph 1 of the notice is an estimate. The language of the parenthetical is not optional.

9. Sample forms. The sample forms (H-10 through H-15) serve a different purpose than the model forms. The samples illustrate various ways of adapting the model forms to the individual transactions described in the commentary to Appendix H. The deletions and rearrangments shown relate only to the specific transactions described. As a result, the samples do not provide the general protection from civil liability provided by the model forms and clauses.

10. Sample H-10. This sample illustrates an automobile credit sale. The cash price is $7,500 with a downpayment of $1,500. There is an 8% add-on interest rate and a term of 3 years, with 36 equal monthly payments. The credit life insurance premium and the filing fees are financed by the creditor. There is a $25 credit report fee paid by the consumer before consummation, which is a prepaid finance charge.

11. Sample H-11. This sample illustrates an installment loan. The amount of the loan is $5,000. There is a 12% simple interest rate and a term of 2 years. The date of the transaction is expected to be April 15, 1981, with the first payment due on June 1, 1981. The first payment amount is labelled as an estimate since the transaction date is uncertain. The odd days' interest ($26.67) is collected with the first payment. The remaining 23 monthly payments are equal.

12. Sample H-12. This sample illustrates a refinancing and consolidation loan. The amount of the loan is $5,000. There is a 15% simple interest rate and a term of 3 years. The date of the transaction is April 1, 1981, with the first payment due on May 1, 1981. The first 35 monthly payments are equal, with an odd final payment. The credit disability insurance premium is financed. In calculating the annual percentage rate, the U.S. Rule has been used. Since an itemization of the amount financed is included with the disclosures, the statement regarding the consumer's option to receive an itemization is deleted.

13. Samples H-13 through H-15. These samples illustrate various mortgage transactions. They assume that the mortgages are subject to the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA). As a result, no option regarding the itemization of the amount financed has been included in the samples, because providing the good faith estimates of settlement costs required by RESPA satisfies Truth in Lending's amount financed itemization requirement. (See footnote 39 to § 226.18(c).)

14. Sample H-13. This sample illustrates a mortgage with a demand feature. The loan amount is $44,900, payable in 360 monthly installments at a simple interest rate of 14.75%. The 15 days of interim interest ($294.34) is collected as a prepaid finance charge at the time of consummation of the loan (April 15, 1981). In calculating the disclosure amounts, the minor irregularities provision in § 226.17(c)(4) has been used. The property insurance premiums are not included in the payment schedule. This disclosure statement could be used for notes with the 7-year call option required by the Federal National Mortgage Association (FNMA) in states where due-on-sale clauses are prohibited.

15. Sample H-14. This sample illustrates a variable rate mortgage. The loan amount is $44,900, payable in 360 monthly installments at an initial interest rate of 14.75%. All payment periods are regular. Two points ($898) have been imposed and included in the prepaid finance charge. The note provides that the interest rate may vary with the lender's prime rate, with a maximum permissible increase of 5% over the term of the mortgage. The interest rate may not vary more frequently than once a year, and may not increase by more than 1% annually. Rate fluctuations will be reflected in the monthly payment amount.

16. Sample H-15. This sample illustrates a graduated payment mortgage with a 5-year graduation period and a 7½ percent yearly increase in payments. The loan amount is $44,900, payable in 360 monthly installments at a simple interest rate of 14.75%. Two points ($898), as well as an initial mortgage guarantee insurance premium of $225.00, are included in the prepaid finance charge. The mortgage guarantee insurance premiums are calculated on the basis of ¼ of 1% of the outstanding principal balance under an annual reduction plan. The abbreviated disclosure permitted under § 226.18(g)(2) is used for the payment schedule for years 6 through 30. The prepayment disclosure refers to both penalties and rebates because information about penalties is required for the simple interest portion of the obligation and information about rebates is required for the mortgage insurance portion of the obligation.

17. HRSA-500-1 9-82. Pursuant to section 113(a) of the Truth in Lending Act, Form HRSA-500-1 9-82 issued by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services for certain student loans has been approved. The form may be used for all Health Education Assistance Loans (HEAL) with a variable interest rate that are interim student credit extensions as defined in Regulation Z.

18. HRSA-500-2 9-82. Pursuant to section 113(a) of the Truth in Lending Act, Form HRSA-500-2 9-82 issued by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services for certain student loans has been approved. The form may be used for all HEAL loans with a fixed interest rate that are interim student credit extensions as defined in Regulation Z.

19. HRSA-502-1 9-82. Pursuant to section 113(a) of the Truth in Lending Act, Form HRSA-502-1 9-82 issued by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services for certain student loans has been approved. The form may be used for all HEAL loans with a variable interest rate in which the borrower has reached repayment status and is making payments of both interest and principal.

20. HRSA-502-2 9-82. Pursuant to section 113(a) of the Truth in Lending Act, Form HRSA-502-2 9-82 issued by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services for certain student loans has been approved. The form may be used for all HEAL loans with a fixed interest rate in which the borrower has reached repayment status and is making payments of both interest and principal.

APPENDIX J—ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE COMPUTATIONS FOR CLOSED-END CREDIT TRANSACTIONS

1. Use of Appendix J. Appendix J sets forth the actuarial equations and instructions for calculating the annual percentage rate in closed-end credit transactions. While the formulas contained in this appendix may be directly applied to calculate the annual percentage rate for an individual transaction, they may also be utilized to program calculators and computers to perform the calculations.

2. Relation to Board tables. The Board's Annual Percentage Rate Tables also provide creditors with a calculation tool that applies the technical information in Appendix J. An annual percentage rate computed in accordance with the instructions in the tables is deemed to comply with the regulation. Volume I of the tables may be used for credit transactions involving equal payment amounts and periods, as well as for transactions involving any of the following irregularities: odd first period, odd first payment and odd last payment. Volume II of the tables may be used for transactions that involve any type of irregularities. These tables may be obtained from any Federal Reserve Bank or from the Board in Washington, D.C. 20551, upon request.

Subpart A—Consumer Complaints

AUTHORITY: Sec. 18(f), Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended by Pub. L. 93-637.

§ 227.1 Definitions.

For the purposes of this part,[1] unless the context indicates otherwise, the following definitions apply:

(a) "Board" means the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

(b) "Consumer complaint" means an allegation by or on behalf of an individual, group of individuals, or other entity that a particular act or practice of a State member bank is unfair or deceptive, or in violation of a regulation issued by the Board pursuant to a Federal statute, or in violation of any other Act or regulation under which the bank must operate.

(c) "State member bank" means a bank that is chartered by a State and is a member of the Federal Reserve System.

(d) Unless the context indicates otherwise, "bank" shall be construed to mean a "State member bank," and "complaint" to mean a "consumer complaint."

[41 FR 44362, Oct. 8, 1976]

§ 227.2 Consumer complaint procedure.

(a) Submission of complaints. (1) Any consumer having a complaint regarding a State member bank is invited to submit it to the Federal Reserve System. The complaint should be submitted in writing, if possible, and should include the following information:

(i) A description of the act or practice that is thought to be unfair or deceptive, or in violation of existing law or regulation, including all relevant facts;

(ii) The name and address of the bank that is the subject of the complaint; and

(iii) The name and address of the complainant.

(2) Consumer complaints should be made to:

(i) The Director, Division of Consumer Affairs, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Washington, D.C. 20551; or

(ii) The Federal Reserve Bank of the District in which the bank is located. The addresses of the Federal Reserve Banks are as follows:

Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, 30 Pearl Street, Boston, Massachusetts 02106.

Federal Reserve Bank of New York, 33 Liberty Street, New York, New York 10045.

Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, 100 North 6th Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19105.

Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland, 1455 East Sixth Street, Cleveland, Ohio 44101.

Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, 100 North Ninth Street, Richmond, Virginia 23261.

Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, 230 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois 60660.

Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, 411 Locust Street, St. Louis, Missouri 63166.

Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis, 250 Marquette Street, Minneapolis, Minnesota 55480.

---

[1] The words "this part," as used herein, mean Title 12, Chapter II, Part 227 of the Code of Federal Regulations, cited as 12 CFR Part 227 and designated as Regulation AA.

Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City, 925 Grand Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri 64198.

Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, 400 South Akard Street, Dallas, Texas 75222.

Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, 104 Marietta Street NW., Atlanta, Georgia 30303.

Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco, 400 Sansome Street, San Francisco, California 94120.

(b) Response to complaints. Within 15 business days of receipt of a written complaint by the Board or a Federal Reserve Bank, a substantive response or an acknowledgment setting a reasonable time for a substantive response will be sent to the individual making the complaint.

(c) Referrals to other agencies. Complaints received by the Board or a Federal Reserve Bank regarding an act or practice of an institution other than a State member bank will be forwarded to the Federal agency having jurisdiction over that institution.

Subpart B—Credit Practices Rule

AUTHORITY: 15 U.S.C. 57a.

SOURCE: 50 FR 16697, Apr. 29, 1985, unless otherwise noted.

§ 227.11 Authority, purpose, and scope.

(a) Authority. This subpart is issued by the Board under section 18(f) of the Federal Trade Commission Act, 15 U.S.C. 57a(f) (section 202(a) of the Magnuson-Moss Warranty—Federal Trade Commission Improvement Act, Pub. L. 93-637).

(b) Purpose. Unfair or deceptive acts or practices in or affecting commerce are unlawful under section 5(a)(1) of the Federal Trade Commission Act, 15 U.S.C. 45(a)(1). This subpart defines unfair or deceptive acts or practices of banks in connection with extensions of credit to consumers.

(c) Scope. This subpart applies to all banks and their subsidiaries, except savings banks that are members of the Federal Home Loan Bank System. Compliance is to be enforced by:

(1) The Comptroller of the Currency, in the case of national banks and banks operating under the code of laws for the District of Columbia;

(2) The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, in the case of banks that are members of the Federal Reserve System (other than banks referred to in paragraph (c)(1) of this section); and

(3) The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, in the case of banks insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (other than banks referred to in paragraphs (c)(1) and (c)(2) of this section).

§ 227.12 Definitions.

For the purposes of this subpart, the following definitions apply:

(a) "Consumer" means a natural person who seeks or acquires goods, services, or money for personal, family, or household use other than for the purchase of real property.

(b)(1) "Cosigner" means a natural person who assumes liability for the obligation of a consumer without receiving goods, services, or money in return for the obligation, or, in the case of an open-end credit obligation, without receiving the contractual right to obtain extensions of credit under the account.

(2) "Cosigner" includes any person whose signature is requested as a condition to granting credit to a consumer, or as a condition for forbearance on collection of a consumer's obligation that is in default. The term does not include a spouse whose signature is required on a credit obligation to perfect a security interest pursuant to state law.

(3) A person who meets the definition in this paragraph is a "cosigner," whether or not the person is designated as such on the credit obligation.

(c) "Earnings" means compensation paid or payable to an individual or for the individual's account for personal services rendered or to be rendered by the individual, whether denominated as wages, salary, commission, bonus, or otherwise, including periodic payments pursuant to a pension, retirement, or disability program.

(d) "Household goods" means clothing, furniture, appliances, linens, china, crockery, kitchenware, and personal effects of the consumer and the consumer's dependents. The term "household goods" does not include:

(1) Works of art;

(2) Electronic entertainment equipment (other than one television and one radio);

(3) Items acquired as antiques; that is, items over one hundred years of age, including such items that have been repaired or renovated without changing their original form or character; and

(4) Jewelry (other than wedding rings).

(e) "Obligation" means an agreement between a consumer and a creditor.

(f) "Person" means an individual, corporation, or other business organization.

§ 227.13 Unfair credit contract provisions.

It is an unfair act or practice for a bank to enter into a consumer credit obligation that contains, or to enforce in a consumer credit obligation purchased by the bank, any of the following provisions:

(a) Confession of judgment. A cognovit or confession of judgment (for purposes other than executory process in the State of Louisiana), warrant of attorney, or other waiver of the right of notice and the opportunity to be heard in the event of suit or process thereon.

(b) Waiver of exemption. An executory waiver or a limitation of exemption from attachment, execution, or other process on real or personal property held, owned by, or due to the consumer, unless the waiver applies solely to property subject to a security interest executed in connection with the obligation.

(c) Assignment of wages. An assignment of wages or other earnings unless:

(1) The assignment by its terms is revocable at the will of the debtor;

(2) The assignment is a payroll deduction plan or preauthorized payment plan, commencing at the time of the transaction, in which the consumer authorizes a series of wage deductions as a method of making each payment; or

(3) The assignment applies only to wages or other earnings already earned at the time of the assignment.

(d) Security interest in household goods. A nonpossessory security interest in household goods other than a purchase money security interest.

§ 227.14 Unfair or deceptive practices involving cosigners.

(a) Pronhibited practices. In connection with the extension of credit to consumers, it is:

(1) A deceptive act or practice for a bank to misrepresent the nature or extent of cosigner liability to any person; and

(2) An unfair act or practice for a bank to obligate a cosigner unless the cosigner is informed prior to becoming obligated of the nature of the cosigner's liability.

(b) Disclosure requirement. (1) A clear and conspicuous disclosure statement shall be given in writing to the cosigner prior to becoming obligated. The disclosure statement shall be substantially similar to the following statement and shall either be a separate document or included in the documents evidencing the consumer credit obligation.

NOTICE TO COSIGNER

You are being asked to guarantee this debt. Think carefully before you do. If the borrower doesn't pay the debt, you will have to. Be sure you can afford to pay if you have to, and that you want to accept this responsibility.

You may have to pay up to the full amount of the debt if the borrower does not pay. You may also have to pay late fees or collection costs, which increase this amount.

The bank can collect this debt from you without first trying to collect from the borrower. The bank can use the same collection methods against you that can be used against the borrower, such as suing you, garnishing your wages, etc. If this debt is ever in default, that fact may become a part of your credit record.

This notice is not the contract that makes you liable for the debt.

(2) In the case of open-end credit, the disclosure statement shall be given to the cosigner prior to the time that the cosigner becomes obligated for fees or transactions on the account.

(3) A bank that is in compliance with this paragraph may not be held in violation of paragraph (a)(2) of this section.

§ 227.15 Unfair late charges.

(a) In connection with collecting a debt arising out of an extension of credit to a consumer, it is an unfair act or practice for a bank to levy or collect any delinquency charge on a payment, when the only delinquency is attributable to late fees or delinquency charges assessed on earlier installments, and the payment is otherwise a full payment for the applicable period and is paid on its due date or within an applicable grace period.

(b) For the purposes of this section, "collecting a debt" means any activity, other than the use of judicial process, that is intended to bring about or does bring about repayment of all or part of money due (or alleged to be due) from a consumer.

§ 227.16 State exemptions.

(a) General rule. (1) An appropriate state agency may apply to the Board for a determination that:

(i) There is a state requirement or prohibition in effect that applies to any transaction to which a provision of this subpart applies; and

(ii) The state requirement or prohibition affords a level of protection to consumers that is substantially equivalent to, or greater than, the protection afforded by this subpart.

(2) If the Board makes such a determination, the provision of this subpart will not be in effect in that state to the extent specified by the Board in its determination, for as long as the state administers and enforces the state requirement or prohibition effectively.

(b) Applications. The procedures under which a state agency may apply for an exemption under this section are the same as those set forth in Appendix B to Regulation Z (12 CFR Part 226).

PART 228—COMMUNITY REINVESTMENT

Sec.
228.1 Authority.
228.2 Purposes.
228.3 Delineation of community.
228.4 Community Reinvestment Act Statement.
228.5 Files of public comments and recent CRA Statements.
228.6 Public notice.
228.7 Assessing the record of performance.

228.100 Applicability of the Community Reinvestment Act to certain special purpose banks.

AUTHORITY: Community Reinvestment Act of 1977 (title VIII, Pub. L. 95-128, 91 Stat. 1147 (12 U.S.C. 2901 et seq.)); 12 U.S.C. 321, 325, 1814, 1816, 1828, 1842, unless otherwise noted.

SOURCE: 43 FR 47148, Oct. 12, 1978, unless otherwise noted.

§ 228.1 Authority.

The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System issues this part to implement the Community Reinvestment Act (12 U.S.C. 2901 et seq.). The regulations comprising this part are issued under the authority of the Community Reinvestment Act and under the provisions of the United States Code authorizing the Board to conduct examinations of State-chartered banks that are members of the Federal Reserve System (12 U.S.C. 325), to conduct examinations of bank holding companies and their subsidiaries (12 U.S.C. 1844), and to consider applications for domestic branches by State member banks (12 U.S.C. 321), for Federal deposit insurance in connection with applications for membership in the Federal Reserve System by State banks (12 U.S.C. 321, 1814, 1816), for merger in which the resulting bank would be a State member bank (12 U.S.C. 1828), and for formation of, acquisitions of banks by, and mergers of, bank holding companies (12 U.S.C. 1842).

§ 228.2 Purposes.

The purposes of this regulation are to encourage State member banks to help meet the credit needs of their local community or communities; to provide guidance to State member banks as to how the Board will assess the records of State member banks in satisfying their continuing and affirmative obligations to help meet the credit needs of their local communities, including low- and moderate-income neighborhoods, consistent with the safe and sound operation of those banks; and to provide for taking into account those records in connection with certain applications.

§ 228.3 Delineation of community.

(a) Each State member bank shall prepare, and at least annually review, a delineation of the local community or communities that comprise its entire community, without excluding low- and moderate-income neighborhoods. Maps shall be used to portray community delineations. The reasonableness of the delineations will be reviewed by Federal Reserve System examiners.

(b) Except as provided in paragraph (c) of this section, a local community consists of the contiguous areas surrounding each office or group of offices, including any low- and moderate-income neighborhoods in those areas. More than one office of a State member bank may be included in the same local community. Unless the Board determines otherwise, a community delineation need not take account of an off-premises electronic facility that receives deposits for more than one depository institution. In preparing its delineation, a bank may use any one of the three bases set forth below.

(1) Existing boundaries such as those of standard metropolitan statistical areas (SMSA's) or counties in which the bank's office or offices are located may be used to delineate a local community. Where appropriate, portions of adjacent areas should be included. The bank may make adjustments in the case of areas divided by State borders or significant geographic barriers, or areas that are extremely large or of unusual configuration. In addition, a small bank may delineate those portions of SMSA's or counties it reasonably may be expected to serve.

(2) A bank may use its effective lending territory, which is defined as that local area or areas around each office or group of offices where it makes a substantial portion of its loans and all other areas equidistant from its offices as those areas. Adjustments such as those indicated in paragraph (b)(1) of this section may be made.

(3) A bank may use any other reasonably delineated local area that meets the purposes of the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) and does not exclude low- and moderate-income neighborhoods.

(c) A State member bank whose business predominantly consists of serving persons who are active duty or retired military personnel or their dependents and who are located outside of its local community or communities, may delineate a "military community" for those customers, in addition to its local community or communities. Provisions of this part concerning local communities shall also apply to military communities, except that military communities shall be delineated by a written description rather than a map.

§ 228.4 Community Reinvestment Act Statement.

(a) Within 90 days after the effective date of this part, the board of directors of each State member bank shall adopt a Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) Statement for each delineated local community.

(b) Each CRA Statement shall include at least the following:

(1) The delineation of the local community;

(2) A list of specific types of credit within certain categories, such as residential loans for 1- to 4-dwelling units, residential loans for 5 dwelling units and over, housing rehabilitation loans, home improvement loans, small business loans, farm loans, community development loans, commerical loans, and consumer loans, that the bank is prepared to extend within the local community; and

(3) A copy of the Community Reinvestment Act Notice provided for in § 228.6.

(c) Each State member bank is encouraged to include the following in each CRA Statement:

(1) A description of how its current efforts, including special credit-related programs, help to meet community credit needs;

(2) A periodic report regarding its record of helping to meet community credit needs; and

(3) A description of its efforts to ascertain the credit needs of its community, including efforts to communicate with members of its community regarding credit services.

(d) Each State member bank's board of directors shall review each CRA Statement at least annually and shall act upon any material change made in the interim at its first regular meeting after the change. Such actions shall be noted in its minutes.

(e) Each current CRA Statement shall be readily available for public inspection:

(1) At the head office of the bank; and

(2) At each office of the bank in the local community delineated in the Statement, except off-premises electronic deposit facilities.

(f) Copies of each current CRA Statement shall be provided to the public upon request. A State member bank may charge a fee not to exceed the cost of reproduction.

§ 228.5 Files of public comments and recent CRA Statements.

(a) Each State member bank shall maintain files that are readily available for public inspection consisting of:

(1) Any signed, written comments received from the public within the past 2 years that specifically relate to any CRA Statement or to the bank's performance in helping to meet the credit needs of its community or communities;

(2) Any responses to the comments that the bank wishes to make; and

(3) Any CRA Statements in effect during the past 2 years.

(b) These files shall not contain any comments or responses that reflect adversely upon the good name or reputation of any person other than the bank, or publication of which would violate specific provisions of law.

(c) These files shall be maintained by each State member bank as follows:

(1) All materials at the head office; and

(2) Materials relating to each local community, at a designated office in that community.

§ 228.6 Public notice.

Within 90 days after the effective date of this part, each State member bank shall provide, in the public lobby of each if its offices other than off-premises electronic deposit facilities, the public notice set forth below. Bracketed material shall be used only by banks having more than one local community. The last item in this notice shall be included only if the bank is a subsidiary of a holding company that is not prevented by statute from acquiring additional banks.

COMMUNITY REINVESTMENT ACT NOTICE

The Federal Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) requires the Federal Reserve Board to evaluate our performance in helping to meet the credit needs of this community, and to take this evaluation into account when the Board decides on certain applications submitted by us. Your involvement is encouraged.

You should know that:

You may obtain our current CRA Statement for this community in this office. [Current CRA Statements for other communities served by us are available at our head office, located at (address).]

You may send signed, written comments about our CRA Statement[s] or our performance in helping to meet community credit needs to (title and address of State member bank official) and to Community Reinvestment Officer, Federal Reserve Bank of ———— (address). Your letter, together with any response by us, may be made public.

You may look at a file of all signed, written comments received by us within the past 2 years, any responses we have made to the comments, and all CRA Statements in effect during the past 2 years at our office located at (address). [You also may look at the file about this community at (name and address of designated office).]

You may ask to look at any comments received by the Federal Reserve Bank of ————.

You also may request from the Federal Reserve Bank of ——— an announcement of applications covered by the CRA filed with the Federal Reserve System.

We are a subsidiary of (name of holding company), a bank holding company. Applications filed by bank holding companies that are covered by the CRA are included in the Federal Reserve announcement of applications referred to in the previous paragraph.

§ 228.7 Assessing the record of performance.

In connection with its examination of a State member bank, the Board shall assess the record of performance of the bank in helping to meet the credit needs of its entire community, including low- and moderate-income neighborhoods, consistent with safe and sound operation of the bank. The Board will review the bank's CRA Statement(s) and any signed, written comments retained by the State member bank or the Federal Reserve Bank. In addition, the Board will consider the following factors in assessing a bank's record of performance:

(a) Activities conducted by the State member bank to ascertain the credit needs of its community, including the extent of the bank's efforts to communicate with members of its community regarding the credit services being provided by the bank;

(b) The extent of the State member bank's marketing and special credit-related programs to make members of the community aware of the credit services offered by the bank;

(c) The extent of participation by the State member bank's board of directors in formulating the bank's policies and reviewing its performance with respect to the purposes of the Community Reinvestment Act;

(d) Any practices intended to discourage applications for types of credit set forth in the State member bank's CRA Statement(s);

(e) The geographic distribution of the State member bank's credit extensions, credit applications, and credit denials;

(f) Evidence of prohibited discriminatory or other illegal credit practices;

(g) The State member bank's record of opening and closing offices and providing services at offices;

(h) The State member bank's participation, including investments, in local community development and redevelopment projects or programs;

(i) The State member bank's origination of residential mortgage loans, housing rehabilitation loans, home improvement loans, and small business or small farm loans within its community, or the purchase of such loans originated in its community;

(j) The State member bank's participation in governmentally-insured, guaranteed, or subsidized loan programs for housing, small businesses or small farms;

(k) The State member bank's ability to meet various community credit needs based on its financial condition and size, and legal impediments, local economic conditions and other factors; and

(l) Other factors that, in the Board's judgment, reasonably bear upon the extent to which a State member bank is helping to meet the credit needs of its entire community.

§ 228.8 Effect on Applications.

(a) In considering any application

(1) For membership in the Federal Reserve System where membership would confer Federal deposit insurance on a bank,

(2) By a State member bank for the establishment of a domestic branch or other facility that would be authorized to receive deposits,

(3) By a State member bank for the relocation of a domestic branch,

(4) For merger, consolidation, acquisition of assets, or assumption of liabilities if the acquiring, assuming, or resulting bank is to a State member bank,

(5) To become a bank holding company, and

(6) By a bank holding company to acquire ownership or control of shares or assets of a bank, or to merge or consolidate with any other bank holding company, the Board will take into account, among other factors it considers, the record of performance in meeting the credit needs of its entire community of each applicant bank, each subsidiary bank of an applicant bank holding company, and each proposed subsidiary bank of an applicant under section 3 of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1842) that has an officer, director, employee, or significant stockholder associated with the applicant. Those records of performance may be the basis for denying the application.

(b) In the case of each application for membership that would confer Federal deposit insurance, each application by a State member bank, and each application by a bank holding company with a State bank subsidiary, the Board will consider any views expressed by the respective State bank supervisors as to whether the State-chartered banks involved have been helping to meet the credit needs of their entire communities, including low- and moderate-income neighborhoods, consistent with the safe and sound operation of those banks.

(c) At the request of an applicant, the Board will include in its consideration of an application the record of performance of nonbanking subsidiaries of bank holding companies in helping to meet the credit needs of the communities served by affiliated applicant banks or by subsidiary and proposed subsidiary banks of applicants under section 3 of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1842).

(d) At the time an application for membership that would confer Federal deposit insurance is made, the proposed State member bank shall submit to the Board a proposed CRA Statement conforming to the requirements of § 228.4.

§ 228.100 Applicability of the Community Reinvestment Act to certain special purpose banks.

In response to its proposed Regulation BB to implement the Community Reinvestment Act ("CRA") (12 U.S.C. 2901-05), the Board received several inquiries from institutions that, although they are chartered as banks, do not perform commercial or retail banking services. These institutions serve solely as correspondent banks, or as trust companies, or as clearing agents, and they do not extend credit to the public for their own account. The Board concludes that the CRA is not intended to cover these institutions.

It is the purpose of the CRA to require the Board to encourage banks to meet the credit needs of their local communities. To this end, the Board must assess banks' records of performance and take those records into account in acting on certain applications affecting the banks. The Board believes that these provisions were intended to cover all banks that are in the business of extending credit to the public including both "wholesale" and "retail" banks. The lending activities of these banks affect the economic health of the communities in which they are chartered. However, the Board believes it would be pointless to encourage or to assess the credit-granting record of institutions that are not organized to grant credit to the public in the ordinary course of business, other than as an incident to their specialized operations.

Accordingly the term "State member bank" as used in the Board's Regulation BB (12 CFR Part 228) does not include banks that engage solely in correspondent banking business, trust company business, or acting as a clearing agent.

245.1 Authority, purpose, and scope.
245.2 Processing of loan guarantee applications.
245.3 Federal Reserve Bank fees and charges.
245.4 Maximum rate of interest, guarantee fees, commitment fees, and prepayment penalties.

AUTHORITY: Sec. 302(c), E.O. 10480 (3 CFR 1949-53 Comp., p. 962), implementing sec. 301, Defense Production Act of 1950 (50 App. U.S.C. 2091).

SOURCE: Regulation V, 44 FR 10383, Feb. 20, 1979, unless otherwise noted. Redesignated at 45 FR 44574, July 1, 1980.

§ 245.1 Authority, purpose, and scope.

(a) Authority. This part comprises the regulations of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (referred to in this part as the "Board") issued pursuant to Executive Order No. 10480 (3 CFR 1949-53 Comp., p. 962; reprinted as amended following 50 App. U.S.C. 2153 (1970)) (referred to in this part as the "Order"), implementing the Defense Production Act of 1950 (50 App. U.S.C. 2061 et seq. (1970)) (referred to in this part as the "Act").

(b) Purpose and scope. The purpose of the Act, the Order and this part is to facilitate the financing of contract or other operations deemed necessary to national defense production. This part applies to private financing institutions, located in the United States or in any of its Territories or possessions, that make loans for defense production that are guaranteed by the Federal departments or agencies designated by the Act of Order* (Commonly referred to as "V-loans").

§ 245.2 Processing of loan guarantee applications.

(a) Submission of applications. Any private financing institution may submit to the Federal Reserve Bank of its District an application for a guarantee of a loan to a borrower determined to be eligible in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (b) of this section. The application form is available through the Federal Reserve Bank.

(b) Determination of eligibility of borrower. To be eligible for a V-loan, a borrower must be seeking financing for a contract, subcontract, or other operation deemed by the appropriate guaranteeing Federal department or agency to be necessary to expedite production and deliveries or services under a Government contract for the procurement of materials or the performance of services for the national defense. A determination that the borrower is eligible shall be made by the guaranteeing department or agency on the basis of information contained in the loan guarantee application and any further information that it needs. No loan shall be guaranteed until that determination is made.

(c) Lender's rates and fees. No application for a loan guarantee shall be considered where the loan agreement is inconsistent with the rate of interest, guarantee fees, commitment fees, and prepayment penalties prescribed by the Board in § 245.4 (the Supplement).

(d) Consideration of applications. Each application by a financing institution shall be subject to approval by the guaranteeing department or agency or, to the extent that the department or agency prescribes, by the Federal Reserve Bank to which the application is submitted.

(1) If a guaranteeing department or agency is to decide the application, the Federal Reserve Bank shall make a recommendation for action on the application before the department or agency acts. The Federal Reserve Bank shall transmit the application and its recommendation, together with all necessary supporting information, through the Board to that department or agency. If the department or agency approves the application and transmits its authorization through the Board on the Board's standard form, the Federal Reserve Bank, acting as fiscal agent of the United States on behalf of the department or agency, shall execute and deliver the guarantee (Board's standard "V-Loan Guarantee Agreement" form) to the applicant in accordance with the terms of the authorization.

(2) If a Federal Reserve Bank is to decide the application, it shall do so without submitting the application to the guaranteeing department or agency for prior approval; but the application shall be subject first to the department's or agency's determination of the borrower's eligibility. If the Federal Reserve Bank approves the application, it shall execute and deliver the guarantee (Board's standard "V-Loan Guarantee Agreement" form) to the applicant and promptly notify the department or agency.

(e) Basis of Federal Reserve Bank decision. In making a recommendation or deciding an application as described in paragraph (d) of this section, a Federal Reserve Bank shall consider whether the financing arrangement affords the guaranteeing department or agency the best available protection against possible financial loss consistent with obtaining national defense production expeditiously.

---

*The names of the Federal departments or agencies may be obtained from any Federal Reserve Bank.

(f) Federal Reserve Bank liability. In arranging for or making any guarantee on behalf of any guaranteeing department or agency, no Federal Reserve Bank shall have any responsibility or accountability except as fiscal agent.

(g) Other forms and procedures. From time to time the Board, after consulting guaranteeing departments or agencies, may prescribe other forms and procedures related to the V-loan program. These forms and procedural rules are to be made available through the Federal Reserve Banks.

§ 245.3 Federal Reserve Bank fees and charges.

Each Federal Reserve Bank shall be reimbursed by each guaranteeing department or agency in the usual manner for all expenses and losses incurred by the Reserve Bank in acting as agent on behalf of the department or agency. Regardless of any other provision of law, such expenses shall include attorneys' fees and expenses of litigation. If a Federal Reserve Bank advances its own funds to purchase a guaranteed portion of a loan, when authorized to do so as fiscal agent by the guaranteeing department or agency, it shall charge interest on its advances at the current regular discount rate.

§ 245.4 Maximum rate of interest, guarantee fees, commitment fees, and prepayment penalties.

The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System prescribes the following charges for loans guaranteed pursuant to the Defense Production Act of 1950 ("V-loans"):

(a) Maximum rate of interest. The maximum rate of interest rate of interest that a financing institution may charge a borrower for a V-loan is the rate that institution currently charges its most creditworthy business customers for loans of comparable maturity, unless the guaranteeing department or ageny determines that the particular loan at a higher rate of interest is necessary for the purposes of the Defense Production Act of 1950.

(b) Guarantee fees. The schedule of fees for guaranteeing V-loans is as follows:

Percentage of loan guaranteed	Guarantee fee [1]
70 or less	10
75	15
80	20
85	25
90	30
95	35
Over 95	40-50

[1] Percentage of interest payable by borrower on guaranteed portion of loan.

In any case in which the rate of interest on the loan exceeds 6 per cent, the guarantee fee shall be computed as though the interest rate were 6 per cent. However, at its discretion, a guaranteeing department or agency may increase the 6 per cent ceiling rate to a higher rate (not to exceed the actual rate of interest charged); but if it does so, the policy in this regard must be applied consistently with respect to all applications received while the policy is in effect.

(c) Commitment fees. Any commitment fee charged a borrower for a V-loan shall not exceed ½ of 1 per cent per annum, based on the average daily unused balance of the maximum principal amount of the loan. That fee may not begin to accrue prior to the date on which the committed funds are first available to the borrower according to the terms of the loan agreement or other similar financing arrangement. In any such case, the financing institution shall pay to the guaranteeing department or agency, a percentage of the commitment fee (1) based on the guaranteed portion of the loan, and (2) equal to the percentage of the interest on the loan that is payable as a guarantee fee by the financing institution.

(d) Prepayment penalties. (1) In the case of a V-loan made primarily for working captial purposes, a financing institution may not charge a penalty for prepayment of the loan but may recover out-of-pocket expenses.

(2) In the case of a V-loan made for the purpose of financing facilities expansion, provision for a prepayment penalty may be made in the loan agreement if all of the following conditions are met:

(i) The loan has a maturity of 5 years or more;

(ii) The prepayment penalty shall not exceed the rate of interest to be paid by the borrower according to the terms of the loan;

(iii) Provision is made for a graduated decrease in the prepayment penalty as the loan approaches maturity; and

(iv) The loan agreement explicitly provides that the prepayment penalty shall not be applicable in the event the loan is refinanced by or consolidated with another loan that is made or guaranteed by the federal government or any of its agencies.

INTERPRETATIONS

§ 250.101 Necessity for Board approval of stock dividend by State member bank.

(a) The opinion of the Board of Governors has been requested as to whether section 5199(b) of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended September 8, 1959 (12 U.S.C. 60), requires the Board's approval for the declaration of a stock dividend by a State member bank in an amount which would exceed the total of net profits for the present year combined with the retained net profits of the preceding 2 years. This statute is made applicable to State member banks by the sixth paragraph of section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 324).

(b) The purpose of this provision is to prevent the depletion of the capital structure of a bank by the payment of excessive dividends. Since a stock dividend does not result in the distribution of cash or assets, the Board does not consider the term "dividend" in this statute as including stock dividends. Consequently, the Board's approval for the declaration of a stock dividend is not required.

(12 U.S.C. 60)

§ 250.102 Payment of dividends; effect of net losses.

(a) Section 5199(b) of the Revised Statutes (12 U.S.C. 60), as amended in 1959: Provides, That:

> The approval of the Comptroller of the Currency shall be required if the total of all dividends declared by [a national bank] in any calendar year shall exceed the total of its net profits of that year combined with its retained net profits of the preceding 2 years * * *

Under the sixth paragraph of section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 324), member State banks are required "to conform to the provisions of section 5199(b) * * * with respect to the payment of dividends", except that the approval of the Board of Governors is required in lieu of the approval of the Comptroller.

(b) The question has arisen whether it is necessary in determining whether a bank's dividends in a particular year "exceed the total of its net profits of that year combined with its retained net profits of the preceding two years", to take into consideration the amount of a net loss in the current year or in one or both of the preceding 2 years.

(c) The purpose of the 1959 amendment of section 5199(b) was to prevent a bank from paying a dividend (except with supervisory approval) unless it has on hand, from operations during the 3 latest years, sufficient net profits to cover the proposed dividend. If a net loss for one or more of those 3 years was disregarded in making the calculation called for by section 5199(b), a member State bank could pay dividends, without the approval of the Board of Governors, even though the aggregate results of the 3 latest years' operations was a net deficit. This was precisely the sort of situation in which Congress intended to prevent the payment of a dividend unless the supervisory authority was satisfied that special circumstances justified the proposed dividend.

(d) Accordingly, it is the position of the Board that, in making the calculation required by section 5199(b), it is necessary to take into consideration the actual results of operations during the current year and the 2 preceding years, whether the figures for those years are plus or minus figures. For example, if a bank had

(1) Retained net profits of $30,000 from 1959;

(2) A net loss of $40,000 in 1960 (and dividends of $10,000 were paid in that year, with the Board's approval); and

(3) Net profits of $20,000 in 1961,

It could not pay any dividend in 1961 without the Board's approval, since the calculation required by section 5199(b) would result in a zero figure ($30,000 minus $50,000 plus $20,000). It will be noted that, for the purposes of section 5199, any dividends paid in a loss year must be included in the "net loss" for that year, just as dividends paid in a profitable year must be deducted from "net profits" in calculating "retained net profits".

(12 U.S.C. 60)

§ 250.103 Payment of dividends exceeding net profits to date of declaration.

(a) Section 5199(b) of the Revised Statutes of the United States (12 U.S.C. 60) and the sixth paragraph of section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 324), provide in effect that "the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency (or the Board of Governors) shall be required if the total of all dividends declared by such association (a national bank or a member State bank) in any calendar year shall exceed the total of its net profits of that year combined with its retained net profits of the preceding two years."

(b) The question has been presented whether the Board's approval must be obtained when the amount of a dividend proposed to be declared by a member State bank, prior to the end of the calendar year, would exceed the total of the bank's net profits up to the date of the declaration, combined with its retained net profits of the preceding 2 years.

(c) If the question related only to the literal meaning of words, divorced from the statute's underlying purpose and from the factual situations to which it relates, it might be contended that since the statute refers to "all dividends declared * * * in any calendar year" and "the total of its net profits of that year", its applicability cannot be determined until the calendar year is completed. As explained below, however, such an interpretation is not required by the language of the statute and would substantially defeat its purpose, as revealed by the legislative history; and consequently it is believed that the statute should be construed as relating to dividends declared, and to net profits, in the calendar year up to the date of such declaration.

(d) The purpose of the statute was described as follows by the Senate Banking Committee:

> This provision is designed to restrict the payment of dividends * * * where such payments would result in dissipating needed capital funds. This provision strengthens the regulatory authority of the Comptroller [and the Board of Governors]. Under it, he will be able to prevent the declaration of dividends which are not justified by current and recent accumulated earnings, and which would result in a weakened and undercapitalized bank and violate safe and sound banking practice.
> (S. Rep. No. 730, 86th Cong. (Aug. 19, 1959), pp. 6-7)

(1) It seems that Congress had in mind the following test: At the time the dividend is declared, does the bank have available, from profits of the current calendar year and the 2 preceding calendar years, enough profits to cover the dividend? If not, the dividend may not be declared and paid unless the Comptroller or the Board of Governors specifically approves, in view of the circumstances of the particular case.

(2) Bearing in mind the Senate Committee's reference to "dissipating needed capital funds," it is obvious that the danger that a proposed dividend would unduly weaken a bank's capital structure is just as great if the dividend is declared in June as if it is declared in December. If a bank does not have profits on hand sufficient to cover a proposed dividend, the fact that the declaration is made in 1 month rather than in another has little or no bearing on the extent to which payment of the dividend may unduly diminish the capital "cushion" on which depend the bank's continued existence and the safety of its depositors.

(e) An illustration may be helpful. For simplicity, let us assume that a member State bank opened for business on January 1, 1959, with a capital structure of $300,000, as required by the supervisory authorities. The bank had no net profit in 1959 or 1960. Up to June 30, 1961, it still has no net profits, but nevertheless the directors declare a dividend of $20,000 on that date. The bank's capital structure is thereby reduced from $300,000 to $280,000. It seems that this was precisely what Congress intended should not happen unless the Board of Governors approved the dividend, for adequate reasons. An undesirable situation would exist, and the Congressional purpose would be defeated, if such a weakening of the bank's capital structure were permissible if the dividend was declared and paid (without supervisory approval) in June, whereas the same action would involve a violation of the statute if the dividend was declared and paid, instead, in December. This might actually mean that no violation of section 5199(b) could occur except with respect to end-of-year dividends—unless, perhaps, it could be established that the bank's directors, when they declared the dividend earlier in the year, knew (or had reason to believe) that the bank's net profits for the entire year would not be sufficient.

(f) The statutory reference to "all dividends declared * * * in any calendar year" can be interpreted, even from the viewpoint of literal meaning, as referring to dividends declared in a calendar year up to the date of declaration. Particularly because the clear Congressional purpose would otherwise be largely defeated, it is concluded that this is the correct interpretation and that, consequently, the declaration by the member State bank, without the Board's approval, of a dividend in the amount of $20,000 would be in violation of the applicable statutes, since the amount of that dividend would exceed "the total of (the bank's) net profits of that year combined with its retained net profits of the preceding two years."

(12 U.S.C. 60)

§ 250.104 Dividends of State member banks—Meaning of "net profits."

(a) Section 5199(b) of the Revised Statutes of the United States (12 U.S.C. 60), as made applicable to State member banks by the 6th paragraph of section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 324), provides that:

> The approval of (the Board of Governors) shall be required if the total of all dividends declared by (a State member bank) in any calendar year shall exceed the total of its net profits of that year combined with its retained net profits of the preceding 2 years, less any required transfers to surplus or a fund for the retirement of any preferred stock.

(b) The term "net profits" is defined in section 5199(c) to mean "the remainder of all earnings from current operations plus actual recoveries on loans and investments and other assets, after deducting from the total thereof all current operating expenses, actual losses, accrued dividends on preferred stock, if any, and all Federal and State taxes."

(c) For the purpose of employing a uniform means for the determination of net profits before dividends on common stock, as required by section 5199(b), it is the Board's view that net profits shall be the amount of "net income" determined in accordance with the Report of Income (FR Form 107a), adjusted as set forth hereinafter. The statutory adjustments prescribed by section 5199 require the recognition of actual losses and recoveries on loans and investments and other assets recorded in reserve accounts and the elimination of corresponding provisions for such items entered against income. Further, to ascertain net profits available for common stock cash dividends, net profits for the current year and proceeding 2 years shall be adjusted for preferred stock dividends paid or accrued and for required transfers to surplus or a fund for the retirement of preferred stock.

(d) In light of the prevalent use of accrual accounting by banks, it also may be appropriate to recognize "pro forma" income tax adjustments in the determination of net profits. The adjustment, if any, would be related to the amount of difference between provisions for losses (or reversal of provisions) included in the determination of "net income" and actual net losses or recoveries incorporated in the section 5199(b) calculations. If the "pro forma" income tax adjustment amounts to less than 5 percent of net profits before such adjustment, it need not be recognized.

(e) The following guideline schedule sets forth the most common adjustments required in calculating net profits for section 5199(b) purposes.

COMPUTATIONS OF NET PROFITS FOR PURPOSES OF SECTION 5199(b)

NET INCOME (SCHEDULE A)

Add: (a) Recoveries credited to reserve accounts (Schedule D).

(b) Provision for loan losses (Schedule A).

(c) Any other provisions charged against income (Schedule A), constituting additions to reserve accounts (Schedule D).

(d) Pro forma income tax adjustment (representing decrease of applicable income tax).

SUBTOTAL

Deduct: (a) Losses charged to reserve accounts (Schedule D).

(b) Preferred stock dividends paid or accrued for the period.

(c) Pro forma income tax adjustment (representing increase of applicable income tax).

SUBTOTAL

NET PROFITS AS DEFINED

Deduct: (a) Required transfers to surplus or a fund for the retirement of preferred stock.

(b) Common stock dividends paid or accrued for the period.

SUBTOTAL

Retained net profits available for common stock dividends.

NOTE 1: Schedule references are to supervisory Report of Income (FR Form 107a).

2. Contra elements to applicable captions should be shown in parentheses.

(f) The above schedule for the determination of net profits will also be employed by the Comptroller of the Currency and its use will be uniform for all member banks.

(g) Special factors affecting net profits, such as charge-offs of bank premises in excess of normal annual depreciation or unusual security losses, will be weighed by the Board in consideration of requests by State member banks to declare dividends which would be prohibited by section 5199(b) without Board approval. Accordingly, any unusual charge-offs should be presented for Board consideration.

(h) The objective of section 5199 is to restrict the payment of dividends where such payments would result in dissipating needed capital funds. The law is designed to prevent the declaration of dividends which are not justified by current and recent accumulated earnings and which would result in a weakened and under-capitalized bank and violate safe and sound banking practices.

[37 FR 25486, Dec. 1, 1972]

§ 250.120 Underwriting bonds payable from proceeds of State sales taxes.

(a) The opinion of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System has been requested with respect to the authority of member State banks to underwrite securities issued by States and political subdivisions thereof, with particular reference to $35,750,000 of Public Building Bonds, 1961, Series D, and Public School Plant Facilities Bonds, 1961, Series C, of the State of Washington. The Comptroller of the Currency has held that said bonds are eligible for underwriting by national banks.

(b) Paragraph Seventh of section 5136 of the Revised Statutes (12 U.S.C. 24) provides that a national bank "shall not underwrite any issue of securities", but further provides that this restriction "shall not apply to * * * general obligations of any State or of any political subdivision thereof". The 20th paragraph of section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 335) subjects State member banks to the same limitations with respect to the underwriting of investment securities "as are applicable in the case of national banks under paragraph 'Seventh' of section 5136."

(c) Under the statutory provisions quoted above, member banks are prohibited from underwriting securities issued by a State unless those securities are "general obligations". In the opinion of the Board of Governors, securities are not "general obligations" unless they are backed by the full faith and credit of the issuer. As stated in paragraph 520 of the "Digest of Opinions of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency", "Securities payable only out of particular funds or out of the obligor's revenues from a particular source are not general obligations." In order to be eligible for underwriting by member banks, the issuer must possess the power of general property taxation and the securities must be supported by that power, as a part of the "full faith and credit" of the issuer.

(d) The bonds in question are issued pursuant to Washington Laws of 1961, Ex Sess., Chapters 3 and 23. These statutes provide that the bonds "shall not be a general obligation of the state of Washington but shall be payable * * * from the proceeds of retail sales taxes * * *." The statutes also provide that "the state undertakes to continue to levy the taxes referred to herein and to fix and maintain said taxes in such amounts as will provide sufficient funds to pay said bonds and interest thereon until all such obligations have been paid in full."

(e) The statutory provisions that the bonds in question "shall not be a general obligation of the State of Washington" and "shall be payable * * * from the proceeds of retail sales taxes" appear to indicate that the bonds will not be supported by the full faith and credit of the State, including its power of general property taxation. If this is correct it follows on the principles previously stated, that these bonds would not be "general obligations" of the State within the meaning of R.S. 5136 and would not be eligible to be underwritten by member banks. The undertaking to levy retail sales taxes that will provide sufficient funds to pay the bonds in full reflects the intent of the State that the bonds (and interest thereon) shall be paid, but it does not negate the plain statement in the Washington statute that the bonds shall be payable from a particular source—namely, the proceeds of retail sales taxes—and are not general obligations.

(f) This conclusion does not conflict with the decision of the Supreme Court of Washington in State of Washington v. Martin, decided August 7, 1963. It was there held that bonds of this nature are "issued upon the credit of the state and are in truth debts of the state." However, the Court made it quite clear that such bonds are not supported by the full faith and credit of the State and its plenary taxing power. Under the State constitutional and statutory provisions dealt with in that decision, bonds of the State of Washington that are payable from a particular source of revenue constitute a debt of that State but are not general obligations thereof.

(g) For these reasons, the Board concludes that the bonds in question are not "general obligations" within the purview of section 5136 of the Revised Statutes and consequently are not eligible for underwriting by State banks that are members of the Federal Reserve System.

(12 U.S.C. 24, 335)

§ 250.121 Application of investment securities regulation to member State banks.

(a) General. A revision of the Investment Securities Regulation (Part 1 of this title) was issued recently by the Comptroller of the Currency. Under section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 335) the regulation is applicable to member State banks as well as to national banks, insofar as it conforms to paragraph Seventh of section 5136 of the Revised Statutes (R.S. 5136; 12 U.S.C. 24).

(b) Provisions of regulation with respect to "exempt securities". (1) Paragraph Seventh refers to two areas of securities transactions by a bank: (i) Underwriting and dealing, which are grouped as "underwriting" herein, and (ii) investing (called "purchasing for its own account" in the statute).

(2) The statute contains a general prohibition against a member bank (i) underwriting securities or (ii) investing more than 10 percent of its capital and surplus in the securities of any one obligor. In addition to this 10 percent limitation, the power of national banks and member State banks to purchase securities for investment is subject to "such limitations and restrictions as the Comptroller of the Currency may by regulation prescribe". The term "investment securities" is defined in paragraph Seventh and is subject to "such further definition * * * as may by regulation be prescribed by the Comptroller".

(3) The statute also provides, however, that "The limitations and restrictions herein contained as to dealing in, underwriting and purchasing for [the bank's] own account, investment securities shall not apply to obligations of the United States or general obligations of any State or of any political subdivision thereof," or certain other securities. In other words, national banks and member State banks are legally free (i) to underwrite such "exempt securities" and (ii) to invest therein without regard to the 10 percent limitation mentioned in this section.

(4) The authority of the Comptroller of the Currency to issue investment regulations pursuant to R.S. 5136 does not include authority to exempt additional kinds of securities from the prohibition against underwriting or the prohibition against investing more than 10 percent of capital and surplus in securities of any one obligor. Despite this, § 1.3 of this title, the Comptroller's recent revision of the Investment Securities Regulation, contains a definition of "public security" and § 1.4 of this title states that "A bank may deal in, underwrite, purchase and sell for its own account a public security subject only to the exercise of prudent banking judgment." The term "public security" is so defined that, in effect, the regulation purports to authorize national banks and member State banks to underwrite, and to purchase without limitation on amount, securities that are not exempted by law from the statutory prohibition against underwriting and against investing in excess of the 10 percent limitation. For example, the terms of the regulation would authorize such banks to underwrite some securities of public corporations that are payable solely out of revenues derived from the operation of a tunnel, turnpike, bridge, or the like, despite the fact that the applicable statute does not exempt such securities from the general prohibition against underwriting by banks.

(5) Since the Comptroller is not authorized by law to expand the category of exempt securities established and described in paragraph Seventh of R.S. 5136, the current regulation does not have the force and effect of law insofar as it attempts to do this. Accordingly, member State banks are informed that, in the opinion of the Board of Governors, the only securities that are exempt from the limitations and restrictions of paragraph Seventh are those specified in R.S. 5136. Unless a particular issue of securities is exempt by virtue of that provision of law, member State banks may not underwrite the issue, and the 10 percent limit is applicable to investments therein. Since so-called "revenue obligations" of the kinds mentioned above, as well as other revenue obligations, are not exempt from the limitations and restrictions of R.S. 5136, it would be unlawful for a member State bank to underwrite such securities or to invest in them in excess of the 10 percent limit.

(c) Convertible securities. (1) From time to time corporations issue debentures or similar securities that constitute an obligation to pay a specified dollar amount of principal (as well as interest) and in addition give the holder an option to convert the security into a specified number of shares of the corporation's stock. When the market value of the stock into which such a debenture is convertible is substantially less than the face value of the debenture, the debenture ordinarily will sell at a price that reflects principally its value as a corporate obligation, without regard to the conversion option. However, the market value of the stock sometimes increases to such an extent that the shares into which a debenture is convertible have a market value that is much greater than the face value of the debenture. For example, a number of convertible debentures traded on the New York Stock Exchange sell at prices of $2,000, $3,000, or more, for securities with a face value of $1,000. These prices approximate very closely the current market value of the shares of stock for which the convertible may be exchanged at the holder's option.

(2) A question has arisen as to the circumstances in which a member State bank may purchase convertible debentures for its investment portfolio under the provisions of the Investment Securities Regulation of the Comptroller of the Currency, as recently revised.

(3) Section 1.3(b) of this title defines "investment security" to exclude securities "which are predominantly speculative in nature", so that, under R.S. 5136 and the regulation, the purchase of "predominantly speculative" securities is not permissible. When the market price of a convertible debenture is far in excess of its face value because of the conversion feature, and its price fluctuations parallel the fluctuations in the price of the stock into which it is convertible, the debenture is necessarily speculative. Market conditions may induce price fluctuations that may have no relationship to the quality of the debenture or even of the particular stock into which it can be converted.

(4) Accordingly, it would appear that a bank is prohibited from purchasing convertible debentures in the circumstances described. However, uncertainty as to this matter could arise from the terms of § 1.10 of this title (Comptroller's Revised Regulation), which might be read as indicating that a bank may purchase convertible securities generally, provided that the cost of such a security is written down promptly "to an amount which represents the investment value of the security considered independently of the conversion feature".

(5) Quite apart from questions of interpretation of the revised regulation, however, it is to be noted that the law itself (paragraph Seventh of R.S. 5136) in effect forbids national banks and member State banks to purchase "any shares of stock of any corporation". When the market price of a convertible security reaches 200 percent or 300 percent of its face value due to a rise in the price of the related stock, purchase of the convertible security is, for practical purposes, equivalent to the purchase of the stock it represents.

(6) In the light of these statutory and regulatory provisions, it is the position of the Board of Governors that a member State bank may not lawfully invest in a convertible security whose price exceeds, by more than an insignificant amount, the investment value of the obligation, considered independently of the conversion feature. Adherence to this principle will avoid violations of the statute and regulation that would occur if a bank were to purchase convertible securities in such circumstances that the security necessarily would be "predominantly speculative in nature", for the reasons described, and the transaction would be tantamount to a purchase of corporate stock.

§ 250.122 Underwriting of public Authority bonds payable from rents under lease with governmental entity having general taxing powers.

(a) The Board of Governors has been asked whether securities of a public Authority that are to be paid from rents payable under a lease of the Authority's facilities to a governmental entity that possesses general powers of taxation, including property taxation, constitute "general obligations" within the meaning of section 5136 of the U.S. Revised Statutes (12 U.S.C. 24). In cases where this question can be answered in the affirmative, member State banks of the Federal Reserve System may lawfully underwrite and deal in such securities, and invest therein without limitation on amount, as far as Federal banking law is concerned.

(b) The Board understands that the issuing Authorities usually have no taxing powers and that their obligations are not, under pertinent State constitutional and statutory provisions as interpreted by the courts, "debt" of the lessee—that is, the governmental entity with general powers of taxation. However, whether a security constitutes a "debt" for purposes of State law is not determinative as to whether it is a "general obligation" within the meaning of section 5136, a Federal statute. (See § 250.120.)

(c) During recent Hearings before the Committee on Banking and Currency of the House of Representatives, published under the title "Increased Flexibility for Financial Institutions—1963", the Board expressed its understanding of the meaning of the phrase "general obligations of any State or of any political subdivision thereof" as used in section 5136.

(d) As the House Committee was informed, the Board understands that phrase to include "only obligations that are supported by an unconditional promise to pay, directly or indirectly, an aggregate amount which (together with any other funds available for the purpose) will suffice to discharge, when due, all interest on and principal of such obligations, which promise (1) is made by a governmental entity that possesses general powers of taxation, including property taxation, and (2) pledges or otherwise commits the full faith and credit of said promisor; said term does not include obligations not so supported that are to be repaid only from specified sources such as the income from designated facilities or the proceeds of designated taxes." (Hearings, p. 1018.)

(e) A major requirement of the foregoing definition is that a "general obligation" must be supported by general powers of taxation, including property taxation. The Board recognizes, however, that such support by general powers of taxation may be indirect as well as direct.

(f) If a State (or other governmental entity having general powers of taxation) agrees unconditionally to pay to an Authority rentals that will be sufficient and will be used, in all events, to cover required payments of interest and principal on the relevant securities when due, the securities, in the opinion of the Board, are indirectly supported by general taxing powers, and, accordingly, constitute "general obligations" within the meaning of

R.S. 5136. On the other hand, if the lease does not contain an unconditional promise of the State to provide sums sufficient, in all events, to cover required payments of interest and principal on the bonds of the lessor Authority as they become due, the securities cannot be considered "general obligations."

(g) The status of a particular issue of such lease-supported bonds thus depends upon the terms of the lease involved. Where the lease is for a term of years not less than the maximum maturity of the relevant bond issue, and the State unconditionally promises to pay rentals sufficient to cover all payments on the bonds as they become due, the bonds ordinarily will qualify as "general obligations". Where the promise of the State is to pay a fixed dollar rental, the securities will not qualify as "general obligations" unless the lease provides that rental payments in amounts sufficient to service the bonds cannot be expended by the authority for any other purpose than the payment of principal and interest thereon.

(h) This interpretation is intended to indicate the circumstances in which securities issued by public Authorities without taxing powers constitute "general obligations" that are eligible for underwriting by member banks, under R.S. 5136. The status of any particular issue can only be determined through examination of all relevant laws and contracts, in order to ascertain the actual legal and financial arrangements.

(12 U.S.C. 24, 335)

§ 250.123 Underwriting of notes payable from proceeds of subsequent sale of general obligation bonds.

(a) The Board of Governors has received inquiries whether California Bond Anticipation Notes constitute "general obligations" of the State of California within the meaning of paragraph Seventh of section 5136 of the U.S. Revised Statutes (12 U.S.C. 24).

(b) The Board understands that, in anticipation of the sale of general obligation bonds duly authorized, Finance Committees of certain public authorities of the State are empowered, under section 16736 of the Government Code of California, to direct the State Treasurer to issue Bond Anticipation Notes whenever "the committee deems it in the best interests of the State".

(c) Although there appears to be no judicial decision as to the nature of Bond Anticipation Notes under California law, the State Attorney General has issued an opinion (No. 63/182 of Nov. 8, 1963) concluding that the Notes do not constitute "a general obligation of the State in the sense that they are secured by the State General Fund and general taxing power of the State".

(d) While the California Attorney General's opinion is not controlling in a determination as to whether the Notes are "general obligations" within the meaning of section 5136, a Federal statute, it is significant in such a determination insofar as it indicates that the Notes are not secured by the State's "general powers of taxation, including property taxation", a sine qua non of "general obligations" under section 5136. (See § 250.122.)

(e) Although the Board of Governors has recognized that the pledge of the "general powers of taxation, including property taxation" may be indirect as well as direct, with respect to payment of the principal of its Bond Anticipation Notes the State of California does not commit its general taxing powers either directly or indirectly. The principal of such Notes is payable solely from the proceeds of subsequent sale of other securities, which means that the State retires the Notes through the exercise of its borrowing powers as distinct from its taxing powers.

(f) That the general obligation bonds, from the proceeds of whose sale the Notes are expected to be paid, will pledge the State's taxing powers cannot be considered an indirect pledge of that power to secure the Notes, because the pledge of the State's taxing powers attaches to the general obligation bonds only after they are sold and can in no way be utilized for the payment of the Notes. In order for obligations to be secured directly or indirectly by general taxing power, that power must be available for use, if necessary, to provide funds for the required payments of both principal and interest.

(g) The Board of Governors accordingly concludes that California Bond Anticipation Notes do not constitute general obligations within the meaning of section 5136. The Notes, therefore, would not be eligible for underwriting and dealing in by member State banks.

(12 U.S.C. 24, 335)

§ 250.140 Member bank acquisition of stock of another bank.

(a) The Board of Governors has recently considered, in several cases, whether a member bank may lawfully acquire stock of another bank. In some instances, a direct acquisition was involved; in another, the stock was to be purchased by a wholly owned subsidiary of the member bank. In one instance, the bank stock was to be purchased for cash; in others, the consideration was to consist of newly issued shares of stock of the acquiring bank. All of the cases involved acquisition of a majority of the stock of the "subsidiary" bank.

(b) The Board reaffirmed its position, originally taken shortly after enactment of the Banking Act of 1933 (1933 Federal Reserve Bulletin 449), that such acquisitions by member banks are not legally permissible. Section 5136 of the U.S. Revised Statutes (12 U.S.C. 24) forbids a national bank to purchase "for its own account * * * any shares of stock of any corporation." That prohibition is also applicable to State member banks, under section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 335). Legislative history and judicial interpretations in this field support the view that Congress did not intend to permit national banks or State member banks to acquire, for their own account, the stock of other banks, either directly or through intermediary corporations. The statutory prohibition applies to any voluntary acquisition of the stock of another bank, whether the consideration given for the stock consists of cash, other bank assets, or shares of stock of the acquiring bank.

(c) The Board concluded that such acquisitions would also violate the provisions of section 5155 of the Revised Statutes and section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 36 and 321) that prohibit the establishment of branches by member banks except under prescribed conditions. Those provisions of law were intended to permit national banks and State member banks to operate additional banking offices only with the prior approval of the Comptroller of the Currency or the Board of Governors, respectively. When one bank owns all or a majority of the stock of another, the offices and resources of the latter are a part of the banking organization owned by, and subject to the control of, the parent bank, despite the existence of separate corporate entities. Consequently, if such acquisitions of stock were permissible, member banks could conduct banking operations through additional offices without obtaining supervisory approval, which would undermine an important regulatory purpose of the Federal statutes relating to multiple-office banking.

(d) This incompatibility with the Federal banking statutes is particularly apparent when the offices of the "subsidiary" bank are situated in places where the acquiring bank may not lawfully establish and maintain direct branches, under applicable State and Federal laws. If a bank in those circumstances could acquire an existing bank or establish a new one, it could effectively circumvent public policy and accomplish indirectly what it could not accomplish directly—namely, ownership and control of banking offices in places (even in another State) where it is forbidden by law to conduct banking operations.

§ 250.141 Member bank purchase of stock of "operations subsidiaries."

(a) The Board of Governors has reexamined its position that the so-called "stock-purchase prohibition" of section 5136 of the Revised Statutes (12 U.S.C. 24), which is made applicable to member State banks by the 20th paragraph of section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 335), forbids the purchase by a member bank "for its own account of any shares of stock of any corporation" (the statutory language), except as specifically permitted by provisions of Federal law or as comprised within the concept of "such incidental powers as shall be necessary to carry on the business of banking", referred to in the first sentence of paragraph "Seventh" of R.S. 5136.

(b) In 1966 the Board expressed the view that said incidental powers do not permit member banks to purchase stock of "operations subsidiaries"—that is, organizations designed to serve, in effect, as separately-incorporated departments of the bank, performing, at locations at which the bank is authorized to engage in business, functions that the bank is empowered to perform directly. (See 1966 Federal Reserve Bulletin 1151.)

(c) The Board now considers that the incidental powers clause permits a bank to organize its operations in the manner that it believes best facilitates the performance thereof. One method of organization is through departments; another is through separate incorporation of particular operations. In other words, a wholly owned subsidiary corporation engaged in activities that the bank itself may perform is simply a convenient alternative organizational arrangement.

(d) Reexamination of the apparent purposes and legislative history of the stock-purchase prohibition referred to above has led the Board to conclude that such prohibition should not be interpreted to preclude a member bank from adopting such an organizational arrangement unless its use would be inconsistent with other Federal law, either statutory or judicial.

(e) In view of the relationship between the operation of certain subsidiaries and the branch banking laws, the Board has also reexamined its rulings on what constitutes "money lent" for the purposes of section 5155 of the Revised Statutes (12 U.S.C. 36), which provides that "The term 'branch' * * * shall be held to include any branch bank, branch office, branch agency, additional office, or any branch place of business * * * at which deposits are received, or checks paid, or money lent."[1]

(f) The Board noted in its 1967 interpretation that offices that are open to the public and staffed by employees of the bank who regularly engage in soliciting borrowers, negotiating terms, and processing applications for loans (so-called "loan production offices") constitute branches. (1967 Federal Reserve Bulletin 1334.) The Board also noted that later in that year it considered the question whether a bank holding company may acquire the stock of a so-called "mortgage company" on the basis that the company would be engaged in "furnishing services to or performing services for such bank holding company or its banking subsidiaries" (the so-called "servicing exemption" of section 4(c)(1)(C) of the Bank Holding Company Act; 12 U.S.C. 1843). In concluding affirmatively, the Board stated that "the appropriate test for determining whether the company may be considered as within the servicing exemption is whether the company will perform as principal any banking activities—such as receiving deposits, paying checks, extending credit, conducting a trust department, and the like. In other words, if the mortgage company is to act merely as an adjunct to a bank for the purpose of facilitating the bank's operations, the company may appropriately be considered as within the scope of the servicing exemption." (1967 Federal Reserve Bulletin 1911; 12 CFR 225.122.)

(g) The Board believes that the purposes of the branch banking laws and the servicing exemption are related. Generally, what constitutes a branch does not constitute a servicing organization and, vice versa, an office that only performs servicing functions should not be considered a branch. (See 1958 Federal Reserve Bulletin 431, last paragraph; 12 CFR 225.104(e).) When viewed together, the above-cited interpretations on loan production offices and mortgage companies represent a departure from this principle. In reconsidering the laws involved, the Board has concluded that a test similar to that adopted with respect to the servicing exemption under the Bank Holding Company Act is appropriate for use in determining whether or not what constitutes "money [is] lent" at a particular office, for the purpose of the Federal branch banking laws.

[1] In the Board's judgment, the statutory enumeration of three specific functions that establish branch status is not meant to be exclusive but to assure that offices at which any of these functions is performed are regarded as branches by the bank regulatory authorities. In applying the statute the emphasis should be to assure that significant banking functions are made available to the public only at governmentally authorized offices.

(h) Accordingly, the Board considers that the following activities, individually or collectively, do not constitute the lending of money within the meaning of section 5155 of the revised statutes: Soliciting loans on behalf of a bank (or a branch thereof), assembling credit information, making property inspections and appraisals, securing title information, preparing applications for loans (including making recommendations with respect to action thereon), soliciting investors to purchase loans from the bank, seeking to have such investors contract with the bank for the servicing of such loans, and other similar agent-type activities. When loans are approved and funds disbursed solely at the main office or a branch of the bank, an office at which only preliminary and servicing steps are taken is not a place where "money [is] lent". Because preliminary and servicing steps of the kinds described do not constitute the performance of significant banking functions of the type that Congress contemplated should be performed only at governmentally approved offices, such office is accordingly not a branch.

(i) To summarize the foregoing, the Board has concluded that, insofar as Federal law is concerned, a member bank may purchase for its own account shares of a corporation to perform, at locations at which the bank is authorized to engage in business, functions that the bank is empowered to perform directly. Also, a member bank may establish and operate, at any location in the United States, a "loan production office" of the type described herein. Such offices may be established and operated by the bank either directly, or indirectly through a wholly-owned subsidiary corporation.

(j) This interpretation supersedes both the Board's 1966 ruling on "operations subsidiaries" and its 1967 ruling on "loan production offices", referred to above.

[33 FR 11813, Aug. 21, 1968; 43 FR 53414, Nov. 16, 1978]

§ 250.142 Meaning of "obligor or maker" in determining limitation on securities investments by member State banks.

(a) From time to time the New York State Dormitory Authority offers issues of bonds with respect to each of which a different educational institution enters into an agreement to make "rental" payments to the Authority sufficient to cover interest and principal thereon when due. The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System has been asked whether a member State bank may invest up to 10 percent of its capital and surplus in each such issue.

(b) Paragraph Seventh of section 5136 of the U.S. Revised Statutes (12 U.S.C. 24) provides that "In no event shall the total amount of the investment securities of any one obligor or maker, held by [a national bank] for its own account, exceed at any time 10 per centum of its capital stock * * * and surplus fund". That limitation is made applicable to member State banks by the 20th paragraph of section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 335).

(c) The Board considers that, within the meaning of these provisions of law, "obligor" does not include any person that acts solely as a conduit for transmission of funds received from another source, irrespective of a promise by such person to pay principal or interest on the obligation. While an obligor does not cease to be such merely because a third person has agreed to pay the obligor amounts sufficient to cover principal and interest on the obligations when due, a person that promises to pay an obligation, but as a practical matter has no resources with which to assume payment of the obligation except the amounts received from such third person, is not an "obligor" within the meaning of section 5136.

(d) Review of the New York Dormitory Authority Act (N.Y. Public Authorities Law sections 1675-1690), the Authority's interpretation thereof, and materials with respect to the Authority's "Revenue Bonds, Mills College of Education Issue, Series A" indicates that the Authority is not an "obligor" on those and similar bonds. Although the Authority promises to make all payments of principal and interest, a bank that invests in such bonds cannot be reasonably considered as doing so in reliance on the promise and responsibility of the Authority. Despite the Authority's obligation to make payments on the bonds, if the particular college fails to perform its agreement to make rental payments to the Authority sufficient to cover all payments of bond principal and interest when due, as a practical matter the sole source of funds for payments to the bondholder is the particular college. The Authority has general borrowing power but no resources from which to assure repayment of any borrowing except from the particular colleges, and rentals received from one college may not be used to service bonds issued for another.

(e) Accordingly, the Board has concluded that each college for which the Authority issues obligations is the sole "obligor" thereon. A member State bank may therefore invest an amount up to 10 percent of its capital and surplus in the bonds of a particular college that are eligible investments under the Investment Securities Regulation of the Comptroller of the Currency (12 CFR Part 1), whether issued directly or indirectly through the Dormitory Authority.

(12 U.S.C. 24, 335)

§ 250.143 Member bank purchase of stock of foreign operations subsidiaries.

(a) In a previous interpretation, the Board determined that a State member bank would not violate the "stock-purchase prohibition" of section 5136 of the Revised Statutes (12 U.S.C. 24 ¶ 7) by purchasing and holding the shares of a corporation which performs "at locations at which the bank is authorized to engage in business, functions that the bank is empowered to perform directly".[1] (1968 Federal Reserve Bulletin 681, 12 CFR 250.141). The Board of Governors has been asked by a State member bank whether, under that interpretation, the bank may establish such a so-called "operations subsidiary" outside the United States.

(b) In the above interpretation the Board viewed the creation of a wholly-owned subsidiary which engaged in activities that the bank itself could perform directly as an alternative organizational arrangement that would be permissible for member banks unless "its use would be inconsistent with other Federal law, either statutory or judicial".

(c) In the Board's judgment, the use by member banks of operations subsidiaries outside the United States would be clearly inconsistent with the statutory scheme of the Federal Reserve Act governing the foreign investments and operations of member banks. It is clear that Congress has given member banks the authority to conduct operations and make investments outside the United States only through gradually adopting a series of specific statutory amendments to the Federal Reserve Act, each of which has been carefully drawn to give the Board approval, supervisory, and regulatory authority over those operations and investments.

(d) As part of the original Federal Reserve Act, national banks were, with the Board's permission, given the power to establish foreign branches.[2]

---

[1] National banking associations are prohibited by section 5136 of the Revised Statutes from purchasing and holding shares of any corporation except those corporations whose shares are specifically made eligible by statute. This prohibition is made applicable to State member banks by section 9 ¶ 20 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 335).

[2] Under section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act, State member banks, subject, of course, to any necessary approval from their State banking authority, may establish foreign branches on the same terms and subject to the same limitations and restrictions as are applicable to the establishment of branches by national banks (12 U.S.C. 321). State member banks may also purchase and hold

In 1916, Congress amended the Federal Reserve Act to permit national banks to invest in international or foreign banking corporations known as "Agreement" Corporations, because such corporations were required to enter into an agreement or understanding with the Board to restrict their operations. Subject to such limitations or restrictions as the Board may prescribe, such Agreement corporations may principally engage in international or foreign banking, or banking in a dependency or insular possession of the United States, either directly or through the agency, ownership or control of local institutions in foreign countries, or in such dependencies or insular possessions of the United States. In 1919 the enactment of section 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act (the "Edge Act") permitted national banks to invest in federally chartered international or foreign banking corporations (so-called Edge Corporations) which may engage in international or foreign banking or other international or foreign financial operations, or in banking or other financial operations in a dependency or insular possession of the United States, either directly or through the ownership or control of local institutions in foreign countries, or in such dependencies or insular possessions. Edge Corporations may only purchase and hold stock in certain foreign subsidiaries with the consent of the Board. And in 1966, Congress amended section 25 of the Federal Reserve Act to allow national banks to invest directly in the shares of a foreign bank. In the Board's judgment, the above statutory scheme of the Federal Reserve Act evidences a clear Congressional intent that member banks may only purchase and hold stock in subsidiaries located outside the United States through the prescribed statutory provisions of sections 25 and 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act. It is through these statutorily prescribed forms of organization that member banks must conduct their operations outside the United States.

(e) To summarize, the Board has concluded that a member bank may only organize and operate "operations subsidiaries" at locations in the United States. Investments by member banks in foreign subsidiaries must be made either with the Board's permission under section 25 of the Federal Reserve Act or, with the Board's consent, through an Edge Corporation subsidiary under section 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act or through an Agreement Corporation subsidiary under section 25 of the Federal Reserve Act. In addition, it should be noted that bank holding companies may acquire the shares of certain foreign subsidiaries with the Board's approval under section 4(c)(13) of the Bank Holding Company Act. These statutory sections taken together already give member banks a great deal of organizational flexibility in conducting their operations abroad.

§ 250.160 Federal funds transactions.

(a) It is the position of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System that, for purposes of provisions of law administered by the Board, a transaction in Federal funds involves a loan on the part of the "selling" bank and a borrowing on the part of the "purchasing" bank.

(b) For example, for purposes of section 23A of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 371c), a "sale" of Federal funds by a member bank, whether State or national, to an affiliate of the member bank is subject to the limitations prescribed in that section.

(12 U.S.C. 371c)

§ 250.161 Capital notes and debentures as "capital," "capital stock," or "surplus."

(a) The Board of Governors has been presented with the question whether capital notes or debentures issued by banks, that are subordinated to deposit liabilities, may be considered as part of a bank's "capital stock," "capital," or "surplus," for pur-shares of stock in Edge or Agreement Corporations and foreign banks because national banks, as a result of specific statutory exceptions to the stock purchase prohibitions of section 5136, can purchase and hold stock in these Corporations or banks.

---

poses of various provisions of the Federal Reserve Act that impose requirements or limitations upon member banks.

(b) A "note" or "debenture" is an evidence of debt, embodying a promise to pay a certain sum of money on a specified date. Such a debt instrument issued by a commercial bank is quite different from its "stock," which evidences a proprietary or "equity" interest in the assets of the bank. Likewise, the proceeds of a note or debenture that must be repaid on a specified date cannot reasonably be regarded as "surplus funds" of the issuing corporation.

(c) Federal law (12 U.S.C. 51c) expressly provides that the term "capital," as used in provisions of law relating to the capital of national banks, shall mean "the amount of unimpaired common stock plus the amount of preferred stock outstanding and unimpaired." In addition, when Congress in 1934 deemed it desirable to permit certain notes and debentures—those sold by State banks to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation—to be considered as "capital" or "capital stock" for purposes of membership in the Federal Reserve System, Congress felt it necessary to implement that objective by a specific amendment to section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 321). These plain evidences of Congressional intent compel the conclusion that, for purposes of statutory limitations and requirements, "capital" notes and debentures may not properly be regarded as part of either "capital" or "capital stock."

(d) Accordingly, under the law, capital notes or debentures do not constitute "capital," "capital stock," or "surplus" for the purposes of provisions of the Federal Reserve Act, including, among others, those that limit member banks with respect to loans to affiliates (12 U.S.C. 371c), purchases of investment securities (12 U.S.C. 24, 335), investments in bank premises (12 U.S.C. 371d), loans on stock or bond collateral (12 U.S.C. 248(m)), deposits with nonmember banks (12 U.S.C. 463), and bank acceptances (12 U.S.C. 372, 373), as well as provisions that limit the amount of paper of one borrower that may be discounted by a Federal Reserve Bank for any member bank (12 U.S.C. 84, 330, 345).

§ 250.162 Undivided profits as "capital stock and surplus".

(a) The Board of Governors has reexamined the question whether a member bank's undivided profits may be considered as part of its "capital stock and surplus", as that or a similar term is used in provisions of the Federal Reserve Act that limit member banks with respect to the following: Loans to affiliates (12 U.S.C. 371c), purchases of investment securities (12 U.S.C. 335), loans on stock or bond collateral (12 U.S.C. 248(m)), deposits with nonmember banks (12 U.S.C. 463), bank acceptances (12 U.S.C. 372, 373), investments in and by Edge and Agreement corporations (12 U.S.C. 601, 615, 618), and the amount of paper of one borrower that may be discounted or accepted as collateral for an advance by a Federal Reserve Bank (12 U.S.C. 330, 345, 347).

(b) Upon such reexamination the Board concludes that its negative view expressed in 1964 is unnecessarily restrictive in the light of the Congressional purpose in establishing limitations on bank activities in terms of a bank's capital structure. Accordingly, the Board has decided that, for the purposes of the limitations set forth above, undivided profits may be included as part of "capital stock and surplus".

(c) As used herein, the term "undivided profits" includes paid-in or earned profits (unearned income must be deducted); reserves for loan losses or bad debts, less the amount of tax which would become payable with respect to the tax-free portion of the reserve if such portion were transferred from the reserve; valuation reserves for securities; and reserves for contingencies. It does not include reserves for dividends declared or reserves for taxes, interest and expenses.

(Interprets and applies 12 U.S.C. 24, 84, 330, 335, 345, 347, 371c, 372, 373, 464, 601, 615, 618)

[36 FR 5673, Mar. 26, 1971]

§ 250.163 Inapplicability of amount limitations to "ineligible acceptances."

(a) Since 1923, the Board has been of the view that "the acceptance power of State member banks is not necessarily confined to the provisions of section 13 (of the Federal Reserve Act), inasmuch as the laws of many States confer broader acceptance powers upon their State banks, and certain State member banks may, therefore, legally make acceptances of kinds which are not eligible for rediscount, but which may be eligible for purchase by Federal reserve banks under section 14." 1923 FR bulletin 316, 317.

(b) In 1963, the Comptroller of the Currency ruled that "[n]ational banks are not limited in the character of acceptances which they may make in financing credit transactions, and bankers' acceptances may be used for such purpose, since the making of acceptances is an essential part of banking authorized by 12 U.S.C. 24." Comptroller's manual 7.7420. Therefore, national banks are authorized by the Comptroller to make acceptances under 12 U.S.C. 24, although the acceptances are not the type described in section 13 of the Federal Reserve Act.

(c) A review of the legislative history surrounding the enactment of the acceptance provisions of section 13, reveals that Congress believed in 1913, that it was granting to national banks a power which they would not otherwise possess and had not previously possessed. See remarks of Congressmen Phelan, Helvering, Saunders, and Glass, 51 Cong. Rec. 4676, 4798, 4885, and 5064 (September 10, 12, 13, and 17 of 1913). Nevertheless, the courts have long recognized the evolutionary nature of banking and of the scope of the "incidental powers" clause of 12 U.S.C. 24. See Merchants Bank v. State Bank, 77 U.S. 604 (1870) (upholding the power of a national bank to certify a check under the "incidental powers" clause of 12 U.S.C. 24).

(d) It now appears that, based on the Board's 1923 ruling, and the Comptroller's 1963 ruling, both State member banks and national banks may make acceptances which are not of the type described in section 13 of the Federal Reserve Act. Yet, this appears to be a development that Congress did not contemplate when it drafted the acceptance provisions of section 13.

(e) The question is presented whether the amount limitations of section 13 should apply to acceptances made by a member bank that are not of the type described in section 13. (The amount limitations are of two kinds: (1) A limitation on the amount that may be accepted for any one customer, and (2) a limitation on the aggregate amount of acceptances that a member bank may make.) In interpreting any Federal statutory provision, the primary guide is the intent of Congress, yet, as noted earlier, Congress did not contemplate in 1913, the development of so-called "ineligible acceptances." (Although there is some indication that Congress did contemplate State member banks' making acceptances of a type not described in section 13 [remarks of Congressman Glass, 51 Cong. Rec. 5064], the primary focus of congressional attention was on the acceptance powers of national banks.) In the absence of an indication of congressional intent, we are left to reach an interpretation that is in harmony with the language of the statutory provisions and with the purposes of the Federal Reserve Act.

(f) Section 13 authorizes acceptances of two types. The seventh paragraph of section 13 (12 U.S.C. 372) authorizes certain acceptances that arise out of specific transactions in goods. (These acceptances are sometimes referred to as "commercial acceptances.") The 12th paragraph of section 13 authorizes member banks to make acceptances "for the purpose of furnishing dollar exchange as required by the usages of trade" in foreign transactions. (Such acceptances are referred to as "dollar exchange acceptances.") In the 12th paragraph, there is a 10 percent limit on the amount of dollar exchange acceptances that may be accepted for any one customer (unless adequately secured) and a limitation on the aggregate amount of dollar exchange acceptances that a member bank may make. (The 12th paragraph, in imposing these limitations, refers to the acceptance of "such drafts or bills of exchange referred to (in) this paragraph.") Similarly, the seventh paragraph imposes on commercial acceptances a parallel 10 percent per-customer limitation, and limitations on the aggregate amount of commercial acceptances. (In the case of the aggregate limitations, the seventh paragraph states that "no bank shall accept such bills to an amount" in excess of the aggregate limit; the reference to "such bills" makes clear that the limitation is only in respect of drafts or bills of exchange of the specific type described in the seventh paragraph.)

(g) Based on the language and parallel structure of the 7th and 12th paragraphs of section 13, and in the absence of a statement of congressional intent in the legislative history, the Board concludes that the per-customer and aggregate limitations of the 12th paragraph apply only to acceptances of the type described in that paragraph (dollar exchange acceptances), and the per-customer and aggregate limitations of the 7th paragraph (12 U.S.C. 372) apply only to acceptances of the type described in that paragraph.

(Interprets and applies 12 U.S.C. 372 and the 12th paragraph of sec. 13 of the Federal Reserve Act, which paragraph is omitted from the United States Code)

§ 250.164 Bankers' acceptances.

(a) Section 207 of the Bank Export Services Act (Title II of Pub. L. 97-290) ("BESA") raised the limits on the aggregate amount of eligible bankers' acceptances ("BAs") that may be created by an individual member bank from 50 per cent (or 100 per cent with the permission of the Board) of its paid up and unimpaired capital stock and surplus ("capital") to 150 per cent (or 200 per cent with the permission of the Board) of its capital. Section 207 also prohibits a member bank from creating eligible BAs for any one person in the aggregate in excess of 10 per cent of the institution's capital. This section of the BESA applies the same limits applicable to member banks to U.S. branches and agencies of foreign banks that are subject to reserve requirements under section 7 of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3105). The Board is clarifying the proper meaning of the seventh paragraph of section 13 of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended by the BESA.

(b)(1) This section of the BESA provides that any portion of an eligible BA created by an institution subject to the BA limitations contained therein ("covered bank") that is conveyed through a participation to another covered bank shall not be included in the calculation of the creating bank's BA limits. The amount of the participation is to be applied to the calculation of the BA limits applicable to the covered bank receiving the participation. Although a covered bank that has reached its 150 or 200 percent limit can continue to create eligible acceptances by conveying participations to other covered banks, Congress has in effect imposed an aggregate limit on the eligible acceptances that may be created by all covered banks equal to the sum of 150 or 200 percent of the capital of all covered banks.

(2) The Board has clarified that under the statute an eligible BA created by a covered bank that is conveyed through a participation to an institution that is not subject to the limitations of this section of the BESA continues to be included in the calculation of the limits applicable to the creating covered bank. This will ensure that the total amount of eligible BAs that may be created by covered banks does not exceed the limitations established by Congress. In addition, this ensures that participations in acceptances are not used as a device for the avoidance of reserve requirements. Finally, this promotes the Congressional intent, with respect to covered banks, that foreign and domestic banks be on an equal footing and under the same legal requirements.

(3) In addition, the amount of a participation received by a covered bank from an institution not covered by the limitations of the Act is to be included in the calculation of the limits applicable to the covered bank receiving the participation. This result is based upon the language of the statute which includes within a covered bank's limits on eligible BAs outstanding the amount of participations received by the covered bank. This provision reflects Congressional intent that a covered bank not be obligated on eligible bankers' acceptances, and participations therein, for an amount in excess of 150 or 200 percent of the institution's capital.

(c) The statute also provides that eligible acceptances growing out of domestic transactions are not to exceed 50 percent of the aggregate of all eligible acceptances authorized for covered banks. The Board has clarified that this 50 percent limitation is applicable to the maximum permissible amount of eligible BAs (150 or 200 percent of capital), regardless of the bank's amount of eligible acceptances outstanding. The statutory language prior to the BESA amendment made clear that covered banks could issue eligible acceptances growing out of domestic transactions up to 50 percent of the amount of the total permissible eligible acceptances the bank could issue. The legislative history of the BESA indicates no intent to change this domestic acceptance limitation.

(d) The statute also provides that for the purpose of the limitations applicable to U.S. branches and agencies of foreign banks, a branch's or agency's capital is to be calculated as the dollar equivalent of the capital stock and surplus of the parent foreign bank as determined by the Board. The Board has clarified that for purposes of calculating the BA limits applicable to U.S. branches and agencies of foreign banks, the identity of the parent foreign bank is generally the same as for reserve requirement purposes; that is, the bank entity that owns the branch or agency most directly. The Board has also clarified that the procedures currently used for purposes of reporting to the Board on the Annual Report of Foreign Banking Organizations, Form FR Y-7, are also to be used in the calculation of the acceptance limits applicable to U.S. branches and agencies of foreign banks. (The FR Y-7 generally requires financial statements prepared in accordance with local accounting practices and an explanation of the accounting terminology and the major features of the accounting standards used in the preparation of the financial statements.) Conversions to the dollar equivalent of the worldwide capital of the foreign bank should be made periodically, but in no event less frequently than quarterly. In this regard, the Board recognizes the need to be flexible in dealing with the effect of foreign exchange rate fluctuations on the calculation of the worldwide capital of the parent foreign bank. Each foreign bank is to be responsible for coordinating the BA activity of its U.S. branches and agencies (including the aggregation of such activity) and establishing procedures that ensure that examiners will be able readily to determine compliance with the BESA limits.

§ 250.165 Bankers' acceptances: definition of participations.

(a)(1) Section 207 of the Bank Export Services Act (Title II of Pub. L. 97-290) ("BESA") raised the limits on the aggregate amount of eligible bankers' acceptances ("BAs") that may be created by a member bank from 50 percent (or 100 percent with the permission of the Board) of its paid up and unimpaired capital stock and surplus ("capital") to 150 percent (or 200 percent with the permission of the Board) of its capital. Section 207 also prohibits a member bank from creating eligible BAs for any one person in the aggregate in excess of 10 percent of the institution's capital. Eligible BAs growing out of domestic transactions are not to exceed 50 percent of the aggregate of all eligible acceptances authorized for a member bank. This section of the BESA applies the same limits applicable to member banks to U.S. branches and agencies of foreign banks that are subject to reserve requirements under section 7 of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3105).[1]

(2) This section of the BESA also provides that any portion of an eligible BA created by a covered bank ("senior bank") that is conveyed through a "participation agreement" to another covered bank ("junior bank") shall not be included in the calculation of the senior bank's bankers' acceptance limits established by section 207 of BESA.[2] However, the amount of the participation is to be included in the BA limits applicable to the junior bank. The language of the statute does not define what constitutes a participation agreement for purposes of the applicability of the BESA limitations. However, the statute does authorize the Board to further define any of the terms used in section 207 of the BESA (12 U.S.C. 372(g)). The Board is clarifying the term participation for purposes of the BA limitations of the BESA.

---

[1] The institutions subject to the BA limitations of BESA will hereinafter be referred to as "covered banks."

(b) The legislative history of section 207 of the BESA indicates that Congress intended that the junior bank be obligated to the senior bank in the event that the account party defaults on its obligation to pay, but that the junior bank need not also be obligated to pay the holder of the acceptance at the time the BA is presented for payment. H. Rep. No. 97-629, 97th Cong., 2nd Sess. 15 (1982); 128 Cong. Rec. H 4647 (daily ed. July 27, 1982) (remarks by Rep. Barnard); and 128 Cong. Rec. H 8462 (daily ed. October 1, 1982) (remarks by Rep. Barnard). The legislative history also indicates that Congress intended that eligible BAs in which participations had been conveyed not be required to indicate the name(s) (or interest(s)) of the junior bank(s) on the acceptance in order for the BA to be excluded from the BESA limitations applicable to the senoir bank. 128 Cong. Rec. S 12237 (daily ed. September 24, 1982) (remarks of Senators Heinz and Garn); and 128 Cong. Rec. H 4647 (daily ed. July 27, 1982) (remarks of Rep. Barnard).

(c)(1) In view of Congressional intent with regard to what constitutes a participation in an eligible BA, the Board has determined that, for purposes of the BESA limits, a participation must satisfy the following two minimum requirements:

(i) A written agreement entered into between the junior and senior bank under which the junior bank acquires the senior bank's claim against the account party to the extent of the amount of the participation that is enforceable in the event that the account party fails to perform in accordance with the terms of the acceptance; and

(ii) The agreement between the junior and senior bank provides that the senior bank obtains a claim against the junior bank to the extent of the amount of the participation that is enforceable in the event the account party fails to perform in accordance with the terms of the acceptance.

(2) Consistent with Congressional intent, the minimum requirements do not require the junior bank to be obligated to pay the holder of the acceptance at the time the BA is presented for payment. Similarly, the minimum requirements do not require the name(s) or interest(s) of the junior bank(s) to appear on the face of the acceptance.

(3) An eligible BA that is conveyed through a participation that does not satisfy these minimum requirements would continue to be included in the BA limits applicable to the senior bank. Further, an eligible BA conveyed to a covered bank through a participation that provided for additional rights and obligations among the parties would be excluded from the BESA limitations of the senior bank provided the minimum requirements were satisfied.

(4) A participation structured pursuant to these minimum requirements would be as follows: Upon the conveyance of the participation, the senior bank retains its entire obligation to pay the holder of the BA at maturity. The senior bank has a claim against the junior bank to the extent of the amount of the participation that is enforceable in the event the account party fails to perform in accordance with the terms of the acceptance. Similarly, the junior bank has a corresponding claim against the account party to the extent of the amount of

---

[2] The use of the terms "senior bank" and "junior bank" has no implications regarding priority of claims. These terms merely represent a shorthand method of identifying the depository institution that has created the acceptance and conveyed the participation (senior bank) and the depository institution that has received the participation (junior bank).

the participation that is enforceable in the event the account party fails to perform in accordance with the terms of the acceptance.

(d)(1) The Board is not requiring the senior bank and the account party specifically to agree that the senior bank's rights are assignable because the Board believes such rights to be assignable even in the absence of an explicit agreement.

(2) The junior and senior banks may contract among themselves as to which party(ies) have the responsibility for administering the arrangement, enforcing claims, or exercising remedies.

(e) The Board recognizes that both the junior bank's claim on the account party and the senior bank's claim on the junior bank involve risk. Therefore, it is essential that these risks be assessed by the banks involved in accordance with prudent and sound banking practices. The examiners will in the normal course of the examination process review the risk assessment procedures instituted by the banks. The junior bank should review the creditworthiness of each account party when the junior bank acquires a participation and the senior bank should review on an ongoing basis the creditworthiness of the junior bank. Junior bank agreement to rely exclusively upon the credit judgment of the senior bank and purchase on an ongoing basis from the senior bank all participations in BAs regardless of the identity of the account party is not appropriate in view of the risks involved. However, in those cases involving a participation between a parent bank and its Edge affiliate where the credit review for both entities is performed by the parent bank, the Edge Corporation should maintain documentation indicating that it concurs with the parent bank's analysis and that the acceptance participation is appropriate for inclusion in the Edge Corporation's portfolio.

(f) Similarly, the Board has determined that it is appropriate to include the risks incurred by the senior bank in assessing the senior bank's capital and the risks incurred by the junior bank in assessing the junior bank's capital.

(g) In view of this clarification of the issues relating to participations in BAs, the Board encourages the private sector to develop standardized forms for BAs and participations therein that clearly delineate the rights and responsibilities of the relevant parties.

§ 250.180 Reports of changes in control of management.

(a) Under a statute enacted September 12, 1964 (Pub. L. 88-593; 78 Stat. 940) all insured banks are required to report promptly (1) changes in the outstanding voting stock of the bank which will result in control or in a change in control of the bank and (2) any instances where the bank makes a loan or loans, secured, or to be secured, by 25 percent or more of the outstanding voting stock of an insured bank.

(b) Reports concerning changes in control of a State member bank are to be made by the president or other chief executive officer of the bank, and shall be submitted to the Federal Reserve Bank of its district.

(c) Reports concerning loans by an insured bank on the stock of a State member bank are to be made by the president or other chief executive officer of the lending bank, and shall be submitted to the Federal Reserve Bank of the State member bank on the stock of which the loan was made.

(d) Paragraphs 3 and 4 of this legislation specify the information required in the reports which, in cases involving State member banks, should be addressed to the Vice President in Charge of Examinations of the appropriate Federal Reserve Bank.

(12 U.S.C. 1817)

§ 250.181 Reports of change in control of bank management incident to a merger.

(a) A State member bank has inquired whether Pub. L. 88-593 (78 Stat. 940) requires reports of change in control of bank management in situations where the change occurs as an incident in a merger.

(b) Under the Bank Merger Act of 1960 (12 U.S.C. 1828(c)), no bank with Federal deposit insurance may merge or consolidate with, or acquire the assets of, or assume the liability to pay deposits in, any other insured bank without prior approval of the appropriate Federal bank supervisory agency. Where the bank resulting from any such transaction is a State member bank, the Board of Governors is the agency that must pass on the transaction. In the course of consideration of such an application, the Board would, of necessity, acquire knowledge of any change in control of management that might result. Information concerning any such change in control of management is supplied with each merger application and, in the circumstances, it is the view of the Board that the receipt of such information in connection with a merger application constitutes compliance with Pub. L. 88-593. However, once a merger has been approved and completely effectuated, the resulting bank would thereafter be subject to the reporting requirements of Pub. L. 88-593.

§ 250.182 Terms defining competitive effects of proposed mergers.

Under the Bank Merger Act (12 U.S.C. 1828(c)), a Federal Banking agency receiving a merger application must request the views of the other two banking agencies and the Department of Justice on the competitive factors involved. Standard descriptive terms are used by the Board, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the Comptroller of the Currency. The terms and their definitions are as follows:

(a) The term "monopoly" means that the proposed transaction must be disapproved in accordance with 12 U.S.C. 1828(c)(5)(A).

(b) The term "substantially adverse" means that the proposed transaction would have anticompetitive effects which preclude approval unless the anticompetitive effects are clearly outweighed in the public interest by the probable effect of the transaction in meeting the convenience and needs of the community to be served as specified in 12 U.S.C. 1828(c)(5)(B).

(c) The term "adverse" means that proposed transaction would have anticompetitive effects which would be material to the decision but which would not preclude approval.

(d) The term "no significant effect" means that the anticompetitive effects of the proposed transaction, if any, would not be material to the decision.

§ 250.200 Investment in bank premises by holding company banks.

(a) The Board of Governors has been asked whether, in determining under section 24A of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 371d) how much may be invested in bank premises without prior Board approval, a State member bank, which is owned by a registered bank holding company, is required to include indebtedness of a corporation, wholly owned by the holding company, that is engaged in holding premises of banks in the holding company system.

(b) Section 24A provides, in part, as follows:

> Hereafter * * * no State member bank, without the approval of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, shall (1) invest in bank premises, or in the stock, bonds, debentures, or other such obligations of any corporation holding the premises of such bank or (2) make loans to or upon the security of the stock of any such corporation, if the aggregate of all such investments and loans, together with the amount of any indebtedness incurred by any such corporation which is an affiliate of the bank, as defined in section 2 of the Banking Act of 1933, as amended [12 U.S.C. 221a], will exceed the amount of the capital stock of such banks.

(c) A corporation that is owned by a holding company is an "affiliate of each of the holding company's majority-owned banks as that term is defined in said section 2. Therefore, under the explicit provisions of section 24A, each State member bank, any part of whose premises is owned by such an affiliate, must include the affiliate's total indebtedness in determining whether a proposed premises investment by the bank would cause the aggregate figure to exceed the amount of the bank's capital stock, so that the Board's prior approval would be required. Where the affiliate holds the premises of a number of the holding company's banks, the amount of the affiliate's indebtedness may be so large that Board approval is required for every proposed investment in bank premises by each majority-owned State member bank, to which the entire indebtedness of the affiliate is required to be attributed. The Board believes that, in these circumstances, individual approvals are not essential to effectuate the purpose of section 24A, which is to safeguard the soundness and liquidity of member banks, and that the protection sought by Congress can be achieved by a suitably circumscribed general approval.

(d) Accordingly the Board hereby grants general approval for any investment or loan (as described in section 24A) by any State member bank, the majority of the stock of which is owned by a registered bank holding company, if the proposed investment or loan will not cause either (1) all such investments and loans by the member bank (together with the indebtedness of any bank premises subsidiary thereof) to exceed 100 percent of the bank's capital stock, or (2) the aggregate of such investments and loans by all of the holding company's subsidiary banks (together with the indebtedness of any bank premises affiliates thereof) to exceed 100 percent of the aggregate capital stock of said banks.

§ 250.220 Whether member bank acting as trustee is prohibited by section 20 of the Banking Act of 1933 from acquiring majority of shares of mutual fund.

(a) The Board recently considered whether section 20 of the Banking Act of 1933 (12 U.S.C. 377) would prohibit a member bank, while acting as trustee of a tax exempt employee benefit trust or trusts, from, under the following circumstances, acquiring a majority of the shares of an open-end investment company ("Fund") registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, or more than 50 percent of the number of Fund's shares voted at the preceding election of directors of the Fund.

(b) The bank has acted as trustee, since December 1963, pursuant to a trust agreement with a county medical society to administer its group retirement program, under which individual members of the society could participate in accordance with the provisions of the Self-Employed Individuals Tax Retirement Act of 1962 (commonly referred to as "H.R. 10").

(c) Under the trust agreement as presently constituted, each employer, who is a participating member of the medical society, directs the bank to invest his contributions to the retirement plan in such proportions as he may elect in insurance or annuity contracts or in a diversified portfolio of securities and other property. The diversified portfolio held by the bank is invested and administered by the bank solely at the direction of a committee of the medical society.

(d) It has now been proposed that the trust agreement be amended to provide that all investments constituting the trust fund, apart from insurance and annuity contracts, will be made exclusively in shares of a single open-end investment company to be named in the trust agreement and that the assets constituting the diversified portfolio now held by the bank, as trustee, will be exchanged for the Fund's shares. The bank will, in addition to holding the shares of the Fund, allocate income and dividends to the accounts of the various participants in the retirement program, invest and reinvest income and dividends, and perform other ministerial functions.

(e) In addition, it is proposed to amend the trust agreement so that voting of the shares held by the bank as trustee will be controlled exclusively by the participants. Under the proposed amendment, the bank will sign all proxies prior to mailing them to the participants, "it being intended that the Participant(s) shall vote the proxies notwithstanding the fact that the Trustee is the owner of the shares * * *".

(f) The bank believes that amendments are now under consideration that will also require investment of the assets of these plans exclusively in the Fund's shares. Accordingly, the bank may eventually own the Fund's shares in several separate trust accounts and in an aggregate amount equal to a majority of the Fund's shares.

(g) Section 20 of the Banking Act of 1933 provides in relevant part that "no member bank shall be affiliated in any manner described in section 2(b) hereof with any corporation * * * engaged principally in the issue, flotation, underwriting, public sale, or distribution at wholesale or retail or through syndicate participation of stocks * * * or other securities: * * *".

(h) Section 2(b) defines the term "affiliate" to include "any corporation, business trust, association or other similar organization (1) Of which a member bank, directly or indirectly, owns or controls either a majority of the voting shares or more than 50 per centum of the number of shares voted for the election of its directors, trustees, or other persons exercising similar functions at the preceding election, or controls in any manner the election of a majority of its directors, trustees, or other persons exercising similar functions; * * *".

(i) The Board has previously taken the position, in an interpretation involving the term "affiliate" under the Banking Act of 1933, that it would not require a member bank to obtain and publish a report of a corporation the majority of the stock of which is held by the member bank as executor or trustee, provided that the member bank holds such stock subject to control by a court or by a beneficiary or other principal and that the member bank may not lawfully exercise control of such stock independently of any order or direction of a court, beneficiary or other principal. 1933 Federal Reserve Bulletin 651. The rationale of that interpretation—which was reaffirmed by the Board in 1957—would appear to be equally applicable to the facts in the present case. In the circumstances, and on the basis of the Board's understanding that the bank will not vote any of Fund's shares or control in any manner the election of any of its directors, trustees, or other persons exercising similar functions, the Board has concluded that the situation in question would not fall within the purpose or coverage of section 20 of the Banking Act of 1933 and, therefore, would not involve a violation of the statute.

§ 250.221 Issuance and sale of short-term debt obligations by bank holding companies.

(a) The opinion of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System has been requested recently with respect to the proposed sale of "thrift notes" by a bank holding company for the purpose of supplying capital to its wholly-owned nonbanking subsidiaries.

(b) The thrift notes would bear the name of the holding company, which in the case presented, was substantially similar to the name of its affiliated banks. It was proposed that they be issued in denominations of $50 to $100 and initially be of 12-month or less maturities. There would be no maximum amount of the issue. Interest rates would be variable according to money market conditions but would presumably be at rates somewhat above those permitted by Regulation Q ceilings. There would be no guarantee or indemnity of the notes by any of the banks in the holding company system and, if required to do so, the holding company would place on the face of the notes a negative representation that the purchase price was not a deposit, nor an indirect obligation of banks in the holding company system, nor covered by deposit insurance.

(c) The notes would be generally available for sale to members of the public, but only at offices of the holding company and its nonbanking subsidiaries. Although offices of the holding company may be in the same building or quarters as its banking offices, they would be physically separated from the banking offices. Sales would be made only by officers or employees of the holding company and its nonbanking subsidiaries. Initially, the notes would only be offered in the State in which the holding company was principally doing business, thereby complying with the exemption provided by section 3(a)(11) of the Securities Act of 1933 (15 U.S.C. 77c) for "intra-state" offerings. If it was decided to offer the notes on an interstate basis, steps would be taken to register the notes under the Securities Act of 1933. Funds from the sale of the notes would be used only to supply the financial needs of the nonbanking subsidiaries of the holding company. These nonbank subsidiaries are, at present, a small loan company, a mortgage banking company and a factoring company. In no instance would the proceeds from the sale of the notes be used in the bank subsidiaries of the holding company nor to maintain the availability of funds in its bank subsidiaries.

(d) The sale of the thrift notes, in the specific manner proposed, is an activity described in section 20 of the Banking Act of 1933 (12 U.S.C. 377), that is, "the issue, flotation, underwriting, public sale or distribution * * * of * * * notes, or other securities". Briefly stated, this statute prohibits a member bank to be affiliated with a company "engaged principally" in such activity. Since the continued issuance and sale of such securities would be necessary to permit maintenance of the holding company's activities without substantial contraction and would be an integral part of its operations, the Board concluded that the issuance and sale of such notes would constitute a principal activity of a holding company within the spirit and purpose of the statute. (For prior Board decisions in this connection, see 1934 Federal Reserve Bulletin 485, 12 CFR 218.104, 12 CFR 218.105 and 12 CFR 218.101.)

(e) In reaching this conclusion, the Board distinguished the proposed activity from the sale of short-term notes commonly known as "commercial paper", which is a recognized form of financing for bank holding companies. For purposes of this interpretation, "commercial paper" may be defined as notes, with maturities not exceeding nine months, the proceeds of which are to be used for current transactions, which are usually sold to sophisticated institutional investors, rather than to members of the general public, in minimum denominations of $10,000 (although sometimes they may be sold in minimum denominations of $5,000). Commercial paper is exempt from registration under the Securities Act of 1933 by reason of the exemption provided by section 3(a)(3) thereof (15 U.S.C. 77c). That exemption is inapplicable where the securities are sold to the general public (17 CFR 231.4412). The reasons for such exemption, taken together with the abuses that gave rise to the passage of the Banking Act of 1933 ("the Glass-Steagall Act"), have led the Board to conclude that the issuance of commercial paper by a bank holding company is not an activity intended to be included within the scope of section 20.

§ 250.240 Applicability of section 23A of the Federal Reserve Act to transactions between a member State bank and its "operations subsidiary".

(a) The Board of Governors has recently considered whether section 23A of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 371c) applies to extensions of credit by a member State bank to its operations subsidiary.

(b) Section 23A imposes limitations (in terms of security and amount) on a federally insured bank's loans to and investments in its affiliates. The principal purpose of section 23A is to safeguard the resources of a bank against misuse for the benefit of organizations under common control with the bank. It was designed to prevent a bank from risking too large an amount in affiliated enterprises and to assure that extensions of credit to affiliates will be repaid—out of marketable collateral, if necessary.

(c) Since 1968 the Board has permitted member banks to establish and own operations subsidiaries—that is, organizations designed to serve, in effect, as separately incorporated departments of the bank, performing, at locations at which the bank is authorized to engage in business, functions that the bank is empowered to perform directly (12 CFR 250.141). Since an operations subsidiary is in effect a part of, and subject to the same restrictions as, its parent bank, there appears to be no reason to limit transactions between the bank and such subsidiary any more than transactions between departments of a bank.

(d) Accordingly, the Board has concluded that a credit transaction by a member State bank with its operations subsidiary (the authority for which is based on the 1968 ruling) is not a "loan or * * * extension of credit" of the kind intended to be restricted and regulated by section 23A and is, therefore, outside the purview of that section.

[35 FR 10201, June 23, 1970]

§ 250.250 Applicability of section 23A of the Federal Reserve Act to a member State bank's purchase of, or participation in, a loan originated by a mortgage banking affiliate.

(a) A question has been raised as to whether a member bank's purchase, without recourse, and at face value, of any mortgage note, or participation therein, from a mortgage banking subsidiary of its parent bank holding company at the inception of the underlying mortgage loan involves a "loan" or "extension of credit" from the member bank to the affiliate within the meaning of section 23A of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 371c). In the given circumstances, the affiliate originated the mortgage loans at premises other than an office of the member bank and hence was not a company furnishing services to or performing services for the holding company or its banking subsidiaries within the meaning of section 4(c)(1)(C) of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1843(c)(1)(C)). Loans or extensions of credit to the affiliate were therefore not entitled to exemption from the provisions of section 23A by virtue of subsection (1) of the final paragraph thereof.

(b) Paragraph 4 of section 23A provides that the term "extension of credit" shall be deemed to "include" the discount of promissory notes, bills of exchange, conditional sales contracts, or similar paper, whether with or without recourse, excepting the acquisition of such paper by a member bank from another bank without recourse. In previously interpreting the statutory provision from which this provision is derived (section 6 of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, repealed July 1, 1966), the Board concluded that "discount" in the context of the statute meant "purchase" and that the purchase of notes, bills of exchange, conditional sales contracts or similar paper from an affiliate was subject to the prohibitions of the statute. (1958 Federal Reserve Bulletin 260.) Further, the Board notes that the definition in section 23A is illustrative rather than exclusive. The Board believes that the purposes of section 23A justify a broad construction of the definition of "extension of credit" to include certain purchases of obligations, even though the purchases are not made at a discount from face value. A bank's financing of the working capital needs of a mortgage banking affiliate may occur through outright purchases of obligations, and the types of abuses with which section 23A is concerned are likewise possible in such circumstances, since such transactions between affiliates could result in an undue risk to the financial condition of the purchasing bank.

(c) The Board is of the opinion that the purchase by a member State bank of a mortgage note, or participation therein, from a mortgage banking affiliate would involve a loan or extension of credit to the affiliate if the latter had either made, or committed itself to make, the loan or extension of credit evidenced by the note prior to the time when the member bank first obligated itself, by commitment or otherwise, to purchase the loan or a participation therein. However, there would be no loan or extension of credit by the member bank to its mortgage banking affiliate if the member bank's commitment to purchase the loan, or a participation therein, is obtained by the affiliate within the context of a proposed transaction, or series of proposed transactions, in anticipation of the affiliate's commitment to make such loan(s), and is based upon the bank's independent evaluation of the credit worthiness of the mortgagor(s). In these latter circumstances, the member bank would be taking advantage of an investment opportunity rather than being impelled by any improper incentive to alleviate working capital needs of the affiliate that are directly attributable to excessive outstanding commitments.

(d) The Board cautions, however, that it would regard a blanket advance commitment by a member State bank to purchase from its mortgage banking affiliate a stipulated amount of loans, or an amount thereof exceeding defined credit lines of the affiliate, that bears no reference to specific proposed transactions, as involving an unsound banking practice, unless the commitment is conditioned upon compliance of loans made thereunder with the requirements of section 23A. It would not suffice to condition such a commitment upon the bank's ultimate approval of the credit standing of the various mortgagors. That blanket commitment would have the inherent tendency, in the context of an affiliate relationship, to cause the bank to relax sound credit judgment concerning the individual loans involved when the affiliate was in need of bank financing, thereby resulting in an inappropriate risk to the soundness of the bank.

§ 250.260 Miscellaneous interpretations; gold coin and bullion.

The Board has received numerous inquiries from member banks relating to the repeal of the bank on ownership of gold by United States citizens. Listed below are questions and answers which affect member banks and relate to the responsibilities of the Federal Reserve System.

(a) May gold in the form of coins or bullion be counted as vault cash in order to satisfy reserve requirements? No. Section 19(c) of the Federal Reserve Act requires that reserve balances be satisfied either by a balance maintained at the Federal Reserve Bank or by vault cash, consisting of United States currency and coin. Gold in bullion form is not United States currency. Since the bullion value of United States gold coins far exceeds their face value, member banks would not in practice distribute them over the counter at face value to satisfy customer demands.

(b) Will the Federal Reserve Banks perform services for member banks with respect to gold, such a safekeeping or assaying? No.

(c) Will a Federal Reserve Bank accept gold as collateral for an advance to a member bank under section 10(b) of the Federal Reserve Act? No.

BANK SERVICE ARRANGEMENTS

§ 250.300 Kinds of bank servicers subject to Board examination under the Bank Service Corporation Act.

Summary. The performance of bank services for State member banks is subject to the Board's regulation and examination, regardless of the nature of the bank servicer, including servicers that are national banks; State nonmember insured banks; non-profit, no-stock credit card servicing organizations; and servicing subsidiaries of bank holding companies.

Text. (a) Since the enactment of the Bank Service Corporation Act (the "Act") (12 U.S.C. 1861-1865), the Board has on several occasions considered whether performance of "bank services" (as that term is defined in section 1(b) of the Act) for State member banks is subject to regulation and examination by the Board under section 5 of the Act if (1) the bank servicer is not a "bank service corporation" (as that term is defined in the Act), or (2) the bank servicer is a bank itself. In each instance, based on the reasoning set forth below, the Board expressed the view that section 5 of the Act applied to any organization that performed bank services for State member banks, including national banks; another State member bank; State nonmember insured banks; servicing subsidiaries of bank holding companies; and non-profit, no stock credit card servicing organizations.

(b) The Senate Committee on Banking and Currency stated with regard to section 5 of the Act, as enacted in 1962, that the Federal supervisory agencies "must be able to examine all of the banks' records, and they must be able to exercise proper supervision over all the banks' activities, whether performed by the banks' employees on their premises or by anyone else on or off the banks' premises. This examination and this supervision cannot be frustrated by a transfer of the banks' records to some other organization or by having some other organization carry out all or part of the banks' functions." (S. Rep. No. 2105, 87th Cong. 3 (1962)). Similarly, the Committee on Banking and Currency of the House of Representatives stated that "it would obviously be unwise to permit banks to avoid the examination and supervision of vital banking functions by the simple expedient of farming out such functions." (H.R. Rep. No. 2062, 87th Cong. 3 (1962)).

(c) Section 5 of the Act is not limited by its terms to "bank service corporations" as defined in the Act; nor, in the Board's opinion based on the legislative history of the Act, should such a limitation be implied. The Board concludes that the performance of bank services for State member banks by organizations that are not bank service corporations is also subject to Board regulation and examination.

(d) If the bank servicer is a national bank or a State nonmember insured bank, its performance of bank services for State member banks is subject to Board regulation and examination, despite the fact that the servicer is subject primarily to regulation and examination by one of the other Federal banking agencies. By the same token, the performance of bank services by a State member bank for a national bank or State nonmember insured bank is subject to regulation and examination by the Comptroller of the Currency or the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, respectively. The purpose of section 5 of the Act is to make certain that the appropriate Federal banking agency will be able effectively to exercise its responsibilities with respect to a bank subject primarily to its supervision.

(e) It is important to note that the scope of the Board's regulation and examination under section 5 of the Act does not extend to all affairs of the bank servicer, but only to the "bank services" performed for a State member bank and only to the same extent as if the services were being performed by the State member bank itself on its own premises.

[44 FR 12969, Mar. 9, 1979]

§ 250.301 Scope of investment authority and notification requirement under the Bank Service Corporation Act.

Summary. (a) The authority of State member banks under the Bank Service Corporation Act to invest in bank service corporations is limited to investments in corporations that perform "bank services" solely.

(b) A State member bank is required by the Act to notify the Board only of the performance of "bank services" for it.

(c) "Bank services" will not usually be regarded as including legal, advisory, and administrative services, such as transportation or guard services.

Text (a) Section 2(a) of the Bank Service Corporation Act (12 U.S.C. 1861–65) provides that "no limitation or prohibition otherwise imposed by any provision of Federal law exclusively relating to banks shall prevent any two or more banks from investing not more than 10 per centum of the paid-in and unimpaired capital and unimpaired surplus of each of them in a bank service corporation." This 10 percent investment ceiling applies to loans and other advances of funds, as well as the purchase of stock. The Act, however, does not authorize a State bank to invest in a bank service corporation if the bank is not permitted to do so under the applicable State law.

(b) "Bank service corporation" is defined in section 1(c) of the Act to mean "a corporation organized to perform bank services for two or more banks, each of which owns part of the capital stock of such corporation, and at least one of which is subject to examination by a Federal supervisory agency." Section 4 of the Act states that "no bank service corporation may engage in any activity other than the performance of bank services for banks." Thus, the investment authority created by section 2(a) is limited to corporations that are engaged solely in the provision of "bank services" to banks, as that term is defined in the Act.

(c) In addition to its grant of investment authority, the Act also requires State member banks to notify the Board within 30 days of the execution of a contract for "bank services" or the actual provision of such services, whichever occurs first. Moreover, the Act authorizes the Board to regulate and examine the performance of "bank services." Thus, the scope of the Act's notification and examination requirements also is limited to "bank services."

(d) The term "bank services" is defined in section 1(b) of the Act to mean "services such as check and deposit sorting and posting, computation and posting of interest and other credits and charges, preparation and mailing of checks, statements, notices, and similar items, or any other clerical, bookkeeping, accounting, statistical, or similar functions performed for a bank."

(e) Bearing importantly upon the meaning of "bank services" is the following quotation from the Report of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency: "The authority to examine and supervise banks is broad and must be vigorously exercised. At the same time sound discretion must be used. Banks have always employed others to do many things for them, and they will have to continue to do so, and the bill is not intended to prevent this or to make it more difficult. For example, banks have employed lawyers to prepare trust and estate accounts and to prosecute judicial proceedings for the settlement of such accounts. Banks have employed accountants to prepare earnings statements and balance sheets. Banks have employed public relations and advertising firms. And banks have employed individuals or firms to perform all kinds of administrative activities, including armored car and other transportation services, guard services and, in many cases, other mechanical services needed to run the bank's buildings. It is not expected that the bank supervisory agencies would find it necessary to examine or regulate any of these agents or representatives of a bank, except under the most unusual circumstances. The authority is intended to be limited to banking functions as such." (S. Rep. No. 2105, 87th Cong. 3 (1962)).

(f) On the basis of the Act's definition of "bank services", the limitation contained in section 4 of the Act, and the preceding quotation from the Act's legislative history, it is apparent that the term "bank services" is essentially limited to clerical and similar services. For example, the term would not usually be regarded as including legal, advisory, and administrative services, such as transportation or guard services.

(g) Thus, State member banks generally may rely on the Act to justify investment only in a corporation that is engaged solely in performing one or more of the services contained in the definition of "bank services" in section 1(b), or a service similar to one of those services, and only if those services are provided solely to banks. Investment in a corporation providing any other services, such as the type of services described in the above quotation from the Act's legislative history, generally is not permitted on the basis of this Act, unless such services are legitimately incidental to the provision of "bank services" by that corporation.

(h) Since the notification required by section 5 of the Act, as amended, also is based on the provision of "bank services," such notification need only be provided with regard to the provision of one or more of the services enumerated in section 1(b) of the Act or a service similar to one of those services.

[44 FR 12969, Mar. 9, 1979]

§ 250.302 Applicability of Bank Service Corporation Act to bank credit card service organization.

Summary. Although a non-profit, no-stock service organization in which no bank has made an investment is not a "bank service corporation" as defined in the Bank Service Corporation Act, that organization's credit card servicing activities are "bank services" as defined in the Act and thus subject to the notification requirement of section 5 of the Act.

Text. (a) The Board of Governors has considered whether the Bank Service Corporation Act (12 U.S.C.

1861-1865), is applicable where a bank credit card plan of a State member bank and other banks used the facilities of a non-profit, no-stock service organization.

(b) The functions of the service organization include the following: (1) Performing cardholder accounting for participating banks; (2) developing information concerning each credit card and holder, including such holder's current balance owing to the card issuing bank and the amount of such balance that is delinquent; (3) assisting in procedures relating to the presentation and settlement of drafts and credit memoranda; (4) developing procedures relating to credit card security control; (5) upon telephonic request, advising merchants and participating banks respecting credit authorizations above certain specified limits; and (6) compiling lists of participating merchants.

(c) The Board expressed the view that because the service organization has no stock and the State member bank does not otherwise "invest" therein by "the making of a loan, or otherwise, except a payment for rent earned, goods sold and delivered, or services rendered prior to the making of such payment" (section 1(d) of the Act), the service organization is not a "bank service corporation" within the meaning of section 1(c) of the Act.

(d) However, the Board concluded that the functions described above do constitute "bank services" as defined in section 1(b) of the Act. Accordingly, the State member bank is required to notify the Board (through the appropriate Federal Reserve Bank) of the performance of the services for the bank in accordance with section 5 of the Act.

PART 261—RULES REGARDING AVAILABILITY OF INFORMATION

Sec.
261.1 Basis and scope.
261.2 Definitions.
261.3 Published information.
261.4 Records available to the public upon request.
261.5 Deferment of availability of certain information.
261.6 Exemptions from disclosure.
261.7 Subpoenas.

AUTHORITY: 5 U.S.C. 552.

SOURCE: 32 FR 9516, July 1, 1967, unless otherwise noted.

§ 261.1 Basis and scope.

This part is issued by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (the "Board") pursuant to the requirement of section 552 of Title 5 of the United States Code that every Federal agency shall publish in the FEDERAL REGISTER, for the guidance of the public, descriptions of the established places at which, the officers from whom, and the methods whereby, the public may obtain information, make submittals or requests, or obtain decisions.

§ 261.2 Definitions.

(a) Information of the Board. For purposes of this part, the term "information of the Board" means all information coming into the possession of the Board or of any member thereof, or of any Federal Reserve Bank, or of any officer, employee, or agent of the Board or of any Federal Reserve Bank, in the performance of functions for or on behalf of the Board, including functions delegated by the Board pursuant to Part 265 of this chapter.

(b) Records of the Board. For purposes of this part, the term "records of the Board" means rules, statements, opinions, orders, memoranda, letters, reports, accounts, and other papers containing information of the Board that constitute part of the Board's official files.

§ 261.3 Published information.

(a) Federal Register. To the extent required by sections 552 and 553 of Title 5 of the United States Code, and subject to the provisions of §§ 261.5 and 261.6, the Board publishes in the FEDERAL REGISTER for the guidance of the public, in addition to this part,

(1) Descriptions of its central and field organization;

(2) Statements of the general course and method by which its functions are channeled and determined, including the nature and requirements of all formal and informal procedures available;

(3) Rules of procedure, descriptions of forms available or the places at which forms may be obtained, and instructions as to the scope and contents of all papers, reports, or examinations;

(4) Substantive rules of general applicability adopted as authorized by law, and statements of general policy or interpretations of general applicability formulated and adopted by the Board;

(5) Every amendment, revision, or repeal of the foregoing; and

(6) General notices of proposed rule making.

The Board also publishes in the FEDERAL REGISTER notice of receipt of applications pursuant to the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 (12 U.S.C. 1842), and notices of formal hearings ordered by the Board.

(b) Annual Reports. The Board's Annual Report to Congress pursuant to section 10 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 247), which is made public immediately after its submission to Congress, contains a full account of the Board's operations during the year, an economic review of the year, and legislative recommendations to Congress. As required by law, the Annual Report includes (1) a complete record of the policy actions taken by the Board and the Federal Open Market Committee, showing the votes taken thereon and the reasons underlying such actions (12 U.S.C. 247a); (2) material pertaining to the administration of the Board's functions under the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 (12 U.S.C. 1844); and (3) material pertaining to bank mergers approved by the Board under section 18(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1828(c)).

Pursuant to section 114 of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1613) the Board reports annually to the Congress concerning the administration of its functions under the Act, and includes such recommendations as it deems necessary or appropriate, and its assessment of the extent to which compliance is being achieved. An annual report is also submitted pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (5 U.S.C. 552) with regard to requests for information under that Act.

(c) Federal Reserve Bulletin. In the Federal Reserve Bulletin, which is issued monthly, the Board publishes economic and statistical information; special articles on subjects of economic interest; regulations, statements of general policy, and interpretations of laws and regulations of general interest to the public; notices of actions by the Board on certain types of applications, such as applications for membership in the Federal Reserve System; and orders and accompanying statements of the Board with respect to certain types of adjudications. Some material that is published in the Bulletin is released in advance of such publication, examples being certain regulations, interpretations, orders and opinions, a monthly summary of business conditions, the Board's index of industrial production, and certain other statistical series.

(d) Other published information. As required by section 11(a) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 248(a)), the Board issues weekly (1) a statement of the condition of the Federal Reserve Banks; (2) a statement listing certain applications received by or on behalf of the Board and actions on such applications by the Board, or on behalf of the Board pursuant to authority delegated under Part 265 of this chapter, as well as other matters issued, adopted, or promulgated by the Board; and (3) a statement showing changes in the banking structure resulting from mergers and the establishment of branches. From time to time, the Board issues statements to the press regarding particular monetary and credit actions, regulatory actions, actions with respect to certain types of applications, and other matters. In addition, it issues various publications, the more important of which are listed in the monthly Federal Reserve Bulletin. Among such publications is a loose-leaf compilation of Interpretations of the Board of Governors of the Federal System.

(e) Obtaining published information. Anyone may subscribe to the Federal Reserve Bulletin at the rate therein indicated. A copy of each issue of the Bulletin is sent without charge to each member bank. Current or back issues of the Bulletin, Annual Reports, rules, regulations, and certain other published information may be examined at the offices of the Board or any Federal Reserve Bank, and copies, if in stock, are supplied by the Board at prescribed charges or at no cost.

(f) Index of Board Action. There is available to the public upon request to the Secretary of the Board, at a charge not to exceed the direct cost of duplication, copies of an index providing identifying information as to any matter issued, adopted or promulgated by the Board between July 4, 1967 and February 19, 1975. Furthermore, the Board publishes and distributes to the public, at a cost not to exceed the direct cost of duplication, a weekly index providing identifying information as to any matter issued, adopted or promulgated by the Board after February 19, 1975.

[32 FR 9516, July 1, 1967, as amended at 40 FR 7620, Feb. 21, 1975; 42 FR 56719, Oct. 28, 1977]

§ 261.4 Records available to the public upon request.

(a) General rule. All records of the Board, whether or not published under § 261.3, are made available to any person, upon request, for inspection and copying in accordance with the provisions of this section and subject to the limitations stated in §§ 261.5 and 261.6. Records falling within the exemptions from disclosure set forth in section 552(b) of Title 5 of the United States Code and in § 261.6 may nevertheless be made available in accordance with this section to the fullest extent consistent, in the Board's judgment, with the effective performance of the Board's statutory responsibilities and with the avoidance of injury to a public or private interest intended to be protected by such exemptions.

(b) Opinions, orders, statements of policy, interpretations, and staff manuals and instructions. Subject to the provisions of §§ 261.5 and 261.6, the Board makes available for inspection and copying (1) all final opinions (including concurring and dissenting opinions) and orders made in the adjudication of cases, including such opinions and orders made pursuant to authority delegated by the Board under Part 265 of this chapter; (2) statements of policy and interpretations adopted by the Board that are not published in the FEDERAL REGISTER; and (3) administrative staff manuals and instructions to staff that affect any member of the public. However, to the extent required to prevent a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy, the Board deletes identifying details in any material of the kinds above described; and in each such case the justification for such deletion is explained in writing. The Board maintains and makes available for public inspection and copying a current index providing identifying information for the public as to any material described in this paragraph which is issued, adopted, or promulgated after July 4, 1967.

(c) Other records. Subject to the provisions of §§ 261.5 and 261.6, records of the Board not covered by paragraph (b) of this section, including a record of the final votes of members of the Board in any Board proceeding, are made available for inspection and copying to any person upon request.

(d) Obtaining access to records. Records of the Board subject to this section are available for inspection and copying during regular business hours at the offices of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Federal Reserve Building, 20th Street and Constitution Avenue NW., Washington, D.C. 20551, or, in the case of records containing information required to be disclosed under section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended (15 U.S.C. 78), at the offices of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation or at any Federal Reserve Bank. Every request for access to records of the Board, other than those containing information required under section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act, shall be submitted in writing to the Secretary of the Board, shall state the name and address of the person requesting access to such records, shall clearly indicate whether such request is an initial request or an appeal from a denial of information requested pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act, and shall describe such records in a manner reasonably sufficient to permit their identification without undue difficulty. The Secretary of the Board (or, in his absence, an Assistant Secretary designated by the Secretary) shall determine within ten working days after receipt of a request for access to records of the Board whether to comply with such request; and he shall immediately notify the requesting party of his decision, of the reasons therefor, and of the right of the requesting party to appeal to the Board any refusal to make available the requested records of the Board.

(e) Appeal of denial of access to records of the Board. Any person who is denied access to records of the Board, properly requested in accordance with paragraph (d) of this section, may file, with the Secretary of the Board, within ten days of notification of such denial, a written request for review of such denial. The Board or such member or members as the Board may designate, shall make a determination with respect to any such appeal within 20 working days of its receipt, shall immediately notify the appealing party of the decision on the appeal and of the right to seek court review of any decision which upholds, in whole or in part, the refusal of the Secretary of the Board to make available the requested records; and such determination shall not be subject to the procedure prescribed in § 265.3 of this chapter with respect to review of actions taken pursuant to authority delegated by the Board.

(f) Extension of time requirements in unusual circumstances. In unusual circumstances as provided in 5 U.S.C. section 552(a)(6)(b), the time limitations imposed upon the Secretary of the Board or the Board in paragraphs (d) and (e) of this section may be extended by written notice to the requesting party for a period of time not to exceed a total of ten working days.

(g) Fee schedule. A person requesting access to or copies of particular records shall pay the costs of searching for and copying such records at the rate of $10 per hour for searching and 10 cents per standard page for copying. With respect to information obtainable only by processing through a computer or other information systems program, a person requesting such information shall pay a fee not to exceed the direct and reasonable cost of retrieval and production of the information requested. Detailed schedules of such charges are available upon request from the Secretary of the Board. Documents may be furnished without charge or at a reduced charge where the Secretary of the Board or such person as he may designate determines that waiver or reduction of the fee is in the public interest because furnishing the information can be considered as primarily benefiting the general public or where total charges are less than $2.

[32 FR 9516, July 1, 1967, as amended at 40 FR 7621, Feb. 21, 1975]

§ 261.5 Deferment of availability of certain information.

(a) Deferment of availability. In some instances, certain types of information of the Board are not published in the FEDERAL REGISTER or made available for inspection and copying until after such period of time as the Board may determine to be reasonably necessary to avoid the effects described in paragraph (b) of this section. For example, such deferment of publication or availability of information to the public may occasionally be necessary with respect to information relating to the determination of monetary or credit policies, including but not limited to discount rates, reserve requirements of member banks, maximum interest rates payable by member banks on deposits, and margin requirements.

(b) Reasons for deferment of availability. Publication of, or public access to, certain information of the Board may be deferred because earlier disclosure of such information would:

(1) Interfere with the accomplishment of the objectives of the Board's actions in the discharge of its statutory functions;

(2) Permit speculators and others to gain unfair profits or other unfair advantages by speculative trading in securities or otherwise;

(3) Interfere with the orderly execution of the objectives or policies of other Government agencies;

(4) Result in unnecessary or unwarranted disturbances in the securities markets; or

(5) Interfere with the orderly conduct of the foreign affairs of the United States.

§ 261.6 Exemptions from disclosure.

(a) General rule. Except as otherwise provided in this part or as may be specifically authorized by the Board, information in the records of the Board that is not available to the public through other sources will not be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER or made available for inspection and copying if such information:

(1) Is specifically authorized under criteria established by an Executive order to be kept secret in the interests of national defense or foreign policy and is in fact properly classified pursuant to such Executive order, or is specifically exempted from disclosure by statute (other than section 552b of Title 5 United States Code) provided that such statute (i) requires that the matters be withheld from the public in such a manner as to leave no discretion on the issue, or (ii) establishes particular criteria for withholding or refers to particular types of matters to be withheld;

(2) Is contained in or related to examination, operating, or condition reports prepared by, on behalf of, or for the use of, the Board or a Federal Reserve Bank, relating to the affairs of any bank or affiliate thereof, bank holding company or subsidiary thereof, broker, finance company, or any other person engaged, or proposing to engage, in the business of banking, extending credit, or managing or controlling banks;

(3) Is privileged or relates to the business, personal, or financial affairs of any person and is furnished in confidence: Provided, however, That, following notice to the person furnishing such information, the Board may make any information furnished in confidence in connection with an application for Board approval of any transaction available to the public in accordance with § 261.4(c), and, to the extent it deems necessary and without prior notice to such person, the Board may comment on such information in any opinion or statement issued to the public in connection with a decision of the Board with respect to which such information is relevant;

(4) Is contained in investigatory files compiled for law enforcement purposes (but only to the extent provided in the Freedom of Information Act (5 U.S.C. 552(b)(7))), including information relating to proceedings for (i) the issuance of a cease-and-desist order, or order of suspension or removal, under the Financial Institutions Supervisory Act of 1966; (ii) the termination of membership of a State bank in the Federal Reserve System pursuant to section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 327); (iii) the suspension of a bank from use of the credit facilities of the Federal Reserve System pursuant to section 4 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 301); and (iv) the granting or revocation of any approval, permission, or authority, except to the extent provided in this Part and except as provided in Part 262 of this chapter concerning bank holding company and bank merger applications;

(5) Relates solely to the internal personnel rules and practices of other internal practices of the Board;

(6) Is contained in personnel, medical, and similar files, the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy; or

(7) Is contained in interagency or intraagency memoranda or letters that would not be routinely available by law to a private party in litigation with the Board, including but not limited to memoranda, reports, and other documents prepared by the staffs of the Board or of the Federal Reserve Banks, and records of deliberations and discussions at meetings of the Board or of any committee of the Board or of the Board's staff.

(b)(1) Information available to supervised institutions and other Government agencies. A copy of each report of examination of each State member bank and of each bank holding company is made available by the appropriate Federal Reserve Bank to the bank or company examined. Such reports and other appropriate information relating to such a bank or company are made available, upon request, by the Director of the Board's Division of Supervision and Regulation to the Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and by the appropriate Federal Reserve Bank to the Regional Comptroller of the Currency, the regional representative of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the State governmental authority having general supervision of such bank or company. Such reports and other information may be made available by the Board to other agencies of the United States for use where necessary in the performance of their official duties. All reports or other information made available pursuant to this paragraph shall remain the property of the Board and, except as otherwise provided in this part, no person, agency, or authority to whom the information is made available, or any officer, director, or employee thereof, shall disclose any such information except in published statistical material that does not disclose the affairs of any individual or corporation.

(b)(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Regulation, any Confidential Report of Operations (Form F.R. 2068) of a foreign banking organization may, upon written request to and approval by the Director of the Division of Banking Supervision and Regulation (or his delegee), and with the concurrence of the General Counsel (or his delegee), be made available for inspection to another bank supervisory authority having general supervision of any United States branch, agency, subsidiary bank or commercial lending company of the foreign banking organization, only for use where necessary in the performance of the official duties of such authority. These reports shall be made available for inspection by authorized persons only on Federal Reserve premises under the same procedures as apply to personnel of the Federal Reserve System. All reports made available under this paragraph shall remain the property of the Board; and no person, agency, or authority who obtains access to any such report, or any officer, director, or employee thereof, shall publish, publicize, or otherwise disclose any information contained in the report to any person.

(c) Prohibition against disclosure. Except as provided in this part, no officer, employee, or agent of the Board or of any Federal Reserve Bank shall disclose or permit the disclosure of any unpublished information of the Board to anyone (other than an officer, employee, or agent of the Board or of a Federal Reserve Bank properly entitled to such information for the performance of his official duties), whether by giving out or furnishing such information or a copy thereof or by allowing any person to inspect or copy such information or copy thereof, or otherwise. Notwithstanding the foregoing, unpublished economic, statistical, or similar information or unpublished information regarding interpretations by the Board of statutory or regulatory provisions may be disclosed, orally or in writing, by any officer, employee, or agent of the Board or of any Federal Reserve Bank who has knowledge of the subject matter to any person who, in the judgment of such officer, employee, or agent, has a proper interest therein, subject, however, to the restrictions stated in § 261.5 and this § 261.6.

(d) Foreign banking organization confidential report of operations. It is the Board's policy that the confidentiality of a foreign banking organization's Confidential Report of Operations (Form F.R. 2068) should be maintained at all times. Except as provided in paragraph (b)(2) of this section, information submitted to the Board as part of any Confidential Report of Operations is not available for public inspection by any person other than an officer, employee, or agent of the Board or of a Federal Reserve Bank properly entitled to such information in the performance of such person's official duties. Any employee that violates this section by releasing such a Report to any unauthorized person may be subject to disciplinary action under 12 CFR 264.735-5 (Rules of Employee Responsibilities and Conduct).

§ 261.7 Subpoenas.

(a) Advice by person served. If any person, whether or not an officer, employee, or agent of the Board or of a Federal Reserve Bank, has information of the Board that may not be disclosed under this part and in connection therewith is served with a subpoena, order, or other process requiring his personal attendance as a witness or the production of documents or information in any proceeding, he should promptly inform the Secretary of the Board of such service and of all relevant facts, including the documents and information requested and any facts which may be of assistance to the Board in determining whether such documents or information should be made available; and he should take action at the appropriate time to inform the court or tribunal that issued the process and the attorney for the party at whose instance the process was issued, if known, of the substance of these rules.

(b) Appearance by person served. Unless the Board has authorized disclosure of the relevant information, or except as provided in 18 U.S.C. 1906, any person having information of the Board that may not be disclosed under this part who is required to respond to a subpoena or other legal process shall attend at the time and place therein mentioned and decline to disclose such information or gives any testimony with respect thereto, basing his refusal upon this part. If the court or other body orders the disclosure of such information or the giving of such testimony, the person having such information of the Board shall continue to decline to disclose such information and shall promptly report the facts to the Board for such action as the Board may deem appropriate.

AUTHORITY: 5 U.S.C. 552a; 5 U.S.C. 553; 5 U.S.C. 552.

SOURCE: 40 FR 45617, Oct. 2, 1975, unless otherwise noted.

§ 261a.1 Purpose and scope.

The purpose of this part is to establish regulations implementing the provisions of the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. 552a, with regard to access to and review of personal information in systems of records maintained by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System ("Board").

§ 261a.2 Definitions.

For the purposes of this part, the following definitions shall apply:

(a) The term "individual" means a natural person who is either a citizen of the United States or an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence. The term "individual" includes the parent of any minor or the legal guardian of any individual who has been declared to be incompetent due to physical or mental incapacity or age by a court of competent jurisdiction.

(b) The term "maintain" also includes maintain, collect, use, disseminate, or control.

(c) The term "record" means any item, collection or grouping of information about an individual maintained by the Board that contains the individual's name, or the identifying number, symbol, or other identifying particular assigned to the individual.

(d) The term "system of records" means a group of any records under the control of the Board from which information is retrieved by the name of the individual or some identifying number, symbol, or other identifying particular assigned to the individual.

(e) The term "designated system of records" means a system of records that has been listed in the FEDERAL REGISTER pursuant to the requirements of 5 U.S.C. 552a(e).

(f) The term "routine use" means, with respect to disclosure of a record, the use of such record for a purpose which is compatible with the purpose for which it was collected.

(g) The term "business days" means all days except Saturdays, Sundays, and legal public holidays.

§ 261a.3 Procedures for requests pertaining to individual records in a record system.

(a) Requests for notification of the existence of or for access to personal information in a designated system of records may be made by the person to whom such information pertains. Every such request shall be made in writing and shall specify that it is made pursuant to the Privacy Act. Each request should identify the designated system of records in which the requested record is to be found, should reasonably describe the information requested and, except as provided in § 261a.4, should include a notarized statement attesting to the identity of the requestor.

(b) Requests made pursuant to paragraph (a) of this section shall be addressed to the Director of the Division of Personnel, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Washington, D.C. 20551, in the case of records relating to employment with the Board. Requests for other records should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Washington, D.C. 20551. Requests for information pursuant to paragraph (a) of this section may also be made in person during regular business hours at the offices of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Federal Reserve Building, 20th and Constitution Avenue, NW., Washington, D.C. 20551.

(c) An individual making a request pursuant to paragraph (a) of this section may also include in such request a request for the accounting required by section (c) of the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. 552a, of previous disclosures of records pertaining to such individual in a designated system of records.

(d) Every request made pursuant to this section will be acknowledged or, where practicable, substantially responded to within 10 business days from receipt.

§ 261a.4 Requirements for identification of individuals making requests.

(a) Each request for information made pursuant to § 261a.3 shall include a notarized statement attesting to the identity of the requestor except in the following instances:

(1) Where the information requested is otherwise publicly available under the Freedom of Information Act, 5 U.S.C. 552, and the Board's Rules Regarding Availability of Information (12 CFR Part 261).

(2) Where the requestor makes written request for information in person and presents a driver's license, birth certificate, employment identification card or other means of identification, sufficient to establish his identity.

(3) Where the request is only for notification of the existence of records in a designated system of records pertaining to the requestor.

§ 261a.5 Disclosure of requested information to individuals.

(a) Information requested pursuant to § 261a.3, except for that compiled in reasonable anticipation of a civil action or proceeding or otherwise exempted from disclosure as provided in § 261a.13, will be made available for inspection and copying during regular business hours at the Board's offices. However, where the requested information can be disclosed only by providing a copy of the record, because such record cannot reasonably be put into a form for individual inspection (e.g., computer tapes), or where the requestor may request that copies of requested information be forwarded, such information will be mailed to the requestor. Access to or copies of requested information will be promptly provided after the acknowledgment as provided in § 261a.3(c), unless good cause for delay is communicated to the requestor.

(b) Fees for copying such records will be assessed in accordance with § 261a.11.

(c) The requestor of information may be accompanied in the inspection and discussion of that information by a person of the requestor's own choosing upon the submission by the requestor of a written and signed statement authorizing the presence of such person.

§ 261a.6 Special procedures—medical records.

Medical records requested pursuant to § 261a.3 will be disclosed to the requestor unless the disclosure of such records directly to the requestor could, in the judgment of the official deemed responsible for such records, have an adverse effect upon the requestor. In such instance, such information will be transmitted to a licensed physician named by the requestor.

§ 261a.7 Request for correction or amendment to record.

(a) Where an individual believes that any portion of a record in a designated system of records used in making a determination about such individual is not accurate, relevant, timely or complete, that individual may request that such record be amended or corrected. Such request should be submitted in writing to the appropriate officer as designated in § 261a.3. Each request for amendment or correction of a record should identify the system of records containing the record for which amendment or correction is requested, specify the portion of that record requested to be amended or corrected, and describe the nature of and reasons for each requested amendment or correction. Additionally, each request must include a notarized statement attesting to the identity of the requestor except where the request is presented in person and the requestor's identity may thereupon be verified.

(b) Nothing in paragraph (a) of this section shall permit collateral attack upon that which has been decided in a previous judicial, quasi-judicial or other proceeding.

§ 261a.8 Agency review of request for amendment of record.

(a) As appropriate, the Secretary of the Board or the Director of the Division of Personnel shall acknowledge each request made pursuant to § 261a.7 within 10 business days of its receipt. Such acknowledgment may request additional information necessary for a determination of the request for amendment or correction.

(b) As appropriate, the Secretary of the Board or the Director of the Division of Personnel shall promptly review each request made pursuant to § 261a.7 in light of the criteria of accuracy, relevance, timeliness, completeness and necessity set forth in subsections (e)(1) and (e)(5) of the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. 552a.

(c) Upon completion of review of each request made pursuant to § 261a.7, the Secretary of the Board or the Director of the Division of Personnel shall immediately inform the requestor of the determination to grant or deny the requested amendment or correction.

(d) Where any request pursuant to § 261a.7 has been denied in whole or part, the requestor shall be advised of the reasons therefor, the procedure for appeal of the determination and the name, title and address of the official to whom such appeal should be directed.

§ 261a.9 Appeal of initial adverse determination on correction or amendment.

(a) A denial of a request made pursuant to § 261a.7 may be appealed to the Board of Governors or any official designated by the Chairman of the Board of Governors within 30 business days of issuance of notification of denial. Every such appeal should be made in writing to the official designated in the letter of initial denial, should specify the previous background of the request and should provide reasons why the initial determination should be reversed.

(b) The Board of Governors or such official designated by the Chairman of the Board shall make a determination with respect to the review of such appeal not later than 30 business days from its receipt, unless the reviewing official extends such period for good cause shown.

(c) If the Board or designated official affirms the initial denial of a request to amend or correct made pursuant to § 261a.7, such determination shall be communicated to the requestor together with a statement of the reasons therefore and the requestor shall be informed of the right of judicial review of the determination. The requestor may then file a concise statement setting forth disagreement with the affirmation of denial within 30 days of notification of such determination and such statement shall be provided to persons or other agencies to whom the disputed record is disclosed.

§ 261a.10 Disclosure of record to person other than individual to whom it pertains.

(a) No record contained in a designated system of records shall be disclosed to any person or agency without the prior written consent of the individual to whom the record pertains unless the disclosure is authorized by paragraph (b) of this section.

(b) The restrictions on disclosure in paragraph (a) of this section do not apply to any disclosure (1) to those officers and employees of the Board who have a need for the record in the performance of their duties; (2) that is required under the Freedom of Information Act (5 U.S.C. 552); (3) for a routine use listed with respect to a designated system of records; (4) to the Bureau of the Census for purposes of planning or carrying out a census or survey or related activity pursuant to the provisions of title 13 of the United States Code; (5) to a recipient who has provided the Board with advance adequate written assurance that the record will be used solely as a statistical research or reporting record, and the record is to be transferred in a form that is not individually identifiable; (6) to the National Archives of the United States as a record that has sufficient historical or other value to warrant its continued preservation by the United States Government, or for evaluation by the Administrator of General Services or his designee to determine whether the record has such value; (7) to another agency or to an instrumentality of any governmental jurisdiction within or under the control of the United States for a civil or criminal law enforcement activity if the activity is authorized by law, and if the head of the agency or instrumentality has made a written request to the Board specifying the particular portion desired and the law enforcement activity for which the record is sought; (8) to a person pursuant to a showing of compelling circumstances affecting the health or safety of an individual if upon such disclosure notification is transmitted to the last known address of such individual; (9) to either House of Congress, or, to the extent of matter within its jurisdiction, any committee or subcommittee thereof, any joint committee of Congress or subcommittee of any such joint committee; (10) to the Comptroller General, or any of his authorized representatives, in the course of the performance of the duties of the General Accounting Office; or (11) pursuant to the order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

§ 261a.11 Fees.

(a) Copies of records requested pursuant to § 261a.3 will be provided at a cost of $.10 per page for photocopying or at a cost not to exceed the direct cost of printing, typing or otherwise preparing such copies.

(b) Documents may be furnished without charge where total charges are less than $2.

§ 261a.12 Penalties.

The Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. 552a(1)(3), provides:

> Any person who knowingly and willfully requests or obtains any record concerning an individual from an agency under false pretense shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and fined not more than $5,000.00.

§ 261a.13 Exemptions.

(a) Pursuant to subsection (k) of the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. 552a, the Board may exempt certain portions of records within designated systems of records from the requirements of the Privacy Act, (including access to and review of such records pursuant to this part) if such portions are:

(1) Subject to the provisions of section 552(b)(1) of the Freedom of Information Act, 5 U.S.C. 552:

(2) Investigatory material compiled for law enforcement purposes, other than material within the scope of subsection (j)(2) of the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. 552a: Provided, however, That if any individual is denied any right, privilege, or benefit that he would otherwise be entitled by Federal law, or for which he would otherwise be eligible, as a result of the maintenance of such material, such material shall be provided to such individual, except to the extent that the disclosure of such material would reveal the identity of a source who furnished information to the Government under an express promise that the identity of the source would be held in confidence, or, prior to the effective date of the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. 552a, under an implied promise that the identity of the source would be held in confidence:

(3) Maintained in connection with providing protective services to the President of the United States or other individuals pursuant to section 3056 of title 18 of the United States Code;

(4) Required by statute to be maintained and used solely as statistical records;

(5) Investigatory material compiled solely for the purpose of determining suitability, eligibility, or qualifications for Federal civilian employment, military service, Federal contracts, or access to classified information, but only to the extent that the disclosures of such material would reveal the identity of a source who furnished information to the Government under an express promise that the identity of the source would be held in confidence, or, prior to the effective date of the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. 552a, under an implied promise that the identity of the source would be held in confidence;

(6) Testing or examination material used solely to determine individual qualifications for appointment or promotion in the Federal service the disclosure of which would compromise the objectivity or fairness of the testing or examination process; or

(7) Evaluation material used to determine potential for promotion in the armed services, but only to the extent that the disclosure of such material would reveal the identity of a source who furnished information to the Government under an express promise that the identity of the source would be held in confidence, or, prior to the effective date of the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. 552a, under an implied promise that the identity of the source would be held in confidence.

(b) Those designated systems of records which are exempt from the requirements of this part or any other requirements of the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. 552a, will be indicated in the notice of designated systems of records published by the Board.

(c) Nothing in this part shall allow an individual access to any information compiled in reasonable anticipation of a civil action or proceeding.

AUTHORITY: 5 U.S.C. 552b.

SOURCE: 42 FR 13297, Mar. 10, 1977, unless otherwise noted.

§ 261b.1 Basis and scope.

This part is issued by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System ("the Board") under section 552b of Title 5 of the United States Code, the Government in the Sunshine Act ("the Act"), to carry out the policy of the Act that the public is entitled to the fullest practicable information regarding the decision making processes of the Board while at the same time preserving the rights of individuals and the ability of the Board to carry out its responsibilities. These regulations fulfill the requirement of subsection (g) of the Act that each agency subject to the provisions of the Act shall promulgate regulations to implement the open meeting requirements of subsections (b) through (f) of the Act.

§ 261b.2 Definitions.

For purposes of this part, the following definitions shall apply:

(a) The term "agency" means the Board and subdivisions thereof.

(b) The term "subdivision" means any group composed of two or more Board members that is authorized to act on behalf of the Board.

(c) The term "meeting" means the deliberations of at least the number of individual agency members required to take action on behalf of the agency where such deliberations determine or result in the joint conduct or disposition of official Board business, but does not include (1) deliberations required or permitted by subsections (d) or (e) of the Act, or (2) the conduct or disposition of official agency business by circulating written material to individual members.

(d) The term "number of individual agency members required to take action on behalf of the agency" means in the case of the Board, a majority of its members except that (1) Board determination of the ratio of reserves against deposits under section 19(b) of the Federal Reserve Act requires the vote of four members, (2) Board action with respect to advances, discounts and rediscounts under sections 10(a), 11(b), and 13(3) of the Federal Reserve Act requires the vote of five members and (3) Board action with respect to the percentage of individual member bank capital and surplus which may be represented by loans secured by stock and bond collateral under section 11(m) of the Federal Reserve Act requires the vote of six members. In the case of subdivisions of the Board, the term means the number of members constituting a quorum of the designated subdivision.

(e) The term "member" means a member of the Board appointed under section 10 of the Federal Reserve Act. In the case of certain Board proceedings pursuant to 12 U.S.C. 1818(e), the Comptroller of the Currency is entitled to sit as a member of the Board and for these proceedings he shall be deemed a "member" for the purposes of this part. In the case of any subdivision of the Board, the term "member" means a member of the Board designated to serve on that subdivision.

(f) The term "public observation" means that the public shall have the right to listen and observe but not to record any of the meetings by means of cameras or electronic or other recording devices unless approval in advance is obtained from the Public Affairs Office of the Board and shall not have the right to participate in the meeting, unless participation is provided for in the Board's Rules of Procedure.

(g) The term "Federal agency" means an "agency" as defined in 5 U.S.C. 551(1).

(h) "Committee" means the Action Committee established pursuant to 12 CFR 265.1a(c).

[42 FR 13297, Mar. 10, 1977, as amended at 43 FR 34481, Aug. 4, 1978]

§ 261b.3 Conduct of agency business.

Members shall not jointly conduct or dispose of official agency business other than in accordance with this part.

§ 261b.4 Meetings open to public observation.

(a) Except as provided in § 261b.5, every portion of every meeting of the agency shall be open to public observation.

(b) Copies of staff documents considered in connection with agency discussion of agenda items for a meeting that is open to public observation shall be made available for distribution to members of the public attending the meeting, in accordance with the provisions of 12 CFR Part 261.

(c) The agency will maintain a complete electronic recording adequate to record fully the proceedings of each meeting or portion of a meeting open to public observation. Cassettes will be available for listening in the Freedom of Information Office, and copies may be ordered for $5 per cassette by telephoning or by writing Freedom of Information Office, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Washington, D.C. 20551.

(d) The agency will maintain mailing lists of names and addresses of all persons who wish to receive copies of agency announcements of meetings open to public observation. Requests for announcements may be made by telephoning or by writing Freedom of Information Office, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Washington, D.C. 20551.

[44 FR 11750, Mar. 2, 1979]

§ 261b.5 Exemptions.

(a) Except in a case where the agency finds that the public interest requires otherwise, the agency may close a meeting or a portion or portions of a meeting under the procedures specified in § 261b.7 or § 261b.8 of this part, and withhold information under the provisions of §§ 261b.6, 261b.7, 261b.8, or 261b.11 of this part, where the agency properly determines that such meeting or portion or portions of its meeting or the disclosure of such information is likely to:

(1) Disclose matters that are (i) specifically authorized under criteria established by an Executive order to be kept secret in the interests of national defense or foreign policy, and (ii) in fact properly classified pursuant to such Executive order;

(2) Relate solely to internal personnel rules and practices;

(3) Disclose matters specifically exempted from disclosure by statute (other than section 552 of Title 5 of the United States Code), provided that such statute (i) requires that the matters be withheld from the public in such a manner as to leave no discretion on the issue, or (ii) establishes particular criteria for withholding or refers to particular types of matters to be withheld;

(4) Disclose trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and privileged or confidential;

(5) Involve accusing any person of a crime, or formally censuring any person;

(6) Disclose information of a personal nature where disclosure would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy;

(7) Disclose investigatory records compiled for law enforcement purposes, or information which if written would be contained in such records, but only to the extent that the production of such records or information would (i) interfere with enforcement proceedings, (ii) deprive a person of a right to a fair trial or an impartial adjudication, (iii) constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy, (iv) disclose the identity of a confidential source and, in the case of a record compiled by a criminal law enforcement authority in the course of a criminal investigation, or by a Federal agency conducting a lawful national security intelligence investigation, confidential information furnished only by the confidential source, (v) disclose investigative techniques and procedures, or (vi) endanger the life or physical safety of law enforcement personnel;

(8) Disclose information contained in or related to examination, operating, or condition reports prepared by, on behalf of, or for the use of the Board or other Federal agency responsible for the regulation or supervision of financial institutions;

(9) Disclose information the premature disclosure of which would—

(i) Be likely to (A) lead to significant speculation in currencies, securities, or commodities, or (B) significantly endanger the stability of any financial institution; or

(ii) Be likely to significantly frustrate implementation of a proposed action, except that paragraph (a)(9)(ii) of this section shall not apply in any instance where the Board has already disclosed to the public the content or nature of its proposed action, or where the Board is required by law to make such disclosure on its own initiative prior to taking final action on such proposal; or

(10) Specifically concern the issuance of a subpoena, participation in a civil action or proceeding, an action in a foreign court or international tribunal, or an arbitration, or the initiation, conduct, or disposition of a particular case of formal agency adjudication pursuant to the procedures in section 554 of Title 5 of the United States Code or otherwise involving a determination on the record after opportunity for a hearing.

§ 261b.6 Public announcement of meetings.

(a) Except as otherwise provided by the Act, public announcement of meetings open to public observation and meetings to be partially or completely closed to public observation pursuant to § 261b.8 of this part will be made at least one week in advance of the meeting. Except to the extent such information is determined to be exempt from disclosure under § 261b.5 of this part, each such public announcement will state the time, place and subject matter of the meeting, whether it is to be open or closed to the public, and the name and phone number of the official designated to respond to requests for information about the meeting.

(b) If a majority of the members of the agency determines by a recorded vote that agency business requires that a meeting covered by paragraph (a) of this section be called at a date earlier than that specified in paragraph (a) of this section, the agency will make a public announcement of the information specified in paragraph (a) of this section at the earliest practicable time.

(c) Changes in the subject matter of a publicly announced meeting, or in the determination to open or close a publicly announced meeting or any portion of a publicly announced meeting to public observation, or in the time or place of a publicly announced meeting made in accordance with the procedures specified in § 261b.9 of this part will be publicly announced at the earliest practicable time.

(d) Public announcements required by this section will be posted at the Board's Public Affairs Office and Freedom of Information Office and may be made available by other means or at other locations as may be desirable.

(e) Immediately following each public announcement required by this section, notice of the time, place and subject matter of a meeting, whether the meeting is open or closed, any change in one of the preceding announcements and the name and telephone number of the official designated by the Board to respond to requests about the meeting, shall also be submitted for publication in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

§ 261b.7 Meetings closed to public observation under expedited procedures.

(a) Since the Board and the Committee qualifies for the use of expedited procedures under subsection (d)(4) of the Act, meetings or portions thereof exempt under paragraph (a)(4), (a)(8), (a)(9)(i) or (a)(10) of § 261b.5 of this part, will be closed to public observation under the expedited procedures of this section. Following are examples of types of items that, absent compelling contrary circumstances, will qualify for these exemptions: Matters relating to a specific bank or bank holding company, such as bank branches or mergers, bank holding company formations, or acquisition of an additional bank or acquisition or de novo undertaking of a permissible nonbanking activity; bank regulatory matters, such as applications for membership, issuance of capital notes and investment in bank premises; foreign banking matters; bank supervisory and enforcement matters, such as cease-and-desist and officer removal proceedings; monetary policy matters, such as discount rates, use of the discount window, changes in the limitations on payment of interest on time and savings accounts, and changes in reserve requirements or margin regulations.

(b) At the beginning of each meeting, a portion or portions of which is closed to public observation under expedited procedures pursuant to this section, a recorded vote of the members present will be taken to determine whether a majority of the members of the agency votes to close such meeting of portions of such meeting to public observation.

(c) A copy of the vote, reflecting the vote of each member, and except to the extent such information is determined to be exempt from disclosure under § 261b.5, a public announcement of the time, place and subject matter of the meeting or each closed portion thereof, will be made available at the earliest practicable time at the Board's Public Affairs Office and Freedom of Information Office.

[42 FR 13297, Mar. 10, 1977, as amended at 43 FR 34481, Aug. 4, 1978]

§ 261b.8 Meetings closed to public observation under regular procedures.

(a) A meeting or a portion of a meeting will be closed to public observation under regular procedures, or information as to such meeting or portion of a meeting will be withheld only by recorded vote of a majority of the members of the agency when it is determined that the meeting or the portion of the meeting or the withholding of information qualifies for exemption under § 261b.5. Votes by proxy are not allowed.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (c) of this section, a separate vote of the members of the agency will be taken with respect to the closing or the withholding of information as to each meeting or portion thereof which is proposed to be closed to public observation or with respect to which information is proposed to be withheld pursuant to this section.

(c) A single vote may be taken with respect to a series of meetings, a portion or portions of which are proposed to be closed to public observation or with respect to any information concerning such series of meetings proposed to be withheld, so long as each meeting or portion thereof in such series involves the same particular matters and is scheduled to be held no more than thirty days after the initial meeting in such series.

(d) Whenever any person's interests may be directly affected by a portion of a meeting for any of the reasons referred to in exemption (a)(5), (a)(6) or (a)(7) of § 261b.5 of this part, such person may request in writing to the Secretary of the Board that such portion of the meeting be closed to public observation. The Secretary, or in his or her absence, the Acting Secretary of the Board, will transmit the request to the members and upon the request of any one of them a recorded vote will be taken whether to close such meeting to public observation.

(e) Within one day of any vote taken pursuant to paragraphs (a) through (d) of this section, the agency will make publicly available at the Board's Public Affairs Office and Freedom of Information Office a written copy of such vote reflecting the vote of each member on the question. If a meeting or a portion of a meeting is to be closed to public observation, the agency, within one day of the vote taken pursuant to paragraphs (a) through (d) of this section, will make publicly available at the Board's Public Affairs Office and Freedom of Information Office a full, written explanation of its action closing the meeting or portion of the meeting together with a list of all persons expected to attend the meeting and their affiliation, except to the extent such information is determined by the agency to be exempt from disclosure under subsection (c) of the Act and § 261b.5 of this part.

(f) Any person may request in writing to the Secretary of the Board that an announced closed meeting, or portion of the meeting, be held open to public observation. The Secretary, or in his or her absence, the Acting Secretary of the Board, will transmit the request to the members of the Board and upon the request of any member a recorded vote will be taken whether to open such meeting to public observation.

[42 FR 13297, Mar. 10, 1977, as amended at 44 FR 11750, Mar. 2, 1979]

§ 261b.9 Changes with respect to publicly announced meeting.

The subject matter of a meeting or the determination to open or close a meeting or a portion of a meeting to public observation may be changed following public announcement under § 261b.6 only if a majority of the members of the agency determines by a recorded vote that agency business so requires and that no earlier announcement of the change was possible. Public announcement of such change and the vote of each member upon such change will be made pursuant to § 261b.6(c). Changes in time, including postponements and cancellations of a publicly announced meeting or portion of a meeting or changes in the place of a publicly announced meeting will be publicly announced pursuant to § 261b.6(c) by the Secretary of the Board or, in the Secretary's absence, the Acting Secretary of the Board.

§ 261b.10 Certification of General Counsel.

Before every meeting or portion of a meeting closed to public observation under § 261b.7 or 261b.8 of this part, the General Counsel, or in the General Counsel's absence, the Acting General Counsel, shall publicly certify whether or not in his or her opinion the meeting may be closed to public observation and shall state each relevant exemptive provision. A copy of such certification, together with a statement from the presiding officer of the meeting setting forth the time and place of the meeting and the persons present, will be retained for the time prescribed in § 261b.11(d).

§ 261b.11 Transcripts, recordings, and minutes.

(a) The agency will maintain a complete transcript or electronic recording or transcription thereof adequate to record fully the proceedings of each meeting or portion of a meeting closed to public observation pursuant to exemption (a)(1), (a)(2), (a)(3), (a)(4), (a)(5), (a)(6), (a)(7) or (a)(9)(ii) of § 261b.5 of this part. Transcriptions of recordings will disclose the identity of each speaker.

(b) The agency will maintain either such a transcript, recording or transcription thereof, or a set of minutes that will fully and clearly describe all matters discussed and provide a full and accurate summary of any actions taken and the reasons therefor, including a description of each of the views expressed on any item and the record of any roll call vote (reflecting the vote of each member on the question), for meetings or portions of meetings closed to public observation pursuant to exemptions (a)(8), (a)(9)(A) or (a)(10) of § 261b.5 of this part. The minutes will identify all documents considered in connection with any action taken.

(c) Transcripts, recordings or transcriptions thereof, or minutes will promptly be made available to the public in the Freedom of Information Office except for such item or items of such discussion or testimony as may be determined to contain information that may be withheld under subsection (c) of the Act and § 261b.5 of this part.

(d) A complete verbatim copy of the transcript, a complete copy of the minutes, or a complete electronic recording or verbatim copy of a transcription thereof of each meeting or portion of a meeting closed to public observation will be maintained for a period of at least two years or one year after the conclusion of any agency proceeding with respect to which the meeting or portion thereof was held, whichever occurs later.

§ 261b.12 Procedures for inspection and obtaining copies of transcriptions and minutes.

(a) Any person may inspect or copy a transcript, a recording or transcription of a recording, or minutes described in § 261b.11(c) of this part.

(b) Requests for copies of transcripts, recordings or transcriptions of recordings, or minutes described in § 261b.11(c) of this part shall specify the meeting or the portion of meeting desired and shall be submitted in writing to the Secretary of the Board,

Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Washington, D.C. 20551. Copies of documents identified in minutes may be made available to the public upon request under the provisions of 12 CFR Part 261 (Rules Regarding Availability of Information).

§ 261b.13 Fees.

(a) Copies of transcripts, recordings or transcriptions of recordings, or minutes requested pursuant to section § 261b.12(b) of this part will be provided at the cost of 10¢ per standard page for photocopying or at a cost not to exceed the actual cost of printing, typing, or otherwise preparing such copies.

(b) Documents may be furnished without charge where total charges are less than $2.

SOURCE: 38 FR 6807, Mar. 13, 1973, unless otherwise noted.

§ 262.1 Basis and scope.

This part is issued pursuant to section 552 of Title 5 of the United States Code, which requires that every agency shall publish in the FEDERAL REGISTER statements of the general course and method by which its functions are channeled and determined, rules of procedure, and descriptions of forms available or the places at which forms may be obtained.

§ 262.2 Procedure for regulations.

(a) Notice. Notices of proposed regulations of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (the "Board") or amendments thereto are published in the FEDERAL REGISTER, except as specified in paragraph (e) of this section or otherwise excepted by law. Such notices include a statement of the terms of the proposed regulations or amendments and a description of the subjects and issues involved; but the giving of such notices does not necessarily indicate the Board's final approval of any feature of any such proposal. The notices also include a reference to the authority for the proposed regulations or amendments and a statement of the time, place, and nature of public participation.

(b) Public participation. The usual method of public submission of data, views, or arguments is in writing. It is ordinarily preferable that they be sent to the Secretary of the Board, Washington, D.C. 20551, with copies to the appropriate Federal Reserve Bank. The locations of the 12 Federal Reserve Banks and the boundaries of the Federal Reserve districts are shown in the appendix to the Board's rules of organization. Such material will be made available for inspection and copying upon request, except as provided in § 261.6(a) of this chapter regarding availability of information.

(c) Preparation of draft and action by Board. In the light of consideration of all relevant matter presented or ascertained, the appropriate division of the Board's staff, in collaboration with other divisions, prepares drafts of proposed regulations or amendments, and the staff submits them to the Board. The Board takes such action as it deems appropriate in the public interest. Any other documents that may be necessary to carry out any decision by the Board in the matter are usually prepared by the Legal Division, in collaboration with the other divisions of the staff.

(d) Effective dates. Any substantive regulation or amendment thereto issued by the Board is published not less than 30 days prior to the effective date thereof, except as specified in paragraph (e) of this section or as otherwise excepted by law.

(e) Exceptions as to notice or effective date. In certain situations, notice and public participation with respect to proposed regulations may be impracticable, unnecessary, contrary to the public interest, or otherwise not required in the public interest, or there may be reason and good cause in the public interest why the effective date should not be deferred for 30 days. The reason or reasons in such cases usually are that such notice, public participation, or deferment of effective date would prevent the action from becoming effective as promptly as necessary in the public interest, would permit speculators or others to reap unfair profits or to interfere with the Board's actions taken with a view to accommodating commerce and business and with regard to their bearing upon the general credit situation of the country, would provoke other consequences contrary to the public interest, would unreasonably interfere with the Board's necessary functions with respect to management or personnel, would not aid the persons affected, or would otherwise serve no useful purpose. The following may be mentioned as some examples of situations in which advance notice or deferred effective date, or both, will ordinarily be omitted in the public interest: The review and determination of discount rates established by Federal Reserve Banks, and changes in general requirements regarding reserves of member banks, maximum interest rates on time and savings deposits, or credit for purchasing or carrying securities.

§ 262.3 Applications.

(a) Forms. Any application, request, or petition (hereafter referred to as "application") for the approval, authority, determination, or permission of the Board with respect to any action for which such approval, authority, determination, or permission is required by law or regulation of the Board (including actions authorized to be taken by a Federal Reserve Bank or others on behalf of the Board pursuant to authority delegated under Part 265 of this chapter) shall be submitted in accordance with the pertinent form, if any, prescribed by the Board. Copies of any such form and details regarding information to be included therein may be obtained from any Federal Reserve Bank. Any application for which no form is prescribed should be signed by the person making the application or by his duly authorized agent, should state the facts involved, the action requested, and the applicant's interest in the matter, and should indicate the reasons why the application should be granted. Applications for access to, or copying of, records of the Board should be submitted as provided in § 261.4(d) of this chapter.

(b) Notice of applications. (1) In the case of applications,

(i) For membership in the Federal Reserve System where such membership would confer Federal deposit insurance on a bank,

(ii) By a State member bank for the establishment of a domestic branch or other facility that would be authorized to receive deposits,

(iii) By a State member bank for the relocation of a domestic branch office,

(iv) For merger, consolidation, or acquisition of assets or assumption of liabilities, if the acquiring, assuming, or resulting bank is to be a State member bank,

(v) To become a bank holding company, and

(vi) By a bank holding company to acquire ownership or control of shares or assets of a bank, or to merge or consolidate with any other bank holding company, the applicant shall cause to be published on the same day of each of two consecutive weeks a notice in the form prescribed by the Board. The notice shall be placed in the classified advertising legal notices section of the newspaper, and the first notice may appear no more than ninety calendar days prior to acceptance by the Reserve Bank of the application. The notice must provide an opportunity for the public to give written comment on the application to the appropriate Federal Reserve Bank for at least thirty days after the date of publication of the first notice. In addition, between publication of the first and second notice, the applicant shall submit to the appropriate Reserve Bank for acceptance copies of the application, together with a copy of the notice as it appeared in the newspaper. Such notice shall be published in a newspaper of general circulation in (A) the community in which the head office of the bank is or is to be located in the case of an application for membership that would confer deposit insurance, (B) the community or communities in which the head office of the bank and the proposed branch or other facility (other than an electronic funds transfer facility) are located in the case of an application for the establishment of a domestic branch or other facility that would be authorized to receive deposits, (C) the community or communities in which the head office of the bank, the office to be closed, and the office to be opened are located in the case of an application for the relocation of a domestic branch office, (D) the community or communities in which the head office of each of the banks to be party to the merger, consolidation, or acquisition of assets or assumption of liabilities are located in the case of an application by a bank for merger, consolidation, or acquisition of assets or assumption of liabilities, or (E) the community or communities in which the head offices of the largest subsidiary bank, if any, or an applicant and of each bank, shares of which are to be directly or indirectly acquired, are located in the case of applications under section 3 of the Bank Holding Company Act.

(2) In addition to the foregoing notice, an applicant, in the case of an applicaition to relocate a domestic branch office or other facility that would be authorized to receive deposits, shall post in a conspicuous public place in the lobby of the office to be closed a notice containing the information specified in § 262.3(b)(1). Such notice should be posted on the date of the first notice required by § 262.3(b)(1).

(c) Filing of applications. Any application should be sent to the Federal Reserve Bank of the district in which the head office of the parent banking organization is located, except as otherwise specified on application forms, and that Bank will forward it to the Board when appropriate; however, in the case of a foreign bank holding company, as defined in § 225.4(g) of this chapter, applications shall be sent to the Federal Reserve Bank of the district in which the operations of the organization's subsidiary banks are principally conducted. In the case of a foreign banking organization that is not a bank holding company but that has one or more branches, agencies, or commercial lending companies in any State of the United States or the District of Columbia, applications shall be sent to the Federal Reserve Bank of the district in which the organization's banking assets are the largest. Applications of a member bank subsidiary, however, should be filed with the Reserve Bank of the district in which the member bank is located.

(d) Analysis by staff. In every case, the Reserve Bank makes such investigation as may be necessary, and, except when acting pursuant to delegated authority, reports the relevant facts, with its recommendation, to the Board. In the light of consideration of all relevant matter presented or ascertained, the Board's staff prepares and submits to the Board comments on the subject.

(e) Submission of comments and requests for hearing. The Board is only required to consider a comment or a request for a hearing with respect to an application or notice if it is in writing and received by the Secretary of the Board or the appropriate Federal Reserve Bank on or before the latest date prescribed in any notice with respect to the application or notice, or where no such date is prescribed, on or before the 30th day after the date notice is first published. Similarly, the Board will consider comments on an application from the Attorney General or a banking supervisory authority to which notification of receipt of an application has been given, only if such comment is received by the Secretary of the Board within 30 days of the date of the letter giving such notification. Any comment on an application or notice that requests a hearing must include a statement of why a written presentation would not suffice in lieu of a hearing, identifying specifically any questions of fact that are in dispute and summarizing the evidence that would be presented at a hearing. In every case where a timely comment or request for hearing is received as provided herein, a copy of such comment or request shall be forwarded promptly to the applicant for its response. The Board will consider the applicant's response only if it is in writing and sent to the Secretary of the Board on or before eight business days after the date of the letter by which it is forwarded to the applicant. At the same time it transmits its response to the Board, the applicant should transmit a copy of its response to the person or supervisory authority making such comment or requesting a hearing. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the Board may, in its sole discretion and without notifying the parties, take into consideration the substance of comments with respect to an application, (but not requests for hearing) that are not received within the time periods provided herein.

(f) Action on applications. The Board takes such action as it deems appropriate in the public interest. Such documents as may be necessary to carry out any decision by the Board are prepared by the Board's staff. With respect to actions taken by a Federal Reserve Bank on behalf of the Board under delegated authority, statements and necessary documents are prepared by the staff of such Federal Reserve Bank.

(g) Notice of action. Prompt notice is given to the applicant of the granting or denial in whole or in part of any application. In the case of a denial, except in affirming a prior denial or where the denial is self-explanatory, such notice is accompanied by a simple statement of the grounds for such action.

(h) Action at Board's initiative. When the Board, without receiving an application, takes action with respect to any matter as to which opportunity for hearing is not required by statute or Board regulation, similar procedure is followed, including investigations, reports, and recommendations by the Board's staff and by the Reserve Banks, where appropriate.

(i) General procedures for bank holding company and merger applications. In addition to procedures applicable under other provisions of this part, the following procedures are applicable in connection with the Board's consideration of applications under sections 3 and 4 of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 (12 U.S.C. 1842 and 1843), hereafter referred to as "section 3 applications" or "section 4 applications," and of applications under section 18(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1823), hereafter called "merger applications." Except as otherwise indicated, the following procedures apply to all such applications.

(1) The Board issues each week a list that identifies section 3 and section 4 and merger applications received and acted upon during the preceding week by the Board or the Reserve Banks pursuant to delegated authority. Notice of receipt of all section 3 applications and of section 4(c)(8) applications acted on by the Board is published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

(2) If a hearing is required by law or if the Board determines that a formal hearing for the purpose of taking evidence is desirable, the Board issues an order for such a hearing, and a notice thereof is published in the FEDERAL REGISTER. Any such formal hearing is conducted by an administrative law judge in accordance with the Board's rules of practice for formal hearings (Part 263 of this chapter) except that, unless otherwise ordered by the Board, such a hearing is public.

(3) In any case in which a formal hearing is not ordered by the Board, the Board may afford the applicant and other properly interested persons (including Governmental agencies) an opportunity to present views orally before the Board or its designated representative. Unless otherwise ordered by the Board, any such oral presentation is public and notice of such public proceeding is published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

(4) Each action taken by the Board on an application is embodied in an order that indicates the votes of members of the Board. The order either contains reasons for the Board's action (i.e., an expanded order) or is accompanied by a statement of the reasons for the Board's action. Both the order and any accompanying statement are released to the press. Each order accompanied by a statement and any order of general interest, together with a list of other orders, are published in the Federal Reserve Bulletin. Action by a Reserve Bank under delegated authority as provided for under Part 265 of this chapter is reflected in a letter of notification to the applicant.

(5) Unless the Board shall otherwise direct, each section 3 and section 4 and merger application is made available for inspection by the public except for portions thereof as to which the Board determines that nondisclosure is warranted under section 552(b) of Title 5 of the United States Code.

(j) Special procedures for certain applications. The following types of applications require procedures exclusive of, or in addition to, those described in paragraphs (g) (1) through (6) of this section.

(1) Special rules pertaining to section 3 and merger applications follow:

(i) Each order of the Board and each letter of notification by a Reserve Bank acting pursuant to delegated authority approving a section 3 application includes, pursuant to the Act approved July 1, 1966 (12 U.S.C. 1849(b)), a requirement that the transaction approved shall not be consummated before the 30th calendar day following the date of such order.

(ii) Each order of the Board approving a merger application includes, pursuant to the Act approved February 21, 1966 (12 U.S.C. 1828(c)(1)(6)), a requirement that the transaction approved shall not be consummated before the 30th calendar day following the date of such order, except as the Board may otherwise determine pursuant to emergency situations as to which the Act permits consummation at earlier dates.

(iii) Each order or each letter of notification approving an application also includes, as a condition of approval, a requirement that the transaction approved shall be consummated within 3 months and, in the case of acquisition by a holding company of stock of a newly organized bank, a requirement that such bank shall be opened for business within 6 months, but such periods may be extended for good cause by the Board (or by the appropriate Federal Reserve Bank where authority to grant such extensions is delegated to the Reserve Bank).

(2) For special rules governing procedures for section 4(c)(8) applications, refer to § 225.5(a)(c) of this chapter.

(3) For special rules governing procedures for section 4(c)(9) applications, refer to § 225.4(g) of this chapter.

(4) For special rules governing procedures for section 4(c)(12) applications, refer to § 225.4(d) of this chapter.

(5) For special rules governing procedures for section 4(c)(13) applications, refer to § 225.4(f) of this chapter.

(k) Reconsideration of certain Board actions. The Board may reconsider any action taken by it on an application upon receipt by the Secretary of the Board of a written request for reconsideration from any party to such application, on or before the 15th day after the effective date of the Board's action. Such request should specify the reasons why the Board should reconsider its action, and present relevant facts that for good cause shown, were not previously presented to the Board. Within 10 days of receipt of such a request, the General Counsel, acting pursuant to delegated authority (12 CFR 265.2(b)(7)), shall determine whether or not the request for reconsideration should be granted, and shall notify all parties to the application orally by telephone of this determination within 10 days. Such notification will be confirmed promptly in writing. In the exercise of this authority, the General Counsel shall confer with the Directors of other interested Divisions of the Board or their designees. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the Board may, on its own motion if it deems reconsideration appropriate, elect to reconsider its action with respect to any application, and the parties to such application shall be notified by the Secretary of the Board of its election as provided above. If it is determined that the Board should reconsider its action with respect to an application, such action will be stayed and will not be final until the Board has acted on the application upon reconsideration. If appropriate, notice of reconsideration of an application will be published promptly in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

(12 U.S.C. 1842(a), 1843(c), 1844(b), 1828(c), 321 and 248(i))

(l) Waiver. The Board, or the officer or Reserve Bank authorized to approve an application, may waive or modify any procedural requirements for that application prescribed or cited in this section and may excuse any failure to comply with them upon a finding that immediate action on the application is necessary to prevent the probable failure of a bank or company or that an emergency exists requiring expeditious action.

§ 262.4 Adjudication with formal hearing.

In connection with adjudication with respect to which a formal hearing is required by law or is ordered by the Board, the procedure is set forth in Part 263 of this chapter, entitled "Rules of Practice for Formal Hearings."

§ 262.5 Appearance and practice.

Appearance and practice before the Board in all matters are governed by § 263.3 of this chapter.

§ 262.6 Forms.

Necessary forms to be used in connection with applications and other matters are available at the Federal Reserve Banks. A list of all such forms, which is reviewed and revised periodically, may be obtained from any Federal Reserve Bank.

(a) This action is taken pursuant to and in accordance with the provisions of section 552 of Title 5 of the United States Code.

(b) The provisions of section 553 of Title 5, United States Code, relating to notice and public participation and to deferred effective dates, are not followed in connection with the adoption of this action, because the rules involved are procedural in nature and accordingly do not constitute substantive rules subject to the requirements of such section.

§§ 262.7—262.24 [Reserved]

§ 262.25 Policy statement regarding notice of applications; timeliness of comments; informal meetings.

(a) Notice of applications. A bank or company applying to the Board for a deposit-taking facility must first publish notice of its application in local newspapers. This requirement, found in § 262.3(b)(1) of the Board's Rules of Procedure covers applications under the Bank Holding Company Act and Bank Merger Act, as well as applications for membership in the Federal Reserve System and for new branches of State member banks. Notices of these applications are published in newspapers of general circulation in the communities where the applicant intends to do business as well as in the community where the applicant's head office is located. These notices are important in calling the public's attention to an applicant's plans and giving the public a chance to comment on these plans. To improve the effectiveness of the notices, the Board has supplemented its notice procedures as follows.

(1) The Board has adopted standard forms of notice for use by applicants that will specify the exact date on which the comment period on the application ends, which may not be less than thirty calendar days from the date of publication of the first notice. The newspaper forms also provide the name and telephone number of the Community Affairs Officer of the appropriate Reserve Bank as the person to call to obtain more information about submitting comments on an application. In general, the Community Affairs Officer will be available to answer questions of a general nature concerning the submission of comments and the processing of applications.

(2) The Board also publishes notice of bank holding company applications for bank acquisitions (but not for bank mergers or branches) in the FEDERAL REGISTER after the application is received and the Community Affairs Officer can provide the exact date on which this comment period ends. (The FEDERAL REGISTER comment period will generally end after the date specified in the newspaper notice.)

(3) In addition to the formal newspaper and Federal Register notices discussed above, each Reserve Bank publishes a weekly list of applications submitted to the Reserve Bank for which newspaper notices have been published. Any person or organization may arrange to have the list mailed to them regularly, or may request particular lists, by contacting the Reserve Bank's Community Affairs Officer. Each Reserve Bank's list includes only applications submitted to that particular Reserve Bank, and persons or groups should request lists from each Reserve Bank having jurisdiction over applications in which they may be interested. Since the lists are prepared as a courtesy by the Reserve Bank, and are not intended to replace any formal notice required by statute or regulation, the Reserve Banks and the Board do not assume responsibility for errors or omissions. In addition, the weekly lists prepared by Reserve Banks include certain applications by bank holding companies for nonbank acquisitions filed with the Reserve Bank.

(4) With respect to applications by bank holding companies to engage de novo in nonbank activities or make acquisitions of nonbank firms, the Board publishes notice of most of these applications in the Federal Register when the applications are filed. Notice of certain small acquisitions may be published in a newspaper of general circulation in the area(s) to be served. While applications for nonbanking activities are not covered by the provisions of the Community Reinvestment Act or the notice provisions of § 262.3 of the Board's Rules of Procedure, the provisions of this Statement apply to such applications.

(b) Timeliness of comments.

(1) All comments must be actually received by the Board or the Reserve Bank on or before the last date of the comment period specified in the notice. Where more than one notice is published with respect to an application, comments must be received on or before the last date of the latest comment period. The Board's Rules allow it to disregard comments received after the comment period expires. In particular, § 262.3(e) of the Board's Rules of Procedure states that the Board will not consider comments on an application that are not received on or before the expiration of the comment period. Thus, a commenter who fails to comment on an application within the specified comment period (or any extension) may be precluded from participating in the consideration of the application.

(2) In cases where a commenter for good cause is unable to send its comment within the specified comment period, § 265.2(a)(10) of the Board's Rules Regarding Delegation of Authority (12 CFR 265.2(a)(10)) allows the Secretary of the Board to grant requests for an extension of the period. Under this provision, upon receipt of a request received on or before the expiration of the comment period, the Secretary may grant a brief extension upon clear demonstration of hardship or other meritorious reason for seeking additional time.

(c) Private meetings. When a timely protest to approval of an application is received, the Reserve Bank may arrange a meeting between the applicant and the protestant to clarify and narrow the issues, and to provide a forum for the resolution of differences between the protestant and the applicant. If the Reserve Bank decides that a private meeting would be appropriate, the Reserve Bank will arrange a private meeting soon after the receipt of a protest and the applicant's response, if any, to the protest. In scheduling the meeting, the Reserve Bank will consider convenience to the parties with respect to the time and place of the meeting. A decision to hold a private meeting will not preclude the Reserve Bank or the Board from holding a public meeting or other proceeding if it is deemed appropriate.

(d) Public meetings. The Board's General Counsel (in consultation with the Reserve Bank and the directors of other interested divisions of the Board) may order that a public meeting or other proceeding be held if requested by the applicant or a protestant who files a timely protest, or if such a proceeding appears appropriate. In most instances, the determination to order a public meeting will be made after a private meeting has been held; however, where appropriate a public meeting may be convened immediately after receipt of the protest and the applicant's response, if any. Additional information may be requested prior to making a determination to convene a public meeting. In these cases, a determination will be made within ten days from the date all relevant information is received. The public meeting will be scheduled as soon as possible, but in no event, later than 30 days after the decision to hold the proceeding is made. The purpose of the public meeting will be to elicit information, to clarify factual issues related to the application and to provide an opportunity for interested individuals to provide testimony. The Board has adopted the following guidelines to be used for convening public meetings, although specific provisions may be altered by the General Counsel if circumstances warrant.

(1) Requesting a public meeting. A meeting may be requested by a person or an organization objecting to the application during the comment period, and by the applicant during the period within which it must respond to comments. Such a request must be timely and in writing.

(i) A protest does not have to be filed in a legal brief or other format in order for a public meeting to be granted. The Community Affairs Officer at the Reserve Bank will be available to assist any member of the public regarding the types of information generally included in protests; the format generally used by protestants; and any other specific questions about the procedures of the Federal Reserve System regarding protested applications.

(ii) In general, a protest should identify the protestant, state the basis for objection to approval of the application, and provide available written evidence to support the objection. Objections to approval of an application must relate to the factors that the Board is authorized to consider in acting on an application. Generally, these factors relate to the financial and managerial resources of the companies and banks involved, the effects of the proposal on competition, and the convenience and needs of the communities to be served by the companies and banks involved. If a public meeting is requested, the protest should indicate that there are members of the public who wish to speak on the issues in a public forum.

(iii) The protest will be transmitted by the Reserve Bank to the applicant, and the applicant will generally be allowed eight business days to respond in writing to the protest.

(2) Arranging the public meeting. Public meetings will be arranged and presided over by a representative of the Federal Reserve System ("Presiding Officer"). In determining the time and place for the public meeting, such factors as convenience to the parties, the number of people expected to attend the meeting, access to public transportation and possible after-hour security problems will be taken into account.

(3) Conducting the public meeting. Prior to the meeting, all necessary steps will be taken to ensure that the meeting is conducted appropriately, including scheduling of witnesses, submission of written materials and other arrangements. In conducting the public meeting the Presiding Officer will have the authority and discretion to ensure that the meeting proceeds in a fair and orderly manner. Generally, the public meeting will consist of opening and closing remarks by the Presiding Officer, a presentation by the protestant and a presentation by the applicant. An official transcript will be made of the proceedings and entered into the record. The conclusion of the public meeting normally marks the close of the public portion of the record on the application.

(4) Notification of Board decision on the application. After a decision is made on the application, and the applicant is notified of the decision, staff will notify the protestant by telephone. This notification will be confirmed promptly in writing. As set forth in § 262.3(k) of the Board's Rules of Procedure (12 CFR 262.3(k)) or § 265.3 of the Board's Rules Regarding Delegation of Authority (12 CFR 265.3), a party to the application may request reconsideration of the Board's order, or review of the Reserve Bank's decision.

§ 263.1 Authority, purpose, and scope.

(a) Authority. This part is issued under sections 11(i), 19, and 29 of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended (12 U.S.C. 248(i), 504, and 505); sections 5(b) and 8(b) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1844(b) and 1847(b)); section 106(b)(2)(F) of the Bank Holding Company Act Amendments of 1970, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1972(2)(F)); sections 7(j) and 8 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1817(j) and 1818); section 13 of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3108); and section 15B(c)(5) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended (15 U.S.C. 78o-4).

(b) Purpose and scope. This subpart prescribes rules of practice and procedure governing adjudications as to which a formal hearing is required by law or is for other reason ordered by the Board. These adjudications include:

(1) Suspension of a member bank from the use of credit facilities of the Federal Reserve System under section 4 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 301);

(2) Termination of a bank's membership in the Federal Reserve System under section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 327);

(3) Issuance of a cease-and-desist order under section 11 of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. 21);

(4) Issuance of a cease-and-desist order or a removal or suspension order under section 8 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1818);

(5) Adjudications under sections 2, 3 or 4 of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1841, 1842, or 1843);

(6) Issuance of a divestiture order against a bank holding company under section 5(e) of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1844(e));

(7) Disapproval of a proposed acquisition of control of a State member bank or a bank holding company under section 7(j) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(j));

(8) Imposition of sanctions upon any municipal securities dealer for which the Board is the appropriate regulatory agency, or upon any person associated or seeking to become associated with such a municipal securities dealer, under section 15B(c)(5) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78o-4);

(9) Formal adjudications on bank merger applications under section 18(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1828(c)); and

(10) Assessment of a civil money penalty for a violation of any provision of: the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, as amended, or any order or regulation issued thereunder (12 U.S.C. 1847(b)); sections 19, 22, or 23A of the Federal Reserve Act, or any order or regulation issued thereunder (12 U.S.C. 504, 505); the terms of a final cease-and-desist order issued under the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1818(i)(2)); or the provisions of 106(b)(2) of the Bank Holding Company Act Amendments of 1970, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1972(2)(F)).

[44 FR 56687, Oct. 2, 1979]

§ 263.2 Definitions.

As used in this part:

(a) "Member bank" means any bank that is a member of the Federal Reserve System.

(b) "Party" means a person or agency named or admitted as a party, or any person or agency who has filed a written request and is entitled as of right to be admitted as a party. A person or agency may be admitted for a limited purpose without being regarded as a party.

(c) "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

[44 FR 56687, Oct. 2, 1979]

§ 263.3 Appearance and practice before the Board.

(a) Power of attorney and notice of appearance. Any person who is a member in good standing of the bar of the highest court of any State or of the District of Columbia, or of any possession, territory, or Commonwealth of the United States, may represent others before the Board upon filing with the Secretary a written declaration that he is currently qualified as provided in this paragraph, and is authorized to represent the particular party on whose behalf he acts. Any other person desiring to appear before or transact business with the Board in a representative capacity may be required to file with the Secretary a power of attorney showing his authority to act in such capacity, and he may be required to show to the satisfaction of the Board that he has the requisite qualifications. Attorneys and other representatives of parties to proceedings shall file a written notice of appearance with the Secretary or with the presiding officer.

(b) Conduct during hearings. All participants in a hearing, or a conference held in connection therewith, shall conduct themselves with dignity and in an orderly and ethical manner. The attorney or other representative of a party shall make every effort to restrain a client from improper conduct in connection with a proceeding. Improper language or conduct, refusal to comply with directions, continued use of dilatory tactics, or refusal to adhere to reasonable standards of orderly and ethical conduct constitute grounds for immediate exclusion from the proceeding at the direction of the presiding officer.

[32 FR 11140, Aug. 1, 1967, as amended at 44 FR 56687, Oct. 2, 1979]

§ 263.4 Notice of hearing.

Whenever a hearing is ordered by the Board, notice of such hearing (together with a copy of any document incorporated therein by reference) shall be given by the Secretary or other designated officer acting for the Board to the party or parties to the proceeding and to the appropriate financial institution supervisory authority where required by law. The Board may give whatever additional notice is deemed appropriate in any given hearing. Such notice shall state the time, place, and nature of the hearing, the legal authority and jurisdiction under which the hearing is to be held, and the name and address of the presiding officer, if one has been designated, and shall also contain, or incorporate by appropriate reference, a statement of the matters of fact or law constituting the grounds for the hearing. Unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the Board, notice of any hearing shall be given not less than 20 days prior to the date set for hearing and shall be given general circulation by publication in the FEDERAL REGISTER and, where practical, by release to the press. The Board may amend a notice of hearing in any manner and to the extent consistent with provisions of applicable law.

§ 263.5 Answer.

(a) When required. In any notice of hearing issued by the Board, the Board may direct the party or parties afforded the hearing to file an answer to the allegations contained in the notice or referenced documents, and any party to any proceeding may file an answer. Except where a different period is provided by law or specified by the Board, a party directed to file an answer, or a party who elects to file an answer, shall file the same with the Secretary within 20 days after service upon him of the notice of hearing.

(b) Requirements of answer; effect of failure to deny. An answer filed under this section shall specifically admit, deny, or state that the party does not have sufficient information to admit or deny each allegation in the notice of hearing. A statement of lack of information shall have the effect of a denial. Any allegation not denied shall be deemed to be admitted. When a party intends to deny only a part or a qualification of an allegation, he shall admit so much of it as is true and shall deny only the remainder.

(c) Admitted allegations. If a party filing an answer under this section elects not to contest the allegations of fact set forth in the notice of hearing or referenced documents, his answer shall consist of a statement that he admits all of the allegations to be true. Such an answer shall constitute a waiver of hearing as to the facts alleged, and together with the notice and any referenced documents will provide a record basis on which the presiding officer shall file with the Secretary his recommended decision and his findings of fact and conclusions of law. Such admission shall not constitute a waiver of the right of such party to file with the Secretary exceptions to such recommended decision, findings and conclusions.

(d) Effect of failure to answer. Failure of a party to file an answer required by this section within the time provided shall constitute a waiver of his right to appear and contest the allegations of the notice of hearing and shall constitute authorization for the presiding officer, without further notice to the party, to find the facts to be as alleged in the notice and to file with the Secretary a recommended decision containing such findings and appropriate conclusions. The Board or the presiding officer may, for cause shown, permit the filing of an answer after the prescribed time.

(e) Opportunity for informal settlement. Any interested party may at any time submit to the Secretary, for consideration by the Board, written offers or proposals for settlement of a proceeding, without prejudice to the rights of the parties. No offer or proposal shall be admissible in evidence over the objection of any party in any hearing in connection with such proceeding. The foregoing provisions of this paragraph shall not preclude settlement of any proceeding through the regular adjudicatory process by the filing of an answer as provided in paragraph (c) of this section, or by the submission of the case to the presiding officer on a stipulation of facts and an agreed order.

§ 263.6 Conduct of hearings.

(a) Designation of presiding officer. (1) When evidence is to be taken in a hearing, the Board or, when duly designated by the Board for that purpose, one or more of its members, an administrative law judge, or other hearing officer(s) lawfully appointed by the Board may preside at the hearing. Unless otherwise provided in the notice of hearing, all hearings for the taking of evidence shall be conducted as hereinafter provided.

(2) Except as authorized by law, the presiding officer shall not be responsible to, or subject to the supervision or direction of, any officer, employee, or agent of the Board engaged in the performance of investigative or prosecuting functions.

(3) A designated presiding officer who deems himself disqualified may at any time withdraw. Upon receipt of a timely and sufficient affidavit of personal bias or disqualification of such presiding officer, the Board will rule on the matter as a part of the record and decision in the case.

(b) Authority of presiding officer. All hearings governed by this part shall be conducted in accordance with the provisions of chapter 5 of title 5 of the United States Code. The presiding officer shall have complete charge of the hearing, and he shall have the duty to conduct it in a fair and impartial manner and to take all necessary action to avoid delay in the disposition of proceedings. Such officer shall have all powers necessary to that end, including but not limited to the following:

(1) To administer oaths and affirmations;

(2) To issue subpenas and subpenas duces tecum, as authorized by law, and to revoke, quash, or modify any such subpena;

(3) To receive relevant evidence and to rule upon the admission of evidence and offers of proof;

(4) To take or cause depositions to be taken;

(5) To regulate the course of the hearing and the conduct of the parties and their counsel;

(6) To hold conferences for the settlement or simplification of issues or for any other proper purpose; and

(7) To consider and rule upon, as justice may require, all procedural and other motions appropriate in an adversary proceeding, except that a presiding officer other than the Board shall not have power to decide any motion to dismiss the proceedings or other motion which would result in final determination of the merits of the proceedings.

Without limitations on the foregoing, the presiding officer shall, subject to the provisions of this part, have all the authority set forth in section 556(c) of title 5 of the United States Code.

(c) Prehearing conference. The presiding officer may, on his own initiative or at the request of Board counsel or of any party, direct all parties or counsel to meet with him at a specified time and place prior to the hearing, or to submit suggestions to him in writing, for the purpose of considering any or all of the following:

(1) Simplification and clarification of the issues;

(2) Stipulations and admissions of fact and of the content and authenticity of documents;

(3) Matters of which official notice will be taken; and

(4) Such other matters as may aid in the orderly disposition of the proceeding, including disclosure of the names of witnesses and of documents or other physical exhibits which will be introduced in evidence in the course of the proceeding. Such conferences, in the discretion of the presiding officer, need not be recorded, but the presiding officer shall enter in the record an order which recites the results of the conference. Such order, a copy of which shall be served on each party and Board counsel, shall include the officer's rulings upon matters considered at the conference, together with appropriate directions, if any, to the parties and Board counsel; and such order shall control the subsequent course of the proceedings, unless modified at the hearing, for good cause found, by appropriate order of the presiding officer.

(d) Attendance at hearings; representation of the Board. Unless otherwise specifically provided by statute or by rule of the Board, a hearing shall ordinarily be private and shall be attended only by the parties, their representatives or counsel, representatives of the Board, witnesses while testifying, and other persons having an official interest in the proceedings: Provided, however, That on written request by a party or a representative of the Board, or on the Board's own motion, the Board, in its discretion and to the extent permitted by law, may permit other persons to attend or may order the hearing to be public. In connection with any such hearing or proceeding related thereto, the Board may designate as board counsel an attorney from its staff or other attorney who shall represent the Board. For the purposes of these Rules, any attorney so designated is referred to as "Board counsel." In case of adjudication other than initial licensing proceedings, neither Board counsel nor any officer or employee of the Board who has engaged in the performance of any investigative or prosecutive function in the case, or a factually related case, may participate in or advise as to the presiding officer's recommended decision or the Board's decision, except as witness or counsel in such hearing or related proceeding. Proceedings with respect to applications for initial licenses shall include, but not be limited to, applications for Board approval under section 3 of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 (12 U.S.C. 1842) and such proceedings as may be ordered by the Board with respect to applications under section 18(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1828(c)). In such initial licensing proceedings, Board counsel shall represent the Board in a nonadversary capacity for the purpose of developing for the record information relevant to the issues to be determined by the presiding officer and the Board.

(e) Transcript of testimony. Hearings shall be recorded and transcripts will be made available at prescribed rates to any party and, in the event the hearing is public, to any other interested persons. The presiding officer shall have authority to order the record corrected, either upon motion to correct, upon stipulation of the parties or, following notice to the parties, upon the presiding officer's initiative. The transcript of testimony taken at any hearing, duly certified by the reporter, together with all exhibits, papers and requests, briefs or memoranda of law filed in connection with the hearing shall be filed in duplicate with the Secretary by the presiding officer. The Secretary shall promptly serve notice upon each of the parties of such filing and transmittal. Following the service of notice of filing of the record, the record shall be returned to the presiding officer.

(f) Continuances and changes or extensions of time and changes of place of hearing. Except as otherwise expressly provided by law, the Board may by the notice of hearing or subsequent order provide time limits different from those specified in this part, and may, on its own initiative or for good cause shown, change or extend any time limit prescribed by these rules or the notice of hearing, or change the time or place for beginning any hearing hereunder. The presiding officer may, for good cause shown, and as permitted by law, change the time or place for beginning such hearing and may continue or adjourn a hearing from time to time or from place to place. Extensions of time for making any filing or performing any act required or allowed to be done within a specified time in the course of a hearing may be granted by the presiding officer for good cause shown.

(g) Call for further evidence, oral argument, briefs, reopening of hearing. The presiding officer may call for the production of further evidence upon any issue, may permit oral argument, the submission of briefs at the hearing and, upon appropriate notice, may reopen any hearing at any time prior to the certification of his recommended decision to the Secretary. The Board may reopen the record at any time permitted by law.

(h) Ex parte communications. For the purposes of this section, "ex parte communication" means an oral or written communication that is not on the public record and for which reasonable prior notice to all parties has not been given, but does not include requests for status reports. The following prohibitions against any ex parte communication apply from the time of issuance of a notice for a formal hearing in the proceeding or from the time the person responsible for the communication has knowledge that a notice for a hearing will be issued.

(1) No member of the Board nor the presiding officer nor any other person who is, or may reasonably be expected to be, involved in the decisional process in a proceeding conducted under this subpart shall make, or knowingly cause to be made, an ex parte communication relevant to the merits of the proceeding to any interested person outside the Federal Reserve System. Any member of the Board, the presiding officer, or other person who receives, makes, or knowingly causes to be made any ex parte communication prohibited by this paragraph shall place on the public record of the proceeding:

(i) All such written communications;

(ii) Memoranda stating the substance of all such oral communications; and

(iii) All written responses, and memoranda stating the substance of all oral responses, to the materials described in paragraphs (h)(1) (i) and (ii) of this section.

(2) No interested person outside the Federal Reserve System shall make, or knowingly cause to be made, an ex parte communication relevant to the merits of a proceeding conducted under this subpart to any member of the Board, to the presiding officer or to anyone who is, or may reasonably be expected to be, involved in the decisional process in the proceeding. Upon receipt of a communication in violation of this paragraph, the Board or the presiding officer may require the party responsible for the ex parte communication to show cause why that party's claim or interest in the proceeding should not be dismissed, denied, disregarded, or otherwise adversely affected on account of the violation. To the extent consistent with the interests of justice and the policy of the statute under which the hearing is being held, a knowing violation of this paragraph may constitute sufficient grounds for a decision adverse to the responsible party.

(3) Except as authorized by law, the presiding officer shall not consult any person or party on any fact in issue unless notice and opportunity is given for all parties to participate.

§ 263.7 Subpenas.

(a) Issuance. Where authorized by law, subpenas for the attendance of witnesses or for the production of documentary evidence, unless directed by the Board upon its own motion, will issue only upon application in writing to the presiding officer or, in the event he is unavailable, to the Board, except that during sessions of a hearing, such application may be made orally on the record before the presiding officer. The person seeking the subpena may be required, as a condition precedent to the issuance of the subpena, to show the general relevance and reasonable scope of the testimony or other evidence sought. In the event the presiding officer or the Board, after consideration of all the circumstances, determines that the requested subpena or any of its terms is unreasonable, oppressive, excessive in scope, unduly burdensome, or otherwise improper, he or it may refuse to issue the subpena, or issue it only upon such conditions as fairness requires.

(b) Motion to quash. Any person to whom a subpena is directed may, prior to the time specified therein for compliance, but in no event more than 5 days after the date of service of such subpena, with notice to the party requesting the subpena, apply to the presiding officer or, if he is unavailable, to the Board, to revoke, quash, or modify such subpena, accompanying such application with a statement of the reasons therefor.

(c) Service of subpena. (1) Service of a subpena may be made by personal service or, except as otherwise required by law, by registered mail addressed to the last known address of the person named in the subpena and by tendering the fees for one day's attendance and mileage as specified in paragraph (d) of this section. In making personal service of a subpena, the original shall be exhibited to, and a copy thereof left with, the person named in the subpena. Service of the subpena and tender of fees to a natural person may also be made by leaving a copy of the subpena and fees at the person's dwelling place or usual place of abode with someone of suitable age or discretion. When the person to be served is not a natural person, delivery of a copy of the subpena and tender of the fees may be effected by handing them to a registered agent for service or to an officer, director, or agent in charge of any office of the person, or by mailing them by registered mail to such representative at that person's last known address.

(2) Service made by a United States marshal or his deputy shall be evidenced by that person's return on the original subpena. If made by any other person, that person shall make affidavit thereto, describing the manner in which service was made, and return the affidavit on or with the original subpena. In case of failure to make service, the reasons for the failure shall be stated on the original subpena. The original subpena, bearing or accompanied by the required return, affidavit, or statement, shall be returned without delay to the Secretary or, if so directed on the subpena, to the presiding officer before whom the person named in the subpena is required to appear.

(d) Attendance of witnesses. (1) The attendance of witnesses and the production of documents pursuant to a subpena issued in connection with a hearing under this subpart may be required from any State or territory or any other place subject to the jurisdiction of the United States at any designated place where the hearing is being conducted. Any person who is compelled to appear and testify, or who appears and testifies by request or permission, may be accompanied, represented, or advised by counsel.

(2) Subpenaed witnesses shall be paid the same fees and mileage that are paid witnesses in the district courts of the United States. When a subpena is issued upon the Board's own motion or at the request of Board counsel, fees and mileage need not be tendered at the time of service of the subpena. Fees required by this paragraph shall be paid by the person upon whose application the subpena is issued.

[32 FR 11140, Aug. 1, 1967, as amended at 44 FR 56688, Oct. 2, 1979]

§ 263.8 Depositions.

(a) When permissible. The Board or presiding officer, upon its or his own motion or upon appropriate application by a party to the proceeding or Board counsel, may, by subpena or subpena duces tecum, order evidence to be taken by deposition at any stage of any proceeding in which such depositions are authorized. Depositions may be taken before the presiding officer or before any person designated in the subpena and having the power to administer oaths.

(b) Notice and application. Unless notice is waived, no deposition shall be taken except after at least 5 days' written notice to Board counsel and the parties to the proceeding or their attorneys of record and to the Board. In such notice and application to take evidence by deposition, the party desiring to take the deposition shall state the name and post office address of the witness, the subject matter concerning which the witness is expected to testify, its relevance, the time, place, and the name and post office address of the person before whom it is desired the deposition be taken, and the reason why such deposition should be taken. Thereupon, the presiding officer or the Board may, in his or its discretion, by subpena or subpena duces tecum, order the oral deposition to be taken. Such subpena will name the witness whose deposition is to be taken and specify the time when, the place where, and the person before whom the witness is to testify, but such time and place, and the person before whom the deposition is ordered to be taken, may or may not be the same as those named in the notice and application. Notice of the issuance of such subpena shall be served upon each of the parties a reasonable time in advance of the time fixed for the taking of the deposition, but in no event less than 5 days in advance of such time.

(c) Procedure on deposition; objections. (1) Each witness testifying upon oral deposition shall be duly sworn or shall affirm, and Board counsel and any adverse party shall have the right to cross-examine the witness. Objections to questions or documents shall be in short form, stating the grounds of objection relied upon. The person recording the deposition shall not have any authority to rule upon questions of competency, materiality, or relevancy of evidence. Evidence objected to shall be taken subject to the objection. Failure to object to questions or evidence shall not be deemed a waiver unless the ground of the objection is one which might have been obviated or removed if presented at the time of the question or submission of evidence.

(2) All questions, answers, and objections (but not including argument or debate) shall be recorded by, or under the direction of, the officer before whom the deposition is taken. The deposition shall be subscribed to by the witness, unless the parties by stipulation waive the signing or unless the witness is physically unable to sign, cannot be found, or refuses to sign. The person recording the deposition shall certify the transcript of the deposition as true and complete. If the deposition is not subscribed to by the witness, the person recording the testimony shall state this fact and the reason therefor on the record.

(3) The officer before whom the deposition is taken shall promptly deliver, or send by registered mail, the original of the deposition, together with the original of all exhibits, to the Secretary of the Board unless otherwise directed in the order authorizing the taking of the deposition or in the notice of its issuance. Interested parties shall make their own arrangements with the person recording the testimony for copies of the deposition and exhibits.

(d) Introduction as evidence. Subject to appropriate rulings by the presiding officer on such objections and answers as were noted at the time the deposition was taken or as would be valid were the witness personally present and testifying, the deposition or any part thereof may be received in evidence by the presiding officer. Only such part of a deposition as is received in evidence at a hearing shall constitute a part of the record in such proceeding upon which a decision may be based.

(e) Payment of fees. Deponents whose oral depositions are taken and the reporter taking the same shall be entitled to the same fees as are paid for like services in the courts of the United States, which fees shall be paid by the person upon whose application the deposition is taken.

[32 FR 11140, Aug. 1, 1967, as amended at 44 FR 56688, Oct. 2, 1979]

§ 263.9 Rules of evidence.

(a) Evidence. Every party shall have the right to present his case or defense by oral and documentary evidence, to submit rebuttal evidence and to conduct such cross-examination as may be required for a full and true disclosure of the facts. Irrelevant, immaterial, or unduly repetitious evidence shall be excluded.

(b) Objections. Objections to the admission or exclusion of evidence shall be in short form, stating the grounds of objections relied upon, and the transcript shall not include argument except as ordered by the presiding officer. Rulings on such objections and on any other matters shall be a part of the transcript. Failure to object to admission or exclusion of evidence or to any ruling shall be considered a waiver of such objection, but no exception to a ruling on an objection need be noted before the presiding officer in order to urge the same in the consideration of the matter by the Board.

(c) Stipulations. Independently of the orders or rulings issued as provided by § 263.6(c), the parties and Board counsel may stipulate as to any relevant matters of fact or the authenticity of any relevant documents. Such stipulations may be received in evidence at a hearing, and when so received shall be binding on the parties and Board counsel with respect to the matters therein stipulated.

(d) Official notice. All matters officially noticed by the presiding officer shall appear on the record.

§ 263.10 Motions.

(a) In writing. An application or request for an order or ruling not otherwise specifically provided for in this part shall be made by motion. After a presiding officer has been designated and before the filing with the Secretary of his recommended decision, pursuant to § 263.11, such applications or requests shall be addressed to and filed with him. At all other times motions shall be addressed to the Board and filed with the Secretary. Motions shall be in writing, except that a motion made at a session of a hearing may be made orally upon the record unless the presiding officer directs that it be reduced to writing. All written motions shall state with particularity the order or relief sought and the grounds therefor. When a motion is addressed to the presiding officer, an original and two copies of such motion shall be filed.

(b) Objections. Within 5 days after service of any written motion, or within such other period as may be fixed by the presiding officer or the Board, any party may file a written answer or objection to such motion, together with two copies thereof. The moving party shall have no right to reply, except as permitted by the presiding officer or the Board. The presiding officer or the Board, in his or its discretion, may waive the requirements of this section as to motions for extensions of time, and may rule upon such motions ex parte.

(c) Oral argument; briefs. No oral argument will be heard on motions except as otherwise directed by the presiding officer or the Board. Written memoranda or briefs may be filed with motions or answers or objections, stating the points and authorities relied upon in support of the position taken.

(d) Rulings on motions. Except as otherwise provided in this part, the presiding officer shall rule upon all motions properly addressed to him and upon such other motions as the Board may direct, except that if the presiding officer finds that a prompt decision by the Board on a motion is essential to the proper conduct of the proceeding, he may refer such motion to the Board for decision. The Board shall rule upon all motions properly submitted to it for decision.

(e) Appeal from rulings on motions. All motions and answers or objections and rulings thereon shall become part of the record. The rulings of a presiding officer on any motion may not be appealed to the Board prior to its consideration of the presiding officer's recommended decision, findings, and conclusions except by special permission of the Board, but shall be considered by the Board in reviewing the record. Requests to the Board for special permission to appeal from such rulings of the presiding officer shall be filed promptly, in writing, and shall briefly state the grounds relied on.

(f) Continuation of hearing. Unless otherwise ordered by the presiding officer or the Board, the hearing shall continue pending the determination of any motion by the Board.

(g) Closing of hearing. The record of the hearing shall be closed by announcement to that effect by the presiding officer when the taking of evidence has been concluded. In the discretion of the presiding officer, the record may be closed as of a future date in order to permit the admission into the record, under circumstances determined by the presiding officer, of exhibits to be prepared.

§ 263.11 Proposed findings and conclusions and recommended decision.

(a) Proposed findings and conclusions and supporting briefs. Board counsel or any party who may wish to file with the presiding officer proposed findings and conclusions of law shall file the same, with two copies thereof, within 15 days after the receipt of written notice from the Secretary advising that the transcript has been filed with the Secretary. Proposed findings and conclusions shall be supported by citation to any relevant authorities and by page references to any relevant portions of the record and, in addition, may be accompanied by a brief in support thereof. In initial licensing proceedings, in lieu of proposed findings and conclusions of law, and within such time as the presiding officer may allow, Board counsel may submit comments with respect to the evidence of record and/or proposed findings and conclusions of law submitted by any party. All such proposed findings and conclusions of law, briefs, and other submissions shall become part of the record.

(b) Recommended decision and filing of record. In a proceeding in which the Board or one or more of its members has not presided at the reception of evidence, the presiding officer shall, within 45 days after the expiration of the time allowed for the filing of proposed findings and conclusions, or within such other time as the Board for good cause shall prescribe, file with the Secretary and certify to the Board for decision the entire record of the hearing, which shall include his recommended decision and findings of fact and conclusions of law, the transcript, exhibits (including on request of any of the parties any exhibits excluded from evidence or tenders of proof), exceptions, rulings, and all briefs and memoranda filed in connection with the hearing. Promptly upon such filing the Secretary shall serve upon each party to the proceeding a copy of the presiding officer's recommended decision, and findings and conclusions.

(c) Board as presiding officer. In proceedings in which the Board or one or more of its members has presided at the reception of evidence, the presiding officer's recommended decision, findings of fact, and conclusions of law will be omitted. In such proceedings the proposed findings and conclusions of law, briefs, and other submissions permitted under paragraph (a) of this section shall be filed with the Secretary for consideration by the Board.

§ 263.12 Exceptions.

(a) Filing. Within 15 days after service of the recommended decision and findings and conclusions of the presiding officer, or such further time as the Board for good cause shall determine, any party or Board counsel may file with the Secretary exceptions thereto or to any part thereof, or to the failure of the presiding officer to make any recommendation, finding, or conclusion, or to the admission or exclusion of evidence, or other ruling of the presiding officer, supported by such brief as may appear advisable. In any proceeding where the Board or one or more of its members is the presiding officer, the provisions of this section will not be applicable.

(b) Waiver. Failure to file exceptions to the recommended decision of the presiding officer or any portion thereof, or to his failure to adopt a proposed finding or conclusion, or the admission or exclusion of evidence or other ruling of the presiding officer, within the time prescribed in paragraph (a) of this section, shall be deemed to be a waiver of objection.

§ 263.13 Briefs.

(a) Contents. All briefs shall be confined to the particular matters in issue. Each proposed finding, conclusion, or exception which is briefed shall be supported by a concise supporting statement or by citation of relevant statutes, regulations, decisions, or other authorities and by page reference of relevant portions of the record or recommended decisions of the presiding officer. If the exception relates to the admission or exclusion of evidence, the substance of the evidence admitted or excluded shall be set forth in the brief with appropriate page references to the transcript.

(b) Answering briefs. Answering briefs may be filed within 10 days after the service of briefs and shall be confined to matters in the original briefs of opposing parties. Further briefs may be filed with the presiding officer only with his permission or that of the Board, and may be filed with the Board only with its permission.

§ 263.14 Oral argument before the Board.

Upon its own initiative, or upon written request by any party or Board counsel, the Board, in its discretion, may order the matter to be set down for oral argument before the Board or one or more members thereof. Any request for oral argument by a party filing exceptions shall be made within the time prescribed for filing such exceptions, or by any other party, within the time prescribed for the filing of an answering brief. Oral argument before the Board shall be recorded unless otherwise ordered by the Board.

§ 263.15 Decision of Board.

Appropriate members of the Board's staff who are not engaged in the performance of investigative or prosecuting functions in the case, or in a factually related case, may advise and assist the Board in the consideration of the case and in the preparation of appropriate documents for its disposition. Copies of the decision and order of the Board shall be served by the Secretary upon the parties to the proceedings and furnished to such other persons as the Board may direct or the law may require.

§ 263.16 Filing papers.

Recommended decisions, exceptions, briefs and other papers required to be filed with the Board or Secretary in any proceedings shall be filed with the Secretary, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Washington, D.C. 20551. Any such papers may be sent to the Secretary by mail or express but must be received in the office of the Board in Washington, D.C., within the time limit for such filing.

§ 263.17 Service.

(a) By the Board. All documents or papers required to be served by the Board shall be served by the Secretary unless some other person shall be designated for such purpose by the Board. Such service, except for service on Board counsel, shall be made by personal service or by registered mail on the attorney or representative of record of the party, addressed to the last known address as shown on the records of the Board, provided that if there is no attorney or representative of record, such service shall be made upon such party at the last known address as shown on the records of the Board. Such service may also be made in such other manner reasonably calculated to give actual notice as the Board may by regulation or otherwise provide.

(b) By the parties. All documents or papers filed in a proceeding under this part shall be served by the party filing the same upon Board counsel and the attorneys or representatives of record of all other parties, or, if any party is not so represented, then upon such party. Such service may be made by personal service or by registered, certified, or regular first-class mail addressed to the last known address of such parties, or their attorneys or representatives of record. All such documents or papers, when tendered to the Board or the presiding officer for filing, shall contain a certificate of service.

§ 263.18 Copies.

Unless otherwise specifically provided in the notice of hearing, an original and seven copies of all documents and papers required or permitted to be filed or served upon the Secretary under this part shall be furnished to the Secretary, except that an original and only one copy of the transcript of testimony and exhibits shall be filed with the Secretary by the presiding officer. All documents and papers filed with the presiding officer shall be filed in duplicate.

§ 263.19 Computing time.

(a) General rule. In computing any period of time prescribed or allowed by this part, the date of the act, even or default from which the designated period of time begins to run is not to be included. The last day so computed is to be included, unless it is a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday in the District of Columbia, in which event the period shall run until the end of the next day which is neither a Saturday, Sunday, nor legal holiday. Intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays shall be included in the computation unless the time within which the act is to be performed is 10 days or less, in which event Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays shall not be included. Half holidays shall not be considered as holidays.

(b) Service by mail. Whenever any party has the right or is required to do some act within a period of time prescribed in this part, after the service upon him of any document or other paper of any kind, and such service is made by mail, 3 days shall be added to the prescribed period from the date when the matter served is deposited in the U.S. mail.

§ 263.20 Documents in proceedings confidential.

Unless and until otherwise ordered by the Board or unless otherwise provided by statute or by Board regulation, the notice of hearing, the transcript, the proposed findings and conclusions, the recommended decision of the presiding officer, exceptions thereto, the findings and conclusions of the Board and other papers which are filed in connection with any hearing shall not be made public, and shall be for the confidential use only of the Board and its staff, the presiding officer, the parties and, where appropriate, other supervising authorities.

§ 263.21 Formal requirements as to papers filed.

(a) Form. All papers filed under this subpart shall be printed, typewritten, or otherwise reproduced. All copies shall be clear and legible.

(b) Signature. All papers shall be dated and signed by the party filing the same, or his duly authorized agent or attorney, or Board counsel, and, except in the case of Board counsel, shall indicate the address of the signer.

(c) Caption. All papers filed must include at the head thereof, or on a title page, the name of the Board and of the filing party, the title of the proceeding, and the subject of the particular paper.

Subpart B—Rules and Procedures for Assessment and Collection of Civil Penalties

SOURCE: 44 FR 56689, Oct. 2, 1979, unless otherwise noted.

§ 263.22 Purpose and scope.

The rules and procedures specified in this subpart and in Subpart A are applicable to proceedings by the Board to assess and collect civil money penalties for a violation of:

(a) The terms of a final cease-and-desist order issued under the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1818(i)(2));

(b) The provisions of sections 19, 22, or 23A of the Federal Reserve Act, or any regulation or order issued thereunder, (12 U.S.C. 504 and 505);

(c) Any provision of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, as amended, or any regulation or order issued thereunder, (12 U.S.C. 1847(b); or

(d) The provisions of section 106(b)(2) of the Bank Holding Company Act Amendments of 1970, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1972(2)(F)). The rules and procedures of this subpart do not apply to the assessment of a civil penalty for a violation of the Change in Bank Control Act, 12 U.S.C. 1817(j). A civil money penalty for a violation of that statute may be assessed in accordance with the procedures set forth in 12 U.S.C. 1817(j)(15).

§ 263.23 Notice of assessment of civil penalty.

Civil penalty proceedings commence with the issuance by the Board of a notice of assessment of civil penalty. The notice of assessment shall state:

(a) The legal authority for the assessment;

(b) The amount of the civil penalty being assessed;

(c) The date by which the civil penalty shall be paid;

(d) The matters of fact or law constituting the grounds for assessment of the civil penalty;

(e) The right of the person being assessed to a formal hearing to challenge the assessment; and

(f) The time limit to request such a formal hearing. The notice of assessment may be served upon the person being assessed by personal service, by registered or certified mail to the person's last known address, or by other appropriate means. Such service constitutes issuance of the notice.

§ 263.24 Opportunity for informal proceeding.

In the sole discretion of the Board's General Counsel, the General Counsel may, prior to the issuance by the Board of a notice of assessment of civil penalty, advise the affected person that the issuance of a notice of assessment of civil penalty is being considered and the reasons and authority for the proposed assessment. The General Counsel may provide the person an opportunity to present written materials or request a conference with members of the Board's staff to show that the penalty should not be assessed or, if assessed, should be reduced in amount.

§ 263.25 Relevant considerations for assessment of civil penalty.

In determining the amount of the penalty to be assessed, the Board will take into account the appropriateness of the penalty with respect to the financial resources and good faith of the person charged, the gravity of the violation, the history of previous violations, the economic benefit derived by the person from the violation, and such other matters as justice may require.

§ 263.26 Request for formal hearing on assessment.

A person being assessed may request a formal hearing to challenge the assessment of a civil penalty. The request must be made within ten business days after issuance of the notice of assessment, and any such request must be filed in writing with the Secretary, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Washington, D.C. 20551. If a request for a formal hearing is not filed within this ten-day period, the person being assessed shall be deemed to have waived the right to a formal hearing, and the notice of assessment shall constitute a final and unappealable assessment order.

§ 263.27 Hearing order on assessment.

After the receipt of a timely request for a hearing with respect to the assessment of a civil penalty, the Secretary will promptly issue an order directing a hearing to commence within 30 days from the date of the hearing order at such place as the Secretary may designate with due regard for the interests of all parties. The hearing order may require the person requesting the hearing to file an answer as prescribed in § 263.5 of Subpart A. The procedures of the Administrative Procedure Act (5 U.S.C. 554-557) and Subpart A of these Rules shall apply to the hearing.

§ 263.28 Assessment order.

(a) In the event of consent of the parties concerned to an assessment, or if, upon the record made at a hearing ordered under this subpart, the Board finds that the grounds for having assessed the penalty have been established, the Board may issue an order of assessment of civil penalty. In its order, the Board may reduce the amount of the penalty specified in the notice of assessment. Any party afforded a hearing under this subpart who does not appear at the hearing (personally or by a duly authorized representative) shall be considered to have waived the right to a formal hearing and to have consented to the assessment of the civil penalty specified in the notice of assessment.

(b) An assessment order is effective immediately upon issuance, or upon such other date as may be specified therein, and shall remain effective and enforceable until it is stayed, modified, terminated, or set aside by action of the Board or a reviewing court.

(c) An assessment order may be served by personal service, by registered or certified mail to the last known address of the person being assessed, or by other appropriate means.

§ 263.29 Payment of civil penalty.

(a) The date designated in the notice of assessment for payment of the civil penalty will normally be 60 days from the issuance of the notice. If, however, the Board finds, in a specific case, that the purposes of the authorizing statute would be better served if the 60 day period is changed, the Board may shorten or lengthen the period or make the civil penalty payable immediately upon receipt of the notice of assessment. If a timely request for a formal hearing to challenge an assessment of civil penalty is filed, payment of the penalty shall not be required unless and until the board issues a final order of assessment following the hearing. If an assessment order is issued, it will specify the date by which the civil penalty should be paid or collected.

(b) Checks in payment of civil penalties should be made payable to the "Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System." Upon collection, the board shall forward the amount of the penalty to the Treasury of the United States.

Subpart C—Rules and Procedures Applicable to Suspension or Removal of a Bank Official Where a Felony is Charged or Proven

SOURCE: 44 FR 56690, Oct. 2, 1979, unless otherwise noted.

§ 263.30 Purpose and scope.

The rules and procedures set forth in this subpart apply to informal hearings afforded to any officer, director, or other person participating in the conduct of the affairs of a State member bank ("bank official"), who has been suspended or removed from office or prohibited from further participation in any manner in the conduct of the bank's affairs by a notice or order issued by the Board upon the grounds set forth in section 8(g) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1818(g)).

§ 263.31 Notice or order of suspension, removal, or prohibition.

(a) Grounds. The Board may suspend a bank official from office or prohibit a bank official from further participation in any manner in the conduct of a bank's affairs when the person is charged in any information, indictment, or complaint authorized by a United States attorney with the commission of, or participation in, a crime involving dishonesty or breach of trust that is punishable by imprisonment for a term exceeding one year under State or Federal law. The Board may remove a bank official from office or prohibit a bank official from further participation in any manner in the conduct of a bank's affairs when the person is convicted of such an offense and the conviction is not subject to further direct appellate review. The Board may suspend or remove a bank official or prohibit a bank official from participation in a bank's affairs in these circumstances if the Board finds that continued service to the bank or participation in its affairs by the bank official may pose a threat to the interests of the bank's depositors or may threaten to impair public confidence in the bank.

(b) Contents. The Board commences a suspension, removal, or prohibition action with the issuance, and service upon a bank official, of a notice of suspension from office, or order of removal from office, or notice or order of prohibition from participation in the bank's affairs. Such a notice or order shall indicate the basis for the suspension, removal, or prohibition and shall inform the bank official of the right to request in writing, within 30 days of service of the notice or order, an opportunity to show at an informal hearing that continued service to, or participation in the conduct of the affairs of, the bank does not and is not likely to pose a threat to the interests of the bank's depositors or threaten to impair public confidence in the bank. A notice of suspension or prohibition shall remain in effect until the criminal charge upon which the notice is based is finally disposed of or until the notice is terminated by the Board.

(c) Service. The notice or order shall be served upon the bank concerned, whereupon the bank official shall immediately cease service to the bank or further participation in any manner in the conduct of the affairs of the bank. A notice or order of suspension, removal, or prohibition may be served by personal service, by registered or certified mail to the last known address of the person being served, or by other appropriate means.

§ 263.32 Request for informal hearing.

A bank official who is suspended or removed from office or prohibited from participation in the bank's affairs may request an informal hearing. The request shall be filed in writing with the Secretary, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Washington, D.C. 20551. The request shall state with particularity the relief desired and the grounds therefor and shall include, when available, supporting evidence. If the bank official desires to present oral testimony or witnesses at the hearing, the bank official must include a request to do so with the request for informal hearing. The request to present oral testimony or witnesses should specify the names of the witnesses and the general nature of their expected testimony.

§ 263.33 Order for informal hearing.

(a) Issuance of hearing order. Upon receipt of a timely request for an informal hearing, the Secretary will promptly issue an order directing an informal hearing to commence within 30 days of the receipt of the request. At the request of the bank official, the Secretary may order the hearing to commence at a time more than 30 days after the receipt of the request for hearing. The hearing shall be held in Washington, D.C., or at such other place as may be designated by the Secretary, before presiding officers designated by the Secretary to conduct the hearing. The presiding officers normally will include representatives from the Board's Legal Division and Banking Supervision and Regulation Division and from the appropriate Federal Reserve Bank.

(b) Waiver of oral hearing. A bank official may waive in writing the official's right to an oral hearing and instead elect to have the matter determined by the Board solely on the basis of written submissions.

(c) Hearing procedures. (1) The bank official may appear at the hearing personally, through counsel, or personally with counsel. The bank official shall have the right to introduce relevant written materials and to present an oral argument. The bank official may introduce oral testimony and present witnesses only if expressly authorized by the Board or the Secretary. Neither the formal rules of evidence nor the adjudicative procedures of the Administrative Procedure Act (5 U.S.C. 554-557) or Subpart A of these Rules shall apply to the informal hearing ordered under this subpart unless the Board orders that they apply.

(2) The proceedings shall be recorded and a transcript shall be furnished to the bank official upon request and after the payment of the cost thereof. Witnesses need not be sworn, unless specifically requested by a party or the presiding officers. The presiding officers may ask questions of any witness.

(3) The presiding officers may order the record to be kept open for a reasonable period following the hearing (normally 5 business days), during which time additional submissions to the record may be made. Thereafter, the record shall be closed.

(d) Authority of presiding officers. In the course of or in connection with any proceeding under this subpart, the Board or the presiding officers are authorized to administer oaths and affirmations, to take or cause to be taken depositions, to issue, revoke, quash, or modify subpenas and subpenas duces tecum, and, for the enforcement thereof, to apply to an appropriate United States district court. All action relating to depositions and subpenas shall be in accordance with the rules provided in §§ 263.7 and 263.8 of Subpart A of these Rules.

(e) Recommendation of presiding officers. The presiding officers shall make a recommendation to the Board concerning the notice or order of suspension, removal, or prohibition within 20 calendar days following the close of the record on the hearing.

§ 263.34 Decision of the Board.

(a) Within 60 calendar days following the close of the record on the hearing, or receipt of written submissions where a hearing has been waived, the Board shall notify the bank official whether the notice of suspension or prohibition will be continued, terminated, or otherwise modified, or whether the order of removal or prohibition will be rescinded or otherwise modified. The notification shall contain a statement of the basis for any adverse decision by the Board. In the case of a decision favorable to the bank official, the Board shall take prompt action to rescind or otherwise modify the order of suspension, removal or prohibition.

(b) In deciding the question of suspension, removal, or prohibition under this subpart, the Board will not rule on the question of the guilt or innocence of the individual with respect to the crime with which the individual has been charged.

Subpart D—Procedures for Issuance and Enforcement of Directives To Maintain Adequate Capital

AUTHORITY: International Lending Supervision Act of 1983 ("ILSA"), 12 U.S.C. 3907; sec. 5(b), Bank Holding Company Act ("BHC Act"), 12 U.S.C. 1844(b); Financial Institutions Supervisory Act of 1966 ("FIS Act"), 12 U.S.C. 1818(b)-(n); and secs.9 and 11(i), Federal Reserve Act, 12 U.S.C. 248, 324, 329.

SOURCE:50 FR 16069, Apr.24, 1985, unless otherwise noted.

§ 263.35 Authority, purpose, and scope.

(a) Authority. This subpart is issued under authority of the International Lending Supervision Act of 1983 ("ILSA"), 12 U.S.C 3907, 3909; section 5(b) of the Bank Holding Company Act ("BHC Act"), 12 U.S.C. 1844(b); the Financial Institutions Supervisory Act of 1966 ("FIS Act"), 12 U.S.C. 1818(b)-(n); and sections 9 and 11(i) of the Federal Reserve Act, 12 U.S.C. 248, 324, 329.

(b) Purpose and scope. This subpart establishes procedures under which the Board may issue a directive or take other action to require a state member bank or a bank holding company to achieve and maintain adequate capital. The information collection requirement contained in this requlation has been approved by the Office of Management and Budget under the provisions of 44 U.S.C. Chapter 35 and has been assigned OMB No. 7100-0209.

§ 263.36 Definitions.

(a) "Bank holding company" means any company that controls a bank as defined in section 2 of the BHC Act, 12 U.S.C. 1841, and in the Board's Regulation Y (12 CFR 225.2(b)) or any direct or indirect subsidiary thereof other than a bank subsidiary as defined in section 2(c) of the BHC Act, 12 U.S.C. 1841(c), and in the Board's Regulation Y (12 CFR 225.2(a)).

(b) "Capital Adequacy Guidelines" means those guidelines for bank holding companies and state member banks contained in Appendix A to the Board's Regulation Y (12 CFR Part 225).

(c) "Directive" means a final order issued by the Board pursuant to ILSA (12 U.S.C. 3907(b)(2)) requiring a state member bank or bank holding company to increase capital to or maintain capital at the minimum level set forth in the Board's Capital Adequacy Guidelines or as otherwise established under procedures described in §263.40 of this subpart.

(d) "State member bank" means any state-chartered bank that is a member of the Federal Reserve System.

§ 263.37 Establishment of minimum capital levels.

The Board has established minimum capital levels for state member banks and bank holding companies in its Capital Adequacy Guidelines. The Board may set higher capital levels as necessary and appropriate for a particular state member bank or bank holding company based upon its financial condition, managerial resources, prospects, or similar factors, pursuant to the procedures set forth in §263.40 of this subpart.

§ 263.38 Procedures for requiring maintenance of adequate capital.

(a) Submission of capital improvement plan. Any state member bank or bank holding company that may not be in compliance with the Board's Capital Adequacy Guidelines on the date that this regulation becomes effective shall, within 90 days, submit to its appropriate Federal Reserve Bank for review a plan describing the means and the time schedule by which the bank or bank holding company shall achieve the required minimum level of capital.

(b) Issuance of directive—(1) Notice of intent to issue directive. If a state member bank or bank holding company is operating with less than the minimum level of capital established in the Board's Capital Adequacy Guidelines, or as otherwise established under the procedures described in § 263.40 of this subpart, the Board may issue and serve upon such state member bank or bank holding company written notice of the Board's intent to issue a directive to require the bank or bank holding company to achieve and maintain adequate capital within a specified time period.

(2) Contents of notice. The notice of intent to issue a directive shall include:

(i) The required minimum level of capital to be achieved or maintained by the institution;

(ii) Its current level of capital;

(iii) The proposed increase in capital needed to meet the minimum requirements;

(iv) The proposed date or schedule for meeting these minimum requirements;

(v) When deemed appropriate, specific details of a proposed plan for meeting the minimum capital requirements; and

(vi) The date for a written response by the bank or bank holding company to the proposed directive, which shall be at least 14 days from the date of issuance of the notice unless the Board determines a shorter period is necessary because of the financial condition of the bank or bank holding company.

(3) Response to notice. The bank or bank holding company may file a written response to the notice within the time period set by the Board. The response may include:

(i) An explanation why a directive should not be issued;

(ii) Any proposed modification of the terms of the directive;

(iii) Any relevant information, mitigating circumstances, documentation or other evidence in support of the institution's position regarding the proposed directive; and

(iv) The institution's plan for attaining the required level of capital.

(4) Failure to file response. Failure by the bank or bank holding company to file a written response to the notice of intent to issue a directive within the specified time period shall constitute a waiver of the opportunity to respond and shall constitute consent to the issuance of such directive.

(5) Board consideration of response. After considering the response of the bank or bank holding company, the Board may:

(i) Issue the directive as originally proposed or in modified form;

(ii) Determine not to issue a directive and so notify the bank or bank holding company; or

(iii) Seek additional information or clarification of the response by the bank or bank holding company.

(6) Contents of directive. Any directive issued by the Board may order the bank or bank holding company to:

(i) Achieve or maintain the minimum capital requirement established pursuant to the Board's Capital Adequacy Guidelines or the procedures in § 263.40 of this subpart by a certain date;

(ii) Adhere to a previously submitted plan or submit for approval and adhere to a plan for achieving the minimum capital requirement by a certain date;

(iii) Take other specific action as the Board directs to achieve the minimum capital levels, including requiring a reduction of assets or asset growth or restriction on the payment of dividends; or

(iv) A combination of the above actions.

(7) Request for reconsideration of directive. Any state member bank or bank holding company, upon a change in circumstances, may request the Board to reconsider the terms of a directive and may propose changes in the plan under which it is operating to meet the required minimum capital level. The directive and plan continue in effect while such request is pending before the Board.

§ 263.39 Enforcement of directive.

(a) Judicial and administrative remedies. (1) Whenever a bank or bank holding company fails to follow a directive issued under this subpart, or to submit or adhere to a capital adequacy plan as required by such directive, the Board may seek enforcement of the directive, including the capital adequacy plan, in the appropriate United State district court, pursuant to section 908 (b)(2)(B)(ii) of ILSA (12 U.S.C. 3907(b)(2)(B)(ii) and to section 8(i) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1818(i)), in the same manner and to the same extent as if the directive were a final cease and desist order.

(2) The Board, pursuant to section 910(d) of ILSA (12 U.S.C. 3909(d)), may also assess civil money penalties for violation of the directive against any bank or bank holding company and any officer, director, employee, agent, or other person participating in the conduct of the affairs of the bank or bank holding company, in the same manner and to the same extent as if the directive were a final cease and desist order.

(b) Other enforcement actions. A directive may be issued separately, in conjunction with, or in addition to any other enforcement actions available to the Board, including issuance of cease and desist orders, the approval or denial of applications or notices, or any other actions authorized by law.

(c) Consideration in application proceedings. In acting upon any application or notice submitted to the Board pursuant to any statute administered by the Board, the Board may consider the progress of a state member bank or bank holding company or any subsidiary thereof in adhering to any directive or capital adequacy plan required by the Board pursuant to this subpart, or by any other appropriate banking supervisory agency pursuant to ILSA. The Board shall consider whether approval or a notice of intent not to disapprove would divert earnings, diminish capital, or otherwise impede the bank or bank holding company in achieving its required minimum capital level or complying with its capital adequacy plan.

§ 263.40 Establishment of increased capital level for individual bank or bank holding company.

(a) Establishment of capital levels for individual institutions. The Board may establish a capital level higher than that specified in the Board's Capital Adequacy Guidelines for an individual bank or bank holding company pursuant to:

(1) A written agreement or memorandum of understanding between the Board or the appropriate Federal Reserve Bank and the bank or bank holding company;

(2) A temporary or final cease and desist order issued pursuant to section 8(b) or (c) of the FIS Act (12 U.S.C. 1818(b) or (c));

(3) A condition for approval of an application or issuance of a notice of intent not to disapprove a proposal;

(4) Or other similar means; or

(5) The procedures set forth in subsection (b) of this section.

(b) Procedure to establish higher capital requirement—(1) Notice. When the Board determines that capital levels above those in the Board's Capital Adequacy Guidelines may be necessary and appropriate for a particular bank or bank holding company under the circumstances, the Board shall give the bank or bank holding company notice of the proposed higher capital requirement and shall permit the bank or bank holding company an opportunity to comment upon the proposed capital level, whether it should be required and, if so, under what time schedule. The notice shall contain the Board's reasons for proposing a higher level of capital.

(2) Response. The bank or bank holding company shall be allowed at least 14 days to respond, unless the Board determines that a shorter period is necessary because of the financial condition of the bank or bank holding company. Failure by the bank or bank holding company to file a written response to the notice within the time set by the Board shall constitute a waiver of the opportunity to respond and shall constitute consent to issuance of a directive containing the required minimum capital level.

(3) Board decision. After considering the response of the institution, the Board may issue a written directive to the bank or bank holding company setting an appropriate capital level and the date on which this capital level will become effective. The Board may require the bank or bank holding company to submit and adhere to a plan for achieving such higher captial level as the Board may set.

(4) Enforcement of higher capital level. The Board may enforce the capital level established pursuant to the procedures described in this section and any plan submitted to achieve that capital level through the procedures set forth in § 263.39 of this subpart.

REGULATIONS

§ 264.735-1 Purpose.

The maintenance of unusually high standards of honesty, integrity, impartiality, and conduct by employees and special employees of the Board is essential to assure the proper performance of Board business and the maintenance of confidence by citizens in their Government. The avoidance of misconduct and conflicts of interest on the part of employees and special employees of the Board through use of informed judgment is indispensable to the maintenance of these standards. To accord with these concepts, this part prescribes standards of conduct and responsibilities, and governs statements reporting employment and financial interests of the Board's employees and special employees of the Board.

§ 264.735-2 Definitions.

For the purposes of this part, including all forms promulgated for use herewith, unless the context requires otherwise:

(a) "Board" means Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

(b) "Employee" means an officer or employee of the Board but does not include a special employee.

(c) "Special Government employee" (herein referred to as special employee) means an officer or employee of the Board who is retained, designated, appointed, or employed to perform, with or without compensation, for not to exceed 130 days during any period of 365 consecutive days, temporary duties either on a full-time or intermittent basis.

(d) "Conflict or apparent conflict of interest" means a conflict or the appearance of a conflict between the interests of an employee or special employee and the performance of his services for the Board.

§ 264.735-3 Effective date, distribution, and counseling.

(a) This part and any amendment thereto shall be effective upon publication in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

(b) The Division of Personnel Administration shall distribute a comprehensive summary of this part to every employee and every special employee within 90 days after the effective date, and to each new employee and special employee at the time of entrance on duty, and distribute to every employee and every special employee each calendar year thereafter a reminder of the basic provisions of this part. A copy of this part shall be made available, upon request, to every employee and special employee by the Division of Personnel Administration, or by the Counselor or any Deputy Counselor.

(c) A Counselor and Deputy Counselors, appointed by the Board, shall be available for counseling and guidance respecting statutes and regulations affecting employee responsibility and conduct, including interpretations of the provisions of this part, and each employee and special employee shall be notified of this service by the Division of Personnel Administration at the time he receives a comprehensive summary of this part.

§ 264.735-4 Financial statements.

(a) Each employee required to do so by § 264.735-8(a) shall complete and file Form FR 264.A in accordance with § 264.735-8. Each special employee shall complete and file Form FR 264.B in accordance with § 264.735-8.

(b) All Forms FR 264.A and FR 264.B shall be received and reviewed by the Director of the Division of Personnel Administration or his designated representative to determine whether there are any conflicts or apparent conflicts of interest or other violations of this part, law, or other regulations. The Director shall be responsible for maintaining all completed forms in confidence pursuant to paragraph (c) of this section and shall not allow access to, or allow information to be disclosed from, a form—except to carry out the purpose of this part. Information obtained from other sources shall be treated as if it was contained in the forms.

(c) All reports, forms, papers, and the information contained therein, filed pursuant to this section shall be confidential, except as the Board or the Civil Service Commission may determine for good cause shown.

§ 264.735-5 Disciplinary or remedial action.

In addition to any action that may be taken, or penalty imposed, for violations of this part, as prescribed by law:

(a) When conflicts or apparent conflicts of interest or other violations or apparent violations of this part cannot be resolved or explained to the satisfaction of the Director of Personnel Administration, he shall report the matter to the Board through the Counselor.

(b) The employee or special employee concerned shall be given an opportunity to explain such conflicts or apparent conflicts of interest before and after the matter is reported to the Board.

(c) The Board, after consideration of the matter, and after an opportunity for the employee or special employee concerned to appear, shall decide what steps are to be taken to remedy the situation. Among other steps, the Board may:

(1) Attempt to remove any conflict of interest by requiring a change in duties, disqualification for a particular assignment, or divestment of the conflicting interest by the employee or special employee;

(2) Take other corrective action; or

(3) Where corrective actions are inadequate, impose disciplinary action. Remedial action, whether disciplinary or otherwise, shall be effected in accordance with any applicable laws, Executive orders, and regulations.

§ 264.735-6 Ethical and other conduct and responsibilities of employees.

(a) An employee shall avoid any action, whether or not specifically prohibited by this section, which might result in, or create the appearance of:

(1) Using public office for private gain;

(2) Giving preferential treatment to any person;

(3) Impeding Board efficiency or economy;

(4) Losing complete independence or impartiality;

(5) Making a Board decision outside official channels; or

(6) Affecting adversely the confidence of the public in the integrity of the Board and the Government.

(b) Gifts, entertainment, favors, and loans. (1) Except as provided in paragraph (b)(2) of this section, an employee shall not solicit or accept, directly or indirectly, any gift, gratuity, favor, entertainment, loan, or any other thing of monetary value, from a person who:

(i) Has or is seeking to obtain contractual or other business or financial relations with the Board;

(ii) Conducts operations or activities that are regulated by the Board; or

(iii) Has interests that may be substantially affected by the performance or nonperformance of his official duty.

(2) Paragraph (b)(1) of this section shall not apply to the following activities that are necessary to, or compatible with the duties and responsibilities of, the Board and its employees:

(i) The acceptance of loans from, or other financial relations with, banks or other financial institutions, in the ordinary course of business of the bank or other financial institution and the employee, governed by terms no more favorable than would be available in like circumstances to persons who are not employees of the Board, except as provided by law or regulation;

(ii) Obvious family or personal relationships (such as those between the parents, children, or spouse of the employee and the employee) when the circumstances make it clear that it is those relationships rather than the business of the persons concerned that are the motivating factors;

(iii) The acceptance of food, refreshments, or accompanying entertainment in the ordinary course of a luncheon or dinner meeting or other function or inspection tour where an employee is properly in attendance;

(iv) The acceptance of lodging on unusual occasions if an employee is properly in attendance and the circumstances thereof are reported to the Board, or if covered by paragraph (c)(4) of this section; or

(v) The acceptance of unsolicited advertising or promotional materials, such as pens, pencils, note pads, calendars, and other items of nominal intrinsic value.

(3) An employee shall not solicit contributions from another employee for a gift to an employee in a superior official position. An employee in a superior official position shall not accept a gift presented as a contribution from employees receiving less salary than himself. An employee shall not make a donation as a gift to an employee in a superior official position. However, this paragraph does not prohibit a voluntary gift of nominal value or donation in a nominal amount made on a special occasion such as marriage, illness, or retirement.

(4) An employee shall not accept a gift, present, decoration, or other thing from a foreign government unless authorized by Congress as provided by the Constitution and other law.

(5) Neither this paragraph nor paragraph (c) of this section precludes an employee from receipt of bona fide reimbursement, unless prohibited by law, for actual expenses for travel and such other subsistence as is compatible with this part for which no Government payment or reimbursement is made. However, an employee may not be reimbursed, and payment may not be made on his behalf, for excessive personal living expenses or other personal benefits.

(c) Outside employment and other activity. (1) An employee shall not engaged in outside employment or other outside activity not compatible with the full and proper discharge of the duties and responsibilities of his Board employment. Incompatible activities include but are not limited to:

(i) Acceptance of a fee, compensation, gift, payment of expense, or any other thing of monetary value, in circumstances in which acceptance may result in, or create the appearance of, (a) conflicts of interest or (b) the use of nonpublic information gained through, or incidental to, his Board duties, except as provided in this part;

(ii) Outside employment which tends to impair his mental or physical capacity to perform his Board duties and responsibilities in an acceptable manner; or

(iii) Outside business and teaching employment not approved by the Board and reported on Form FR 725.

(2) An employee shall not receive any salary or anything of monetary value from a private source as compensation for his services to the Board.

(3) Employees are encouraged to engage in teaching, lecturing, speaking, and writing relating to the Board's functions and responsibilities that is not prohibited by law, Executive Order 11222 or this part. However, an employee shall not, either for or without compensation, engage in such activities including teaching, lecturing, or writing for the purpose of the special preparation of a person or class of persons for an examination of the Civil Service Commission or Board of Examiners for the Foreign Service, that are dependent on information obtained as a result of his Board employment, except when that information has been made available to the general public or will be made available on request, or when the Board gives written authorization for the use of nonpublic information on the basis that the use is in the public interest. In any case, before any employee engages in such activities, he shall consult his Division Head for the appropriate procedure to obtain official approval.

(4) This paragraph does not preclude an employee from:

(i) Participation in the activities of national or State political parties not prohibited by law; or

(ii) Participation in the affairs of, or acceptance of an award for a meritorious public contribution or achievement given by, a charitable, religious, professional, social, fraternal, nonprofit educational, and recreational, public service, or civic organization.

(d) Financial interest. (1) An employee shall not:

(i) Have a direct or indirect financial interest that conflicts substantially, or appears to conflict substantially, with his duties and responsibilities with the Board;

(ii) Engage in, directly or indirectly, a financial transaction as a result of, or primarily relying on, information obtained through his employment with the Board;

(iii) Engage in speculative dealings (as distinguished from investments), whether on a margin or a cash basis, and whether in securities, commodities, real estate, exchange, or otherwise. Frequency of trading, the use of credit, and particularly transactions to take advantage of short-term price fluctuations, would be significant indications that dealings were speculative; or

(iv) Purchase equity securities of a bank, an affiliate thereof, or a Government security dealer; and an employee holding or acquiring such securities shall dispose of them as promptly as is practicable without causing undue hardship unless, after full disclosure in writing, the Board approves continued holding of such securities.

(2) This section does not preclude an employee from having a financial interest or engaging in financial transactions to the same extent as a private citizen not employed by the Board so long as it is not prohibited by law, Executive Order 11222, applicable regulation, or this part, including indebtedness to banks or other financial institutions on the same terms and conditions available to the employee if he were not an employee of the Board.

(e) Use of Board property. An employee shall not directly or indirectly use, or allow the use of, Board property of any kind, including property leased to the Board, for other than officially approved activities; an employee has a positive duty to protect and conserve Board property, including equipment, supplies, and other property entrusted or issued to him.

(f) Misuse of information. For the purpose of furthering a private interest, an employee shall not, except as provided in paragraph (c)(3) of this section, directly or indirectly use, or allow the use of, official information obtained through or in connection with his Board employment which has not been made available to the general public.

(g) Disclosure of unpublished information. An employee of the Board shall not disclose to any person any unpublished information of the Board obtained in the course of his work except as authorized by the Board's Rules Regarding Information, Submittals, and Requests (§ 261.2 of this chapter).

(h) Indebtedness. An employee shall pay each just financial obligation in a proper and timely manner, especially one imposed by law such as Federal, State, or local taxes. For the purpose of this section, a "just financial obligation" means one acknowledged by the employee or reduced to judgment by a court, and "in a proper and timely manner" means in a manner which the Board determines does not, under the circumstances, reflect adversely on the Board as his employer. In the event of dispute between an employee and an alleged creditor, this section does not require the Board to determine the validity or amount of the disputed debt.

(i) Gambling, betting, and lotteries. An employee shall not participate, while on Board-owned or leased property or while on duty for the Board, in any gambling activity including the operating of a gambling device, in conducting a lottery or pool, in a game for money or property, or in selling or purchasing a numbers slip or ticket.

(j) General conduct prejudicial to the Government. An employee shall not engage in criminal, infamous, dishonest, immoral, or notoriously disgraceful conduct, or other conduct prejudicial to the Government or the Board.

(k) Miscellaneous statutory provisions. Each employee shall acquaint himself with each statute that relates to his ethical and other conduct while an employee of the Board. In particular, the following statutes shall be noted:

(1) House Concurrent Resolution 175, 85th Congress, 2d Session, 72 Stat. B12, the "Code of Ethics for Government Service".

(2) Chapter 11 of Title 18, United States Code, relating to bribery, graft, and conflicts of interest. (In particular, 18 U.S.C. 212 and 213, prohibiting the offer to a bank examiner, or the acceptance by a bank examiner, of a gratuity or a loan from certain banks; $5,000 fine and/or 1 year in prison.)

(3) The prohibition against lobbying with appropriated funds (18 U.S.C. 1913) ($500 fine and/or 1 year in prison and removal from employment).

(4) The prohibitions against disloyalty and striking (5 U.S.C. 7311, 18 U.S.C. 1918) ($1,000 fine and/or 1 year and 1 day in prison).

(5) The prohibition against the employment of a member of a Communist organization (50 U.S.C. 784).

(6) The prohibition against (i) the disclosure of classified information (18 U.S.C. 798, 50 U.S.C. 783) ($10,000 fine and/or 10 years in prison); and (ii) the disclosure of confidential information (18 U.S.C. 1905) ($1,000 fine and/or 1 year in prison, and removal from employment).

(7) The provision relating to the habitual use of intoxicants to excess (5 U.S.C. 7352) (ineligibility for employment in the competitive service).

(8) The prohibition against the misuse of a Government vehicle (31 U.S.C. 638a(c)) (suspension from duty or removal from employment).

(9) The prohibition against the misuse of the franking privilege (18 U.S.C. 1719) ($300 fine).

(10) The prohibition against the use of deceit in an examination or personnel action in connection with Government employment (18 U.S.C. 1917) ($1,000 fine and/or 1 year in prison).

(11) The prohibition against fraud or false statements in a Government matter (18 U.S.C. 1001) ($10,000 fine and/or 5 years in prision).

(12) The prohibition against mutilating or destroying a public record (18 U.S.C. 2071) ($2,000 fine and/or 3 years in prison).

(13) The prohibition against counterfeiting and forging transportation requests (18 U.S.C. 508) ($5,000 fine and/or 10 years in prison).

(14) The prohibitions against (i) embezzlement of Government money or property (18 U.S.C. 641); (ii) failing to account for public money (18 U.S.C. 643); and (iii) embezzlement of the money or property of another person in the possession of an employee by reason of his employment (18 U.S.C. 654) (fines from $1,000 to $10,000 and/or 1 to 10 years in prison).

(15) The prohibition against unauthorized use of documents relating to claims from or by the Government (18 U.S.C. 285) ($5,000 fine and/or 5 years in prison).

(16) The prohibition against proscribed political activities—the Hatch Act (5 U.S.C. 7321-7327) (possible removal from employment) and 18 U.S.C. 602, 603, 607, and 608 (fines of $5,000 and/or 5 years in prison).

(17) The prohibition against disclosure of certain information by a bank examiner (18 U.S.C. 1906) ($5,000 fine and/or 1 year in prison).

(18) The prohibition against an employee acting as the agent of a foreign principal registered under the foreign Agents Registration Act (18 U.S.C. 219) ($10,000 fine and/or 2 years in prison).

§ 264.735-7 Ethical and other conduct and responsibilities of special employees.

(a) Use of Board employment. A special employee shall not use his Board employment for a purpose that is, or gives the appearance of being, motivated by the desire for private gain for himself or another person, particularly one with whom he has family, business, or financial ties.

(b) Use of inside information. A special employee shall not use inside information obtained as a result of his Board employment for private gain for himself or another person either by direct action on his part or by counsel, recommendation, or suggestion to another person, particularly one with whom he has family, business, or financial ties. For the purpose of this paragraph, "inside information" means information obtained under Board authority which has not become part of the body of public information. However, a special employee may teach, lecture, or write in a manner not inconsistent with the appropriate provisions of § 264.735-6(c) in regard to employees.

(c) Coercion. A special employee shall not use his Board employment to coerce, or give the appearance of coercing, a person to provide financial benefit to himself or another person, particularly one with whom he has family, business, or financial ties.

(d) Gifts, entertainment, and favors. (1) Except as provided in paragraph (d)(2) of this section, a special employee, while so employed or in connection with his employment, shall not receive or solicit from a person having business with the Board anything of value as a gift, gratuity, loan, entertainment, or favor for himself or another person particularly one with whom he has family, business, or financial ties.

(2) Paragraph (d)(1) of this section shall not apply to the activities referred to in § 264.735-6(b)(2) which are necessary to, and compatible with the duties and responsibilities of, the Board and its special employees.

(e) Miscellaneous statutory provisions. Each special employee shall acquaint himself with each statute that relates to his ethical and other conduct while a special employee. In particular, the statutes listed in § 264.735-6(k) shall be noted.

(f) Other provisions applicable to special employees. Paragraphs (e), (g), (h), and (j) of § 264.735-6 shall be applicable to special employees.

§ 264.735-8 Statements of employment and financial interests.

(a) Employees required to submit statements. Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this section, statements of employment and financial interests shall be filed by:

(1) Employees receiving compensation equivalent to GS-13 or above whose positions are identified in Appendix A to this part by reason of meeting the following criteria:

(i) Positions the incumbents of which are responsible for making a Government decision or taking a Government action in regard to:

(A) Contracting or procurement;

(B) Administering or monitoring grants or subsidies;

(C) Regulating or auditing private or other non-Federal enterprise; or

(D) Other activities where the decision or action has an economic impact on the interests of any non-Federal enterprise.

(ii) Positions which the Board determines require the incumbent to report employment and financial interests in order to carry out the purpose of law, executive order, this part, and the Board's regulations.

(2) Employees receiving compensation below the equivalent to GS-13 whose positions otherwise meet the criteria in paragraph of (a)(1) of this section when the inclusion of the positions in Appendix A has been specifically justified by the Board in writing to the Civil Service Commission as an exception that is essential to protect the integrity of the Government and avoid employee involvement in a possible conflict-of-interest situation.

(b) Employees not required to submit statements. Neither Form FR 264.A nor Form FR 264.B is required by this section from a member of the Board of Governors. Board members are subject to separate reporting requirements under section 401 of Executive Order 11222.

(c) Time and place for submission of employees' statements. An employee required to submit a Form FR 264.A under this part shall submit that form to the Director of the Division of Personnel Administration or his designated representative not later than:

(1) Ninety days after the effective date of this part if employed on or before the effective date; or

(2) Thirty days after his entrance on duty. However, this subparagraph does not require a submission earlier than 90 days after the effective date of this part.

(d) Supplementary statements. Changes in, or additions to, the information contained in an employee's Form FR 264.A shall be reported in a supplementary statement as of June

30. If no changes or additions occur, a negative report is required. Notwithstanding the filing of an annual report required by this section, each employee shall at all times avoid acquiring a financial interest that could result, or taking an action that would result, in a violation of the conflict-of-interest provisions of 18 U.S.C. 203 or § 264.735-6. Supplementary reports shall be filed on Form FR 264.A, indicating the year for which the report is filed in Part I of the Form.

(e) Interests of employees' relatives. The interest of a spouse, minor child, or other member of an employee's immediate household is considered to be an interest of the employee. For the purpose of this section, "member of an employee's immediate household" means those blood relations who are residents of the employee's household.

(f) Information not known by employees. If any information required to be included on a statement of employment and financial interests or supplementary statement, including holdings placed in trust, is not known to the employee but is known to another person, the employee shall request that person to submit information in his behalf.

(g) Information prohibited. This section does not require an employee to submit a statement of employment and financial interests or supplementary statement of any information relating to the employee's connection with, or interest in, a professional society or a charitable, religious, social, fraternal, recreational, public service, civic, or political organization or similar organization not conducted as a business enterprise. For the purpose of this paragraph, educational and other institutions doing research and development or related work involving grants of money from or contracts with the Board are deemed "business enterprises" and are required to be included in an employee's statement of employment and financial interests.

(h) Effect of employees' statements on other requirements. The statements of employment and financial interests and supplementary statements required of employees are in addition to, and not in substitution for, or in derogation of, any similar requirement imposed by law, order, or regulation. The submission of a statement or supplementary statement by an employee does not permit him or any other person to participate in a matter in which his or the other person's participation is prohibited by law, order, or regulation.

(i) Employee's complaint on filing requirement. An employee may complain through the Board's grievance procedure that his position has been improperly included in this part as one requiring the submission of a Form FR 264.A.

(j) Specific provisions of Board regulations for special employees. (1) Except as provided in paragraph (j)(2) of this section, each special employee shall submit on Form FR 264.B a statement of employment and financial interests which reports:

(i) All other employment; and

(ii) The financial interests of the special employee which the Board determines are relevant in the light of the duties he is to perform.

(2) The Board may waive the requirement in paragraph (j)(1) of this section for the submission of a statement of employment and financial interests in the case of a special employee who is not a consultant or an expert when the Board finds that the duties of the position held by that special employee are of a nature and at such a level of responsibility that the submission of the statement by the incumbent is not necessary to protect the integrity of the Board and the Government. For the purpose of this paragraph, "consultant" and "expert" have the meanings given those terms by Chapter 304 of the Federal Personnel Manual, but do not include a physician, dentist, or allied medical specialist whose services are procured to provide care and service to patients.

(3) The statement of employment and financial interests required to be submitted under this paragraph shall be submitted in accordance with the provisions of paragraphs (c) and (d) of this section (however, supplemental information shall be filed on Form FR 264.B). The provisions of paragraphs (e), (f), (g), and (h) of this section shall apply to statements of employment and financial interests of special employees where appropriate.

264a.1 Purpose.
264a.2 Definitions.
264a.3 Prohibition against director participation in particular matters.
264a.4 Granting of ad hoc exemptions.
264a.5 Exemption of remote or inconsequential financial interests.

AUTHORITY: 18 U.S.C. 208, as amended by the Federal Reserve Reform Act of 1977, Pub. L. 95-188, sec. 205, 91 Stat. 1387; 12 U.S.C. 248, 301.

SOURCE: 43 FR 24667, June 7, 1978, unless otherwise noted.

§ 264a.1 Purpose.

Directors of Federal Reserve Banks are charged by law with the responsibility of supervising and controlling the operations of the Reserve Banks, under the general supervision of the Board of Governors, and for assuring that the affairs of the Banks are administered fairly and impartially. The Federal Reserve Act provides that Reserve bank directors will be selected with due consideration to the interests of various segments of the population and the economy, thus assuring that the Federal Reserve System will receive the benefit of the experienced judgment of individuals from a broad spectrum of the communities that will be affected by actions of the System. For example, the provisions of section 4 of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended by the Federal Reserve Reform Act of 1977, provide that both class B and C directors shall be chosen to represent the public and with "due but not exclusive consideration to the interests of agriculture, commerce, industry, services, labor, and consumers." Section 4 further provides that class A directors "shall be chosen by and be representative of the stockholding banks" of the Federal Reserve System. Recognizing that Reserve Bank directors may have, in their private capacities, business, consumer, or other interests to which legitimate attention is to be given; but recognizing also that these same individuals have fiduciary responsibilities as directors of Reserve Banks, this regulation is promulgated for the purpose of assuring preservation of and adherence to the intent of both the Federal Reserve Act and section 208 of Title 18, United States Code.

§ 264a.2 Definitions.

For purposes of this part, the following definitions shall apply:

(a) The term "director," unless otherwise indicated, means a head office or branch director of a Federal Reserve Bank.

(b) The term "Board of Governors" means the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

(c) The term "board" means the board of directors of a Federal Reserve Bank or branch of a Federal Reserve Bank.

(d) The term "related person" means (1) a partner of a director, (2) any organization in which the director is serving as an officer, director, trustee, partner or employee, or (3) any person or organization with whom the director is negotiating or has any arrangement concerning prospective employment.

(e) The term "participate" means to act through decision, approval, disapproval, recommendation, the rendering of advice, investigation, or as is otherwise within the meaning of the provisions of 18 U.S.C. 208.

(f) The term "particular matter" means a judicial or other proceeding, application, request for a ruling or other determination, contract, claim, controversy, charge, accusation, arrest or other subject within the meaning of the provisions of 18 U.S.C. 208.

(g) The term "discussions" means the consideration of a matter by a board and may include, depending upon the board's statutory authority, votes taken or other decisional action.

§ 264a.3 Prohibition against director participation in particular matters.

(a) Pursuant to the provisions of 18 U.S.C. 208(a), no director may participate personally and substantially in a particular matter in which, to the director's knowledge, the director, the director's spouse or minor child, or related persons have a financial interest unless such action is otherwise permitted by 18 U.S.C. 208(b) and § 264a.4 or § 264a.5 of this part.

(b) Except as provided by 18 U.S.C. 208(b) and § 264a.4 or § 264a.5 of this part, no director shall participate in deliberations or decisions of a Reserve Bank board when the question presented is whether the board should approve or ratify an extension of credit, advance, or discount by a Reserve Bank to a bank which is, in the opinion of the President of the Reserve Bank, in a hazardous financial condition, and

(1) Where the director has knowledge that he, his spouse, or minor child has a financial interest in the proposed transaction as a result of:

(i) Being a borrower or applicant for credit from the borrowing bank, other than consumer credit as defined in Regulation Z (12 CFR 226.2(p));

(ii) Maintaining a depositary relationship with the borrowing bank in an amount exceeding that covered by Federal deposit insurance;

(iii) Owning stock, stock options, bonds, notes or other forms of indebtedness issued by the borrowing bank, or its registered parent holding company, the market value of which exceeds $100,000 or represents more than 1 percent of the value of that class of stock, stock option, bond, note, or other form of indebtedness issued by the borrowing bank or its registered parent holding company; or

(iv) Employment in a policy making position or service as a director with the borrowing bank or the registered parent holding company of the borrowing bank.

(2) Where the director has a financial interest in the proposed transaction as a result of:

(i) Service by the director as an officer or director of another bank that is known by the director to be located in the same geographic market for local banking services as the borrowing bank and is known by the director to be in direct and substantial competition with the borrowing bank;

(ii) Service by the director as an officer or director of another bank that is known by the director:

(A) To have outstanding or to be negotiating an extension of credit from, or to, the borrowing bank, other than Federal funds or foreign exchange transactions; or

(B) To maintain a correspondent or depositary relationship with the borrowing bank in an amount exceeding that covered by Federal deposit insurance; or

(iii) Service by the director as one of the principal officers of any business enterprise that constitutes the director's primary business or professional occupation where such business enterprise is known by the director:

(A) To have outstanding or to be negotiating a direct and substantial extension of credit or line of credit from the borrowing bank;

(B) To maintain a principal depositary relationship with the borrowing bank in an amount exceeding that covered by Federal deposit insurance; or

(C) To own stock, stock options, bonds, notes or other forms of indebtedness issued by the borrowing bank, the market value of which exceeds $100,000 or represents more than 1 percent of the value of that class of stock, stock options, bonds, notes or other form of indebtedness issued.

(3) Where the director has knowledge that a partner of the director has a financial interest in the proposed transaction; or

(4) Where the director has a financial interest in the proposed transaction as a result of the director's participation in current negotiations or arrangements concerning prospective employment with the borrowing bank.

(c) It is recognized that a Reserve Bank board can, within the spirit and letter of its responsibilities, delegate to appropriate officials of the Reserve Bank authority to act with respect to extensions of credit to individual banks determined to be in hazardous financial condition, thus avoiding both ratification by the board and applicability to the directors of the prohibitions of this section. Such delegation would not preclude continued advice to the board of appropriate information regarding bank conditions in the district so as to enable the board to perform fully its general oversight responsibilities.

§ 264a.4 Granting of ad hoc exemptions.

(a) The prohibitions of 18 U.S.C. 208 and § 264a.3 of this part shall not apply if the director first advises the Board of Governors of the nature and circumstances of the particular matter before the board and makes full disclosure of the financial interest involved and receives in advance a written determination made by the Board of Governors, or its designee, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. 208(b)(1), that the interest is not so substantial as to be deemed likely to affect the integrity of the services which the Federal Reserve System may expect from such director.

(b) Telegraphic communications from the President, First Vice President, Secretary or General Counsel of a Reserve Bank to the Board of Governors on behalf of a director and setting forth the precise nature of both the particular matter before the board and the financial interest involved shall be considered to meet the director's duty of full disclosure set forth in § 264a.4(a). Telegraphic response to the same identified officials of the Reserve Bank by the Board of Governors, or its designee, shall be deemed to meet the requirement of a written determination by the Board of Governors set forth in § 264a.4.

§ 264a.5 Exemption of remote or inconsequential financial interests.

(a) Pursuant to the provisions of 18 U.S.C. 208(b)(2), certain actions of directors of Federal Reserve Banks may be exempted from the prohibitions of 18 U.S.C. 208(a) and § 264a.3 of this part, if by general rule or regulation published in the FEDERAL REGISTER, the financial interest involved has been determined to be too remote or too inconsequential to affect the integrity of directors' services. Financial interests will be viewed as too remote or too inconsequential:

(1) In circumstances in which a director's action on a matter will not directly, substantially, and predictably affect the financial interest; or

(2) In circumstances in which a director's independence of judgment will not be affected by the financial interest.

(b) The Board of Governors has determined that the financial interests of a director, the director's spouse or minor child, or related persons in the following matters are too remote or too inconsequential to affect the integrity of directors' services and, accordingly, the prohibitions of 18 U.S.C. 208(a) and § 264a.3 of this part shall not apply to a director's participation in such matters:

(1) Deliberations concerning or ratification of extensions of credit, advances, or discounts to any bank that has not been determined to be in hazardous financial condition by the President of the Reserve Bank, provided such credit extensions, advances, or discounts are made under appropriate provisions of the Federal Reserve Act, regulations and policies of the Board of Governors and the Federal Reserve Banks, and the established operating procedures at the director's Reserve Bank;

(2) Deliberations concerning or affecting any financial institution, to the extent the financial interest in such matters results from:

(i) Maintenance at the financial institution of a checking or other deposit account covered by Federal Insurance;

(ii) A fiduciary relationship involving the utilization of the financial institution's trust or investment advisory services;

(iii) The receipt from the financial institution of consumer credit, as that term is defined in Regulation Z (12 CFR 226.2(p)); or

(iv) Participation in Federal funds or foreign exchange transactions with the financial institution;

(3) Deliberations concerning or affecting any financial institution or other enterprise to the extent the financial interest results from ownership of stock, stock options, bonds, notes, or other forms of indebtedness, the market value of which is less than $100,000 and represents less than 1 percent of the value of that class of stock, stock option, bond, note or other form of indebtedness issued by the financial institution or other enterprise.

(4) Deliberations concerning or affecting any financial institution or other enterprise to the extent the financial interest results from holdings in a diversified and widely held mutual fund, investment company, pension or retirement plan that, in turn, may have invested in the financial institution, provided that the director does not contribute to investment decisions of the fund, company, or plan.

(c) Section 264a.3(b) of this part specifically identifies certain financial interests, the existence and knowledge of which will preclude a director from participating in deliberations or decisions of a Reserve Bank board (except through recourse to the procedures set forth in § 264a.4) when the question presented is whether the board should approve or ratify an extension of credit, advance, or discount by a Reserve Bank to a bank which is, in the opinion of the President of the Reserve Bank, in hazardous financial condition. Financial interests identified in § 264a.3(b) are viewed by the Board as offering a clear potential for conflict. The Board has determined that any other financial interest that a director, the director's spouse or minor child, or related persons may have in such extensions of credit, advances, or discounts to banks in hazardous condition are too remote or too inconsequential to affect the integrity of directors' services and, accordingly, the prohibitions of 18 U.S.C. 208(a) and § 264a.3 of this part shall not apply to a director's participation in such matters. These would include, for example, financial interests that might result from:

(1) A director's ownership of stock of a bank or business, other than a registered parent holding company of the borrowing bank, that may have an i terest in the condition of the borro ing bank; or

(2) A director's service as a direct or trustee of a business or other org nization, other than a bank or the re istered parent holding company of th borrowing bank, that may, itself through a subsidiary, have an intere in the condition of the borrowi bank.

(d) The functions of directors oft include their participation in discu sions concerning (1) international, n tional, and regional economic and nancial conditions, (2) moneta policy, (3) general conditions, tren or issues with respect to bank cred
(4) establishment of rates to charged for all advances and discou by Federal Reserve Banks, subject review and determination of the Boa of Governors pursuant to the Fede Reserve Act, (5) matters intended have generally uniform application banks within the Reserve Bank d trict, and (6) statutes and proposed pending legislation in which the F eral Reserve System has a legitim interest. The foregoing matters not particular matters of the type scribed in 18 U.S.C. 208 and, therefo that statute is not applicable to p ticipation in such matters. Howev even if the statute were held to be plicable to participation in such m ters, the Board of Governors has termined that the financial intere of a director, the director's spouse minor child, or related persons in su matters are too remote or too incon quential to affect the integrity of rectors' services and, accordingly, prohibitions of 18 U.S.C. 208(a) § 264a.3 of this part shall not apply a director's participation in such m ters.

(e) Nothing in this section shall p clude a director from refraining, to extent consistent with responsibili imposed upon the directors by Federal Reserve Act, from partic tion in a particular matter. The Bo hereby gives notice of its intentio undertake a continuing review of experience of Reserve Bank boa under this regulation with a view assuring preservation of and adh
ence to the intent of both the Fed

Reserve Act and 18 U.S.C. 208, as amended. In the course of such review, particular attention will be given to the provisions of this section.

264b.5 Disposal of foreign gifts and decorations.
264b.6 Official use of foreign gifts and decorations.
264b.7 Reporting requirements.
264b.8 Implementing procedures.
264b.9 Miscellaneous.

AUTHORITY: 5 U.S.C. 7342, as amended; and sec. 11(l) of the Federal Reserve Act, 12 U.S.C. 248(l), 5 U.S.C. 552.

SOURCE: 44 FR 64399, Nov. 7, 1979, unless otherwise noted.

§ 264b.1 Purpose and scope.

This regulation implements the 1977 Amendments to the Foreign Gifts and Decorations Act, Pub. L. 95-105, which restricts Board Members' and employees' acceptance of foreign gifts and decorations. The restrictions apply to gifts whether they are tangible or intangible. Different rules apply depending on whether the gift has only "minimal value." There are also rules regarding acceptance of decorations from foreign governments.

§ 264b.2 Definitions.

(a) The term "Board Members and employees" means:

(1) Members of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, officers, and other employees of the Board;

(2) Consultants while employed by the Board; and acting on behalf of the Board; and

(3) Spouses and dependents of Board Members, officers, employees, and consultants as defined in this section.

(b) The term "foreign government" means any unit of a foreign governmental authority (or its agent or representative), including any foreign, national, state, local, or municipal government, and any international or multinational organization whose membership is composed of any such units.

(c) The term "decoration" means an order, device, medal, badge, insignia, emblem, or award.

§ 264b.3 Foreign gifts.

Except as provided below, Board Members and employees shall not request, or otherwise encourage the tender of, or accept, or retain, a tangible or intangible gift from a foreign government.

(a) Gifts of minimal value. Board Members and employees may accept and retain a tangible or intangible gift of minimal value—that is, one having a retail value in the United States at the time of acceptance of $100 or less—from a foreign government intended as a souvenir or mark of courtesy.

(b) Educational scholarships or medical treatment. Board Members and employees may accept and retain a gift of more than minimal value from a foreign government when such gift is in the nature of an educational scholarship or medical treatment.

(c) Tangible gifts of more than minimal value. A tangible gift of more than minimal value tendered by a foreign government may be accepted when it appears that to refuse the gift would likely cause offense or embarrassment or otherwise adversely affect the foreign relations of the United States. Such a gift accepted under these circumstances is deemed to have been accepted on behalf of the United States, and, upon acceptance, it shall become the property of the United States. Within 60 days after accepting a gift under these circumstances the member or employee must deposit the gift with the Secretary of the Board.

(d) Travel or expenses for travel. Board Members and employees may accept gifts of travel or expenses for travel taking place entirely outside the United States (such as transportation, food, and lodging) of more than minimal value if such acceptance is appropriate, consistent with the interests of the United States, and is permitted by the Board. Requests for Board approval of acceptance of such expenses shall be submitted to the Vice Chairman of the Board.

§ 264b.4 Foreign decorations.

Board Members and employees may accept, retain, and wear a decoration tendered in recognition of active field service in time of combat operations or awarded for other outstanding or unusually meritorious performance by a foreign government, subject to the approval of the Board. Without this approval, the decoration is deemed to have been accepted on behalf of the United States, shall become the property of the United States, and shall be deposited by the Board Member or employee, within 60 days of acceptance, with the Secretary of the Board for official use or disposal. Requests for Board approval of acceptance of such decorations shall be submitted in advance to the Vice Chairman of the Board.

§ 264b.5 Disposal of foreign gifts and decorations.

Within 30 days after a tangible gift or decoration is deposited for disposal with the Secretary of the Board, the gift or decoration shall be returned to the donor, or shall be forwarded to the Administrator of General Services for transfer, donation, or other disposal in accordance with applicable law, or shall be retained for official use of the Board.

§ 264b.6 Official use of foreign gifts and decorations.

A foreign gift or decoration deposited with the Secretary of the Board may, with the approval of the Board, be retained for official Board use. The Secretary shall insure that, whenever possible, "official board use" of such a gift will benefit the greatest number of Board employees and/or the public. Within 30 days after terminating the "official use" of a foreign gift, the Board shall report the termination of the official use to the Administrator of the General Services, in accordance with applicable GSA regulations.

§ 264b.7 Reporting requirements.

(a) When a Board Member or employee deposits a tangible gift or decoration of more than minimal value for disposal or for official use, or within 30 days after a Board Member or employee accepts travel or travel expenses as provided in this section, the Board Member or employee shall file a statement with the Secretary of the Board containing the information prescribed in paragraphs (b) and (c) that follow.

(b) For each tangible gift or decoration deposited with the Secretary of the Board, a Board Member or employee shall file a statement which shall include the following information:

(1) The name and position of the employee;

(2) A full description of the gift and the circumstances justifying acceptance;

(3) The identity of the foreign government and the name and position of the individual who presented the gift;

(4) The date of acceptance of the gift;

(5) The estimated value in the United States of the gift at the time of acceptance;

(6) Disposition or current location of the gift; and

(7) An indication whether the Board Member or employee is interested in participating in the sale of the tangible gift or decoration if it is sold by the General Services Administration.

(c) For each gift of travel or travel expenses accepted, a Board Member or employee shall file a statement which shall include the following information:

(1) The name and position of the employee;

(2) A brief description of the travel or travel expenses, including the amount, or estimated costs, and the circumstances justifying acceptance; and

(3) The identity of the foreign government and the name and position of the individual who provided the travel or travel expenses.

(d) Board Members and employees need not report the following gifts and decorations:

(1) Gifts of minimal value;

(2) Decorations retained by the employee with the approval of the Board;

(3) Gifts and decorations offered but refused by the Board Member or employee.

(e) Not later than January 31 of each year, the Secretary of the Board shall compile a listing of all statements filed during the preceding year by Board Members and employees pursuant to this section and shall transmit such listing to the Secretary of State for the purpose of publishing a listing of all such statements in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

§ 264b.8 Implementing procedures.

The Board shall:

(a) Report to the Attorney General cases in which there is reason to believe that a Board Member or employee has violated this section;

(b) Establish a procedure in the Office of the Secretary of the Board for obtaining an appraisal, when necessary, of the value of gifts; and

(c) Take any other actions necessary to carry out the purpose of this subsection, including appropriate disciplinary action for failure to comply with provisions of this part.

§ 264b.9 Miscellaneous.

The provisions of this part do not apply to grants and other forms of assistance to which section 108A of the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961 applies.

PART 265—RULES REGARDING DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY

Sec.
265.1 Delegation of functions generally.
265.1a Specific functions delegated to Board members.
265.2 Specific functions delegated to Board employees and Federal Reserve Banks.
265.3 Review of action at delegated level.

AUTHORITY: Sec. 11, 38 Stat. 261; 12 U.S.C. 248.

SOURCE: 32 FR 8519, June 14, 1967; 32 FR 8956, June 23, 1967, unless otherwise noted.

§ 265.1 Delegation of functions generally.

Pursuant to the provisions of section 11(k) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 248(k)), the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System delegates authority to exercise those of its functions described in this part, subject to the limitations and guidelines herein prescribed. The Chairman of the Board of Governors assigns the responsibility for the performance of such delegated functions to the persons herein specified. A delegee may submit any matter to the Board for determination if the delegee considers such submission appropriate because of the importance or complexity of the matter.

[32 FR 8519, June 14, 1967; 32 FR 8956, June 23, 1967, as amended at 41 FR 53775, Dec. 9, 1976]

§ 265.1a Specific functions delegated to Board members.

(a) Any Board member designated by the Chairman is authorized:

(1) Under section (a)(6) of the Freedom of Information Act (5 U.S.C. 552) and Part 261 of this chapter (Rules Regarding Availability of Information) to review and make a determination with respect to an appeal of denial of access to records of the Board made in accordance with the procedures presescribed by the Board.

(2) To approve, after receiving the recommendations of the Director of the Division of Banking Supervision and Regulation and the General Counsel, amendments to any notice of charges, proposed order to cease and desist, or temporary cease-and-desist order, previously approved by the Board of Governors pursuant to the Financial Institutions Supervisory Act, 12 U.S.C. 1818(b), (c) (Federal Deposit Insurance Act, sections 8 (b) and (c)).

(b) Any Board member is authorized, when requested by the Secretary of the Board, to act upon any request to the Board filed with the Secretary pursuant to § 263.10(e) of the Board's Rules of Practice for Formal Hearings (12 CFR Part 263) for special permission to appeal from a ruling of the presiding officer at any hearing conducted pursuant to such rules on any motion ruled upon by such presiding officer (provided, that if such special permission is granted the merits of the appeal shall thereupon be presented to the Board for decision). Notwithstanding the provisions of § 265.3 hereof, the denial of such special permission pursuant to this paragraph shall be subject to review by the Board only upon the request of a member of the Board made within two days following the denial. No person claiming to be adversely affected by such denial shall have any right to petition the Board or any Board member for review or reconsideration of such action.

(c) Any three Board members designated from time to time by the Chairman (the "Action Committee") are authorized, upon certification by the Secretary of the Board of an absence of a quorum of the Board present in person, to act by unanimous vote on any matter that the Chairman of the Board has certified must be acted upon promptly in order to avoid delay that would be inconsistent with the public interest, other than (i) those relating to rulemaking, (ii) those pertaining principally to monetary and credit policies, and (iii) those for which a statute expressly requires the affirmative vote of more than three members of the Board.

§ 265.2 Specific functions delegated to Board employees and to Federal Reserve Banks.

(a) The Secretary of the Board (or, in the Secretary's absence, the Acting Secretary) is authorized:

(1) Under the provisions of Part 261 of this chapter, to make available, upon request, information in the records of the Board.

(2) Under the provisions of sections 18(c) and 18(c)(4) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1828(c) and 1828(c)(4)), sections 3(a), 4(c)(8) and 4(c)(14) of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1842(a), 1843(c) (8) and (14)), sections 5(a), 5(b) and 7(d) of the Bank Service Corporation Act (12 U.S.C. 1865(a), 1865(b) and 1867(d)), the Change in Bank Control Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(j)) and section 25 and 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 601-604a and 611 et seq.), and §§ 225.14, 225.23, and 225.41-43 of Regulation Y (12 CFR 225.14, 225.23, and 225.41-43), §§ 211.3(a), 211.4(c), 211.5(c) and 211.34 of Regulation K (12 CFR 211.3(a), 211.4(c), 211.5(c) and 211.34), to furnish reports on competitive factors involved in a bank merger to the Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and to take actions the Reserve Bank could take except for the fact that the Reserve Bank may not act because a director or senior officer of any holding company, bank, or company involved in the transaction is a director of a Federal Reserve Bank or branch.

(3) Under the provisions of sections 25 and 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act and Parts 211 and 213 of this chapter (Regulations K and M), to approve the establishment, directly or indirectly, of a foreign branch or agency by a member bank or corporation organized under section 25(a) (an "Edge" corporation) or operating under an agreement with the Board pursuant to section 25 (an "Agreement" corporation) if all of the following conditions are met:

(i) The appropriate Reserve Bank recommends approval.

(ii) The relevant divisions of the Board's staff recommend approval.

(iii) No significant policy issue is raised by the proposal as to which the Board has not expressed its view.

(iv) The application is not one for the applicant's first full-service branch in a foreign country.

(4) Under the provisions of sections 25 and 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act and Parts 211 and 213 of this chapter (Regulations K and M), to grant specific consent to the acquisition, either directly or indirectly, by a member bank or an Edge or Agreement corporation of stock of (i) a company chartered under the laws of a foreign country or (ii) a company chartered under the laws of a State of the United States that is organized and operated for the purpose of financing exports from the United States, and to approve any such acquisition that may exceed the limitations in section 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act based on such a corporation's capital and surplus, if all of the following conditions are met:

(a) The appropriate Reserve Bank recommends approval.

(b) All relevant divisions of the Board's staff recommend approval.

(c) No significant policy issue is raised by the proposal as to which the Board has not expressed its view.

(d) Such acquisition does not result, either directly or indirectly, in the acquisition by such bank or corporation of effective control of any such company except that this condition need not be met if (1) the company is to perform nominee, fiduciary, or other services incidental to the activities of a foreign branch or affiliate of such bank or corporation, or (2) the stock is being acquired by such bank or corporation from its parent bank or bank holding company, or subsidiary Edge or Agreement corporation, as the case may be, and such selling parent or subsidiary holds such stock with the consent of the Board pursuant to Parts 211, 213, or 225 of this chapter (Regulations K, M, and Y).

(5) Under the provisions of sections 25 and 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act and Parts 211 and 213 of this chapter (Regulations K and M), to permit an Edge or Agreement corporation to exceed the limitations in § 211.9 (b) and (c) of this chapter (Regulation K),[1] if all of the following conditions are met:

(i) The appropriate Reserve Bank recommends approval.

(ii) All relevant divisions of the Board's staff recommend approval.

(iii) No significant policy issue is raised by the proposal as to which the Board has not expressed its view.

(6) Under sections 25 and 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act and Parts 211 and 213 of this chapter (Regulations K and M), to approve, under § 211.4 of this chapter (Regulation K), the issuance by an Edge or Agreement corporation or a subsidiary thereof of debentures, bonds, promissory notes (with a maturity of more than one year), or similar obligations, if all of the following conditions are met:

(i) The appropriate Reserve Bank recommends approval.

(ii) All relevant divisions of the Board's staff recommend approval.

(iii) No significant policy issue is raised by the proposal as to which the Board has not expressed its view.

(7) Under the provisions of section 4(c)(13) of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1843), and § 225.4(f) of Part 225 of this chapter (Regulation Y), to grant specific consent to the ownership or control, either directly or indirectly, by a bank holding company of voting shares of a company chartered under the laws of a foreign country, if all of the following conditions are met:

(i) The appropriate Reserve Bank recommends approval.

(ii) All relevant divisions of the Board's staff recommend approval.

(iii) No significant policy issue is raised by the proposal as to which the Board has not expressed its view.

(iv) Such acquisition does not result, either directly or indirectly, in the acquisition by such bank holding company of control of any such company (other than a company performing nominee, fiduciary, or other services incidental to the activities of a direct or indirect foreign subsidiary of such corporation).

(8) Under the provisions of § 262.2 (a) and (b) of the Board's Rules of Procedure, to extend, when appropriate, the time period provided for public participation with respect to proposed regulations of the Board of Governors.

(9) Under the provisions of section 6621 of the Internal Revenue Code (26 U.S.C. 6621), to determine and report to the Secretary of Treasury or the Secretary's delegate, the average predominant prime rate quoted by commercial banks to large businesses.

(10) To grant or deny requests for the extension of any time period provided in any notice, order, rule or regulation of the Board relating to the filing of information, comments, opposition, briefs, exceptions or other matters, in connection with any application, request or petition for the approval, authority, determination, or permission of, or any other action by the Board sought by any person. Notwithstanding the provisions of § 265.3 hereof, no person claiming to be adversely affected by any action of the Secretary on any such request shall have the right to petition the Board or any Board member for review or reconsideration of such action.

---

[1] Subject, of course, to the limitations in section 25(a) relating to aggregate liabilities outstanding on debentures, bonds, and promissory notes.

(11) Under the provisions of section 11(i) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 248(i)) to conform references to administrative positions or units in outstanding rules and regulations of the Board to changes in the administrative structure of the Board, the Government of the United States and agencies thereof, and to conform citations and references in outstanding rules and regulations of the Board with other regulatory or statutory changes adopted or promulgated by the Board, the Government of the United States and agencies thereof.

(12) Pursuant to the requirement of the Privacy Act (5 U.S.C. 552a(p)), to approve future Annual Reports on the Privacy Act from the Board of Governors to the Office of Management and Budget for inclusion in the President's annual consolidated report to the Congress.

(13) Under the provisions of section 19(j) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 371b) and § 217.4 (a) and (d) of Regulation Q (12 CFR 217.4 (a) and (d)) to permit member banks to waive the penalty for early withdrawal of a time deposit in § 217.4(d) (Regulation Q), if all of the following conditions are met:

(i) The President of the United States declares an area a major disaster area or an emergency area pursuant to section 301 of the Disaster Relief Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5141) and Executive Order No. 11795 of July 11, 1974.

(ii) A waiver is limited in effectiveness to depositors suffering disaster or emergency-related losses in the officially designated disaster or emergency area.

(iii) The appropriate Reserve Bank recommends approval.

(b) The General Counsel of the Board (or, in the General Counsel's absence, the Acting General Counsel) is authorized:

(1) Under the provisions of section 2 (g) of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1841(g)), to determine whether a company that transfers shares to any of the types of transferees specified therein is incapable of controlling the transferee.

(2) Under the provisions of section 4(c)(8) of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1843(c)), to determine that a company engaged in activities of a financial, fiduciary, or insurance nature falls within the exemption described therein permitting retention of acquisition of control thereof by a bank holding company.

(3) Under the provisions of sections 1101-1103 and section 6158 of the Internal Revenue Code (26 U.S.C. 1101-1103 and 6158) to make certifications (prior and final) for Federal tax purposes with respect to distributions and divestitures pursuant to the Bank Holding Company Act.

(4) Under the provisions of section 4(c)(8) of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1843(c)(8)) and § 222.4(a) of this chapter (Regulation Y), to issue an order for a hearing to be conducted for the purpose of determining whether a company engaged in activities of a financial, fiduciary, or insurance nature falls within the exemption described therein permitting retention or acquisition of control thereof by a bank holding company.

(5) Pursuant to the provisions of Part 261 of this chapter, to make available information of the Board of the nature and in the circumstances described in §§ 261.6(b) and 261.7 of this chapter.

(6) Pursuant to § 263.6(d) of this chapter, to designate Board staff attorneys as Board counsel in any proceeding ordered by the Board to be conducted in accordance with Part 263 of this chapter.

(7) Pursuant to § 262.3(i) of this chapter (Rules of Procedure) to determine whether or not to grant a request for reconsideration of any action taken by the Board with respect to an application as provided in that part.

(8) To approve provisions of Federal Reserve Bank operating circulars related to uniform services.

(9) Under the provisions of § 212.4(b) of this chapter (Regulation L relating to interlocking relationships permitted by Board order), to grant exceptions from the prohibitions of Regulation L when the primary Federal supervisor of the depository institution in need of management assistance has approved the exception.

(10) Pursuant to the provisions of § 265.25 of this chapter (Rules of Procedure) after consultation with the directors of other interested Divisions of the Board and the appropriate Reserve Bank, to order, under such terms and conditions as the General Counsel deems appropriate, that a public meeting or other proceeding be held in connection with any application or notice filed with the Board and to designate the presiding officer in any such proceeding.

(c) The Director of the Division of Banking Supervision and Regulation (or, in the Director's absence, the Acting Director) is authorized:

(1) Under the provisions of sections 9 and 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 325, 338 and 625), section 5(c) of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1844(c)), and section 7(c)(1) of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3105(b)(1)), to select or to approve the appointment of Federal Reserve Examiners, assistant examiners and special examiners for the purpose of making examinations for or by the direction of the Board.

(2) Under the provisions of the 19th paragraph of section 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 625) and § 211.9(e) of this chapter (Regulation K), to require submission and publication of reports by an "Edge Act" corporation.

(3) Under the provisions of section 5 of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1844), after having received clearance from the Bureau of the Budget (where necessary) and in accordance with the law of Administrative Procedure (5 U.S.C. 553), to promulgate registration, annual report, and other forms for use in connection with the administration of such Act.

(4) Under the provisions of section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act (15 U.S.C. 781(g)):

(i) To accelerate the effective date of a registration statement filed by a member State bank with respect to its securities:

(ii) To accelerate termination of the registration of such a security that is no longer held of record by 300 persons; and

(iii) To extend the time for filing a registration statement by a member State bank.

(5) Under the provisions of section 12(d) of the Securities Exchange Act (15 U.S.C. 781(d)), to accelerate the effective date of an application by a member State bank for registration of a security on a national securities exchange.

(6) Under the provisions of section 12(f) of the Securities Exchange Act (15 U.S.C. 781(f)), to issue notices with respect to an application by a national securities exchange for unlisted trading privileges in a security of a member State bank.

(7) Under the provisions of section 12(h) of the Securities Exchange Act (15 U.S.C. 781(h)), to issue notices with respect to an application by a member State bank for exemption from registration.

(8) Under the provisions of § 206.5 (f) and (i) of this chapter (Regulation F), to permit the mailing of proxy and other soliciting materials by a member State bank before the expiration of the time prescribed therein.

(9) Under the provisions of §§ 206.41, 206.42, and 206.43 (Instructions as to Financial Statements 9, 4, and 3, respectively) of this chapter (Regulation F), to permit the omission of financial statements from reports by a member State bank and/or to require other financial statements in addition to, or in substitution for, the statements required therein.

(10) To exercise the functions described in of paragraph (f)(4) of this section in cases in which the conditions specified therein as prerequisites to exercise of such functions by the Federal Reserve Banks are not present or in which, even though such conditions are present, the appropriate Federal Reserve Bank considers that nevertheless it should not take action on the member bank's request, and to exercise the functions described in paragraphs (f) (1), (2), and (7) of this section in cases in which the appropriate Federal Reserve Bank considers that it should not take action to approve the member bank's request.

(11) Under sections 25 and 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act and Parts 211 and 213 of this chapter (Regulations K and M), to approve increases and reductions in the capital stock and amendments to the articles of association of a corporation organized under section 25(a) and additional investments by a member bank in the stock of a corporation operating under an agreement with the Board pursuant to section 25.

(12) To exercise the functions described in paragraphs (f)(15) (i) and (ii) of this section; and to exercise the functions described in paragraph (f)(15)(iii) of this section in those cases in which the appropriate Federal Reserve Bank concludes that, because of unusual considerations, or for other good cause, it should not take action.

(13) Under the provisions of the seventh paragraph of section 25 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 602), to require submission of a report of condition respecting any foreign bank in which a member bank holds stock acquired under the provisions of § 213.4 of this chapter (Regulation M).

(14) Under the twelfth paragraph of section 13 of the Federal Reserve Act (39 Stat. 754), to permit any member bank to accept drafts or bills of exchange drawn upon it for the purpose of furnishing dollar exchange.

(15) Under the provisions of section 4(b) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1814(b)), to certify to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation that, with respect to the admission of a State-chartered bank to Federal Reserve membership, the factors specified in section 6 of that Act (12 U.S.C. 1816) were considered.

(16) Under the provisions of section 17(A)(c)(2) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended (15 U.S.C. 78 q-1), to accelerate the effective date of a registration statement filed by a member State bank or a subsidiary thereof, a bank holding company, or a subsidiary of a bank holding company which is a bank as defined in section 3(a)(6) of that Act other than a bank specified in clause (i) or (iii) of section 3(a)(34)(B) of that Act (15 U.S.C. 78c) with respect to its transfer agent activities.

(17) Under the provisions of section 17A(c)(3)(C) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended (15 U.S.C. 78q-1(c)(3)(C)), to withdraw or cancel the transfer agent registration of a member State bank or a subsidiary thereof, a bank holding company, or a subsidiary bank of a bank holding company that is a bank as defined in section 3(a)(6) of the Act (other than a bank specified in clause (i) or (iii) of section 3(a)(34)(B) of the Act (15 U.S.C. 78c(a)(3)(a)(34)(B))) that has filed a written notice of withdrawal with the Board or upon a finding that such transfer agent is no longer in existence or has ceased to do business as a transfer agent.

(18) Under the provisions of §§ 207.2(f), 220.2(e), and 221.3(d) of this chapter (Regulations G, T, and U, respectively) to approve issuance of the list of OTC margin stocks and to add, omit, or remove any stock in circumstances indicating that such change is necessary or appropriate in the public interest.

(19) Under the provisions of § 207.4(a)(2)(ii) of this chapter (Regulation G) to approve repayments of the "deficiency" with respect to stock option or employee stock purchase plan credit in lower amounts and over longer periods of time than those specified in the regulation.

(20) Pursuant to the provisions of Part 261 of this chapter, to make available reports and other information of the Board acquired pursuant to Parts 207, 220, 221, and 224 (Regulations G, T, U and X) of the nature and in circumstances described in § 261.6(a) (2) and (3) of Part 261.

(21) Pursuant to the provisions of section 11(a) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 248(a)) and sections 17(c), 17(g), and 23 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78q(c), 78q(g), and 78w) to issue examination or inspection manuals, registration, report, agreement, and examination forms, guidelines, instructions or other similar materials for use in connection with the administration of sections 7, 8, 15B and 17A(c) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78g, 78h, 78o-4, and 78q-1).

(22) With the prior concurrence of the appropriate Federal Reserve Bank and the General Counsel of the Board, to act to refuse an application to the Board to stay, modify, terminate or set aside any effective cease and desist order previously issued by the Board pursuant to section 8(b) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act or any written agreement between the Board or the Reserve Bank and a bank holding company or any nonbanking subsidiary thereof or a State member bank. (12 U.S.C. 1818(b).)

(23) Pursuant to section 23 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78w) (i) to grant or deny requests for waiver of examination and waiting period requirements for municipal securities principals and municipal securities representatives under Municipal Securities Rulemaking Board Rule G-3, (ii) to grant or deny requests for a determination that a natural person or municipal securities dealer subject to a statutory disqualification is qualified to act as a municipal securities principal or municipal securities representative or municipal securities dealer under Municipal Securities Rulemaking Board Rule G-4, and (iii) to approve or disapprove clearing arrangements under Municipal Securities Rulemaking Board Rule G-8, in connection with the administration of Municipal Securities Rulemaking Board rules for municipal securities dealers for which the Board is the appropriate regulatory agency under section 3(a)(34) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78c(a)(34). (15 U.S.C. 78w and 12 U.S.C. 248.)

(24) To approve a State member bank's proposed subordinated debt issue as an addition to the bank's capital structure if all of the following conditions are met:

(i) The terms of the proposed debt issue satisfy the requirements of §§ 204.1(f)(3)(i) and 217.1(f)(3)(i) of this part (Regulations D and Q) and the Board's guideline criteria for approval of subordinated debt as an addition to capital.

(ii) The appropriate Reserve Bank recommends approval.

(iii) No significant policy issue is raised by the proposed issue as to which the Board has not expressed its view.

(25) Under the provisions of section 17(c)(3) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended, to make available upon request to the Securities and Exchange Commission reports of examination of transfer agents, clearing agencies and municipal securities dealers for which the Board is the appropriate regulatory agency for use by the Commission in the exercise of its supervisory responsibilities under that statute.

(26) To approve the retirement prior to maturity of capital notes issued by a state member bank pursuant to §§ 204.1(f)(3)(i) and 217.1(f)(3)(i) of this part (Regulations D and Q), provided the Director is satisfied that that bank's capital position will be adequate after the proposed redemption.

(27) Under sections 25 and 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act and Part 211 of this chapter (Regulation K), to waive the 45 days' prior notice period for establishment of a branch by a U.S. banking organization under § 211.3(a)(3) and for an investment that qualifies for the prior notification procedures set forth in § 211.5(c)(2) of Regulation K (12 CFR 211.3(a)(3) and 211.5(c)(2)).

(28) Pursuant to § 211.5(c)(2) of this chapter (Regulation K), to suspend the notification period or to require that an investor file an application for the Board's specific consent.

(29) To grant or deny requests for modification, including extension of time, for the performance of a commitment or condition relied on by the Board or its delegee in taking any action under the provisions of the Bank Holding Company Act, the Bank Merger Act, the Change in Bank Control Act of 1978, the Federal Reserve Act or the International Banking Act. In acting on requests hereunder, the Director may take into account changed circumstances and good faith efforts to fulfill the commitments or conditions, and shall consult with the Directors of other interested divisions, where appropriate. The Director may not take any action hereunder that would be inconsistent with or result in an evasion of the provisions of the Board's original action.

(30) Under the provisions of section 3(a) of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1842(a)) and the Change In Bank Control Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(j)) to take actions the Reserve Bank could take under paragraphs (f)(22) and (f)(30) of this section if immediate or expeditious action is required to avert failure of a bank or because of an emergency.

(31) to provide to the Department of Labor written notification of possible significant violations of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act ("ERISA") by State member banks, in accordance with section 3004(b) of ERISA and the Interagency Agreement adopted to implement the provisions thereof.

(32) Under the provisions of Subpart D of the Board's Regulation K (12 CFR Part 211), to determine the need for establishment and the amount of any allocated transfer risk reserve against certain international assets and to notify banking institutions of the determination and the amount of such reserve and whether such reserve may be reduced.

(33) Under the provisions of §§ 263.38 and 263.40 of the Board's Procedures for Issuance and Enforcement of Directives to Maintain Adequate Capital, Subpart D of the Board's Rules of Practice for Hearings (12 CFR Part 263), and with the concurrence of the general counsel, to issue a notice that a state member bank or bank holding company has insufficient capital and that directs said banking organization to file with its regional Reserve Bank a capital improvement plan.

(d)—(e) [Reserved]

(f) Each Federal Reserve Bank is authorized as to a member bank or other indicated organization for which the Reserve Bank is responsible for receiving applications or registration statements:

(1) Under the provisions of the third paragraph of section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 321), section 5155 of the Revised Statutes (12 U.S.C. 36), and § 208.8 of this chapter (Regulation H), to approve the establishment by a State member bank of a domestic branch if the Reserve Bank is satisfied that approval is warranted after giving consideration to:

(i) The bank's capitalization in relation to the character and condition of its assets and to its deposit liabilities and other corporate responsibilities, including the volume of its risk assets and of its marginal and inferior quality assets, all considered in relation to the strength of its management;

(ii) The ability of bank's management to cope successfully with existing or foreseeable problems, and to staff the proposed branch without any significant deterioration in the overall management situation;

(iii) The convenience and needs of the community;

(iv) The competitive situation (either actual or potential);

(v) The prospects for profitable operations of the proposed branch within a reasonable time, and the ability of the bank to sustain the operational losses of the proposed branch until it becomes profitable; and

(vi) The reasonableness of bank's investment in bank premises after the expenditure for the proposed branch.

(2) Under the provisions of the sixth paragraph of section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 324) and the provisions of section 5199 of the Revised Statutes (12 U.S.C. 60), to permit a State member bank to declare dividends in excess of net profits for the calendar year combined with the retained net profits of the preceding 2 years, less any required transfers to surplus or a fund for the retirement of any preferred stock, if the Reserve Bank is satisfied that approval is warranted after giving consideration to:

(i) The bank's capitalization in relation to the character and condition of its assets and to its deposit liabilities and other corporate responsibilities, including the volume of its risk assets and of its marginal and inferior quality assets, all considered in relation to the strength of its management; and

(ii) The bank's capitalization after payment of the proposed dividend.

(3) Under the provisions of the 10th paragraph of section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 328), to approve or deny applications by State banks for waiver of the required 6 months' notice of intention to withdraw from Federal Reserve membership.

(4) Under the provisions of the 11th paragraph of section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 329), to permit a State member bank to reduce its capital stock if its capitalization thereafter will be:

(i) In conformity with the requirements of Federal law, and

(ii) Adequate in relation to the character and condition of its assets and to its deposit liabilities and other corporate responsibilities, including the volume of its risk assets and of its marginal and inferior quality assets, all considered in relation to the strength of its management.

(5) Under the provisions of the seventeenth paragraph of section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 334), to extend the time, for good cause shown, within which an affiliate of a State member bank must file reports.

(6) Under the provisions of the seventh paragraph of section 13 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 372), to permit a member bank or a Federal or State branch or agency of a foreign bank that is subject to reserve requirements under section 7 of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3105) to accept drafts or bills of exchange in an aggregate amount at any one time up to 200 per cent of its paid up and unimpaired capital stock and surplus, if the Reserve Bank is satisfied that such permission is warranted after giving consideration to the institution's capitalization in relation to the character and condition of its assets and to its deposit liabilities and other corporate responsibilities, including the volume of its risk assets and of its marginal and inferior quality assets, all considered in relation to the strength of its management.

(7) Under the provisions of section 24A of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 371d), to permit a State member bank to invest in bank premises in an amount in excess of its capital stock, if the Reserve Bank is satisfied that approval is warranted after giving consideration to:

(i) The bank's capitalization in relation to the character and condition of its assets and to its deposit liabilities and other corporate responsibilities, including the volume of its risk assets and of its marginal and inferior quality assets, all considered in relation to the strength of its management: And provided, That:

(ii) Upon completion of the proposed investment, the bank's aggregate investment (direct and indirect) in bank premises plus the indebtedness of any wholly owned bank premises subsidiary will not exceed 40 percent of its total capital funds (including capital notes and debentures) plus reserves other than valuation reserves.

(8) Under the provisions of the ninth paragraph of section 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 615), to extend the time in which an "Edge Act" corporation must divest itself of stock acquired in satisfaction of a debt previously contracted.

(9) Under the provisions of the 22d paragraph of section 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 628), to extend the period of corporate existence of an "Edge Act" corporation.

(10) Under the provisions of section 5(a) of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1844(a)), to extend the time within which a bank holding company must file a registration statement.

(11) Under the provisions of section 4(a) of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1843(a)), to extend the time within which a bank holding company must divest itself of interests in nonbanking organizations.

(12) Under the provisions of section 4(c)(2) of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1843(c)), to extend the time within which a bank holding company must divest itself of interests in a nonbanking organization acquired in satisfaction of a debt previously contracted.

(13) Under the provisions of section 5(c) of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1844(c)), to require reports under oath to determine whether a company is complying with the provisions of such Act and the Board's regulations promulgated thereunder.

(14) Under the provisions of § 208.11(c) of this chapter (Regulation H), to extend the time within which a member bank that has given notice of intention to withdraw from membership must surrender its Federal Reserve Bank stock and its certificate of membership.

(15) Under the provisions of §§ 216.5 (b) and (d) and 216.6 of this chapter (Regulation P), with respect to State member banks only: (i) To require reports on security devices; (ii) to require special reports; and (iii) to determine, in view of the provisions of §§ 216.3 and 216.4 of this chapter, whether security devices and procedures are deficient in meeting the requirements of Part 216 of this chapter, to determine whether such requirements should be varied in the circumstances of a particular banking office, and to require corrective action.

(16) Under § 208.10(a) of this chapter (Regulation H), for good cause shown, to extend the time for publication of reports of condition, such extensions not ordinarily to be for more than 10 days except in very unusual circumstances beyond control of the reporting bank.

(17) Under the provisions of § 207.1(b) of this chapter (Regulation G), to approve applications for termination of registration by persons who are registered pursuant to § 207.1(a) of this chapter.

(18) Under the provisions of the second paragraph of section 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 612) and § 211.4(a)(2) of this chapter (Regulation K), to issue to an Edge Corporation a final permit to commence business and to approve amendments to the Articles of Association of any "Edge Corporation" to reflect the following:

(i) Any increase in the capital stock of such corporation where all additional shares are to be acquired by existing shareholders; (ii) any change in the location of the home office of such corporation within the city where such corporation is presently located; and (iii) any change in the number of members of the Board of Directors of such corporation; (iv) any change in the name of such corporation; and (v) deletion of the requirement that all directors and shareholders of such corporation must be U.S. citizens.

(19) Under § 225.4(d) of this chapter (Regulation Y),

(i) To notify a bank holding company that has informed it of a proposed acquisition of a going concern that, because the circumstances surrounding the application indicate that additional information is required or that the acquisition should be considered by the Board, the acquisition should not be consummated until specifically authorized by the Reserve Bank or by the Board.

(ii) To permit a bank holding company that has informed it of a proposed acquisition of a going concern to make the acquisition before the expiration of the 45-day period referred to in that paragraph, because exigent circumstances justify consummation of the acquisition at an earlier time.

(20) Under § 225.4(b)(1) of this chapter (Regulation Y), and subject to § 265.3 if a person submitting adverse comments that the Reserve Bank has decided are not substantive files a petition for review by the Board of that decision,

(i) To permit a bank holding company to engage de novo in activities specified in § 225.4(a) (or retain shares in a company established de novo and engaging in such activities) if its evaluation of the considerations specified in section 4(c)(8) of the Bank Holding Company Act leads it to conclude that the proposal can reasonably be expected to produce benefits to the public.

(ii) To notify a bank holding company that the proposal should not be consummated until specifically authorized by the Reserve Bank or by the Board or that the proposal should be processed in accordance with the procedures of § 225.4(b)(2).

(iii) To permit a bank holding company to consummate the proposal before the expiration of the 45-day period referred to in § 225.4(b)(1), because exigent circumstances justify consummation at an earlier time.

(21) Under § 225.4(c)(2) of this chapter (Regulation Y) to permit or stay a proposed de novo modification or relocation of activities engaged in by a bank holding company on the same basis as de novo proposals under paragraph (f)(20) of this section.

(22) Under the provisions of section 18(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1828(c)), sections 3(a) and 4(c)(8) of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1842(a) and 1843(c)(8)), sections 5(a), 5(b) and 7(d) of the Bank Service Corporation Act (12 U.S.C. 1865(a), 1865(b) and 1867(d)), and §§ 225.14 and 225.23 of Regulation Y (12 CFR 225.14 and 225.23), to approve applications requiring prior approval of the Board, and under the provisions of section 18(c)(4) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1828(c)(4)), to furnish to the Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation reports on competitive factors involved in a bank merger required to be approved by one of those agencies, unless one or more of the following conditions is present:

(i) A member of the Board has indicated an objection prior to the Reserve Bank's action; or

(ii) The Board has indicated that such delegated authority shall not be exercised by the Reserve Bank in whole or in part; or

(iii) A written substantive objection to the application has been properly made; or

(iv) The application raises a significant policy issue or legal question on which the Board has not established its position; or

(v) With respect to bank holding company formations, bank acquisitions or mergers, the proposed transaction involves two or more banking organizations:

(A) That rank among a State's five largest banking organizations, or among the 50 largest banking organizations in the United States (as measured by total domestic deposits within the relevant area); or

(B) That, upon consummation of the proposal, would control over 30 percent of total deposits in banking offices in the relevant geographic market, or would result in an increase of at least 200 points in the Herfindahl-Hirschman Index ("HHI") in a highly concentrated market (a market with a post-merger HHI of at least 1800); or

(C) Where divestitures designed to address any substantial anticompetitive effects are not effected on or before consummation of the proposed transaction; or

(vi) With respect to nonbank acquisitions:

(A) The nonbanking activities involved do not clearly fall within activities that the Board has designated as permissible for bank holding companies under § 225.25(b) of Regulation Y; or

(B) The proposal would involve the acquisition by a banking organization that has total domestic banking assets of $1 billion or more of a nonbanking organization that appears to have a significant presence in a permissible nonbanking activity.[3]

(23) Under the provisions of the first paragraph of section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 325) to approve applications for membership in the Federal Reserve System if the Reserve Bank is satisfied with respect to each of the following criteria:

(i) The financial history and condition of the applying bank and the general character of its management;

(ii) The adequacy of its capital structure in relation to the character and condition of its assets and to its existing and prospective deposit liabilities and other corporate responsibilities; and its future earnings prospects;

(iii) The convenience and needs of the community to be served by the bank; and

(iv) Whether its corporate powers are consistent with the purposes of the Federal Reserve Act and the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

(24) Under the provisions of section 5(c) of the Bank Holding Company Act, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1844(c)), to grant to a bank holding company a 90-day extension of time in which to file an annual report; and for good cause shown an additional extension of time, not to exceed 90 days, may be granted.

(25) Under § 211.5(e) of this chapter (Regulation K), to extend the time within which an investor must divest itself of interests in a foreign portfolio investment, joint venture or subsidiary acquired in satisfaction of a debt previously contracted.

(26) With the prior approval of both the Director of the Board's Division of Banking Supervision and Regulation and the General Counsel of the Board: (a) to enter into a written agreement with a bank holding company or any nonbanking subsidiary thereof, with a State member bank, or with any other person or entity subject to the Board's supervisory jurisdiction under 12 U.S.C. 1818(b) concerning the prevention or correction of an unsafe or unsound practice in conducting the business of such bank holding company, nonbanking subsidiary or State member bank or other entity, or concerning the correction or prevention of any violation of law, rule or regulation, or any condition imposed in writing by the Board in connection with the granting of any application or other request by the bank or company or any other appropriate matter; and (b) to stay, modify, terminate or suspend an agreement entered into pursuant to subdivision (a) of this paragraph. Any agreement authorized under this paragraph may, by its terms, be enforceable to the same extent and in the same manner as an effective and outstanding cease-and-desist order that has become final pursuant to 12 U.S.C. 1818 (b) and (k).

(27) Under the provisions of section 2(a)(5)(D) and 3(a) of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1841(a)(5)(D), 1842(a)), to extend the time within which a company or a bank must divest itself of bank shares acquired in satisfaction of a debt previously contracted.

(28) Under the provisions of the Change in Bank Control Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 1817(j)) and § 225.7 of this chapter (Regulation Y), with respect to a bank holding company or State member bank, to determine the informational sufficiency of notices and reports filed under the Act, to extend periods for consideration of notices, to determine whether a person who is or will be subject to a presumption described in § 225.7(a) of this chapter should file a notice regarding a proposed transaction, and, if all the following conditions are met, to issue a notice of intention not to disapprove a proposed change in control:

(i) No member of the Board has indicated an objection prior to the Reserve Bank's action.

(ii) No senior officer or director of an involved party is also a director of a Federal Reserve Bank or branch.

(iii) All relevant departments of the Reserve Bank concur.

(iv) If the proposal involves shares of a State member bank or bank holding company controlling a State member bank, the appropriate bank supervisory authorities have indicated that they have no objection to the proposal, or no objection has been received from the appropriate bank supervisory authorities within the time allowed by the Act.

(v) No significant policy issue is raised by the proposal as to which the Board has not expressed its view.

(29) Under the provisions of the twenty-first paragraph of section 4 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 306), to approve the appointment of assistant Federal Reserve agents (including representatives or alternate representatives of such agents).

(30) Under the provisions of the sixteenth paragraph of section 4 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 304), to classify member banks for the purposes of electing Federal Reserve Bank class A and class B directors, giving consideration to:

(i) The statutory requirement that each of the three groups shall consist as nearly as may be of banks of similar capitalization, and

(ii) The desirability that every member bank have the opportunity to vote for a class A or a class B director at least once every three years.

(31) To extend the time within which a bank holding company may acquire shares, a new bank to be acquired by a bank holding company may be opened for business, or a merger may be consummated in connection with an application approved by the Board, if no material change that is relevant to the proposal has occurred since its approval.

(32) To extend the time within which—(i) A State member bank may establish a domestic branch,

(ii) A member bank may establish a foreign branch, or

(iii) An "Edge Act" or "Agreement" corporation may establish a branch or agency, if no material change has occurred in the bank's (or corporation's) general condition since the application was approved.

(33) To extend the time within which an Edge or Agreement Corporation or a member bank or a bank holding company may accomplish a purchase of stock pursuant to section 25 or 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act or section 4(c)(13) of the Bank Holding Company Act if no material change has occurred in the general condition of the corporation, the member bank or the bank holding company since such authorization.

(34) To extend the time within which Federal Reserve membership must be accomplished, if no material change has occurred in the bank's general condition since the application was approved.

(35) To waive the penalty for deficient reserves by a member bank if, after a review of all the circumstances relating to such deficiency, the Reserve Bank concludes that waiver of the penalty is warranted, except that in no case shall a penalty for deficient reserves be waived if the deficiency arises out of the bank's gross negligence or conduct inconsistent with the principles and purposes of reserve requirements.

(36) Under the provisions of § 212.6 of this chapter (Regulation L relating to changes in circumstances requiring termination of interlocking management official relationships), to grant time for compliance with section 212 of up to an aggregate of 15 months from the date on which the change in circumstances as specified in that section occurs, if the granting of the additional time appears to be appropriate to avoid undue disruption of the annual shareholders' meetings of the depository organizations involved in the management interlocks.

(37) Under the provisions of section 5 of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3103), to enter into an agreement or undertaking with a foreign bank that such bank shall receive only such deposits at its out-of-home State branch as would be permissible for an Edge Corporation.

(38) Pursuant to § 211.4(c)(2) of this chapter (Regulation K), to approve an Edge Corporation application to establish a branch abroad, provided that no senior officer or director of the involved Parties is also a director of a Reserve Bank or branch and that no significant policy issue is raised by the proposal as to which the Board has not expressed its view.

(39) Pursuant to § 211.5(c) of this Chapter (Regulation K), to grant prior specific consent to an investor for an investment in its first subsidiary, its first joint venture, and its first portfolio investment, where such investment does not exceed the general consent limitations of § 211.5(c)(1)(i) of this Chapter.

(40) Pursuant to § 211.5(c)(2) of this Chapter (Regulation K), to require that an investor file an application for the Board's specific consent.

(41) Under the provisions of section 8(a) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78h(a)) concerning extensions of credit to finance securities transactions, to accept agreements on behalf of the Board from nonmember banks in the form prescribed by the Board.

(42) Under the provisions of section 4(a)(2) of the Bank Holding Company Act relating to grandfather privileges for certain nonbanking activities of bank holding companies, to determine that termination of grandfathered activities of a particular bank holding company is not warranted: Provided, The Reserve Bank is satisfied all of the following conditions are met:

(i) The company or its successor is "a company covered in 1970;"

(ii) The nonbanking activities for which indefinite grandfather privileges are being sought do not present any significant unsettled policy issues; and

(iii) The bank holding company was lawfully engaged in such activities as of June 30, 1968 and has been engaged in such activities continuously thereafter.

(43) Pursuant to § 211.3(a) of this chapter (Regulation K), to approve the establishment, directly or indirectly, of a foreign branch by a member bank where the application is not one for a full-service branch in a foreign country, provided that no senior officer or director of the involved parties is also a director of a Reserve Bank or branch and that no significant policy issue is raised by the proposal as to which the Board has not expressed its view.

(44) Pursuant to § 211.22(c)(1) of this chapter (Regulation K), to waive the 30 days' prior notification period with respect to a foreign bank's change of home State.

(45) Under sections 4(c)(8) and 5(b) of the Bank Holding Company Act and § 225.4(b) of the Board's Regulation Y, to approve applications by a bank holding company to open additional offices to engage in nonbanking activities for which the particular bank holding company has previously received approval pursuant to Board order, unless one of the conditions specified in § 265.2(f)(22) (i), (ii), (iii), or (iv) is present.

(46) Under section 4(c)(14) of the Bank Holding Company Act and Subpart C of the Board's Regulation K, to issue a notice of intention not to disapprove a proposed investment in an export trading company if all the following criteria are met:

(i) The proposed export trading company will be a wholly-owned subsidiary of a single investor, or ownership will be shared with an individual or individuals involved in the operation of the export trading company;

(ii) A bank holding company investor and its lead bank meet the minimum capital adequancy guidelines of the Board and the Comptroller of the Currency or have enacted capital enhancement plans that have been determined by the appropriate supervisory authority to be acceptable;

(iii) The proposed export trading company will take title to goods only against firm orders, except that the company may maintain inventory of goods worth up to $2 million;

(iv) The proposed activities of the export trading company do not include product research or design, product modification, or activities not specifically covered by the list of services contained in section 4(c)(14)(F)(ii) of the BHCA Act;

(v) The proposed leveraging ratio of the ETC (assets: capital) does not exceed 10:1, and

(vi) No other significant policy issue is raised on which the Board has not previously expressed its view.

(47) Under section 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act and Subpart A of the Board's Regulation K, to approve applications by a United States banking organization to establish an Edge corporation if all the following criteria are met:

(i) The U.S. banking organization meets capital adequacy guidelines and is otherwise in satisfactory condition;

(ii) The proposed Edge corporation will be a wholly-owned subsidiary of a single banking organization; and

(iii) No other significant policy issue is raised on which the Board has not previously expressed its view.

(g) The Director of the Division of International Finance (or, in the Director's absence, the Acting Director) is authorized, under the provisions of the sixth paragraph of section 14 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 358) to approve the establishment of foreign accounts with the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

(h) The Director of the Division of Consumer and Community Affairs (or, in the Director's absence, the Acting Director) is authorized:

(1) Pursuant to the provisions of section 11(a) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 248(a)), sections 108(b), 621(c), 704(b), 814(c) and 917(b) of the Consumer Credit Protection Act (15 U.S.C. 1607(b), 1681s(c), 1691c(b), 1692l(c), and 1693o(b), section 305(c) of the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act (12 U.S.C. 2804(c)), section 18(f)(3) of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 57a(f)(3), section 808(c) of the Civil Rights Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3608(c)), and section 5(c) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 (12 U.S.C. 1844(c)), to issue examination or inspection manuals, report, agreement, and examination forms, guidelines, instructions or other similar materials, in consultation with the Board's Legal Division where appropriate, for use in connection with:

(i) Sections 1-921 (excluding sections 201-500) of the Consumer Credit Protection Act (15 U.S.C. 1601-1693r).

(ii) Sections 301-312 of the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act (12 U.S.C. 2801-2811).

(iii) Sections 18(f) (1)-(3) of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 57a(f) (1)-(3)), and

(iv) Section 805 of the Civil Rights Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3605); and rules and regulations issued thereunder.

(v) Section 1364 of the National Flood Insurance Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 4101(a)) and sections 105(b) and 202(b) of the Flood Disaster Protection Act of 1973 (42 U.S.C. 4012a(b) and 4106(b)).

(vi) Section 19(j) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 371b).

(vii) Sections 801-806 of the Community Reinvestment Act (12 U.S.C. 2901-2905).

(2) Pursuant to section 703(b) of the Consumer Protection Act (15 U.S.C. 1691b(b)), to call meetings of and consult with the Consumer Advisory Council established under that section, to approve the agenda for such meetings, and to accept any resignation from Consumer Advisory Council members.

§ 265.3 Review of action at delegated level.

Any action taken at a delegated level shall be subject to review by the Board only if such review is requested by a member of the Board either on the member's own initiative or on the basis of a petition for review by any person claiming to be adversely affected by the action. Any such petition for review must be received by the Secretary of the Board not later than the fifth day after the date of such action. Notice of any such review shall be given to the person with respect to whom such action was taken and be received by such person not later than the close of the tenth day following the date of such action. Upon receipt of such notice, such person shall not proceed further in reliance upon such action until such person is notified of the outcome of review thereof.

PART 266—LIMITATIONS ON ACTIVITIES OF FORMER MEMBERS AND EMPLOYEES OF THE BOARD

Sec.
266.1 Basis and scope.
266.2 Definitions.
266.3 Limitations.
266.4 Suspension of appearance privilege.
266.5 Criminal penalties.

AUTHORITY: Sec. 11(i), Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 248(i)) (5 U.S.C. 552).

SOURCE: 38 FR 31672, Nov. 16, 1973, unless otherwise noted.

§ 266.1 Basis and scope.

This part, issued under authority of section 11(i) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 248(i)), and pursuant to section 552 of Title 5 of the United States Code, which requires that every agency shall publish in the FEDERAL REGISTER its rules of procedure, relates to limitations on former members and employees of the Board with respect to participation in matters connected with their former duties and official responsibilities while serving with the Board.[1]

§ 266.2 Definitions.

(a) "Employee" means a regular officer or employee of the Board; it does not include a consultant to the Board.[2]

(b) "Official responsibility," with respect to a matter, means administrative, supervisory, or decisional authority, whether intermediate or final, exercisable alone or with others, personally or through subordinates, to approve, disapprove, decide, or recommend Board action or to express staff opinions in dealings with the public.

(c) "Appear personally" includes personal appearance or attendance before, or personal communication, either written or oral, with the Board or a Federal Reserve Bank of any member or employee thereof, or personal participation in the formulation or preparation of any material presented or communicated to, or filed with, the Board, in connection with any application or interpretation arising under the statutes or regulations administered by the Board or the Federal Reserve Banks, except that requests for general information or explanations of Board policy or interpretation shall not be construed to be a personal appearance.

§ 266.3 Limitations.

(a) Matters on which Board member or employee worked. No former member or employee of the Board shall appear personally before the Board or a Federal Reserve Bank on behalf of anyone other than the United States, an agency thereof, or a Federal Reserve Bank, in connection with any judicial or other proceedings, application, request for ruling or determination, or other particular matter involving a specific party or parties in which the United States, an agency thereof, or a Federal Reserve Bank is also a party or has a direct and substantial interest and in which he participated personally and substantially as a member or employee of the Board through approval, disapproval, decision, recommendation, advice, investigation or otherwise.

(b) Matters within Board member or employee's official responsibility. No former member or employee of the Board shall appear personally before the Board or a Federal Reserve Bank on behalf of anyone other than the United States, an agency thereof, or a Federal Reserve Bank, in connection with any judicial or other proceeding, application, request for ruling or determination, or other particular matter involving a specific party or parties in which the United States, an agency thereof, or a Federal Reserve Bank is also a party or has a direct and substantial interest, and which matter was in process during his tenure of office or period of employment and under his official Board responsibility, at any time within a period of one year after the termination of such responsibility.

(c) Consultation as to propriety of appearance before the Board. Any former member or employee of the Board who wishes to personally appear before the Board or a Federal Reserve Bank on behalf of any party other than the United States or an agency thereof or a Federal Reserve Bank at any time within two years from termination of employment with the Board is advised to consult the General Counsel or the Secretary of the Board as to the propriety of such appearance.

[1] While the Board has not adopted rules with regard to the disclosure of unpublished information by former Board members and employees, it advises such persons not to disclose unpublished information of the Board obtained in the course of their work. Questions in this regard may be addressed to the General Counsel or the Secretary of the Board.

[2] While former consultants to the Board are not covered by these Rules, they appear to fall within the coverage of section 207 of the United States Criminal Code (18 U.S.C. 207) that provides criminal penalties for engaging in activities similar, although not identical, to those described in paragraphs (a) and (b) of § 266.3.

(d) Rulemaking proceedings. Nothing in this section shall preclude a former member or employee of the Board from representing another person in any Board or Federal Reserve Bank proceeding governed by a rule, regulation, standard, or policy of the Board solely by reason of the fact that such former member or employee participated in or had official responsibility in the formation or adoption of such rule, regulation, standard, or policy.

(e) Effective date. This part shall become effective November 6, 1973. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the limitations of this part shall not apply to any activities with respect to a specific matter before the Board in which any former Board member or employee may be engaged on September 21, 1973, the date of publication of this part, until the expiration of 60 days following the effective date of this part or of such additional period as the Secretary of the Board may determine to be appropriate in order to avoid inequity.

§ 266.4 Suspension of appearance privilege.

If any person knowingly and willfully fails to comply with the provisions of this part, the Board may decline to permit such person to appear personally before it or a Federal Reserve Bank for such periods of time as it may determine and may impose such other sanctions as the Board may deem just and proper.

§ 266.5 Criminal penalties.

Any former member or employee of the Board who engages in actions in contravention of paragraph (a) or (b) of § 266.3 may be subject to criminal penalties for violation of section 207 of the United States Criminal Code (18 U.S.C. 207).

PART 267—RULES OF ORGANIZATION AND PROCEDURE OF THE CONSUMER ADVISORY COUNCIL

Sec.

267.1 Statutory authority.
267.2 Purposes and objectives of the Council.
267.3 Members.
267.4 Officers.
267.5 Meetings.
267.6 Amendments.

Authority: Sec. 703, Equal Credit Opportunity Act, as amended in Pub. L. 94-239.

Source: 41 FR 49802, Nov. 11, 1976, unless otherwise noted.

§ 267.1 Statutory authority.

Section 703 of the Equal Credit Opportunity Act, as amended, provides:

> The Board [of Governors of the Federal Reserve System] shall establish a Consumer Advisory Council to advise and consult with it in the exercise of its functions under the Consumer Credit Protection Act and to advise and consult with it concerning other consumer related matters it may place before the Council. In appointing the members of the Council, the Board shall seek to achieve a fair representation of the interests of creditors and consumers. The Council shall meet from time to time at the call of the Board. Members of the Council who are not regular full-time employees of the United States shall, while attending meetings of such Council, be entitled to receive compensation at a rate fixed by the Board, but not exceeding $100 per day, including travel time. Such members may be allowed travel expenses, including transportation and subsistence, while away from their homes or regular place of business.

§ 267.2 Purposes and objectives of the Council.

The Council shall advise and consult with the Board in the exercise of the Board's functions under the Consumer Credit Protection Act and with regard to other matters the Board may place before the Council.

§ 267.3 Members.

(a) The Council shall consist of not more than 30 members appointed by the Board. The term of office of each member of the Council shall be three years. However, the initial terms of the members first taking office shall expire as follows: approximately one-third on December 31, 1977, and approximately one-third at the end of each of the two succeeding calendar years. After the expiration of any member's term of office, such member may continue to serve until a successor has been appointed by the Board. The Board shall have the authority to appoint persons to fill vacancies on the Council.

(b) Resignation. Any member may resign at any time by giving notice to the Board. Any such resignation shall take effect upon its acceptance by the Board.

(c) Compensation. Members who are not regular full-time employees of the United States shall be paid travel expenses, including transportation and subsistence, and compensation of $100 for each day devoted to attending and traveling to and from meetings.

§ 267.4 Officers.

(a) Chairman. The Board shall appoint a Chairman and a Vice Chairman from among the members of the Council, who shall serve at the pleasure of the Board. The Chairman, or in the Chairman's absence the Vice Chairman, shall preside at all meetings of the Council. The Board may appoint a Chairman pro tem who shall preside at a meeting of the Council in the absence of the Chairman and Vice Chairman.

(b) Secretary. The Board shall designate a member of its staff, who may but need not be the representative described in § 267.5(c), to act as Secretary of the Council. The Secretary shall record and maintain minutes of the meetings of the Council. Minutes of each meeting shall contain, among other things, a record of the persons present, a description of the matters discussed, and recommendations made. The person acting as Secretary at a meeting shall certify to the accuracy of the minutes of that meeting.

§ 267.5 Meetings.

(a) Time. Meetings of the Council shall be held at least once each year and may be held more frequently at the call of the Board.

(b) Agenda. Each meeting of the Council shall be conducted in accordance with an agenda formulated or approved by the Board.

(c) Board representation. Each meeting of the Council shall be attended by a representative of the Board who is either a member of the Board or of the Board's staff. The Board representative shall have authority to and shall adjourn any meeting of the Council when such representative considers adjournment to be in the public interest.

(d) Public nature. (1) Each meeting of the Council shall, to the extent of reasonably available facilities, be open to public observation unless the Board, in accordance with paragraph (d)(6), of this section, determines that the meeting shall be closed.

(2) Notice of the time, place and purpose of each meeting, as well as a summary of the proposed agenda, shall be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER not more than 45 or less than 15 days prior to the scheduled meeting date. Insofar as is practicable, a list of persons and organizations interested in the Council shall be maintained, and a notice of each meeting shall be mailed to such persons and organizations at least 15 days in advance of the scheduled meeting date. Shorter notice may be given when the Board determines that its business so requires; in such event, the public, including persons and organizations described in the preceding sentence, will be given notice at the earliest practicable time.

(3) Members of the public may file written statements with the Council prior to the meeting concerning matters on the Council's agenda. The person presiding at the Council meeting may permit members of the public to submit written statements on such matters within a specified time after the Council meeting. All such submissions shall be circulated to the Council members as soon as is practicable.

(4) Oral presentations at the Council meetings by members of the public shall not be permitted except upon invitation of the Council. However, if the Council and the Board determine that public hearings regarding a matter or matters of concern to the Council are warranted, members of the public may make presentations at such hearings in accordance with procedures established therefor.

(5) Minutes of meetings, records, reports, studies, and agenda of the Council shall be available to the public for copying at the Board's offices in Washington, D.C., in accordance with the provisions of 12 CFR Part 261 Rules Regarding Availability of Information. Requests for copies of such documents should be addressed to the Secretary, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Washington, D.C. 20551.

(6) The Board may close to the public any meeting, or any portion of any meeting, of the Council if it determines that such meeting or portion thereof is likely to:

(i) Disclose matters that relate solely to internal personnel rules and practices of the Council;

(ii) Disclose trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and privileged or confidential;

(iii) Involve accusing any person of a crime, or formally censuring any person;

(iv) Disclose information of a personal nature where disclosure would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy;

(v) Disclose information contained in or related to examination, operating or condition reports prepared by, on behalf of, or for the use of an agency responsible for the regulation or supervision of financial institutions;

(vi) Disclose information the premature disclosure of which would be likely to lead to significant financial speculation in currencies, securities, or commodities or significantly endanger the stability of any financial institution;

(vii) Disclose information the premature disclosure of which would be likely to frustrate significantly implementation of a proposed Board action, unless the Board has already disclosed to the public the content or nature of its proposed action, or where the Board is required by law to make such disclosure on its own initiative prior to taking final action on the proposal; or (viii) Which relate to any legal proceedings, agency adjudicatory proceeding or arbitration involving the Board or the Council.

(e) If the Board closes a meeting or any portion of a meeting, the Council will issue, at least annually, a report containing a summary, consistent with 5 U.S.C. 552(b) (1970), of the Council's activities during such closed meetings or portions of meetings.

§ 267.6 Amendments.

These rules of organization and procedure may be amended or repealed at any time by action of the Board, provided, however, that members of the Council shall be promptly notified by the Board of any such action.

SOURCE: 50 FR 18780, May 2, 1985, unless otherwise noted.

Subpart A—General Provisions

§ 268.101 Authority, purpose, and scope.

(a) Authority. This regulation (Code of Federal Regulations, Title 12, Part 268) is issued by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System ("Board") under the authority of sections 10(4) and 11(l) of the Federal Reserve Act (partially codified in 12 U.S.C. 244 and 248(l)).

(b) Purpose and scope. This regulation sets forth the Board's policy, program, and procedures for providing equal opportunity to Board employees and applicants for employment without regard to race, color, religion, sex, national origin, age, or physical or mental handicap. It also sets forth the Board's policy, program, and procedures for prohibiting discrimination on the basis of physical or mental handicap in programs and activities conducted by the Board.

§ 268.102 Board program.

The Board has established, maintains, and carries out a continuing affirmative program designed to promote equal opportunity in every aspect of the Board's personnel policies and practices in the employment, development, advancement, and treatment of employees and applicants for employment. Under the terms of its program, the Board:

(a) Provides sufficient resources to administer its equal opportunity program in a positive and effective manner and assure that the principal and operating officials responsible for carrying out the equal opportunity program meet established qualifications requirements;

(b) Seeks to eradicate every form of prejudice or discrimination based upon race, color, religion, sex, national origin, age, or physical or mental handicap, from the Board's personnel policies and practices and working conditions;

(c) Provides the maximum feasible opportunity to employees to enhance their skills through on-the-job training, work study programs, and other training programs so that they may perform at their highest potential and advance in accordance with their abilities;

(d) Communicates the Board's equal opportunity policy and program and its employment needs to all sources of job candidates without regard to race, color, religion, sex, national origin, age, or physical or mental handicap, and solicits their recruitment assistance on a continuing basis;

(e) Participates at the community level with other employers, schools, universities, and other public and private groups in cooperative action to improve employment opportunities;

(f) Reviews, evaluates, and controls managerial and supervisory performance in such a manner as to insure a continuing affirmative application and vigorous enforcement of the policy of equal opportunity, and provides orientation, training, and advice to managers and supervisors to assure their understanding and implementation of the equal opportunity policy and program;

(g) Provides recognition to employees, supervisors, managers, and units demonstrating superior accomplishment in equal opportunity;

(h) Informs its employees and applicants for employment of the Board's affirmative equal opportunity policy and program and enlists their cooperation;

(i) Provides counseling for employees and applicants for employment who believe they have been discriminated against because of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, age, or physical or mental handicap, and for resolving informally the matters raised by them;

(j) Provides for the prompt, fair, and impartial consideration and disposition of complaints involving issues of discrimination on grounds of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, age, or physical or mental handicap;

(k) Has established a system for periodically evaluating the effectiveness of the Board's overall equal opportunity effort;

(l) Makes reasonable accommodations to the religious needs of employees and applicants for employment, including the needs of those who observe the Sabbath on other than Sunday, when those accommodations can be made (by substitution of another qualified employee, by a grant of leave, a change of a tour of duty, or other means) without undue hardship on the business of the Board;

(m) Utilizes to the fullest extent the present skills of employees by all means, including the redesigning of jobs where feasible so that tasks not requiring the full utilization of skills of incumbents are concentrated in jobs with lower skill requirements; and

(n) Prepares annually equal opportunity plans of action which include, but are not limited to:

(1) Provision for the establishment of training and education programs designed to provide maximum opportunity for employees to advance so as to perform at their highest potential;

(2) describes the qualifications, in terms of training and experience relating to equal opportunity, of the principal and operating officials concerned with administration of the Board's equal opportunity program; and

(3) describes the allocation of personnel and resources proposed by the Board to carry out its equal opportunity program.

§ 268.103 Definitions.

(a) "Age" is an inclusive term which means the age of at least forty years.

(b) "Complainant" means any party who files a claim, complaint, or request for counseling under this regulation.

(c) "Complaint of discrimination" means any claim or complaint filed under this regulation or the Board's grievance procedures alleging discrimination in employment because of race, color, national origin, religion, sex, age, or physical or mental handicap.

(d) "Grievance procedures" means the Board's Adjusting Work-related Problems Policy.

Subpart B—Administration

§ 268.201 Equal employment designations.

The Board designates an EEO Programs Officer, an EEO Officer, a Federal Women's Program Manager, a Hispanic Program Coordinator, a Handicapped Program Coordinator, and such EEO Counselors and other persons as may be necessary to assist the Board in carrying out the functions described in this Regulation.

§ 268.202 The Administrative Governor.

(a) The Administrative Governor is a member of the Board of Governors. He or she is designated by the Chairman of the Board of Governors, charged with overseeing the internal affairs of the Board and empowered to make decisions and determinations on behalf of the Board of Governors when authority to do so is delegated to him or her.

(b) The Administrative Governor is hereby delegated the authority to make determinations adjudicating complaints of discrimination pursuant to §§ 268.311, 268.412, and 268.711(k) of this Regulation. The Administrative Governor is further delegated the authority to order such corrective measures, including such remedial actions as may be required by §§ 268.315, 268.412(c), 268.414(a), and 268.711(k) of this Regulation, as he or she may consider necessary, including such disciplinary action as is warranted by the circumstances when an employee has been found to have engaged in a discriminatory practice.

(c) The Administrative Governor may delegate to any officer or employee of the Board any of his or her duties or functions under this Regulation.

(d) The Administrative Governor may refer to the Board of Governors for determination or decision any complaint of discrimination that the Administrative Governor would otherwise decide pursuant to §§ 268.311, 268.412, and 268.711(k) of this Regulation, and may make any recommendations for any changes in programs and procedures designed to eliminate discriminatory practices or to improve the Board's programs under this Regulation, and may make any recommendations for remedial or disciplinary action with respect to managerial or supervisory employees who have failed in their responsibilities, or employees who have been found to have engaged in discriminartory practices, or with regard to any other matter which the Administrative Governor believes merits the attention of the Board of Governors.

§ 268.203 The Staff Director for Management.

(a) When so authorized by the Administrative Governor, the Staff Director for Management shall make any determinations on complaints of discrimination that would otherwise be made by the Administrative Governor under §§ 268.311 and 268.412. The Staff Director for Management shall issue letters of findings under § 268.711(g). The Staff Director For Management shall order such corrective measures, including such remedial actions as may be required by §§ 268.315, 268.412(c), 268.414(a), and 268.711(h) as he or she may consider necessary, and including the recommendation for such disciplinary action as is warranted by the circumstances when an employee is found to have engaged in a discriminatory practice.

(b) The Staff Director for Management shall review the record on any complaint under this Regulation before a determination is made by the Board of Governors or the Administrative Governor on the complaint and make such recommendations as to the determination as he or she considers desirable, including any recommendation for such disciplinary action as is warranted by the circumstances when an employee is found to have engaged in a discriminatory practice.

(c) The Staff Director for Management may make changes in programs and procedures designed to eliminate discriminatory practices and improve the Board's program for equal opportunity.

§ 268.204 The EEO Programs Officer.

The EEO Programs Officer shall perform the following functions:

(a) Advise the Board, the Administrative Governor, and the Staff Director for Management with respect to the preparation of plans, goals, objectives, procedures, regulations, reports, and other matters pertaining to the Board's program established under § 268.102, and administer the Board's equal opportunity program;

(b) Evaluate from time to time the sufficiency of the Board's program for equal opportunity and report thereon to the Board, the Administrative Governor, and the Staff Director For Management, with recommendations as to any improvement or correction needed, and may make recommendations regarding remedial or disciplinary action with respect to managerial or supervisory employees who have failed in their responsibilities;

(c) Recommend changes in programs and procedures designed to eliminate discriminatory practices and improve the Board's program for equal opportunity;

(d) Provide for counseling by an EEO Counselor, of any aggrieved employee or applicant for employment who believes that he or she has been discriminated against because of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, age, or physical or mental handicap, and for attempting to resolve on an informal basis the matter raised by the employee or applicant before a complaint of discrimination may be filed under §§ 268.302 and 268.403 of the regulation;

(e) Publicize to Board employees and applicants for employment and post permanently on official bulletin boards:

(1) The names and office addresses and the EEO responsibilities of the Staff Director For Management, the EEO Programs Officer, the Federal Women's Program Manager, the EEO Officer, the Hispanic Program Coordinator, and the Handicapped Program Coordinator;

(2) The names and office addresses of EEO Counselors, the segments of the Board for which they are responsible, the availability of EEO Counselors to counsel an employee or applicant for employment who believes that he or she has been discriminated against because of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, age, or physical or mental handicap; and the requirement that an employee or applicant for employment must consult the EEO Counselor as provided by §§ 268.301 and 268.402; and

(3) Time limits for contacting EEO Counselors;

(f) Provide to each employee annually (and the Division of Personnel shall provide to each applicant for employment) a copy of a notice summarizing the general purposes of this Regulation and specifying where copies of this Regulation can be obtained. The EEO Programs Officer shall ensure that copies of this Regulation are posted in permanent locations in all Board facilities. The EEO Programs Officer shall, on the request of any employee or applicant for employment provide that employee or applicant with a copy of this Regulation;

(g) Appoint any investigative officers or complaints examiners as necessary to administer this Regulation. The EEO Programs Officer is authorized to request the loan of any investigative officers or complaints examiners from any other agency as necessary to administer this Regulation. The EEO

Programs Officer, with the concurrence of the Staff Director For Management, may authorize appropriate reimbursement to such agencies for the services of such investigative officers and complaints examiners;

(h) Provide for the receipt and investigation of individual complaints of discrimination, subject to §§ 268.301 through 268.312; and

(i) Provide for the acceptance and processing and/or rejection of class action complaints in accordance with Subpart D of this regulation.

§ 268.205 Federal Women's Program Manager.

The Federal Women's Program Manager shall perform the following functions: Advise the Board of Governors, the Administrative Governor, the Staff Director For Management, and the EEO Programs Officer on matters affecting, and administer the Board's program with respect to, the employment and advancement of women.

§ 268.206 Hispanic Program Coordinator.

The Hispanic Program Coordinator shall perform the following functions: Advise the Board of Governors, the Administrative Governor, the Staff Director For Management, and the EEO Programs Officer on matters affecting, and administer the Board's program with respect to, the employment and advancement of Hispanics.

§ 268.207 Handicapped Program Coordinator.

The Handicapped Program Coordinator shall perform the following functions: Advise the Board of Governors, the Administrative Governor, the Staff Director For Management, and the EEO Programs Officer on matters affecting, and administer the Board's program with respect to, the employment and advancement of handicapped persons.

Subpart C—Complaints of Discrimination on Grounds of Race, Color, Religion, Sex, National Origin, Age, or Physical or Mental Handicap

§ 268.301 Precomplaint processing.

(a) An aggrieved person who believes he or she has been discriminated against on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, age, or physical or mental handicap, shall consult with an EEO Counselor to try and resolve the matter. The EEO Counselor shall make whatever inquiry he or she believes is necessary into the matter and seek a solution to the matter on an informal basis. The EEO Counselor shall advise the aggrieved person of the complaint procedure under this subpart, counsel him or her concerning the issues in the matter, keep a record of the counseling activities so as to brief the EEO Officer on those activities, and when advised that a formal complaint of discrimination has been filed by an aggrieved person, shall submit a written report to the EEO Officer with a copy to the aggrieved person summarizing the EEO Counselor's actions and advice to the aggrieved person concerning the issues in the matter. The EEO Counselor shall, insofar as is practicable, conduct the final interview of the aggrieved person not later than 21 calendar days after the date on which the matter was called to the EEO Counselor's attention by the aggrieved person. If, within 21 calendar days, the matter has not been resolved to the satisfaction of the aggrieved person, that person shall be immediately informed in writing, at the time of the final interview, of his or her right to file a complaint of discrimination and of his or her right to representation, including legal counsel. The notice shall inform the aggrieved person of his or her right to file a discrimination complaint at any time up to 15 calendar days after receipt of the said notice, identify to the aggrieved person the officials with whom such complaint may be filed, and advise the aggrieved person that he or she must inform the Board immediately if he or she retains counsel or any other representative in connection with the complaint.

(b) The EEO Counselor shall not attempt in any way to restrain the aggrieved person from filing a complaint.

(c) The EEO Counselor shall not reveal the identity of any aggrieved person who consults with the EEO Counselor, except when authorized to do so by the aggrieved person, or until the Board has accepted a complaint of discrimination from the aggrieved person.

(d) The EEO Counselor shall have the full cooperation of all employees in the performance of his or her duties under this section.

(e) The EEO Counselor shall be free from restraint, interference, coercion, discrimination or reprisal, in connection with the performance of his or her duties under this section.

§ 268.302 Filing of complaint.

(a) Time limits. (1) The Board shall accept a complaint for processing under this subpart only if:

(i) The complainant brought to the attention of an EEO Counselor the matter causing him or her to believe he or she had been discriminated against within 30 calendar days of the date of the matter or, if a personnel action, within 30 calendar days of its effective date; and

(ii) The complainant, or his or her authorized representative, submitted his or her written complaint to an appropriate official within 15 calendar days of the date of his or her final interview with the EEO Counselor.

(2) A complaint shall be deemed to have been filed on the date it was received, if delivered to an appropriate official, or on the date postmarked if addressed to an appropriate official designated to receive complaints under paragraph (b)(3) of this section.

(b) Filing requirements. (1) A complaint of discrimination must be submitted in writing by the complainant, or his or her authorized representative, and must be signed by the complainant.

(2) A complaint of discrimination may be submitted in person or by mail. If a complainant, or his or her authorized representative, submits the complaint by mail, use of registered mail is advised.

(3) The complaint shall be submitted to either the Administrative Governor, the Staff Director For Management, the EEO Programs Officer, the EEO Officer, the Federal Women's Program Manager, the Hispanic Program Coordinator, or the Handicapped Program Coordinator. All complaints received by the Administrative Governor, the Staff Director For Management, the EEO Programs Officer, the Federal Women's Program Manager, the Hispanic Program Coordinator, or the Handicapped Program Coodinator shall be transmitted to the EEO Officer for acknowledgment of receipt in accordance with § 268.302(c)(1).

(c) Acknowledgement of receipt of complaint.

(1) The EEO Officer shall acknowledge receipt of the complaint to the complainant, or his or her authorized representative, in writing.

(2) The EEO Officer shall advise the complainant, or his or her authorized representative, of all administrative rights of the complainant and of complainant's right to file a civil action as set forth in § 268.316, including the time limits imposed on the exercise of those rights.

(d) Extensions of time. (1) The EEO Programs Officer shall extend the time limits set forth in this section:

(i) On written request of the complainant, or his or her authorized representative, when the complainant shows that he or she was not notified of the time limits and was not otherwise aware of them, or that he or she was prevented by circumstances beyond his or her control from submitting the matter within the time limits; or

(ii) For other reasons considered sufficient by the EEO Programs Officer.

(2) Written requests for extension of time under this section shall be filed with the EEO Programs Officer.

§ 268.303 Right to representation.

At any stage in the presentation of a complaint under this subpart, including the counseling stage under § 268.301, the complainant shall have the right to be accompanied, represented, and advised by a representative, including legal counsel, of his or her choice. Complainant shall be advised of this right in writing by the EEO Counselor or other appropriate person responsible for matters under this regulation at the commencement of processing of any matter subject to this regulation.

§ 268.304 Presentation of the complaint.

(a) If the complainant is an employee of the Board, he or she shall have a reasonable amount of official time to present his or her complaint, if he or she is otherwise in an active duty status.

(b) If the complainant is an employee of the Board and the complainant designates another employee of the Board as his or her representative, the representative shall have a reasonable amount of official time, if he or she is otherwise in an active duty status, to present the complaint.

§ 268.305 Rejection or cancellation of the complaint.

(a) The EEO Programs Officer shall reject a complaint which was not timely filed under § 268.302(a), unless the time for filing has been extended pursuant to § 268.302(d), and shall reject those allegations in a complaint which are not within the purview of this regulation or which set forth identical matters as contained in a previous complaint filed by the same complainant which is pending at the Board or has been decided by the Board. The EEO Programs Officer may cancel a complaint for failure of the complainant to prosecute the complaint. Such action canceling a complaint may be taken only after the EEO Programs Officer has provided the complainant, or his or her authorized representative, a written request, including notice of proposed cancellation, that the complainant provide certain information or otherwise proceed with the complaint, and the complainant has failed to satisfy this request within 15 calendar days of his or her receipt of the request.

(b) The EEO Programs Officer shall transmit any decision to reject or cancel by letter to the complainant, or his or her authorized representative. The decision letter shall inform the complainant of his or her right to have the decision of the EEO Programs Officer submitted to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission for review as described in Subpart H and of his or her right to file a civil action as described in § 218.316 of this subpart, and of the time limits applicable thereto.

§ 268.306 Investigation.

(a) The EEO Officer shall advise the EEO Programs Officer of the receipt of a complaint. The EEO Programs Officer shall provide for the prompt investigation of the complaint. The EEO Programs Officer shall appoint an investigative officer to investigate the complaint. The investigative officer, if an employee of the Board, shall occupy a position which is not, directly or indirectly, under the jurisdiction of the Director of the Division or Office of the Board in which the complaint arose. The investigation shall include a thorough review of the circumstances under which the alleged discrimination occurred, the treatment of members of the complainant's group identified by his or her complaint as compared with the treatment of other employees or applicants for employment in the Board Division or Office in which the alleged discrimination occurred, and any policies and practices related to the work situation which may constitute or appear to constitute discrimination, even though they have not been expressly cited by the complainant. Information needed for an appraisal of the utilization of members of the complainant's group as compared to the utilization of persons outside the complainant's group shall be recorded in statistical form in the investigative file, but specific information as to a person's membership or nonmembership in the complainant's group needed to facilitate an adjustment of the complaint or to make an informed decision on the complaint shall, if available, be recorded by name in the investigative file. (As used in this subpart, the term "investigative file" shall mean the various documents and information acquired during the investigation under this section—including affidavits of the complainant, of the alleged discriminating official, and of witnesses, and copies of or extracts from records, policy statements, or regulations of the Board—organized to show their relevance to the complaint or the general environment out of which the complaint arose.) If necessary, the investigative officer may obtain information regarding the membership or nonmembership of a person in the complainant's group by asking each person concerned to provide the information voluntarily; he or she shall not require or coerce an employee to provide this information.

(b) The investigative officer shall be authorized:

(1) To investigate all aspects of complaints of discrimination;

(2) To request all employees of the Board to cooperate with him or her in the conduct of the investigation; and

(3) To require that statements of witnesses be under oath or affirmation without a pledge of confidence.

§ 268.307 Adjustment of complaint and offer of hearing.

(a) The Board shall provide an opportunity for adjustment of the complaint on an informal basis after the complainant has reviewed the investigative file. For this purpose, the EEO Officer shall furnish complainant, or his or her authorized representative, with a copy of the investigative file promptly after receiving it from the investigative officer, and shall provide an opportunity for the complainant, or his or her authorized representative, to discuss the investigative file with appropriate officials.

(b) If an adjustment of the complaint is arrived at and approved, the terms of the adjustment shall be reduced to writing and made a part of the complaint file, with a copy of the terms of the adjustment provided to the complainant. An informal adjustment of a complaint may include an award of backpay, attorney's fees and/or costs, if appropriate, or other appropriate relief. Where the parties agree on an adjustment of the complaint, but cannot agree on whether attorney's fees and/or costs should be awarded or on the amount of attorney's fees and/or costs to be awarded, the issue of the award of attorney's fees and/or costs or the amount which should be awarded may be severed and shall be the subject of a final decision pursuant to § 268.311. The decision of whether to award attorney's fees and/or costs or of the amount to be awarded may be submitted for review by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, pursuant to subpart H of this Regulation.

(c) If the Board does not carry out, or rescinds any action specified by the terms of the adjustment for any reason not attributable to the actions or conduct of the complainant, the EEO Officer shall, upon the complainant's written request, reinstate the complaint for further processing at the point that processing ceased because of the adjustment.

(d) If an adjustment of the complaint is not arrived at, the complainant shall be notified in writing by the EEO Officer:

(1) Of the proposed disposition of the complaint;

(2) Of the complainant's right to a hearing and decision by the Board of Governors or the Administrative Governor under § 268.311, or the Staff Director For Management if he or she is delegated the authority under § 268.202(c), if the complainant notifies the EEO Officer in writing within 15 calendar days of receipt of the notice that he or she desires a hearing; and

(3) Of the complainant's right to a decision by the Board of Governors or the Administrative Governor under § 368.311, or the Staff Director For Management if he or she is delegated the authority under § 268.202(c), without a hearing.

(e) If the complainant fails to notify the EEO Officer of his or her wishes within 15 calendar days of receipt of the notice set forth in § 268.307(d), the EEO Officer shall transmit the complaint file to the Board of Governors or the Administrative Governor, or to the Staff Director For Management if he or she has been authorized to act for the Administrative Governor pursuant to § 268.202(c), for decision under § 268.311.

§ 268.308 Hearing on the complaint.

A hearing, held pursuant to an election by the complainant as provided in § 268.307(d)(2), shall be conducted in the following manner:

(a) Complaints examiner. The hearing shall be held by a complaints examiner, who must be an employee of another agency, except in a case where the Board might be prevented by reason of law from divulging information concerning the matter complained of to a person who has not received a required security clearance. In that event, the EEO Programs Officer, in consultation with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, shall select an impartial employee of the Board to serve as a complaints examiner. In selecting a complaints examiner, the Board shall request the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to supply the name of a complaints examiner who has been certified by the Commission as qualified to conduct a hearing under this section.

(b) Arrangements for hearing. The EEO Officer shall transmit to the complaints examiner the complaint file containing all the documents described in § 268.312 that have been acquired up to that point in the processing of the complaint and including the original copy of the investigative file (which shall be considered by the complaints examiner in making his or her recommended decision on the complaint). The complaints examiner shall review the entire complaint file to determine whether further investigation is needed before scheduling the hearing. When the complaints examiner determines that further investigation is needed, he or she shall remand the complaint to the Board's EEO Officer for further investigation or arrange for the appearance of witnesses necessary to supply the needed additional information at the hearing. The requirements of § 268.306 shall apply to any further investigation of the complaint. The complaints examiner shall schedule the hearing at a convenient time and place.

(c) Conduct of hearing. (1) Attendance at the hearing shall be limited to persons determined by the complaints examiner to have direct connection with the complaint.

(2) The complaints examiner shall conduct the hearing so as to bring out pertinent facts, including the production of pertinent documents. Rules of evidence shall not be applied strictly, but the complaints examiner shall exclude irrelevant or unduly repetitious evidence. Information having a bearing on the complaint or employment policy or practices relevant to the complaint shall be received in evidence. The complaints examiner, the complainant, his or her authorized representative, and representatives of the Board at the hearing shall be given the opportunity to cross-examine witnesses who appear and testify. Testimony shall be under oath or affirmation.

(d) Powers of complaints examiner. In addition to the other powers vested in the complaints examiner by the Board in this Regulation, the complaints examiner shall be authorized to:

(1) Administer oaths or affirmations;

(2) Regulate the course of the hearing;

(3) Rule on offers of proof;

(4) Limit the number of witnesses whose testimony would be unduly repetitious; and

(5) Exclude any person from the hearing for contumacious conduct or misbehavior that obstructs the hearing.

(e) Witnesses at hearing. The complaints examiner shall request the Board or any agency that is subject to the authority of an Equal Employment Opportunity Commission complaints examiner to make available as a witness at the hearing any employee(s) requested by the complainant when the complaints examiner determines that the testimony of such employee(s) is necessary. He or she may also request the appearance of any other person whose testimony he or she determines is necessary to furnish information pertinent to the complaint under consideration. The complaints examiner shall give the complainant his or her reasons for the denial of a request for the appearance of employees or other persons as witnesses and shall insert those reasons in the record of the hearing. The Board or any agency that is subject to the authority of an Equal Employment Opportunity Commission complaints examiner may make its employees available as witnesses at a hearing on a complaint when requested to do so by the complaints examiner and it is not administratively impracticable to comply with the request for a witness. When it is administratively impracticable to comply with the request for a witness, the Board or other agency shall provide an explanation to the complaints examiner. If the complaints examiner determines that the explanation is inadequate, he or she shall so advise the Board or other agency and request it to make the employee available as a witness at the hearing. If the complaints examiner determines that the explanation is adequate, he or she shall insert it in the record of the hearing, provide a copy of the explanation to the complainant, and make arrangements to secure testimony from the employee through a written interrogatory. Employees of the Board shall be on duty status during the time they are made available as witnesses.

(f) Record of hearing. The hearing shall be recorded and transcribed verbatim. All documents submitted to, and accepted by, the complaints examiner at the hearing shall be made part of the record of the hearing. If the Board submits a document that is accepted, the Board shall promptly furnish a copy to the complainant. If the complainant submits a document that is accepted, he or she shall promptly make the document available to the Board's representative for reproduction.

(g) Findings, analysis, and recommendations. The complaints examiner shall transmit to the EEO Programs Officer:

(1) The complaint file (including the record of the hearing);

(2) The findings and analysis of the complaints examiner with regard to the matter that gave rise to the complaint and the general environment out of which the complaint arose;

(3) The recommended decision of the complaints examiner on the merits of the complaint, including recommended remedial action, where appropriate, with regard to the matter that gave rise to the complaint and the general environment out of which the complaint arose.

The complaints examiner shall notify the complainant of the date on which this was done. In addition, the complaints examiner shall transmit, by separate letter to the EEO Programs Officer, any findings and recommendations he or she considers appropriate with respect to conditions at the Board which do not bear directly on the matter which gave rise to the complaint or which bear on the general environment out of which the complaint arose.

§ 268.309 Relationship to other agency appellate procedure.

When an employee or applicant for employment makes a written allegation of discrimination on grounds of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, age, or physical or mental handicap, in connection with an action that would otherwise be processed under a grievance procedure or other system of the Board, the allegation of discrimination shall be processed under this Regulation.

§ 268.310 Avoidance of delay.

(a) The complaint shall be resolved promptly. To this end, both the complainant and the Board shall proceed with the complaint as specified in this Regulation without undue delay so that the complaint is resolved within 180 calendar days after it was filed, including time spent in the processing of the complaint by the complaints examiner under § 268.308. When the complaint has not been resolved within such time, the complainant may petition the Staff Director For Management for a review of the reasons for the delay.

(b) The EEO Programs Officer may cancel a complaint if the complainant fails to prosecute the complaint without undue delay. Such action may be taken only after the EEO Programs Officer has provided the complainant, or his or her authorized representative, with a written request, including notice of the proposed cancellation, that the complainant provide certain information or otherwise proceed with the complaint, and the complainant has failed to satisfy this request within 15 calendar days of receipt by the complainant, or his or her authorized representative, of this request. However, instead of cancelling for failure to prosecute, the complaint may be adjudicated if sufficient information for that purpose is available.

(c) When the complaints examiner has submitted a recommended decision finding discrimination and a final decision has not been issued by the Board of Governors or the Administrative Governor under § 268.311, or by the Staff Director For Management if he or she is delegated the authority to act for the Administrative Governor pursuant to § 268.202(c), within 180 calendar days after the date the complaint was filed, the complaints examiner's recommended decision shall become a final decision binding on the Board 30 calendar days after its submission to the EEO Programs Officer. In such event, the complainant shall be notified of the decision and furnished a copy of the findings, analysis, recommended decision of the complaints examiner under § 268.308(g), and a copy of the hearing record and shall be advised that at the complainant's request the decision may be reviewed by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission pursuant to Subpart H of this part, of his or her right to file a civil action as described in § 268.316 of this regulation, and of the time limits applicable thereto.

§ 268.311 Decision on the complaint.

(a) The EEO Programs Officer shall notify the Board of Governors when the complaint is ripe for decision under this section. At the request of any member of the Board of Governors made within 7 calendar days of such notice, the Board of Governors shall make the decision on the complaint. If no such request is made, the Administrative Governor, or the Staff Director For Management if he or she is delegated the authority to do so under § 268.202(c), shall make the decision on the complaint. The decision on the complaint shall be made based on information in the complaint file and shall be made in a fair, impartial, and objective manner.

(b)(1) The decision on the complaint shall be in writing, shall reflect the date of issuance, and shall be transmitted to the complainant, or his or her authorized representative, either by certified mail, return receipt requested, or by any other method which establishes the date of receipt by the complainant, or his or her authorized representative.

(2) When there has been a hearing on the complaint, the decision letter shall transmit a copy of the findings, analysis, and recommended decision of the complaints examiner under § 268.308(g) of this subpart and a copy of the hearing record. The decision shall adopt, reject, or modify the recommended decision of the complaints examiner under § 268.308(g). If the decision is to reject or modify the recommended decision, the decision letter shall set forth the specific reasons in detail for rejection or modification.

(3) When there has been no hearing under § 268.308 and no adjustment under § 268.307, the decision letter shall set forth the findings, analysis, and decision of the Board of Governors or the Administrative Governor under paragraph (a) of this section, or of the Staff Director For Management if he or she has been delegated the authority to make the decision under § 268.202(c).

(c) The decision shall require any remedial action authorized by law and determined to be necessary or desirable to resolve the issue of discrimination and to promote the policy of equal opportunity, whether or not there is a finding of discrimination. When discrimination is found, the decision maker shall:

(1) Advise the complainant, or his or her authorized representative, that any request for attorney's fees and/or costs must be documented and submitted within 20 calendar days of receipt;

(2) Require remedial action to be taken in accordance with § 268.315;

(3) Review the matter giving rise to the complaint to determine whether disciplinary action against any alleged discriminatory officials is appropriate; and

(4) Record the basis for his or her decision to take, or not to take, disciplinary action, but this decision shall not be recorded in the complaint file.

(d) When the final decision provides for an award of attorney's fees and/or costs, the amount of those awards shall be determined under § 268.315(c). In the unusual situation in which the Board determines not to award attorney's fees and/or costs to a prevailing complainant, the decision shall set forth the specific reasons for denying the award.

(e) The decision letter shall inform the complainant that at his or her request the decision may be reviewed by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission under Subpart H, of his or her right to file a civil action in accordance with § 268.316 of this subpart, and of the time limits applicable thereto.

§ 268.312 Complaint file.

(a) The EEO Officer shall maintain a complaint file containing all documents pertinent to the complaint, except as provided in § 268.311(c)(4). The complaint file shall include copies of:

(1) The notice of the EEO Counselor to the complainant, or his or her authorized representative, pursuant to § 268.301(a);

(2) The written report of the EEO Counselor under § 268.301(a) to the EEO Office on whatever precomplaint counseling efforts were made with regard to the complainant's case;

(3) The complaint;

(4) The investigative file;

(5) If the complaint is withdrawn by the complainant, a written statement of the complainant, or his or her authorized representative, to that effect;

(6) If adjustment of the complaint is arrived at under § 268.307, the written record of the terms of the adjustment;

(7) If no adjustment of the complaint is arrived at under § 268.307, a copy of the letter under § 268.307(d) notifying the complainant, or his or her authorized representative, of the proposed disposition of the complaint and of complainant's right to a hearing;

(8) If the decision is made under § 268.307(e), a copy of the letter to the complainant transmitting that decision;

(9) If a hearing was held, the record of the hearing, together with the complaints examiner's findings, analysis, and recommended decision on the merits of the complaint;

(10) The recommendations of the Staff Director For Management or the EEO Programs Officer, if any, to the Board of Governors, the Administrative Governor, or the Staff Director For Management; and

(11) If the decision is made under § 268.311, a copy of the letter transmitting the decision.

(b) The complaint file shall contain no document that has not been made available to the complainant, or his or her authorized representative, including a physician designated in writing by the complainant.

§ 268.313 Joint processing and consolidation of complaints.

(a) Two or more complaints of discrimination filed by employees or applicants for employment with the Board consisting of substantially similar allegations of discrimination may, with written permission of the complainants, be consolidated by the EEO Programs Officer.

(b) Two or more individual complaints of discrimination from the same employee or applicant for employment may, at the discretion of the EEO Programs Officer, be joined for processing after notifying the complainant that the complaints will be processed jointly.

§ 268.314 Freedom from reprisal or interference.

(a) Freedom from reprisal. Complainants, their authorized representatives, and witnesses shall be free from restraint, interference, coercion, discrimination, or reprisal at any stage in the presentation and processing of a complaint, including the counseling stage under § 268.301, or any time thereafter.

(b) Review of allegations of reprisal. A complainant, his or her authorized representative, or a witness who alleges restraint, interference, coercion, discrimination, or reprisal for having filed a complaint or for having participated in the processing of a complaint under this subpart, may, if an employee or applicant for employment, have the allegation reviewed as an individual complaint of discrimination subject to the provisions of this subpart.

(c) Consolidation of complaints. When a complainant alleges that he or she has been subjected to restraint, interference, coercion, discrimination, or reprisal in connection with the filing of a prior complaint of discrimination and that prior complaint from which the allegation derives is in process at the Board at the time the allegation is made, the complainant may request the EEO Programs Officer to consolidate the allegation with the prior complaint. If the prior complaint is at the hearing stage of the complaint process under § 268.308, the complainant may request the complaints examiner to consolidate the allegation with the complaint at the hearing. The EEO Programs Officer or the complaints examiner may grant the request, Provided, that the request is made within 30 calendar days of occurrence of the act which forms the basis of the allegation, or within 30 calendar days of its effective date, if a personnel action. The EEO Programs Officer or the complaints examiner may also deny the request, at his or her discretion, and require that the allegation be processed in accordance with § 268.314(b).

§ 268.315 Remedial actions.

(a) Remedial action involving an applicant. (1) When it is determined that an applicant for employment has been discriminated against, the Board shall offer the applicant employment of the type and grade denied him or her, unless the record contains clear and convincing evidence that the applicant would not have been hired even absent discrimination. The offer shall be made in writing. The applicant shall have 15 calendar days from receipt of the offer within which to accept or decline the offer. Failure to notify the Board of his or her decision within the 15-day period will be considered a declination of the offer, unless the applicant can show that circumstances beyond his or her control prevented the applicant from responding within the time limit. If the offer is accepted, appointment shall be retroactive to the date the applicant should have been hired, subject to the limitation in paragraph (a)(3) of this section. Back pay, computed in the manner set forth in paragraph (d) of this section, shall be awarded from the beginning of the retroactive period, subject to the same limitation, until the date the individual actually enters on duty. The applicant shall be deemed to have performed services for the Board during this period of retroactivity for all purposes except for meeting service requirements for completion of a probationary or trial period that is required. If the offer is declined, the applicant shall be awarded a sum equal to the back pay he or she would have received, computed in the manner set forth in paragraph (d) of this section, from the date he or she would have been appointed until the date the offer was made subject to paragraph (a)(3) of this section. The applicant shall be informed in the offer of his or her right to this award in the event he declines the offer.

(2) When it is determined that discrimination existed at the time the applicant was considered for employment but that there is clear and convincing evidence that the applicant would not have been hired even absent the discrimination, the Board shall consider the applicant for any existing vacancy of the type and grade for which he or she was considered initially and for which he or she is qualified before consideration is given to other candidates. If the applicant is not selected, the Board shall record the reasons for nonselection. If no vacancy exists, the Board shall give the applicant priority consideration for the next vacancy for which he or she is qualified. This priority shall take precedence over all other Board employment priorities.

(3) A period of retroactivity or a period for which back pay is awarded under this paragraph may not extend from a date earlier than two years prior to the date on which the complaint was initially filed. If a finding of discrimination was not based on a complaint, the period of retroactivity or period for which back pay is awarded under this paragraph may not extend earlier than two years prior to the date the finding of discrimination was recorded.

(b) Remedial action involving an employee. When it is determined that a Board employee has been discriminated against, the Board shall take remedial actions which may include, but need not be limited to, one or more of the following:

(1) Retroactive promotion, with back pay computed in the manner set forth in paragraph (d) of this section, unless the record contains clear and convincing evidence that the employee would not have been promoted or employed at a higher grade, even absent discrimination. The back pay liability may not accrue from a date earlier than two years prior to the date the discrimination complaint was filed, but, in any event shall not exceed the date the employee would have been promoted. If a finding of discrimination was not based on a complaint, the back pay liability may not accrue from a date earlier than two years prior to the date the finding of discrimination was recorded, but, in any event, shall not exceed the date he or she would have been promoted;

(2) Consideration for promotion to a position for which the employee is qualified before consideration is given to other candidates, if the record contains clear and convincing evidence that, although discrimination existed at the time selection for promotion was made, the employee would not have been promoted even absent discrimination. If the employee is not selected, the Board shall record the reasons for nonselection. This priority consideration shall take precedence over all other Board employment priorities;

(3) Cancellation of an unwarranted personnel action and restoration of the employee;

(4) Expunction from the Board's records of any reference to or any record of an unwarranted disciplinary action;

(5) Full opportunity to participate in the employee benefit denied him or her (e.g., training, preferential work assignments, overtime scheduling).

(c) Attorney's fees or costs— (1) Awards of attorney's fees or costs. The Board may award the complainant reasonable attorney's fees and/or costs incurred in the processing of complaints of discrimination or retaliation under this subpart. In a decision made under §§ 268.307, 268.310, 268.311, 268.314, or under Subpart D of this regulation, or in connection with any review by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission pursuant to Subpart H, the Board may award reasonable attorney's fees or costs incurred in the processing of the matter.

(i) A finding of discrimination shall raise a presumption of entitlement to an award of attorney's fees.

(ii) Attorney's fees may be allowed only for the services of members of the Bar and law clerks, paralegals, or law students under supervision of members of the Bar, except that no award is allowable for the services of any employee of the Federal Government.

(iii) Attorney's fees shall be paid only for services performed after the filing of the complaint under § 268.302 and after the complainant has notified the Board that he or she is represented by an attorney, except that fees are allowable for a reasonable period of time prior to the notification of representation for any services performed in reaching a determination to represent the complainant. Written submissions to the Board which are signed by the attorney shall be deemed to constitute notice of representation.

(2) Amount of award. When it is determined to award attorney's fees and/or costs, the complainant's attorney shall submit a verified statement of costs and attorney's fees, as appropriate, to the Board within 20 calendar days of receipt of the decision. A statement of attorney's fees shall be accompanied by an affidavit executed by the attorney of record itemizing the attorney's charges for legal services, and both the verified statement and the accompanying affidavit shall be made a part of the complaint file. The amount of attorney's fees and/or costs to be awarded the complainant shall be determined by agreement between the complainant, the complainant's representative, and a representative of the Board. Such agreement shall immediately be reduced to writing. If the complainant, the complainant's representative, and the Board's representative cannot reach an agreement on the amount of attorney's fees and costs within 20 calendar days of receipt of the verified statement and accompanying affidavit, the amount of attorney's fees and/or costs to be awarded shall be decided under § 268.311 within 30 calendar days of receipt of the statement and affidavit. Such decision shall include the specific reasons for determining the amount of the award.

(i) The amount of the attorney's fees and costs awarded shall be determined in accordance with the following standards: The time and labor required; the novelty and difficulty of the questions presented by the complaint; the skill requisite to perform the legal services properly; the preclusion of other employment by the attorney due to acceptance of the case; the customary fee; whether the fee is fixed or contingent; time limitations imposed by the client or the circumstances; the amount involved and the results obtained; the experience, reputation, and ability of the attorney; the undesirability of the case; the nature and length of the professional relationship between the complainant and the attorney; and awards in similar cases.

(ii) The costs which may be awarded include:

(A) Fees of the reporter for all or any of the stenographic transcript necessarily obtained for use in the case unless provided by the Board;

(B) Fees and disbursements for printing and witnesses except to the extent already paid for by the Board;

(C) Fees for exemplification and copies of papers necessarily obtained for use in the case except to the extent already paid for by the Board; and

(D) Any other costs determined to be reasonable by the Board of Governors or the Administrative Governor under § 268.311, or the Staff Director For Management if he or she is authorized to make the decision under § 268.202(c). Witness fees shall be awarded in accordance with the provisions of 28 U.S.C. 1821. However, no award may be made for a Board or Federal government employee who is in a duty status when made available as a witness.

(d) Computation of back pay. (1) The Board will compute for the period covered by the corrective action the pay, allowances, and differentials the complainant would have received if discrimination had not occurred.

(2) No complainant shall be granted more pay, allowances, or differentials under this paragraph than he or she would have received if discrimination had not occurred.

(3) Except as provided in paragraph (d)(4) of this section, in computing back pay under this paragraph, the Board shall not include:

(i) Any period during which the complainant was not ready, willing, and able to perform his or her duties because of an incapacitating illness or injury; or

(ii) Any period during which the complainant was unavailable for the performance of his or her duties for reasons other than those related to, or caused by, the discriminatory actions against the complainant.

(4) In computing the amount of back pay under this paragraph, the Board shall grant, upon written request of a complainant, any sick or annual leave available to the complainant for a period of incapacitation if the complainant can establish that the period of the incapacitation was the result of illness or injury.

(5) In computing the amount of back pay under this paragraph, the Board shall deduct:

(i) Any amounts earned by a complainant from other employment during the period covered by the corrective action. The Board will include as other employment only employment engaged in by the complainant to take the place of employment from which the complainant had been separated from or did not receive because of discrimination against the complainant; and

(ii) Any erroneous payments received from the Board or other Federal government agencies as a result of the discriminatory actions against complainant, which, in the case of erroneous payments received from the Board's or other Federal government retirement systems, shall be returned to the appropriate system.

§ 268.316 Right to file a civil action.

(a) Except as provided in paragraph (c) of this section, a complainant is authorized to file a civil action against the Board in an appropriate United States District Court:

(1) Within 30 calendar days of receipt of notice of final action on the complaint under §§ 268.305(b), 268.307(b), 268.310 (b) and (c), and 268.311;

(2) After 180 calendar days from a date of filing a complaint with the Board if there has been no decision;

(3) Within 30 calendar days following receipt of notice of the final findings of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission on a request to review the final action by the Board pursuant to Subpart H of this regulation; or

(4) After 180 calendar days from the date of filing of a request for review of a final decision of the Board by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission if there has been no findings by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission pursuant to Subpart H of this regulation.

(b) For the purposes of this part, the decision of the Board shall be final only when the Board makes a determination on all of the issues in the complaint, including whether or not to award attorney's fees and/or costs. If a determination to award attorney's fees and/or costs is made, the decision is not final until the procedures are followed for determining the amount of the award as set forth in § 268.315(c) of this subpart.

(c) A complainant who filed a complaint of discrimination because of age or because of denial of equal pay shall file civil actions within the time limits set forth in § 268.505 of Subpart E of this regulation for complaints of age discrimination and in § 268.904 of Subpart I of this regulation for complaints of denial of equal pay.

§ 268.317 Notice of right.

The Board shall notify a complainant in writing of his or her right to file civil action, and of the 30-day time limit to file civil suit specified in § 268.316, or of the 6 year time limit to file civil action specified in § 268.505 in the case of discrimination because of age and in § 268.904 in the case of denial of equal pay, in any final action on a complaint under this subpart.

§ 268.318 Effect on administrative procedure.

The filing of a civil action does not terminate Board processing of a complaint or Equal Employment Opportunity Commission review of any Board action under this subpart.

Subpart D—Class Complaints of Discrimination

§ 268.401 Definitions.

(a) A "class" is a group of Board employees or applicants for employment, on whose behalf it is alleged that they have been, are being, or may be adversely affected, by a Board personnel management policy of practice which the Board has authority to rescind or modify, and which discriminates against the group on the basis of their common race, color, religion, sex, national origin, age, or mental or physical handicap.

(b) A "class complaint" is a written complaint of discrimination filed on behalf of a class by the agent of the class alleging that:

(1) The class is so numerous that a consolidated complaint of the members of the class is impractical;

(2) There are questions of fact common to the class;

(3) The claims of the agent of the class are typical of the claims of the class; and

(4) The agent of the class, or his or her authorized representative, if any, will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the class.

(c) An "agent of the class" is a class member who acts for the class during the processing of the class complaint.

§ 268.402 Precomplaint processing.

(a) An employee or applicant for employment who wishes to be an agent and who believes he or she has been discriminated against shall consult with an EEO Counselor within 90 calendar days of the matter giving rise to the allegation of individual discrimination or within 90 calendar days of its effective date if a personnel action.

(b) The EEO Counselor shall:

(1) Advise the aggrieved person of the discrimination complaint procedures, of his or her right to representation, including legal counsel, throughout the precomplaint and complaint process, and of the right to anonymity only during the precomplaint process;

(2) Make whatever inquiry he or she believes is necessary;

(3) Make an attempt at informal resolution through discussion with appropriate officials;

(4) Counsel the aggrieved person concerning the issues involved;

(5) Inform the EEO Officer and other appropriate officials when he or she believes corrective action is necessary;

(6) Keep a record of all counseling activities; and

(7) Summarize actions and advice in writing both to the EEO Officer and the aggrieved person concerning the issues arising from the personnel management policy or practice in question.

(c) The EEO Counselor shall conduct a final interview and terminate counseling with the aggrieved person not later than 30 calendar days after the date on which the allegation of discrimination was called to the attention of the EEO Counselor. During the final interview, the EEO Counselor shall inform the aggrieved person in writing that counseling is terminated, that he or she has the right to file a class complaint of discrimination with appropriate officials of the Board, of the time limits for filing a class complaint, of his or her right to representation, including legal counsel, and of his or her duty to assure that the Board is immediately informed if legal representation is obtained.

(d) The EEO Counselor shall not attempt in any way to restrain the aggrieved person from filing a complaint or to encourage the person to file a complaint.

(e) The EEO Counselor shall not reveal the identity of an aggrieved person during the period of consultation, except when authorized to do so in writing by the aggrieved person.

(f) All Board employees and officers shall fully cooperate with EEO Counselors in the performance of their duties under this section. EEO Counselors shall have routine access to personnel records of the Board without unwarranted invasion of privacy.

(g) Corrective action taken as a result of counseling shall be consistent with law and the Board's regulations, rules, and instructions.

§ 268.403 Filing and presentation of a class complaint.

(a) The complaint must be submitted in writing by the agent, or his or her authorized representative, and be signed by the agent.

(b) The complaint shall set forth specifically and in detail:

(1) A description of the Board personnel management policy or practice giving rise to the complaint; and

(2) A description of the resultant personnel action or matter adversely affecting the agent.

(c) The complaint must be filed not later than 15 calendar days after the agent's receipt of the notice of final interview with an EEO Counselor pursuant to § 268.402(c).

(d) The complaint must be filed with either the Administrative Governor, the Staff Director For Management, the EEO Programs Officer, the EEO Officer, the Federal Women's Program Manager, the Hispanic Program Coordinator, or the Handicapped Program Coordinator.

(e) A complaint shall be deemed filed on the date it is postmarked, or, in the absence of a postmark, on the date it is received by an official with whom complaints may be filed.

(f) At all stages, including counseling, in the preparation and presentation of a complaint or claim, and review by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission of a Board decision on a complaint or claim under subpart H, the agent or claimant shall have the right to be accompanied, represented, and advised by a representative of his or her own choosing, including legal counsel, provided the choice of a representative does not involve a conflict of interest or conflict of position. The representative shall be designated in writing and the designation made a part of the class complaint file.

(g) If the agent is a Board employee in an active duty status, he or she shall have a reasonable amount of official time to prepare and present the complaint. Board employees, including attorneys, who are representing employees of the Board in discrimination complaint cases must be permitted to use a reasonable amount of official time to carry out that responsibility whenever it is consistent with the faithful performance of their duties.

§ 268.404 Acceptance, rejection or cancellation.

(a) Within 10 calendar days of the Board's receipt of a complaint, the EEO Officer shall forward the complaint, along with a copy of the EEO Counselor's report and any other information pertaining to timeliness or other relevant circumstances related to the complaint, the the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission with a request for designation of a complaints examiner qualified to conduct the proceeding.

(b) The complaints examiner may recommend that the Board reject the complaint, or a portion thereof, for any of the following reasons:

(1) The complaint was not timely filed;

(2) The complaint consists of an allegation identical to an allegation contained in a previous complaint filed on behalf of the same class which is pending before the Board or which has been resolved or decided by the Board;

(3) The complaint is not within the purview of this subpart;

(4) The agent failed to consult an EEO Counselor in a timely manner;

(5) The complaint lacks specificity and detail;

(6) The complaint was not submitted in writing, or was not signed by the agent; or

(7) The complaint does not meet all of the prerequisites set forth in § 268.401(b) of this subpart.

(c) If an allegation is not included in the EEO Counselor's report, the complaints examiner shall afford the agent 15 calendar days to explain whether the matter was discussed with an EEO Counselor and if not, why he or she did not discuss the allegation with an EEO Counselor. If the explanation is not satisfactory, the complaints examiner may recommend that the Board reject the allegation. If the explanation is satisfactory, the complaints examiner may refer the allegation to the Board for further counseling of the agent.

(d) If an allegation lacks specificity an detail, the complaints examiner shall afford the agent 15 calendar days to provide specific and detailed information. The complaints examiner may recommend that the Board reject the complaint if the agent fails to provide such information within the specified time period. If the information provided contains new allegations outside the scope of the complaint, the complaints examiner must advise the agent how to proceed on an individual or class basis concerning these allegations.

(e) The complaints examiner may recommend that the Board extend the time limits for filing a complaint and for consulting with an EEO Counselor when the agent, or his or her authorized representative, shows that he or she was not notified of the prescribed time limits and was not otherwise aware of them or that he or she was prevented by circumstances beyond his or her control from acting within the time limits.

(f) When appropriate, the complaints examiner may recommend to the Board that a class be divided into subclasses and that each subclass be treated as a class, and the provisions of this section then shall be construed and applied accordingly.

(g) The complaints examiner may recommend that the Board cancel a complaint after it has been accepted because of failure of the agent to prosecute the complaint. This action may be taken only after the complaints examiner has provided the agent, or his or her authorized representative, a written request, including notice of proposed cancellation, that the agent provide certain information or otherwise proceed with the complaint, and the agent has failed to satisfy this request within 15 calendar days of his or her receipt of the request.

(h) An agent, or his or her authorized representative, must be informed by the complaints examiner in a request under paragraph (c) or (d) of this section that his or her complaint may be rejected if the information is not provided.

(i) The complaints examiner's recommendation to the Board on whether to accept, reject, or cancel a complaint shall be transmitted in writing to the Board and the agent, or his or her authorized representative. The complaints examiner's recommendation to accept, reject, or cancel shall become the Board's decision unless the EEO Programs Officer rejects or modifies the decision within 10 calendar days of its receipt. The EEO Programs Officer shall notify the agent, or his or her authorized representative, and the complaints examiner of this or her decision to accept, reject, or cancel a complaint. The notice of a decision to reject or cancel the class complaint shall inform the agent of his or her right to proceed with an individual complaint of discrimination under Subpart C, that he or she may request that the Board's decision on the complaint be reviewed by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission pursuant to subpart H, and of his or her right to file a civil action pursuant to § 268.415, and of the time limits applicable thereto.

§ 268.405 Notification and opting out.

(a) After acceptance of a class complaint, the Board, within 15 calendar days, shall use reasonable means, such as delivery, mailing, distribution, or posting, to notify all class members of the existence of the class complaint.

(b) A notice shall contain: (1) The name of the Board or organizational segment(s) thereof involved, its location, and the date of acceptance of the complaint;

(2) A description of the issues accepted as part of the class complaint;

(3) An explanation that class members may remove themselves from the class by notifying the EEO Programs Officer within 30 calendar days after issuance of the notice; and

(4) An explanation of the binding nature of the final decision on or resolution of the complaint.

§ 268.406 Avoidance of delay.

The complaint shall be processed promptly after it has been accepted. To this end, the parties shall proceed with the complaint without undue delay so that the complaint is processed within 180 calendar days after it was filed.

§ 268.407 Freedom from restraint, interference, correction, and reprisal.

(a) Agents, claimants, their authorized representatives, witnesses, the Staff Director For Management, the EEO Programs Officer, the EEO Officer, EEO Investigators, EEO Counselors, and other Board officials having responsibility for the processing of discrimination complaints shall be free from restraint, interference, coercion, and reprisal at all stages in the presentation and processing of a complaint, including the counseling stage under § 268.402 or any time thereafter.

(b) A person identified in paragraph (a) of this section, if a Board employee or applicant for employment, may file a complaint of restraint, interference, coercion, or reprisal in connection with the presentation and processing of a complaint of discrimination. The complaint shall be filed and processed in accordance with the provisions of Subpart C of this regulation.

§ 268.408 Obtaining evidence concerning the complaint.

(a) General. (1) Upon the acceptance of a complaint, the EEO Programs Officer shall designate a Board representative. The Board representative shall not be an alleged discriminating official or any individual designated under Subpart B of this regulation.

(2) In representing the Board, the Board representative shall consult with officials, if any, named or identified as responsible for the alleged discrimination, and other officials or employees of the Board as necessary. In such consultations, the Board representative shall be subject to the provisions of the Board's regulations, rules, and instructions concerning privacy and access to individual personnel records and reports.

(b) Development of evidence. (1) The complaints examiner shall notify the agent, or his or her authorized representative, and the Board representative that a period of not more than 60 calendar days will be allowed for both parties to prepare their cases. This time period may be extended by the complaints examiner upon the request of either party. Both parties are entitled to reasonable development of evidence on matters relevant to the issues raised in the complaint. Evidence may be developed through interrogatories, depositions, and requests for production of documents. It shall be grounds for objection to producing evidence that the information sought by either party is irrelevant, overburdensome, repetitious, or privileged.

(2) In the event that mutual cooperation fails, either party may request the complaints examiner to rule on a request to develop evidence. When the complaints examiner renders his or her report of findings and recommendations on the merits of the complaint, a party's failure to comply with the complaints examiner's ruling on an evidentiary request may be taken into account.

(3) During the time period for development of evidence, the complaints examiner may, at his or her discretion, direct that an investigation of facts relevant to the complaint, or any portion thereof, be conducted by an investigator trained and/or certified by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

(4) Both parties shall furnish the complaints examiner all materials that they wish the complaints examiner to examine and such other material as the complaints examiner may request.

§ 268.409 Opportunities for resolution of the complaint.

(a) The complaints examiner shall furnish the agent, or his or her authorized representative, and the Board representative with a copy of all materials obtained concerning the complaint and provide an opportunity for the agent, or his or her authorized representative, to discuss these materials with the Board representative and attempt resolution of the complaint.

(b) At any time after acceptance of a complaint, the complaint may be resolved by agreement of the Board and the agent to terms offered by either party.

(c) If resolution of the complaint is arrived at, the terms of the resolution shall be reduced to writing, and signed by the agent and the Staff Director For Management. A resolution may include a finding on ther issue of discrimination, and award of attorney's fees and/or costs, and must include any corrective action agreed upon. Corrective action in the resolution must be consistent with law and the Board's regulations, rules, and instructions. A copy of the resolution shall be provided to the agent.

(d) Notice of the resolution shall be given to all class members in the same manner as notification of the acceptance of the class complaint and shall state the terms of corrective action, if any, to be granted by the Board. A resolution shall bind all members of the class.

(e) If the Board does not carry out, or rescinds, any action specified by the terms of the resolution for any reason not attributable to acts or conduct of the agent, his or her authorized representative, or class members, the Board upon the agent's written request shall reinstate the complaint for further processing from the point processing ceased under the terms of the resolution. Failure of the Board to reinstate the complaint may be reviewed by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission pursuant to Subpart H of this regulation.

§ 268.410 Hearing.

On the expiration of the period allowed for preparation of the case, the complaints examiner shall set a date for a hearing. The hearing shall be conducted in accordance with § 268.308 of Subpart C of this regulation.

§ 268.411 Report of findings and recommendations.

(a) The complaints examiner shall transmit to the EEO Programs Officer:

(1) The record of the hearing;

(2) The complaints examiner's findings and analysis with regard to the complaint; and

(3) The complaints examiner's report of findings and recommended decision on the complaint, including corrective action pertaining to systemic relief for the class and any individual corrective action, where appropriate, with regard to the personnel action or matter which gave rise to the complaint.

(b) The complaints examiner shall notify the agent, or his or her authorized representative, of the date on which the report of findings and recommendations was forwarded to the EEO Programs Officer.

§ 268.412 Board decision.

(a)(1) The EEO Programs Officer shall notify the Board of Governors when the complaint is ripe for decision under this section. At the request of any member of the Board of Governors made within 7 calendar days of such notice, the Board of Governors shall make the decision on the complaint. If no such request is made, the Administrative Governor, or the Staff Director For Management if he or she is delegated the authority to do so under § 268.202(c), shall make the decision on the complaint.

(2) Within 30 calendar days of receipt of the report of findings and recommendations issued under § 268.411 of this subpart, the Board of Governors, the Administrative Governor, or the Staff Director For Management if he or she is authorized to make the decision under § 268.202(c), shall issue a decision to accept, reject, or modify the findings and recommendations of the complaints examiner.

(3) The decision of the Board of Governors, the Administrative Governor, or the Staff Director For Management if he or she is delegated the authority to make the decision under § 268.202(c), shall be in writing and shall be transmitted to the agent, or his or her authorized representative, along with a copy of the record of the hearing and a copy of the findings and recommendations of the complaints examiner.

(4) When the decision of the Board of Governors, the Administrative Governor, or the Staff Director For Management if he or she is delegated the authority to make the decision under § 268.202(c), is to reject or modify the findings and recommendations of the complaints examiner, the decision shall contain the specific reasons in detail for the action.

(b) If the Board of Governors, the Administrative Governor, or the Staff Director For Management if he or she is authorized to make the decision under § 268.202(c), has not issued a decision within 30 calendar days of receipt by the Board of the complaints examiner's report of findings and recommendations, those findings and recommendations shall become the final Board decision. The Board shall transmit the final Board decision and the record of the hearing to the agent, or his or her authorized representative, within 5 calendar days of the expiration of the 30-day period.

(c) The decision of the Board of Governors, the Administrative Governor, or the Staff Director For Management if he or she is authorized to make the decision under § 268.202(c) of Subpart C of this regulation, shall require any remedial action authorized by law and determined to be necessary or desirable to resolve the issue of discrimination and to promote the policy of equal opportunity, whether or not there is a finding of discrimination. When discrimination is found, the Board shall:

(1) Advise the agent, or his or her authorized representative, that any request for attorney's fees and/or costs must be documented and submitted within 20 calendar days of receipt of the decision;

(2) Review the matter giving rise to the complaint to determine whether disciplinary action against alleged discriminatory officials is appropriate; and

(3) Record the basis for its decision to take or not to take disciplinary action, but this decision shall not be recorded in the complaint file.

(d) When the final decision provides for the award of attorney's fees and/or costs, the amount of these awards shall be determined under § 268.315(c) of Subpart C of this Regulation. When it is determined not to award attorney's fees and/or costs, the decision shall set forth the specific reasons for denying the award.

(e) The decision shall inform the agent, or his or her authorized representative, that on request of the agent the decision under this section may be reviewed by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission pursuant to Subpart H of this Regulation, of his or her right to file a civil action in accordance with § 268.415 of this subpart, and of the time limits applicable thereto.

(f) A final decision on a class complaint shall be binding on all members of the class and Board.

§ 268.413 Notification to class members of decision.

Class members shall be notified by the Board, through the same media employed to give notice of the existence of the class complaint, of the Board decision and corrective action, if any. The notice, where appropriate, shall include information concerning the rights of class members to seek individual relief, and of the procedures to be followed. Notice shall be given by the Board within 10 calendar days of the transmittal of its decision to the agent.

§ 268.414 Corrective action.

(a) When discrimination is found, the Board shall eliminate or modify the personnel policy or practice out of which the complaint arose, and provide individual corrective action, including an award of attorney's fees and/or costs to the agent, in accordance with § 268.315 of Subpart C of this Regulation. Corrective action in all cases must be consistent with law and Board regulations, rules, and instructions.

(b) When discrimination is found and a class member believes that but for that discrimination, he or she would have received employment or an employment benefit, the class member may file a written claim with the EEO Programs Officer within 30 calendar days of notification by the Board of its decision.

(c) The claim must include a specific, detailed showing that the claimant is a class member who was affected by a personnel action or matter resulting from the discriminatory policy or practice within not more than 135 calendar days preceding the filing of the class complaint.

(d) The EEO Programs Officer shall attempt to resolve the claim for relief within 60 calendar days after the date the claim was postmarked, or in the absence of a postmark, within 60 calendar days after the date it was received by the EEO Programs Officer, with whom claims may be filed. If the EEO Programs Officer and claimant do not agree that the claimant is a member of the class or upon the relief to which the claimant is entitled, the EEO Programs Officer shall refer the claim, with recommendations concerning it, to the complaints examiner.

(e) The complaints examiner shall notify the claimant of his or her right to a hearing on the claim and shall allow the parties to the claim an opportunity to submit evidence and representations concerning the claim. If a hearing is requested, it shall be conducted in accordance with § 268.308 of Subpart C of this Regulation. If no hearing is requested, the complaints examiner, in his or her discretion, may hold a hearing to obtain necessary evidence concerning the claim.

(f) The complaints examiner shall issue a report of findings and recommendations on the claim which shall be treated the same as a report of findings and recommendations under §§ 268.411 and 268.412.

(g) If the complaints examiner determines that the claimant is not a member of the class or that the claim was not timely filed, the complaints examiner shall recommend rejection of the claim and give notice of his or her action to the Board, the claimant and the claimant's authorized representative. Such notice shall include advice that the claimant may request review of the claim by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission pursuant to subpart H and of claimant's right to file a civil action in accordance with the provisions of § 268.415.

§ 268.415 Right to file a civil action for judicial review.

(a) Except as provided in paragraph (c) of this section, an agent who has filed a compliant or a claimant who has filed a claim for relief based on race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or physical or mental handicap, is authorized to file a civil action against the Board in an appropriate United States district court:

(1) Within 30 calendar days of his or her receipt of notice of final action taken by the Board;

(2) After 180 calendar days from the date he or she filed a complaint or claim with the Board if there has been no final decision on the complaint or claim.

(3) Within 30 calendar days following receipt of notice of the final findings of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission on a request to review the final decision of the Board pursuant to Subpart H of this regulation; or

(4) After 180 calendars days from the date of filing of a request for review of a final decision of the Board by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission if there has been no finding by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission pursuant to Subpart H of this regulation.

(b) For the purposes of this Part, the decision of the Board shall be final only when the Board makes a determination on all issues in the complaint, including whether or not to award attorney's fees and/or costs. If a determination to award attorney's fees and/or costs is made, the decision will not be final until the procedure is followed for determining the amount of the award as set forth in § 268.315(c) of Subpart C.

(c) An agent who filed a class complaint of discrimination because of age shall file a civil suit within the time limits set forth in § 268.505 of Subpart E of this regulation. An agent who filed a class complaint of denial of equal pay shall file a civil suit within the time limits set forth in § 268.904 of Subpart I of this regulation.

§ 268.416 Notice of right.

When the agent alleges that the Board discriminated against a class on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, age, or physical or mental handicap, or a claimant files for relief, the Board shall notify the agent or claimant in writing of his or her right to file a civil action following any final action on a complaint or claim under this subpart.

§ 268.417 Effect on administrative processing.

The filing of a civil action by an agent or claimant does not terminate Board processing of a complaint or claim or Equal Employment Opportunity Commission review of any Board action under this subpart.

Subpart E—Nondiscrimination on Account of Age

§ 268.501 Policy statement.

(a) The Board shall not:

(1) Fail or refuse to hire or discharge any individual or otherwise discriminate against any individual with respect to his or her compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges or employment, because of such individual's age, except as permitted by § 268.504;

(2) Limit, segregate, or classify Board employees or applicants for employment in any way which would deprive or tend to deprive any individual of employment opportunities or otherwise adversely affect his or her status as an employee or applicant because of such individual's age, except as permitted by § 268.504; or

(3) Reduce the wage rate of any employee in order to comply with this policy.

(b) The Board shall not discriminate against any employee or applicant for employment because such employee or applicant has opposed any practice forbidden under this subpart or because such employee or applicant has made a charge, testified, assisted, or participated in any manner in any investigation, proceeding, or litigation under this subpart.

(c) The Board shall not print or publish, or cause to be printed or published, any notice or advertisement relating to employment by the Board indicating any preference, limitation, specification, or discrimination, based on age, except as permitted by § 268.504.

§ 268.502 Processing of complaints.

All individual and class complaints of discrimination on the basis of age shall be filed and processed pursuant to Subparts C and D, respectively, except that civil actions shall be filed pursuant to § 268.505 of this subpart and except that § 268.315(c) providing for award of attorney's fees and/or costs shall not apply to complaints of discrimination under this subpart. A complaint may also be filed by an organization for a complainant with his or her consent.

§ 268.503 Coverage.

A person filing a complaint of discrimination on the basis of age must have been at least 40 years of age at the time the alleged discrimination occurred.

§ 268.504 Exceptions.

The Board may adopt such reasonable exemptions to the provisions of this subpart as have been established by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission pursuant to 29 CFR 1613.501(c).

§ 268.505 Right to file civil action for judicial review.

A complainant, agent, or claimant, under this subpart is authorized to file a civil action against the Board in an appropriate United States District Court within six years of the matter causing the complainant, agent, or claimant to believe he or she has been discriminated against because of age.

§ 268.506 Effect on administrative procedure.

The filing of a civil action by an employee does not terminate Board processing of a complaint under this subpart or Equal Employment Opportunity Commission review of any such complaint pursuant to Subpart H.

Subpart F—Prohibition Against Discrimination in Employment Because of a Physical or Mental Handicap

§ 268.601 Definitions.

(a) "Handicapped person" is defined for the purposes of this subpart as one who has:

(1) A physical or mental impairment which substantially limits one or more of such person's major life activities;

(2) Has a record of such an impairment; or

(3) Is regarded as having such an impairment.

(b) "Physical or mental impairment" means:

(1) Any physiological disorder or condition, cosmetic disfigurement, or anatomical loss affecting one or more of the following body systems: Neurological; musculoskeletal; special sense organs; respiratory, including speech organs; cardiovascular; reproductive; digestive; genito-urinary; hemic and lymphatic; skin; and endocrine; or

(2) Any mental or psychological disorder, such as mental retardation, organic brain syndrome, emotional or mental illness, and specific learning disabilities.

(c) "Major life activities" means functions, such as caring for one's self, performing manual tasks, walking, seeing, hearing, speaking, breathing, learning, and working.

(d) "Has a record of such an impairment" means has a history of, or has been classified (or misclassified) as having a mental or physical impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities.

(e) "Is regarded as having such an impairment" means:

(1) Has a physical or mental impairment that does not substantially limit major life activities but is treated by an employer as constituting such a limitation;

(2) Has a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits major life activities only as a result of the attitude of an employer toward such impairment; or

(3) Has none of the impairments defined in paragraph (b) of this section but is treated by an employer as having such an impairment.

(f) "Qualified handicapped person" is defined for the purposes of this subpart to mean, with respect to employment, a handicapped person who, with or without reasonable accommodation, can perform the essential functions of the position in question without endangering the health and safety of the handicapped person or others, and who, depending upon the type of appointing authority being used:

(1) Meets the experience and/or education requirements (which may include passing a written test) of the position in question; or

(2) Meets the criteria for appointment under one of the special appointing authorities for handicapped persons.

(g) "Facility" is defined for the purposes of this subpart to mean all or any portion of buildings, structures, equipment, roads, walks, parking lots, rolling stock or other conveyances, or other real or personal property.

§ 268.602 General policy.

The Board gives full consideration to hiring, placement, and advancement of qualified physically or mentally handicapped persons. The Board shall be a model employer of handicapped individuals. The Board shall not discriminate against qualified physically or mentally handicapped persons.

§ 268.603 Reasonable accommodation.

(a) The Board shall make reasonable accommodation to the known physical or mental limitations of a qualified handicapped employee or applicant for employment unless it can demonstrate that the accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the operation of its programs.

(b) Reasonable accommodation may include, but shall not be limited to:

(1) Making facilities readily accessible to and usable by handicapped persons;

(2) Job restructuring, part-time or modified work schedules, acquisition or modification of equipment or devices, appropriate adjustment or modification of examinations, the provision of readers and interpreters, and other similar actions; and

(3) Reassignment to another job position, if practicable.

(c) In determining pursuant to paragraph (a) of this section whether an accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the operations of the Board, factors to be considered include:

(1) The overall size of the Board's program with respect to the number of employees, number and type of facilities, and size of budget;

(2) The type of Board operation including the composition and structure of the Board's work force; and

(3) The nature and the cost of the accommodation.

§ 268.604 Employment criteria.

(a) The Board shall not make use of any employment test or other selection criterion that screens out or tends to screen out qualified handicapped persons or any class of handicapped persons unless:

(1) The test score or other selection criterion, as used by the Board, is job-related for the position in question; and

(2) There are not available alternative job-related tests or criteria that do not screen out or tend to screen out as many handicapped persons.

(b) The Board shall select and administer tests concerning employment so as to insure that, when administered to an employee or applicant for employment who has a handicap that impairs sensory, manual, or speaking skills, the test results accurately reflect the employee's or applicant's ability to perform the position or type of position in question, rather than reflecting the employee's or applicant's impaired sensory, manual, or speaking skills (except where those skills are the factors that the test purports to measure).

§ 268.605 Preemployment inquiries.

(a) Except as provided in paragraphs (b) and (c) of this section, the Board shall not conduct any preemployment medical examination and shall not make preemployment inquiry of an applicant for employment as to whether the applicant is a handicapped person or as to the nature or severity of a handicap. The Board may, however, make preemployment inquiry into an applicant's ability to meet the medical qualification requirements, with or without reasonable accommodation, of the position in question (i.e., the minimum abilities necessary for safe and efficient performance of the duties of the position in question).

(b) Nothing in this section shall prohibit the Board from conditioning an offer of employment on the results of a medical examination conducted coincident to the employee's entrance on duty, provided, that:

(1) All entering employees are subjected to such an examination regardless of handicap or when the preemployment medical questionnaire used for positions which do not routinely require medical examination indicates a condition for which further examination is required because of the job-related nature of the condition; and

(2) The results of such an examination are used only in accordance with the requirements of this subpart.

(c) To enable and evaluate affirmative action to hire, place, or advance handicapped individuals, the Board may invite employees and applicants for employment to indicate whether and to what extent they are handicapped, provided that:

(1) Any written questionnaire used for this purpose, and any employee requesting such information, shall state clearly that the information requested is intended for use solely in conjunction with affirmative action; and

(2) Any such written questionnaire or employee requesting such information shall state clearly that the information is being requested on a voluntary basis, that refusal to provide it will not subject the employee or applicant for employment to any adverse treatment, and that it will be used only in accordance with this subpart.

(d) Information obtained in accordance with this section as to the medical condition or history of the employee or applicant for employment shall be kept confidential except that:

(1) Managers, selecting officials, and others involved in the selection process or responsible for affirmative action may be informed that the employee or applicant for employment is a handicapped individual eligible for affirmative action;

(2) Supervisors and managers may be informed regarding necessary accommodations;

(3) First aid and safety personnel may be informed, where appropriate, if the condition might require emergency treatment;

(4) Government officials investigating compliance with laws, regulations, and instructions relevant to equal opportunity and affirmative action for handicapped individuals shall be provided information upon request; and

(5) Statistics generated from information obtained may be used to manage, evaluate, and report on equal opportunity and affirmative action programs.

§ 268.606 Physical access to buildings.

The Board shall not discriminate against qualified handicapped employees or applicants for employment due to the inaccessibility of its facilities.

§ 268.607 Processing complaints.

All individual complaints of discrimination on the basis of handicap shall be processed under Subpart C. All class complaints of discrimination on the basis of handicap shall be processed under Subpart D.

Subpart G—Prohibition Against Discrimination in Board Programs and Activities Because of a Physical or Mental Handicap

§ 268.701 Purpose and application.

(a) Purpose. The purpose of this subpart is to prohibit discrimination on the basis of handicap in programs or activities conducted by the Board.

(b) Application. This subpart applies to all programs and activities conducted by the Board. Such programs and activities include:

(1) Holding open meetings of the Board or other meetings or public hearings at the Board's office in Washington, D.C.;

(2) Responding to inquiries, filing complaints, or applying for employment at the Board's office;

(3) Making available the Board's library facilities; and

(4) Any other lawful interaction with the Board or its staff in any official matter with people who are not employees of the Board.

This subpart does not apply to Federal Reserve banks or to financial institutions or other companies supervised or regulated by the Board.

§ 268.702 Definitions.

(a) "Auxiliary aids" means services or devices that enable persons with impaired sensory, manual, or speaking skills to have an equal opportunity to participate in, and enjoy the benefits of, programs or activities conducted by the Board. For example, auxiliary aids useful for persons with impaired vision include readers, Brailled materials, audio recordings, telecommunication devices and other similar services and devices. Auxiliary aids useful for persons with impaired hearing include telephone handset amplifiers, telephones compatible with hearing aids, telecommunication devices for deaf persons (TDD's), interpreters, note takers, written materials, and other similar services and devices.

(b) "Complete complaint" means a written statement that contains the complainant's name and address and describes the Board's alleged discriminatory actions in sufficient detail to inform the Board of the nature and date of the alleged violation. It shall be signed by the complainant or by someone authorized to do so on his or her behalf. Complaints filed on behalf of classes or third parties shall describe or identify (by name, if possible) the alleged victims of discrimination.

(c) "Facility" means all or any portion of buildings, structures, equipment, roads, walks, parking lots, rolling stock or other conveyances, or other real or personal property.

(d) "Handicapped person" means any person who has:

(1) A physical or mental impairment which substantially limits one or more of such person's major life activities;

(2) Has a record of such an impairment; or

(3) Is regarded as having such an impairment.

(e) "Physical or mental impairment" means:

(1) Any physiological disorder or condition, cosmetic disfigurement, or anatomical loss affecting one or more of the following body systems: Neurological; musculoskeletal; special sense organs; respiratory, including speech organs; cardiovascular; reproductive; digestive; genito-urinary; hemic and lymphatic; skin; and endocrine; or

(2) Any mental or psychological disorder, such as mental retardation, organic brain syndrome, emotional or mental illness, and specific learning disabilities.

The term "physical or mental impairment" includes, but is not limited to, such diseases and conditions as orthopedic, visual, speech, and hearing impairments, cerebral palsy, epilepsy, muscular dystrophy, multiple sclerosis, cancer, heart disease, diabetes, mental retardation, emotional illness, and drug addiction and alcoholism.

(f) "Major life activities" means functions such as caring for one's self, performing manual tasks, walking, seeing, hearing, speaking, breathing, learning, and working.

(g) "Has a record of such an impairment" means has a history of, or has been misclassified as having, a mental or physical impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities.

(h) "Is regarded as having an impairment" means:

(1) Has a physical or mental impairment that does not substantially limit major life activities but is treated by the Board as constituting such a limitation;

(2) Has a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits major life activities only as a result of the attitudes of others toward such impairment; or

(3) Has none of the impairments defined in paragraph (h)(1) of this section but is treated by the Board as having such an impairment.

(i) "Qualified handicapped person" means:

(1) With respect to a Board program or activity under which a person is required to perform services or to achieve a level of accomplishment, a handicapped person who meets the essential eligibility requirements and who can achieve the purpose of the program or activity without modifications in the program or activity that the Board can determine on the basis of a written record would result in a fundamental alteration in its nature; or

(2) With respect to any other program or activity, a handicapped person who meets the essential eligibility requirements for participation in, or receipt of benefits from, that program or activity.

§ 268.703 Self evaluation.

(a) The Board shall, within one year of the effective date of this section, evaluate its current policies and practices, and the effects thereof, that do not or may not meet the requirements of this subpart, and, to the extent modifications of any such policies and practices are required, the Board shall proceed to make the necessary modifications.

(b) The Board shall provide an opportunity to interested persons, including handicapped persons or organizations representing handicapped persons, to participate in the self-evaluation process by submitting comments (both oral and written).

(c) The Board shall, for three years from the effective date of this section, maintain on file and make available for public inspection:

(1) A description of areas examined and any problems identified; and

(2) A description of any modifications made.

§ 268.704 Notice.

The Board shall make available to employees, applicants for employment, participants, beneficiaries, and other interested persons such information regarding the provisions of this subpart and its applicability to the programs and activities conducted by the Board, and make such information available to them in such manner as the Board finds necessary to appraise such persons of the protections against discrimination assured them by this subpart.

§ 268.705 Prohibition against discrimination.

(a) No qualified handicapped person shall, on the basis of handicap, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or otherwise be subjected to discrimination in any program or activity conducted by the Board.

(b)(1) The Board, in providing any aid, benefit, or service, may not, directly or through contractual, licensing, or other arrangements, on the basis of handicap:

(i) Deny a qualified handicapped person the opportunity to participate in or benefit from the aid, benefit, or service;

(ii) Afford a qualified handicapped person an opportunity to participate in or benefit from the aid, benefit, or service that is not equal to that afforded others;

(iii) Provide a qualified handicapped person with an aid, benefit, or service that is not as effective in affording equal opportunity to obtain the same result, to gain the same benefit, or to reach the same level of achievement as that provided to others;

(iv) Provide different or separate aid, benefits, or services to handicapped persons or to any class of handicapped persons than is provided to others unless such action is necessary to provide qualified handicapped persons with aid, benefits, or services that are as effective as those provided to others;

(v) Deny a qualified handicapped person the opportunity to participate as a member of planning or advisory boards; or

(vi) Otherwise limit a qualified handicapped person in the enjoyment of any right, privilege, advantage, or opportunity enjoyed by others receiving the aid, benefit, or service.

(2) The Board may not deny a qualified handicapped person the opportunity to participate in programs or activities that are not separate or different, despite the existence of permissibly separate or different programs or activities.

(3) The Board may not, directly or through contractual or other arrangements, utilize criteria or methods of administration, the purpose or effect of which would:

(i) Subject qualified handicapped persons to discrimination on the basis of handicap; or

(ii) Defeat or substantially impair accomplishment of the objectives of a program or activity with respect to handicapped persons.

(4) The Board may not, in determining the site or location of a facility, make selections the purpose or effect of which would:

(i) Exclude handicapped persons from, deny them the benefits of, or otherwise subject them to discrimination under any program or activity conducted by the Board; or

(ii) Defeat or substantially impair the accomplishment of the objectives or a program or activity with respect to handicapped persons.

(5) The Board, in the selection of procurement contractors, may not use criteria that subject qualified handicapped persons to discrimination on the basis of handicap.

(6) The Board may not administer a licensing or certification program in a manner that subjects qualified handicapped persons to discrimination on the basis of handicap, nor may the Board establish requirements for the programs and activities of licensees or certified entities that subject qualified handicapped persons to discrimination on the basis of handicap. However, the programs and activities of entities that are licensed or certified by the Board are not, themselves, covered by this subpart.

(c) The exclusion of nonhandicapped persons from the benefits of a program limited by Federal statute or Board Order to handicapped persons or the exclusion of a specific class of handicapped persons from a program limited by Federal statute or Board Order to a different class of handicapped persons is not prohibited by this subpart.

(d) The Board shall administer programs activities in the most integrated setting appropriate to the needs of qualified handicapped persons.

§ 268.706 Employment.

No qualified handicapped person shall, on the basis of handicap, be subjected to discrimination in employment under any program or activity conducted by the Board. The definitions, requirements and procedures of Subpart F of this regulation shall apply to discrimination in employment under this subpart.

§ 268.707 Program accessibility: Discrimination prohibited.

Except as otherwise provided in § 268.708, no qualified handicapped person shall, because the Board's facilities are inaccessible to or unusable by handicapped persons, be denied the benefits of, be excluded from participation in, or otherwise be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity conducted by the Board.

§ 268.708 Program accessibility: Existing facilities.

(a) General. The Board shall operate each program or activity so that the program or activity, when viewed in its entirety, is readily accessible to and usable by handicapped persons. This paragraph does not:

(1) Necessarily require the Board to make each of its existing facilities accessible to and usable by handicapped persons; or

(2) Require the Board to take any action that it can determine, based on a written record, would result in a fundamental alteration in the nature of a program or activity or in undue financial and administrative burdens. In those circumstances where the Board believes that the proposed action would fundamentally alter the program or activity or would result in undue financial and administrative burdens, the Board shall establish a written record showing that compliance with paragraph (a) of this section would result in such alterations or burdens. The decision that compliance would result in such alterations or burdens shall be made by the Board of Governors or their designee after considering all Board resources available for use in the funding and operation of the conducted program or activity, and must be accompanied by a written statement of the reasons for reaching that conclusion. If an action would result in such an alteration or such burdens, the Board shall take any other action that would not result in such an alteration or such burdens but would nevertheless ensure that handicapped persons receive the benefits and services of the program or activity.

(b) Methods. The Board may comply with the requirements of this section through such means as redesign of equipment, reassignment of services to accessible buildings, assignment of aides to handicapped persons, home visits, delivery of service at alternate accessible sites, alteration of existing facilities and construction of new facilities, use of accessible rolling stock, or any other methods that result in making its programs or activities readily accessible to and usable by handicapped persons. The Board is not required to make structural changes in existing facilities where other methods are effective in achieving compliance with this section. In choosing among available methods for meeting the requirements of this section, the Board gives priority to those methods that offer programs and activities to qualified handicapped persons in the most integrated setting appropriate.

(c) Time period for compliance. The Board shall comply with any obligations established under this section with which it is not presently complying within sixty days of the effective date of this section except that where structural changes in facilities are undertaken, such changes shall be made within three years of the effective date of this section, but in any event, as expeditiously as possible.

(d) Transition plan. In the event that structural changes to facilities will be undertaken to achieve program accessibility, the Board shall develop, within six months of the effective date of this section, a transition plan setting forth the steps necessary to complete such changes. The Board shall provide an opportunity to interested persons, including handicapped persons or organizations representing handicapped persons, to participate in the development of the transition by submitting comments (both oral and written). A copy of the transition plan shall be made available for public inspection. The plan shall, at a minimum:

(1) Identify physical obstacles in the Board's facilities that limit the accessibility of its programs or activities to handicapped persons;

(2) Describe in detail the modifications that will make the facilities accessible;

(3) Specify the schedule for taking the steps necessary to achieve compliance with this section and, if the time period of the transition plan is longer than one year, identify steps that will be taken during each year of the transition period; and

(4) Indicate the official responsible for implementation of the plan.

§ 268.709 Program accessibility: New construction and alterations.

Each building or part of a building that is constructed or altered by, on behalf of, or for the use of the Board, shall be designed, constructed, or altered so as to be readily accessible to and usable by handicapped persons.

§ 268.710 Communications.

(a) The Board shall take appropriate steps to ensure effective communication with applicants, participants, personnel of other Federal entities, and members of the public.

(1) The Board shall furnish appropriate auxiliary aids where necessary to afford a handicapped person an equal opportunity to participate in, and enjoy the benefits of, a program or activity conducted by the Board.

(i) In determining what type of auxiliary aid is necessary, the Board shall give primary consideration to the requests of the handicapped person.

(ii) The Board need not provide individually prescribed devices, readers for personal use or study, or other devices of a personal nature.

(2) Where the Board communicates with employees and others by telephone, telecommunication devices for deaf persons (TDD's) or equally effective telecommunication systems shall be used.

(b) The Board shall ensure that interested persons, including persons with impaired vision or hearing, can obtain information as to the existence and location of accessible services, activities, and facilities.

(c) The Board shall provide signs at a primary entrance to any inaccessible facility, directing users to a location at which they can obtain information about accessible facilities. The international symbol for accessibility shall be used at each primary entrance of an accessible facility.

(d) This section does not require the Board to take any action that would result in a fundamental alteration in the nature of a program or activity or in undue financial and administrative burdens. In those circumstances where the Board believes that the proposed action would fundamentally alter the program or activity or would result in undue financial and administrative burdens, the Board shall establish a written record showing compliance with this section would result in such alterations or burdens. The determination that compliance would result in such alterations or burdens shall be made by the Board of Governors or their designee after considering all Board resources available for use in the funding and operation of the conducted program or activity, and must be accompanied by a written statement of the reasons for reaching that conclusion. If an action required to comply with this section would result in such an alteration or such burdens, the Board shall take any other action that would not result in such an alteration or such burdens but would nevertheless ensure that, to the maximum extent possible, handicapped persons receive the benefits and services of the program or activity.

§ 268.711 Compliance procedures.

(a) Applicability. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Regulation, this section, except as provided in paragraph (b) of this section, rather than Subparts C and D of this Regulation shall apply to all allegations of discrimination on the basis of handicap in programs or activities conducted by the Board.

(b) Employment Complaints. The Board shall process complaints alleging discrimination in employment on the basis of handicap in accordance with § 268.607.

(c) Responsible Official. The EEO Programs Officer shall be responsible for coordinating implementation of this section.

(d) Filing the complaint—(1) Who may file. Any person who believes that he or she has been subjected to discrimination prohibited by this subpart may, personally or by his or her authorized representative, file a complaint of discrimination with the EEO Programs Officer.

(2) Confidentiality. The EEO Programs Officer shall not reveal the identity of any person submitting a complaint, except when authorized to do so in writing by the complainant, and except to the extent necessary to carry out the purposes of this subpart, including the conduct of any investigation, hearing, or proceeding under this subpart.

(3) When To file. Complaints shall be filed within 180 days of the alleged act of discrimination. The EEO Programs Officer may extend this time limit for good cause shown. For the purpose of determining when a complaint is timely filed under this paragraph, a complaint mailed to the Board shall be deemed filed on the date it is postmarked. Any other complaint shall be deemed filed on the date it is received by the Board.

(4) How to file. Complaints may be delivered or mailed to the Administrative Governor, the Staff Director For Management, the EEO Programs Officer, or the EEO Officer, the Federal Women's Program Manager, the Hispanic Program Coordinator, or the Handicapped Program Coordinator. Complaints should be sent to the EEO Programs Officer, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, 20th and Constitution Avenue NW., Washington, D.C. 20551. If any Board official other than the EEO Programs Officer receives a complaint, he or she shall forward the complaint to the EEO Programs Officer.

(e) Acceptance of complaint. (1) The EEO Programs Officer shall accept a complete complaint that is filed in accordance with paragraph (d) of this section and over which the Board has jurisdiction. The EEO Programs Officer shall notify the complainant of receipt and acceptance of the complaint.

(2) If the EEO Programs Officer receives a complaint that is not complete, he or she shall notify the complainant, within 30 calendar days of receipt of the incomplete complaint, that additional information is needed. If the complainant fails to complete the complaint within 30 days of receipt of this notice, the EEO Programs Officer shall dismiss the complaint without prejudice.

(3) If the EEO Programs Officer receives a complaint over which the Board does not have jurisdiction, the EEO Programs Officer shall notify the complainant and shall make reasonable efforts to refer the complaint to the appropriate government entity.

(f) Investigation/conciliation. (1) Within 180 calendar days of the receipt of a complete complant, the EEO Programs Officer shall complete the investigation of the complaint, attempt informal resolution of the complaint, and if no informal resolution is achieved, the EEO Programs Officer shall forward the investigative report to the Staff Director For Management.

(2) The EEO Programs Officer may request Board employees to cooperate in the investigation and attempted resolution of complaints. Employees who are requested by the EEO Programs Officer to participate in any investigation under this section shall do so as part of their official duties and during the course of regular duty hours.

(3) The EEO Programs Officer shall furnish the complainant with a copy of the investigative report promptly after receiving it from the investigator and provide the complainant with an opportunity for informal resolution of the complaint.

(4) If a complaint is resolved informally, the terms of the agreement shall be reduced to writing and made a part of the complaint file, with a copy of the agreement provided to the complainant. The written agreement may include a finding on the issue of discrimination and shall describe any corrective action to which the complainant has agreed.

(g) Letter of findings. If an informal resolution of the complaint is not reached, the EEO Programs Officer shall transmit the complaint file to the Staff Director For Management. The Staff Director For Management shall, within 180 days of the receipt of the complete complaint by the EEO Programs Officer, notify the complainant of the results of the investigation in a letter sent by certified mail, return receipt requested, containing:

(1) Findings of fact and conclusions of law;

(2) A description of a remedy for each violation found;

(3) A notice of right of the complainant to appeal the Letter of Findings to the Board of Governors or the Administrative Governor for a decision under paragraph (k) of this section; and

(4) A notice of right of the complainant to request a hearing.

(h) Filing an appeal. (1) Notice of appeal, with or without a request for hearing, shall be filed by the complainant with the EEO Programs Officer within 30 days of receipt from the Staff Director For Management of the Letter of Findings required by paragraph (g) of this section.

(2) If the complainant does not request a hearing, the EEO Programs Officer shall transmit the notice of appeal and investigative record to the Board of Governors or the Administrative Governor, whichever is the decision maker under paragraph (k) of this section.

(3) If the complainant does not file a notice of appeal within the time prescribed in paragraph (h)(1) of this section, the EEO Programs Officer shall certify that the Letter of Findings is the final Board decision on the complaint at the expiration of that time.

(i) Acceptance of appeal. The EEO Programs Officer shall accept and process any timely appeal. A complainant may appeal to the Administrative Governor from a decision by the EEO Programs Officer that an appeal is untimely. This appeal shall be filed within 15 days of receipt of the decision from the EEO Programs Officer.

(j) Hearing. (1) Upon a timely request for a hearing, the EEO Programs Officer shall request that the Board of Governors appoint an administrative law judge to conduct the hearing. The administrative law judge shall issue a notice to all parties specifying the date, time, and place of the scheduled hearing. The hearing shall be commenced no earlier than 15 calendar days after the notice is issued and no later than 60 calendar days after the request for a hearing is filed, unless all parties agree to a different date.

(2) The hearing, decision, and any administrative review thereof shall be conducted in conformity with 5 U.S.C. 554-557 (sections 5-8 of the Administrative Procedures Act). The administrative law judge shall have the duty to conduct a fair hearing, to take all necessary actions to avoid delay, and to maintain order. He or she shall have all powers necessary to these ends, including (but not limited to) the power to:

(i) Arrange and change the dates, times, and places of hearings and pehearing conferences and to issue notice thereof;

(ii) Hold conferences to settle, simplify, or determine the issues in a hearing, or to consider other matters that may aid in the expeditious disposition of the hearing;

(iii) Require parties to state their positions in writing with respect to the various issues in the hearing and to exchange such statements with all other parties;

(iv) Examine witnesses and direct witnesses to testify;

(v) Receive, rule on, exclude, or limit evidence;

(vi) Rule on procedural items pending before him or her, and

(vii) Take any action permitted to the administrative law judge as authorized by this subpart or by the provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act (5 U.S.C. 554-557).

(3) Technical rules of evidence shall not apply to hearings conducted pursuant to this paragraph, but rules or principles designed to assure production of credible evidence and to subject testmony to cross-examination shall be applied by the administrative law judge wherever reasonably necessary. The administrative law judge may exclude irrelevant, immaterial, or unduly repetitious evidence. All documents and other evidence offered or taken for the record shall be open to examination by the parties, and opportunity shall be given to refute facts and arguments advanced on either side of the issues. A transcript shall be made of the oral evidence except to the extent the substance thereof is stipulated for the record. All decisions shall be based upon the hearing record.

(4) The costs and expenses for the conduct of a hearing shall be allocated as follows:

(i) Employees on the Board shall, upon the request of the administrative law judge, be made available to participate in the hearing and shall be on official duty status for this purpose. They shall not receive witness fees.

(ii) Employees of other Federal agencies called to testify at a hearing, at the request of the administrative law judge and with the approval of the employing agency, shall be on official duty status during any absence from normal duties caused by their testimony, and shall not receive witness fees.

(iii) The fees and expenses of other persons called to testify at a hearing shall be paid by the party requesting their appearance.

(iv) The administrative law judge may require the Board to pay travel expenses necessary for the complainant to attend the hearing.

(v) The Board shall pay the required expenses and charges for the administrative law judge and court reporter.

(vi) All other expenses shall be paid by the parties incurring them.

(5) The administrative law judge shall submit in writing recommended findings of fact, conclusions of law, and remedies to all parties and the EEO Programs Officer within 30 calendar days, after the receipt of the hearing transcripts, or within 30 calendar days after the conclusion of the hearing if no transcripts are made. This time limit may be extended with the permission of the EEO Programs Officer.

(6) Within 15 calendar days after receipt of the recommended decision of the administrative law judge, any party may file exceptions to the recommended decision with the EEO Programs Officer. Thereafter, each party will have ten calendar days to file reply exceptions with the EEO Programs Officer.

(k) Decision. (1) The EEO Programs Officer shall notify the Board of Governors when the complaint is ripe for decision under this paragraph. At the request of any member of the Board of Governors made within 7 calendar days of such notice, the Board of Governors shall make the decision on the complaint. If no such request is made, the Administrative Governor shall make the decision on the complaint. The decision shall be made based on information in the investigative record and, if a hearing is held, on the hearing record. The decision shall be made within 60 calendar days of the receipt by the EEO Programs Officer of the notice of appeal and investigative record pursuant to paragraph (h)(2) of this section or 60 calendar days following the end of the period for filing reply exceptions set forth in paragraph (j)(7) of this section, whichever is applicable. If the decision maker under this paragraph determines that additional information is needed from any party, the decision maker shall request the information and provide the other party or parties an opportunity to respond to that information. The decision maker shall have 60 calendar days from receipt of the additional information to render the decision on the appeal. The decision maker shall transmit the decision by letter to all parties. The decision shall set forth the findings, any remedial actions required, and the reasons for the decision. If the decision is based on a hearing record, the decision maker shall consider the recommended decision of the administrative law judge and render a final decision based on the entire record. The decision maker may also remand the hearing record to the administrative law judge for a fuller development of the record.

(2) The Board shall take any action required under the terms of the decision promptly. The decision maker Governor may require periodic compliance reports specifying:

(i) The manner in which compliance with the provisions of the decision has been achieved;

(ii) The reasons any action required by the final Board decision has not been taken; and

(iii) The steps being taken to ensure full compliance.

(3) The decision maker may retain responsibility for resolving disputes that arise between parties over interpretation of the final Board decision, or for specific adjudicatory decisions arising out of implementation.

Subpart H—Review by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission

§ 268.801 Entitlement.

(a) A complainant, agent, or claimant may request the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to review any final decision of the Board under §§ 268.305(b), 268.307(b), 268.310, 268.311, 268.404, 268.409(e), 268.412, and 268.414.

(b) A complainant, agent, or claimant may not request review by the Equal Opportunity Commission under paragraph (a) of this section when the issue of discrimination giving rise to the complaint is being considered, or has been considered, in connection with any other request for review by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission filed by the same complainant, agent, or claimant.

§ 268.802 Filing of the request for review.

The complainant, agent, or claimant shall file his or her request for review in writing, either personally or by mail, simultaneously with the Director, Office of Review and Appeals, Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, 2401 E Street, NW., Washington, D.C. 20506, and with the Board's EEO Programs Officer.

§ 268.803 Time limits.

(a) Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this section, a complainant, agent, or claimant may file a request for review at any time up to 20 calendar days after receipt of the Board's notice of final decision on the complaint or claim, except that the deadline shall be 15 calendar days in connection with any class complaint or claim. A request for review shall be deemed filed on the date it is postmarked, or in the absence of a postmark, on the date it is received by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. Any statement or brief in support of the request for review must be submitted to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and to the Board within 30 calendar days of filing the request for review. For the purposes of this part, the decision of the Board shall be final only when the Board makes a determination on all of the issues in the complaint or claim, including whether or not to award attorney's fees and/or costs. If a decision to award attorney's fees and/or costs is made, the decision shall not be final until the procedure is followed for determining the amount of such award as set forth in § 268.315(c) of Subpart C.

(b) The time limits within which a request for review must be filed will not be extended unless, based upon a written statement by the complainant, agent, or claimant showing that he or she was not notified of the prescribed time limit and was not otherwise aware of it or that circumstances beyond his or her control prevented the filing of a request for review within the prescribed time limits, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission determines that the time limit should be extended.

§ 268.804 Procedures.

The Office of Review and Appeals of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission shall review the complaint or claim file and all relevant written representations made to the Commission. The Office may return a complaint to the Board with a request for further investigation or a hearing if it considers such action necessary. There is no right to a hearing before the Office of Review and Appeals. The Office of Review and Appeals shall issue a written finding setting forth its reasons for its findings and shall transmit such findings for consideration by the Board. The Office of Review and Appeals shall also issue copies of its findings to the complainant, agent or claimant.

§ 268.805 Review and consideration.

(a) The Commissioners may, in their discretion, reopen and reconsider any findings of the Office of Review and Appeals when the Board or the complainant, agent, or claimant requesting reopening or reconsideration submits written argument or evidence which tend to establish that:

(1) New and material evidence is available that was not readily available when the previous finding was issued;

(2) The previous finding involves an erroneous interpretation of law or regulation or misapplication of established policy; or

(3) The previous finding is of a precedential nature involving a new or unreviewed policy consideration that may have effects beyond the actual case at hand, or is otherwise of such an exceptional nature as to merit the personal attention of the Commissioners.

(b) If the Commissioners, in their discretion, reopen and reconsider any previous findings of the Office of Review and Appeals, the Commissioners shall transmit their findings for consideration by the Board. The Commissioners shall also issue copies of their findings to the complainant, agent or claimant.

Subpart I—Equal Pay

§ 268.901 General prohibition of discrimination.

The Board shall not discriminate among employees on the basis of sex by paying wages to employees at a rate less than the rate at which it pays wages to employees of the opposite sex for equal work on jobs the performance of which requires equal skill, effort, and responsibility, and which are performed under similar working conditions, except where such payment is made pursuant to:

(a) A seniority system;

(b) A merit system;

(c) A system which measures earnings by quantity or quality of production; or

(d) A differential based on any factor other than sex or otherwise not prohibited by this regulation.

§ 268.902 Record keeping.

(a) The Board shall preserve any records which are made in the regular course of business which relate to the payment of wages, wage rates, job evaluations, job descriptions, merits systems, seniority systems, descriptions of practices, or other matters which described or explain the basis for payment of any wage differential to employees of the opposite sex, and which may be pertinent to determination of whether such differential is based on a factor other than sex.

(b) Such records are to be kept for at least six years.

§ 268.903 Procedure.

(a) Wages withheld in violation of this subpart have the status of unpaid minimum wage or unpaid overtime compensation.

(b) Any employee who believes he or she has received unequal pay due to discrimination based on sex may seek recovery of withheld wages by filing a complaint of discrimination under Subpart C of this regulation, if a complaint of individual discrimination, or Subpart D of this regulation, if a class action, except that civil actions shall be filed pursuant to § 268.904 of this subpart.

§ 268.904 Right to file civil action for judicial review.

A complainant, agent, or claimant, under this subpart is authorized to file a civil action against the Board in an appropriate United States District Court within six years of matter causing the complainant, agent, or claimant to believe he or she has been denied equal pay.

§ 269.1 Definition of a labor organization.

When used in this part, the term "labor organization" means any lawful organization of any kind, or any employee representation group, which exists for the purpose, in whole or in part, of dealing with any Federal Reserve Bank concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting the working conditions of its employees, but the term shall not include any organization:

(a) Which asserts the right to strike against the government of the United States, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, or any Federal Reserve Bank, or to assist or participate in any such strike, or which imposes a duty or obligation to conduct, assist or participate in any such strike; or (b) which fails to agree to refrain from seeking or accepting support from any organization which employs coercive tactics affecting any Federal Reserve Bank's operations; or (c) which advocates the overthrow of the constitutional form of the government of the United States; or (d) which discriminates with regard to the terms or conditions of membership because of race, color, sex, creed, age or national origin.

§ 269.2 Membership in a labor organization.

(a) Any employee of a Federal Reserve Bank (hereinafter referred to as "Bank") is free to join and assist any existing labor organization or to participate in the formation of a new labor organization, or to refrain from any such activities except that officers and their administrative or confidential assistants, managers and other supervisory personnel, secretaries to all such persons and all employees engaged in Bank personnel work shall not be represented by any labor organization.

(b) The rights described in paragraph (a) of this section for employees do not extend to participation in the management of a labor organization, or acting as a representative of any such organization, where such participation or activity would conflict with law or the duties of an employee.

(c) Notwithstanding anything stated in paragraph (a) of this section, professional employees of a Bank shall not be represented by a labor organization which represents other employees of the Bank unless a majority of the professional employees eligible to vote specifically elect to be represented by such labor organization. However, the professional employees of a Bank may, if they so choose, be represented by a separate labor organization of their own, or by no labor organization at all.

(d) Notwithstanding anything stated in paragraph (a) of this section, the guards of a Bank shall not be members of a labor organization which represents other categories of employees of the Bank. However, the guards of a Bank may, if they so choose, be represented by a separate labor organization of their own, or by no labor organization at all.

§ 269.3 Recognition of a labor organization and its relationship to a Federal Reserve Bank.

(a) Any labor organization shall be recognized as the exclusive bargaining representative of the employees in an appropriate unit of a Bank when that organization has been selected by the employees in said unit pursuant to the procedure set forth in § 269.5. A unit may be established in a Bank on any basis which will ensure a clear and identifiable community of interest among the employees concerned, and will promote effective relationships and the efficiency of the Bank's operations, but no unit shall be established solely on the basis of the extent to which a labor organization or employees in the proposed unit may have sought organization.

(b) When a labor organization has been recognized as the exclusive representative of employees in an appropriate unit, it shall be entitled to act for and to negotiate agreements in good faith covering all employees in the unit, and it shall be responsible for representing the interests of all such employees without discrimination and without regard to whether they are members of that labor organization or not, provided that nothing in this Policy shall prevent an employee from adjusting his or her grievance without the intervention of the recognized labor organization. The labor organization shall be given notice of the adjustment and a reasonable opportunity to object on the sole ground that it is in conflict with the terms of the collective bargaining agreement.

(c) A Bank, through appropriate officials, shall have the obligation to meet at reasonable times with representatives of a recognized labor organization to negotiate, in good faith, with respect to personnel policies and practices affecting working conditions for employees, provided that they do not involve matters in any of the following areas:

(1) The purposes and functions of the Bank; the compensation of and hours worked by employees; any classification system used to evaluate positions; the budget of the Bank; the retirement system; any insurance or other benefit plans; internal security operations; maintenance of the efficiency of Bank operations including the determination of work methods; the right to contract out; the determination as to manpower requirements; use of technology and organization of work; and action to meet emergency situations;

(2) Management rights as to the direction of employees, including hiring, promotion, transfer, classification, assignment, layoffs, retention, suspension, demotion, discipline and discharge, provided that on matters involving the procedures to be followed by a Bank for the exercise of its rights under this subparagraph, a Bank shall, upon request, discuss such procedures with a recognized labor organization, but shall not be required to negotiate for an agreement as to them;

(3) All Bank matters specifically governed by applicable laws or regulations.

The obligation under this paragraph to negotiate with regard to certain matters shall include the execution of a written contract incorporating any agreement reached, but does not compel either a Bank or a labor organization to agree to a particular proposal or to make any concession during such negotiations.

(d) At the time it requests an election to be held, any labor organization seeking recognition shall submit to a Bank a roster of its officers and representatives, a copy of its constitution and bylaws, and a statement of its objectives.

(e) Subject to the provisions of § 269.8, the exclusive recognition of a labor organization shall not preclude any employee, regardless of labor organization membership, from bringing matters of personal concern not governed by a collective bargaining agreement to the attention of appropriate officers, managers or supervisory personnel in accordance with applicable law, rule, regulation, or established Bank policy, or from choosing his or her own representative in such matters.

§ 269.4 Determination of appropriate bargaining unit.

(a) If a labor organization asserts in writing to a Bank that it holds cards requesting a representation election signed by at least thirty percent (30%) of the employees in a unit which that organization considers to be an appropriate bargaining unit, the labor organization and the Bank shall each designate a representative who together shall request the American Arbitration Association (hereinafter referred to as "Association") to submit to them from its National Panel of Professional Labor Arbitrators a list of seven (7) impartial, qualified professional arbitrators. The two designated representatives shall meet promptly and, by alternately striking names from the list, arrive at the remaining person who, together with the two representatives, shall constitute a Special Tribunal to rule on the labor organization's request for an election. The impartial arbitrator shall always act as the Chairperson of any Special Tribunal duly constituted under this section.

(b) In the absence of an agreement between the labor organization and the Bank on the appropriate unit, the Tribunal shall investigate the facts, hold hearings if necessary, and issue a decision as to the appropriateness of the unit for the purposes of conducting a representation election for exclusive recognition and as to related issues submitted for consideration. The expenses for this proceeding, including the fees of the association and of the arbitrator, shall be borne equally by the labor organization and the Bank. If either the Bank or the labor organization should disagree with the Special Tribunal's decision, the party in disagreement may appeal within thirty (30) calendar days to the Federal Reserve System Labor Relations Panel referred to in § 269.11, and the decision of the System Panel shall be final and binding on the parties.

(c) If there is any dispute as to whether a labor organization holds cards signed by at least thirty percent (30%) of the employees in a unit claimed by a labor organization as appropriate or subsequently determined by the Special Tribunal as appropriate, the dispute shall be resolved by the Chairperson of the Special Tribunal, acting as a single impartial arbitrator. The expenses of such procedure, including the impartial arbitrator's fee, shall be borne equally by the labor organization and the Bank. The decision of the Chairperson of the Special Tribunal shall be final and binding and shall not be subject to appeal to the Federal Reserve System Labor Relations Panel.

§ 269.5 Elections.

(a) Once there has been a final determination of the existence of an appropriate bargaining unit under the procedure in § 269.4, and a showing by a labor organization that it has cards signed by at least thirty percent (30%) of the employees in such unit requesting a representation election, an election shall be ordered by the Special Tribunal. A labor organization shall be recognized as the exclusive bargaining representative of the unit if it is selected by a majority of the employees in the unit actually voting.

(b) The election shall be held under the auspices of the Association and shall be subject to its election rules and regulations. However, if there should be any conflict between such rules and regulations and the provisions of this Policy, the latter shall prevail. The fees charged by the Association for its election service shall be borne equally by the labor organization and the Bank.

(c) An election to determine whether a labor organization should continue as the exclusive bargaining representative of a particular unit shall be held when requested by a petition or other bona fide showing by at least thirty percent (30%) of the employees of that unit. Any dispute as to whether thirty percent (30%) of the employees requested such an election shall be resolved by the same procedure as that set forth in § 269.4(b). The election shall be held under the auspices of the Association in the same manner described in paragraph (b) of this section. The recognition of a labor organization as the exclusive bargaining representative of a unit shall be revoked if a majority of the employees in the unit who actually vote signify approval of such revocation.

(d) Only one election may be held in any unit in a twelve (12) month period to determine whether a labor organization should become, or continue to be recognized as, the exclusive representative of the employees in that unit.

(e) Upon receipt of a request for an election from a labor organization under § 269.4(a), it shall be incumbent on the Bank, labor organization and all others to refrain from any conduct, action or policy that interferes with or restrains employees from making a fair and free choice in selecting or rejecting a bargaining representative consistent with the right of the Bank, labor organization or employees to exercise privileges of free speech in the expression of any views, argument or opinion, or the dissemination thereof, whether in oral, written, printed, graphic or visual form.

(f) The Special Tribunal shall hear and decide any post-election objections of a Bank or labor organization filed with it claiming that a violation of paragraph (e) of this section has improperly affected the outcome of the election. Such objections must be filed with the Special Tribunal no later than five (5) business days after the date of election. In the event of such violation by a Bank, labor organization or other individuals or organizations which the Special Tribunal finds sufficient to have prejudiced the outcome of an election, appropriate remedial action shall be taken in the form of setting aside the election results and ordering a new election, provided, however, that an appeal from the order of the Special Tribunal may be taken within thirty (30) calendar days to the Federal Reserve System Labor Relations Panel by either the affected Bank or labor organization. The ruling of the System Panel shall be final and binding. Neither the Special Tribunal nor the Federal Reserve System Labor Relations Panel shall have the authority to direct a Bank to recognize a labor organization as the exclusive collective bargaining representative without a valid election being held in which a majority of the employees actually voting have so designated such labor organization.

(g) The Special Tribunal and the Federal Reserve System Labor Relations Panel will adhere to any rules and regulations promulgated by the Board of Governors for the administration of the provisions of paragraphs (e) and (f) of this section.

§ 269.6 Unfair labor practices.

(a) It shall be an unfair labor practice for a Bank to: (1) Interfere with, restrain, or coerce employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in § 269.2(a); (2) dominate or interfere with the formation or administration of any labor organization, or to contribute financial or other support to it; (3) encourage or discourage membership in any labor organization by discrimination in regard to hire or tenure of employment or any term or condition of employment; (4) refuse to bargain collectively with the representatives of its employees subject to the provisions of § 269.3 (b) and (c).

(b) It shall be an unfair labor practice for a labor organization, its agents or representatives to: (1) Restrain or coerce employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in § 269.2(a); (2) cause or attempt to cause a Bank to Discriminate against an employee in violation of paragraph (a)(3) of this section; (3) refuse to bargain collectively with a Bank, provided the labor organization is the exclusive representative of a unit of employees.

(c) Notwithstanding anything previously stated in this section, the expression of any view, argument or opinion, or the dissemination thereof, whether in oral, written, printed, graphic or visual form, shall not constitute or be evidence of an unfair labor practice, if such expression contains no threat of reprisal or force, or promise of benefit.

(d) The Federal Reserve System Labor Relations Panel will adhere to the rules and regulations promulgated by the Board of Governors for the prevention and remedy of the unfair labor practices listed herein.

§ 269.7 Approval of agreement and required contents.

Any agreement entered into with a labor organization as the exclusive representative of employees in a unit must be approved by the President of the Bank or a designated officer representative. All agreements with labor organizations shall also be subject to the requirement that the administration of all matters covered by the agreement shall be governed by the provisions of applicable laws and Federal Reserve System rules and regulations, and the agreement shall at all times be applied subject to such laws and regulations.

§ 269.8 Grievance procedures.

(a) Subject to the provisions of § 269.3(b), an agreement entered into with a labor organization as the exclusive representative of employees in a unit may contain a grievance procedure, applicable only to employees in such unit and which shall be the exclusive means for a labor organization and/or an employee to obtain resolution of a grievance arising under such agreement.

(b) Grievance procedures established by a labor agreement may also include provisions for arbitration of unresolved grievances by a tripartite panel under the Voluntary Labor Arbitration Rules of the Association with the impartial arbitrator selected by the Bank and labor organization representatives on the arbitration panel to be the Chairperson. In such event, arbitration shall extend only to grievances which involve the interpretation and application of specific provisions of a labor agreement and not to any other matters or to changes in or proposed changes in the agreement. Arbitration may only be invoked by labor organization on behalf of individual employees with their concurrence.

§ 269.9 Mediation of negotiation impasses.

In the event of an impasse in negotiations between the parties for a collective bargaining agreement, either the labor organization or the Bank may request the appointment of a qualified neutral person as a mediator to assist the parties in attempting to resolve the impasse. The parties will meet promptly with the mediator, and all matters discussed, as well as any documents submitted, shall not be publicly divulged for any reason. The cost of the mediator shall be borne equally by the parties.

§ 269.10 Time for internal labor organization business, consultations and negotiations.

Solicitation of memberships, dues or other internal labor organization business shall be conducted during the nonduty hours of the employees concerned. Officially requested or approved consultation between management executives and representatives of a labor organization shall, whenever practicable, be conducted on official time, but the President or a duly authorized officer of a Bank may require that negotiations with a labor organization be conducted during the nonduty hours of the Bank.

§ 269.11 Federal Reserve System Labor Relations Panel.

There shall be established a Federal Reserve System Labor Relations Panel, which shall consist of three members: one member of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, who shall be Chairperson of the Panel, and two public members. Each member shall be selected by the Board of Governors; provided, however, that the public members shall not have any present or past affiliation with the Federal Reserve System. Initially, one of the two public members shall be appointed for a term of two years, and the other for a term of three years. Thereafter, each public member shall be appointed for a term of three years, except that in the case of an unexpired term of a former member, the successor shall be appointed to fill such unexpired term. Upon the expiration of their term of office, public members may continue to serve until their successors are appointed and have qualified. A public member may be removed by the Board only upon notice and hearing, and only for neglect of duty or malfeasance in office. The Panel shall be responsible for the duties assigned to it as set forth in this Policy.

§ 269.12 Amendment.

This policy may be amended upon appropriate legal notice to all Federal Reserve Banks and labor organizations recognized, or seeking recognition, at any such Bank under this Policy. In no instance shall an amendment be applied retroactively.

§ 269a.1 Party.

The term "Party" means any person, employee, group of employees, labor organization, or bank as defined in § 269.2 of this chapter (a) filing a charge, petition, application, or rquest pursuant to these rules and regulations, (b) named as a party in a charge, complaint, petition, application, or request, or (c) whose intervention has been permitted or directed by the investigator, the hearing officer, or the panel, as the case may be, but nothing shall be construed to prevent the panel, or any officer designated by it, from limiting any party's participation in the proceedings to the extent of his interest as determined by the investigator, hearing officer, or panel.

§ 269a.2 Party in interest.

The term "party in interest" means any person, employee, group of employees, labor organization, or bank that will be or is directly affected by the resolution of any charge, complaint, petition, application, or request presented to or being considered by the panel or its designated officers. Any (a) labor organization (not a charging party nor a charged party) attempting to organize the employees of a bank or that is or was recently a party to a collective bargaining agreement with a bank named as a party in a charge, complaint, petition, application, or a request, or (b) bank (not a charging party nor a charged party) that acts as the employer of any person named in a charge, complaint, petition, or request shall be deemed to be also a party in interest and shall be entitled to notification and service of all relevant procedures and documents.

§ 269a.3 Intervenor.

The term "intervenor" means the party in a proceeding whose intervention has been permitted or directed by the panel or its designated officer.

§ 269a.4 Investigator.

The term "investigator" means the officer designated by the panel to investigate and determine whether or not a complainant has established a prima facie case, as defined in § 292.210 of this subchapter.

§ 269a.5 Hearing officer.

The term "hearing officer" means the officer designated by the panel to conduct hearings pursuant to § 292.420 et seq. of this subchapter and whose duties and power are enumerated in § 292.442 of this subchapter.

CHARGES OF VIOLATIONS OF § 269.6 (OF THE POLICY)

§ 269b.110 Charges.

A charge that any bank or labor organization, or agents or representatives of a bank or labor organization, has engaged in or is engaging in any act prohibited under § 269.6 of the policy or has failed to take any action required by § 269.6 of the policy may be filed by any party in interest, or its representative, within 60 days after the alleged violations or within 60 days after the charging party has become or should have become aware of the alleged violation.

§ 269b.111 Filing of charges.

Any charge pursuant to § 269b.110 shall be in writing and signed. An original and three copies of such charge, together with one copy for each charged party named, shall be transmitted to the Secretary of the Federal Reserve System Labor Relations Panel, 20th Street and Constitution Avenue NW., Washington, D.C. 20551. Within 5 days after receipt of a properly filed charge that meets the formal requirements set forth in § 269b.112, the Secretary will cause a copy of such charge to be served on each party against whom the charge is made and upon all other potential parties in interest.

§ 269b.112 Contents of the charge.

A charge shall contain the following:

(a) The full name, address, and telephone number of the person, bank, or labor organization making the charge (hereinafter referred to as the charging party) and of the person signing the charge who shall state also his relation to or his capacity with the complainant. Where discrimination is alleged, all known discriminatees shall be named;

(b) The name, address, and telephone number of the bank or labor organization against whom the charge is made (hereinafter referred to as the respondent) and of any parties in interest;

(c) A clear and concise statement of the facts constituting the alleged unfair labor practice, including the time and place of occurrence of the particular acts, and a statement of the portion or portions of the policy alleged to have been violated. A charge shall not incorporate by reference affidavits or other documents submitted in support of the charge;

(d) A statement of the relief sought;

(e) A statement of any other remedies invoked for the redress of the alleged violations of the policy and the results, if any, of their invocation. If the issue in such charge is subject to an established grievance procedure, the complainant must irrevocably elect, prior to the completion of the first applicable step of the grievance procedure, whether he will invoke the grievance procedure or whether he will invoke the unfair labor practice procedures of the panel. A charge which is withdrawn or rejected by the panel as defective prior to the institution of any formal proceedings by the panel shall not prejudice the filing of a grievance on the same matter, unless the parties otherwise so provide;

(f) A declaration by the person signing the charge, that its contents are true and correct to the best of his knowledge and belief, such declaration to be subject to applicable provisions of the Federal Criminal Code (18 U.S.C. 1001).

§ 269b.113 Withdrawal or settlement.

A charge may be withdrawn or settlement of the matter may be reached without consent of the panel at any time. In connection with any such settlement the parties in interest shall prepare and sign a settlement agreement which shall record that the settlement is mutually satisfactory, shall stipulate any occurrences which constituted unfair labor practices and shall set forth the terms of the settlement.

§ 269b.120 Answer to a charge.

The respondent shall file an answer to the charge with the Secretary of the panel within 15 days after service of the charge. Upon application and for good cause shown, the panel may extend the time within which the answer shall be filed. One copy of the answer shall be served on each party with proof of service furnished to the Secretary, and the original, which shall be signed, and four copies shall be filed with the Secretary.

§ 269b.121 Contents of answer.

The answer shall contain:

(a) A specific admission or denial, and where appropriate, explanation thereof; or if the respondent is without knowledge of the allegation, he shall so state and such statement shall operate as a denial. Admissions or denials may be to all or part of an allegation but shall be responsive to the substance of the allegation;

(b) A specified, detailed statement of any affirmative defense;

(c) A clear and concise statement of the facts and matters of law relied upon constituting the grounds of defense.

Any allegation of the charge not denied in the answer may be deemed admitted and may be so found by the panel.

PRELIMINARY INVESTIGATION

§ 269b.210 Referral to National Center for Dispute Settlement.

(a) Within 5 days after the answer to the charge has been or should have been filed, the panel may refer the matter, accompanied by a general or particularized request, to the National Center for Dispute Settlement of the American Arbitration Association (hereinafter referred to as the Center) to make an investigation and to determine whether the charging party has established a prima facie case.

(b) For the purposes of this part, a "prima facie case" means a case where allegations of an unfair labor practice that have been presented give reasonable cause to believe that such practice may have occurred, but where evidentiary proceedings are necessary for determination of whether the allegations are substantiated.

(c) The Center may use its own personnel or may hire individuals on a contract basis to conduct such investigations. The panel may consolidate or sever proceedings conducted pursuant to this part.

(d) Any party may request the Center or other appointing authority to withdraw appointment of the investigator within 3 days after designation on the basis of previously demonstrated personal bias, conflict of interest, or prejudice. Such a request shall set forth in detail the matter alleged to constitute grounds for disqualification. Denial of a request by the Center or other appointing authority shall be substantiated in writing and transmitted to the requesting party, and shall be submitted to the panel together with the complete report of the investigator required in § 269b.240(b).

§ 269b.220 Priority; acceleration of proceedings.

(a) A charge of "refusal to bargain" or a charge that, if sustained, would require the setting aside of an election or the conduct of a new election shall be given priority.

(b) The parties, individually or jointly, may petition the panel at any time to invoke immediately the formal hearing procedures set forth in § 269b.410. They may also petition the panel to entertain the matter itself without prior investigation and/or without the formal hearing procedure set forth in § 269b.410. The panel is empowered also on its own motion to so accelerate disposition of the case.

(c) Before accelerating a case the panel may utilize whatever proceedings it may deem appropriate and timely to allow parties in interest to comment on the proposed course of action.

§ 269b.230 Assessment of costs; posting of bond.

(a) The panel shall normally bear the costs of an investigation conducted pursuant to § 269b.210, but the panel may require that the charging party, the respondent, and/or other parties in interest or intervenors, or several of them, shall bear a portion or all of the costs therefor. With respect to each case where an investigation is directed by the panel, the charging party may, in the discretion of the panel, be required to file a cost bond, or equivalent security, of $500, unless the panel fixes a different amount.

(b) Among the circumstances that may be the basis for payment of costs by other than the panel are cases where a clearly spurious charge has been filed or where the filing of a charge was necessary to redress the respondent's flagrant misconduct.

(c) The bond or equivalent security shall be to secure the payment of the costs of the investigation as may be assessed by the panel. In those cases where the panel does not assess such costs, the bond posted and the cost thereof shall be reimbursed to the charging party. The panel may require also the posting of a cost bond by the respondent or other party to the proceeding, who shall be entitled to reimbursement of the cost of the bond in the event that no costs of investigation are assessed upon such party by the panel.

(d) Notification of the panel's decision that a bond shall be required shall be effected by registered mail, such notice to advise of the amount of the bond required and the period by which it shall be posted.

(e) Absent good cause shown, failure of a party to file timely such cost bond or equivalent security may be ground for dismissal or other administrative sanctions deemed appropriate by the Panel.

§ 269b.240 The investigation.

(a) The purpose of the investigation is (1) to ascertain, analyze, and apply the relevant facts in order to determine whether or not formal proceedings are warranted and (2) to assist, by mediation and other appropriate means, the parties to reach a mutually satisfactory resolution of the issues as an alternative to the hearing process. In so doing, the investigator is not limited to the allegations set forth in the charge and may advise the charging party to amend his charge. In addition, he should adduce facts pertaining to the remedy as well as to the alleged violation. Investigation should also adduce facts pertaining to the jurisdiction of the panel and the timeliness of the charge. If the charge is untimely on its face, no investigation shall be required except to determine whether or not attending circumstances warrant waiving the time requirements, set forth in § 269b.110. The investigator may request the appearance of parties and witnesses, may cause, the production of relevant document, and may take or cause depositions to be taken.

(b) When the investigation has been completed, the Center shall issue a written determination whether the charging party has established a prima facie case, whether the charge was timely filed, and whether the charge is within the jurisdiction of the panel, and reasons therefor. This determination shall be served upon the panel and all parties. The panel shall receive also the complete report of the investigator.

APPEAL FROM THE CENTER'S DETERMINATION

§ 269b.310 Appeal rights.

Where the investigator has found that a prima facie case does not exist, a party, including an intervenor but excluding the respondent or other parties having the same interest as the respondent, within 5 days after receiving the Center's determination may petition the panel to set aside the determination and to cause formal proceedings, set forth in § 269b.410, to be invoked. The panel may grant such petition only on grounds that the Center or its agents were arbitrary, capricious, or acted contrary to law or the policy, or that the investigator's determination is clearly erroneous. The filing requirements for such a petition shall be the same as that for the filing of a charge, as set forth in § 269b.111.

§ 269b.320 Proceedings before the panel.

The panel shall issue its decision within 15 days after the receipt of the petition provided for in § 269b.310 or by the end of that period shall announce that it will require briefs by the parties. Such announcement shall specify the requirements as to contents of the briefs, and the time for submission, which shall vary to meet the circumstances of the matter appealed. The panel, at such time, may also require oral argument or the production of evidence or may so order oral argument and/or the production of evidence after examination of the briefs. The panel shall issue its final decision within 20 days after briefs have been filed, evidence has been produced, or oral argument has been conducted.

FORMAL PROCEEDINGS

§ 269b.410 Notice of hearing.

If formal proceedings are found to be needed under the above procedures, and if no satisfactory settlement has been reached within 5 days after finding that a prima facie case exists, the Secretary of the panel, unless there is cause for granting an extension of time, shall issue and cause to be served upon the parties a notice of hearing. The panel shall appoint, pursuant to § 269b.420, a hearing officer to hold a hearing and issue a report to the panel containing findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendations including, where appropriate, remedial action to be taken and notices to be posted. The Secretary shall furnish to the hearing officer the investigator's report and all other relevant information in the panel's possession.

§ 269b.420 Designation of hearing officer.

(a) The panel, absent special circumstances, shall employ the center to select the hearing officer to conduct the hearing at a site most convenient to the parties and witnesses. The individual who performed the investigation, pursuant to § 269b.210, shall be barred from acting as a hearing officer on the same matter, unless all parties in interest agree to his participation. The selection of the hearing officer, to the extent practicable, shall be done with the concurrence of the parties.

(b) Any party may request the hearing officer, at any time following his designation and before the filing of his decision, to withdraw on grounds of previously demonstrated personal bias, conflict of interest, or prejudice by filing with him promptly upon the discovery of the alleged facts a timely affidavit setting forth in detail the matters alleged to constitute grounds for disqualification. If, in the opinion of the hearing officer, such affidavit is filed with due diligence and is sufficient on its face, he shall forthwith disqualify himself and withdraw from the proceeding. If he does not so withdraw, he shall so rule upon the record, stating the grounds for his ruling and proceed with the hearing, or, if the hearing has closed, he shall proceed with the issuance of his decision, and his ruling shall be subject to the same review by the panel that is given to the rest of his decision.

(c) The costs of conducting the hearing and of the hearing officer shall be borne by the panel. Witness fees and expenses shall be paid by the party at whose instance the witnesses appear.

§ 269b.430 Contents of notice of hearing.

The notice of hearing shall include:

(a) A copy of the charge;

(b) A statement of the time of the hearing which shall be not less than 10 days after service of the notice of hearing, except in extraordinary circumstances. All charges involving a "refusal to bargain" allegation and all charges, if sustained, that would require the setting aside of an election, or the conducting of a new election shall be given first priority;

(c) A statement of the place and nature of hearing;

(d) A statement of the legal authority and jurisdiction under which the hearing is to be held;

(e) A reference to the particular section of the policy and rules and regulations of this chapter involved;

(f) A copy of the determination, if any, made causing the invocation of these formal proceedings.

§ 269b.440 Conduct of hearing.

(a) Hearing shall be public unless otherwise ordered by the hearing officer or the panel. An official reporter shall make the only official transcript of such proceedings.

(b) Copies of the official transcript will not be provided to the parties, but may be purchased by arrangement with the official reporter or with such costs as the panel may otherwise assess, or may be examined in the offices of the panel and/or the hearing officer subject to such conditions as the panel may prescribe.

(c) A charging party in asserting that an unfair labor practice has been committed within the meaning of the policy, shall have the burden of proving the allegations of the charge, or the amended charge, by a preponderance of the evidence.

(d) The parties shall not be bound by the technical rules of evidence, but the hearing officer, may, in his discretion, exclude any evidence or offer of proof if he finds that its probative value is substantially outweighed by the risk that its admission will either necessitate undue consumption of time or create substantial danger of undue prejudice or confusion.

§ 269b.441 Rights of parties.

(a) Any party shall have the right to appear at such hearing in person, by counsel, or by other representative, to call, examine, and cross-examine witnesses as may be required for a full and true disclosure of the facts, and to introduce into the record documentary or other relevant evidence, except that the participation of any party shall be limited to the extent permitted by the hearing officer. Five copies of such documentary evidence shall be submitted unless the hearing officer permits a reduced number for good cause shown.

(b) Any party shall be entitled, upon request, to a reasonable period at the close of the hearing for oral argument, which shall be included in the stenographic report of the hearing.

(c) Any party shall be entitled to file a brief to the hearing officer within 10 days after the close of the hearing, but no reply brief may be filed except upon special permission of the hearing officer. A party filing a brief must file the original and one copy with the hearing officer along with proof of service of a copy of such brief to all parties. Requests for extension of time to file briefs must be made to the hearing officer who must receive the request at least 3 days prior to the expiration of time fixed for filing of briefs and notice of the request shall be served simultaneously on all other parties, and proof of service shall be furnished. If a request for extension of time is based on the need for a copy of the transcript prior to filing a brief, such request must be made to the hearing officer before the hearing is closed and must be ruled on prior to the close of the hearing.

§ 269b.442 Duties and powers of the hearing officer.

The hearing officer shall inquire fully into the facts as to whether the respondent has engaged or is engaging in an unfair labor practice as set forth in the charge or the amended charge. The hearing officer shall have authority, with respect to cases assigned to him, between the time he is designated and transfer of the case to the panel, subject to the rules and regulations in this subchapter, to:

(a) Grant requests for attendance of witnesses and production of documents;

(b) Rule upon petitions to quash requests made pursuant to paragraph (a) of this section;

(c) Call, examine, and cross-examine parties and witnesses as may be required for a full and true disclosure of the facts and to introduce into the record documentary or other evidence;

(d) Rule upon offers of proof and receive relevant evidence;

(e) Take or cause depositions to be taken whenever the ends of justice would be served thereby;

(f) Limit lines of questioning or testimony which are repetitive, cumulative, or irrelevant;

(g) Regulate the course of the hearing and, if appropriate or necessary, exclude persons or counsel from the hearing for contemptuous conduct and strike all related testimony of witnesses refusing to answer any proper question;

(h) Hold such prehearing conferences as may be necessary to expedite proceedings and hold such other conferences for the settlement or simplification of the issues by consent of the parties or upon his own motion;

(i) Dispose of procedural requests, motions, or similar matters which shall be made part of the record of the proceeding, including motions referred to the hearing officer by the panel, and motions to amend pleadings, also to recommend dismissal of cases or portions thereof, and to order hearings reopened or, upon motion, consolidated prior to issuance of the hearing officer's report and recommendations;

(j) Request the parties at any time during the hearing to state their respective positions concerning any issue in the case or theory in support thereof;

(k) Require the parties, if necessary, to file written briefs in support of their positions;

(l) Take any other action necessary under the foregoing and authorized by the rules and regulations in this subchapter.

In the event the hearing officer designated to conduct the hearing becomes unavailable, the panel may designate another hearing officer for the purpose of further hearing or issuance of a report and recommendation on the record as made, or both.

§ 269b.443 Motions before or after a hearing.

All motions (including motions for intervention), other than those made during a hearing, shall be made in writing to the Secretary of the panel, shall briefly state the relief sought, shall set forth the grounds for such motion, and shall be accompanied 3 days thereafter by proof of service on all parties. Answering statements, if any, must be served on all parties and the original thereof, together with two copies and statement of service, shall be filed with the Secretary within 5 days after service of the moving papers, unless the Secretary directs otherwise. Motions may be referred to the hearing officer whose ruling shall be made upon the record or the motion may be stayed until such time as the panel reviews the hearing officer's report and recommendations.

§ 269b.444 Objection to conduct of hearing; other motions during hearing.

Any objection with respect to the conduct of the hearing, including any objection to the introduction of evidence, or any other motion during the course of the hearing, including a request to allow intervention, may be stated orally or in writing accompanied by a short statement of the grounds for such objection, and included in the record. No such objection shall be deemed waived by further participation in the hearing and such objection shall not stay the conduct of the hearing. Automatic exceptions will be allowed to all adverse rulings and shall be considered by the panel upon its review of the hearing officer's report and recommendations, if exception to the ruling is included in a statement of exceptions submitted to the panel after the close of the hearing, subject to the requirements of § 269b.520.

§ 269b.450 Submission of hearing officer's report to the panel.

After the close of the hearing, and the receipt of briefs, if any, the hearing officer shall prepare a report and recommendations, containing findings of fact, conclusions of law, including judgments as to the credibility of witnesses where appropriate, and the reasons or basis therefor, and recommendations as to the disposition of the case, and, where appropriate, including the remedial action and notices to be posted. After he has caused his report and recommendations to be served promptly on all parties to the proceeding, he shall transfer the case to the panel including his report and recommendations and the complete record. Such submission shall be made within 20 days after the close of the hearing and the receipt of briefs, if any, unless otherwise extended by the panel. The record shall include the charge, notice of hearing, service sheet, motions, rulings, orders, official transcript of the hearing, stipulations, objections, depositions, documentary evidence, exhibits, and any briefs or other documents submitted to the parties.

Panel Review of Hearing Officer's Report and Recommended Decision

§ 269b.510 Review by panel.

The panel shall review the report and recommendations of each hearing officer, the record of the hearing, and such other documents as enumerated in § 269b.450, whether or not any party files an appeal, unless the parties file with the panel a settlement agreement within 10 days after service of the hearing officer's report upon them. In the course of such review, the panel may require oral argument or written briefs on any relevant issue within such time limits as the panel may prescribe, and may reopen the record in any case and receive further evidence.

§ 269b.520 Exceptions to hearing officer's report.

(a) Any party may file with the panel exceptions to the hearing officer's report and recommendations, and any ruling contained therein, if made within 10 days after service of the report and recommendations. The Panel may, for good cause shown, extend the time for filing such exceptions upon written request, with copies served simultaneously on the other parties, received not later than 3 days before the date exceptions are due. Requests for oral argument will not be considered unless filed with exceptions.

(b) Any exception to a ruling, finding, conclusion, or recommendation which is not specifically urged shall be deemed to have been waived, although the panel may on its own motion rule upon any matter in the report and recommendations.

(c) Any exception which fails to comply with the following requirements may be disregarded:

(1) The exceptions shall set forth specifically the questions of procedure, fact, law, or policy to which exceptions are taken;

(2) The exceptions shall identify the part of the hearing officer's report to which objection is made;

(3) The exceptions shall designate by precise citation of page the portions of the record relied on, shall state the grounds for the exceptions, and shall include the citation of authorities unless set forth in a supporting brief.

(d) Any brief in support of exceptions shall contain no matter not included within the scope of the exceptions and shall contain in the order indicated, the following:

(1) A concise statement of the case containing all that is material to the consideration of the questions presented;

(2) A specification of the questions involved and to be argued;

(3) The argument, presenting clearly the points of fact and law relied on in support of the position taken on each question, with specific page reference to the transcript and the legal or other material relied on.

(e) Answering briefs to the exceptions, and cross-exceptions and supporting briefs will not be permitted without special leave of the panel. Requests for oral argument will not be considered unless accompanying such petition for special leave.

(f) Five copies of exceptions and briefs must be filed with the panel along with a statement of service of copies of the exceptions and supporting briefs upon all parties.

§ 269b.530 Briefs in support of the hearing officer's report.

Any party may file a brief in support of the hearing officer's report and recommendations subject to the same time limits and rules pertaining to filing exceptions and briefs in support thereof, as set forth in § 269b.520.

§ 269b.540 Action by the panel.

After considering the hearing officer's report and recommendations, the record, any other documents, any exceptions filed, and any oral argument permitted, the panel shall issue its written decision. Upon finding that the respondent is engaging in or has engaged in an unfair labor practice, the panel shall order the respondent to cease and desist from such conduct and may require the respondent to take such affirmative corrective action as the panel deems appropriate to effectuate the Policy. Such action by the panel may include, but shall not be limited to, orders to provide back pay, provide reinstatement, set aside an election, bargain, and award recognition. Upon finding no violation of the policy, the panel shall dismiss the case. The panel's decision and order setting forth the remedial action, if any, required shall be conspicuously posted by the parties.

COMPLIANCE

§ 269b.610 Procedures.

Where remedial action is ordered or provided for in a settlement agreement, a report to the panel that such action has been taken and that compliance with the decision and orders of the panel has been effected shall be submitted within the period of time specified in the panel's decision. The panel is empowered to utilize whatever administrative procedures it deems necessary to ascertain compliance.

§ 269b.620 Action by panel.

In any case where it is found, after a hearing, that the respondent has failed to comply with the final decision and order of the panel, the panel shall be empowered to take whatever action may be appropriate and shall expect the full cooperation of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System in obtaining such compliance. Among the actions that may be taken by the panel against a noncomplying respondent labor organization, after a show cause hearing, may be suspension of that labor organization's checkoff privileges or recognition as exclusive bargaining representative for such period of time as determined by the panel.

GENERAL RULES

§ 269b.710 Rules to be liberally construed.

(a) Whenever the panel finds that unusual circumstances or good cause exist and that strict compliance with the terms of the rules and regulations in this subchapter will work an injustice or unfairness, it shall construe the rules and regulations in this subchapter liberally to prevent injustices and to effectuate the purposes of the policy.

(b) When an act is required or allowed to be done at or within a specified time, the panel may at any time, in its discretion, order the period altered where it shall be manifest that strict adherence will work surprise or injustice or interfere with the proper effectuation of the policy.

§ 269b.720 Computation of time for filing papers.

In computing any period of time prescribed by or allowed by the panel, the day of the act, event, or default after which the designated period of time begins to run, shall not be included. The last day of the period so computed is to be included, unless it is a Saturday, Sunday, or the applicable local legal holiday in which event the period shall run until the end of the next day which is neither a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday. When the period of time prescribed, or allowed, is seven days or less, intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays shall be excluded from the computations. When the rules and regulations in this subchapter require the filing of any paper, such document must be received by the panel or the officer or agent designated by it to receive such matter before the close of business of the last day of the time limit, if any, for such filing or extension of the time that may have been granted.

§ 269b.730 Number of copies; form.

Except as otherwise provided in the regulations in this subchapter, any documents or papers shall be filed with four copies in addition to the original. All matters filed shall be printed, typed, or otherwise legibly duplicated; carbon copies of typewritten matter will be accepted if they are clearly legible.

§ 269b.731 Signature.

The original of each document filed shall be signed by the party or by an attorney or representative of record for the party, or by an officer of the party and shall contain the address and telephone number of the person signing it.

§ 269b.740 Service of pleading and other paper; statement of service.

(a) Method of service. Notices of hearings, decisions, orders, and other papers may be served personally or by registered or certified mail or by telegraph.

(b) Upon whom served. Unless otherwise provided in the rules and regulations in this subchapter, all papers except complaints, petitions, and papers relating to requests for appearance or production of documents, shall be served upon all counsel of record and upon parties not represented by counsel or by their agents designated by them or by law and upon the panel, or its designated officers or agents, where appropriate. Service upon such counsel or representative shall constitute service upon the party, but a copy also shall be transmitted to the party.

(c) Proof of service. The party or person serving the papers or process shall submit simultaneously to the panel or its designated representative, or the individual conducting the proceeding, a written statement of such service. Failure to file a statement of service shall not affect the validity of the service. Proof of service, except where otherwise provided, shall be required only if subsequent to the receipt of a statement of service a question is raised with respect to proper service.

§ 269b.750 Requests for appearance of witnesses and production of documents.

Parties may request appearance of witnesses and production of documents by filing application therefor, depending upon the stage of the proceedings at which the request is made, with the officer conducting the investigation or hearing, or with the panel. Such application shall name and identify the witnesses or documents sought and shall briefly state the need for such appearance or production. The officer with whom such request is filed shall rule upon each such request and the record of the proceeding shall contain a record of that ruling and the basis therefor. The record shall also contain a statement of reasons for any request for the appearance of witnesses or production of documents initiated by a presiding officer.

SUBCHAPTER B—FEDERAL OPEN MARKET COMMITTEE

PART 270—OPEN MARKET OPERATIONS OF FEDERAL RESERVE BANKS

REGULATIONS RELATING TO OPEN MARKET OPERATIONS OF FEDERAL RESERVE BANKS

Sec.
270.1 Authority.
270.2 Definitions.
270.3 Governing principles.
270.4 Transactions in obligations.

AUTHORITY: Sec. 8, 48 Stat. 168, as amended; 12 U.S.C. 263.

SOURCE: 38 FR 2753, Jan. 30, 1973, unless otherwise noted.

REGULATIONS RELATING TO OPEN MARKET OPERATIONS OF FEDERAL RESERVE BANKS

§ 270.1 Authority.

This part is issued by the Federal Open Market Committee (the "Committee") pursuant to authority conferred upon it by sections 12A and 14 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 263, 355).

§ 270.2 Definitions.

(a) The term "obligations" means Government securities, U.S. agency securities, bankers' acceptances, bills of exchange, cable transfers, bonds, notes, warrants, debentures, and other obligations that Federal Reserve banks are authorized by law to purchase and sell.

(b) The term "Government securities" means direct obligations of the United States (i.e., U.S. bonds, notes, certificates of indebtedness, and Treasury bills) and obligations fully guaranteed as to principal and interest by the United States.

(c) The term "U.S. agency securities" means obligations that are direct obligations of, or are fully guaranteed as to principal and interest by, any agency of the United States.

(d) The term "System Open Market Account" means the obligations acquired pursuant to authorizations and directives issued by the Committee and held on behalf of all Federal Reserve banks.

§ 270.3 Governing principles.

As required by section 12A of the Federal Reserve Act, the time, character, and volume of all purchases and sales of obligations in the open market by Federal Reserve banks are governed with a view to accommodating commerce and business and with regard to their bearing upon the general credit situation of the country.

§ 270.4 Transactions in obligations.

(a) Each Federal Reserve bank shall engage in open market operations under section 14 of the Federal Reserve Act only in accordance with this part and with the authorizations and directives issued by the Committee from time to time, and no Reserve bank shall decline to engage in open market operations as directed by the Committee.

(b) Transactions for the System Open Market Account shall be executed by a Federal Reserve bank selected by the Committee. The participations of the several Federal Reserve banks in such account and in the profits and losses on transactions for the account shall be allocated in accordance with principles determined by the Committee from time to time.

(c) In accordance with such limitations, terms, and conditions as are prescribed by law and in authorizations and directives issued by the Committee, the Reserve bank selected by the Committee is authorized and directed—

(1) To buy and sell Government securities and U.S. agency securities in the open market for the System Open Market Account, and to exchange maturing securities with the issuer;

(2) To buy and sell banker's acceptances in the open market for its own account;

(3) To buy Government securities, U.S. agency securities, and banker's acceptances of the kinds described above, under agreements for repurchase of such obligations, in the open market for its own account; and

(4) To buy and sell foreign currencies in the form of cable transfers in the open market for the System Open Market Account and to maintain for such account reciprocal currency arrangements with foreign banks among those designated by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System under § 214.5 of this chapter (Regulation N).

(d) The Federal Reserve banks are authorized and directed to engage in such other operations as the Committee may from time to time determine to be reasonably necessary to the effective conduct of open market operations and the effectuation of open market policies.

[38 FR 2753, Jan. 30, 1973, as amended at 39 FR 11873, Apr. 1, 1974; 48 FR 32336, July 15, 1983]

PART 271—RULES REGARDING AVAILABILITY OF INFORMATION

Sec.
271.1 Authority.
271.2 Definitions.
271.3 Published information.
271.4 Records available to the public on request.
271.5 Deferment of availability of certain information.
271.6 Information not disclosed.
271.7 Subpoenas.

AUTHORITY: 5 U.S.C. 552.

§ 271.1 Authority.

This part is issued by the Federal Open Market Committee (the "Committee") pursuant to the requirement of section 552 of Title 5 of the United States Code that every agency shall publish in the FEDERAL REGISTER for the guidance of the public descriptions of the established places at which, the officers from whom, and the methods whereby, the public may obtain information, make submittals or requests, or obtain decisions.

[32 FR 9518, July 1, 1967, as amended at 38 FR 2754, Jan. 30, 1973]

§ 271.2 Definitions.

(a) "Information of the Committee". For purposes of this part, the term 'information of the Committee" means all information coming into the possession of the Committee or of any member thereof or of any officer, employee, or agent of the Committee, the Board, or any Federal Reserve bank, in the performance of duties for, or pursuant to the direction of, the Committee.

(b) "Records of the Committee". For purposes of this part, the term "records of the Committee" means rules, statements, opinions, orders, memoranda, letters, reports, accounts, and other papers containing information of the Committee that constitute a part of the Committee's official files.

[32 FR 9518, July 1, 1967, as amended at 38 FR 2754, Jan. 30, 1973]

§ 271.3 Published information.

(a) Federal Register. To the extent required by sections 552 and 553 of Title 5 of the United States Code, and subject to the provisions of §§ 271.5 and 271.6, the Committee publishes in the FEDERAL REGISTER, in addition to this part,

(1) A description of its organization;

(2) Statements of the general course and method by which its functions are channeled and determined;

(3) Rules of procedure;

(4) Substantive rules of general applicability, and statements of general policy and interpretations of general applicability formulated and adopted by the Committee;

(5) Every amendment, revision, or repeal of the foregoing; and

(6) General notices of proposed rule making.

(b) Policy record. In accordance with section 10 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 247a), each annual report made to Congress by the Board includes a complete record of the actions taken by the Committee during the preceding year upon all matters of policy relating to open market operations, showing the votes taken and the reasons underlying such actions.

(c) Other published information. From time to time, other information relating to open market operations of the Federal Reserve Banks is published in the Federal Reserve Bulletin, issued monthly by the Board, in such Board's annual report to Congress, and in announcements and statements released to the press. Copies of issues of the Bulletin and of annual reports of the Board may be obtained upon request.

[32 FR 9518, July 1, 1967, as amended at 38 FR 2754, Jan. 30, 1973]

§ 271.4 Records available to the public on request.

(a) Records available. Records of the Committee are made available to any person, upon request, for inspection or copying in accordance with the provisions of this section and subject to the limitations stated in §§ 271.5 and 271.6. Records falling within the exemptions from disclosure set forth in section 552(b) of Title 5 of the United States Code and in § 271.6 may nevertheless be made available in accordance with this section to the fullest extent consistent, in the Committee's judgment, with the effective performance of the Committee's statutory responsibilities and with the avoidance of injury to a public or private interest intended to be protected by such exemptions.

(b) Place and time. In general, the records of the Committee are held in the custody of the Board, but certain of such records, or copies thereof, are held in the custody of one or more of the Federal Reserve Banks. Any such records subject to this section will be made available for inspection or copying during regular business hours at the offices of the Board in the Federal Reserve Building, 20th and Constitution Avenue, Washington, D.C. 20551, or, in certain instances as provided in paragraph (c) of this section, at the offices of one or more designated Federal Reserve Banks.

(c) Obtaining access to records. Any person requesting access to records of the Committee shall submit such request in writing to the Secretary of the Committee. In any case in which the records requested, or copies thereof, are available at a Federal Reserve Bank, the Secretary of the Committee may so advise the person requesting access to the records. Every request for access to records of the Committee shall state the full name and address of the person requesting them and shall describe such records in a manner reasonably sufficient to permit their identification without undue difficulty. The Secretary of the Committee shall determine within ten working days after receipt of a request for access to records of the Committee whether to comply with such request; and he shall immediately notify the requesting party of his decision, of the reasons therefor, and of the right of the requesting party to appeal to the Committee any refusal to make available the requested records of the Committee.

(d) Appeal of denial of access to records of the Committee. Any person who is denied access to the records of the Committee, properly requested in accordance with paragraph (c) of this section, may file, with the Secretary of the Committee, within ten days of notification of such denial, a written request for review of such denial. The Committee, or such member or members of the Committee may designate (pursuant to § 272.4(c) of its Rules of Procedure) shall make a determination with respect to any such appeal within 20 working days of its receipt, and shall immediately notify the appealing party of the decision on the appeal and of the right to seek court review of any decision which upholds, in whole or in part, the refusal of the Secretary of the Committee to make available the requested records.

(e) Extension of time requirements in unusual circumstances. In unusual circumstances as provided in 5 U.S.C. 552(a)(6)(b), the time limitation imposed upon the Secretary of the Committee or the Committee or its designated representative(s) in paragraphs (c) and (d) of this section may be extended by written notice to the requesting party for a period of time not to exceed a total of ten working days.

(f) Fee schedule. A person requesting access to or copies of particular records shall pay the costs of searching and copying such records at the rate of $10 per hour for searching and 10 cents per standard page for copying. With respect to information obtainable only by processing through a computer or other information systems program, a person requesting such information shall pay a fee not to exceed the direct and reasonable cost of retrieval and production of the information requested. Detailed schedules of such charges are available upon request from the Secretary of the Committee. Documents may be furnished without charge or at a reduced charge where the Secretary of the Committee or such person as he may designate determines that waiver or reduction of the fee is in the public interest because furnishing the information can be considered as primarily benefiting the general public, or where total charges are less than $2.

[32 FR 9518, July 1, 1967, as amended at 38 FR 2754, Jan. 30, 1973; 40 FR 7897, Feb. 24, 1975]

§ 271.5 Deferment of availability of certain information.

(a) Deferred availability of information. In some instances, certain types of information of the Committee are not published in the FEDERAL REGISTER or made available for public inspection or copying until after such period of time as the Committee may determine to be reasonably necessary to avoid the effects described in paragraph (b) of this section or as may otherwise be necessary to prevent impairment of the effective discharge of the Committee's statutory responsibilities.

(b) Reasons for deferment of availability. Publication of, or access to, certain information of the Committee may be deferred because earlier disclosure of such information would:

(1) Interfere with the orderly execution of policies adopted by the Committee in the performance of its statutory functions;

(2) Permit speculators and others to gain unfair profits or to obtain unfair advantages by speculative trading in securities, foreign exchange, or otherwise;

(3) Result in unnecessary or unwarranted disturbances in the securities market;

(4) Make open market operations more costly;

(5) Interfere with the orderly execution of the objectives or policies of other Government agencies concerned with domestic or foreign economic or fiscal matters; or

(6) Interfere with, or impair the effectiveness of, financial transactions with foreign banks, bankers, or countries that may influence the flow of gold and of dollar balances to or from foreign countries.

§ 271.6 Information not disclosed.

Except as may be authorized by the Committee, information of the Committee that is not available to the public through other sources will not be published or made available for inspection, examination, or copying by any person if such information:

(a) Is specifically exempted from disclosure by statute (other than section 552b of Title 5, United States Code), provided that such statute (1) requires that the matters be withheld from the public in such a manner as to leave no discretion on the issue, or (2) establishes particular criteria for withholding or refers to particular types of matters to be withheld; or is specifically authorized under criteria established by an executive order to be kept secret in the interests of national defense or foreign policy and is in fact properly classified pursuant to such executive order;

(b) Relates solely to internal personnel rules or practices or other internal practices of the Committee;

(c) Relates to trade secrets or commercial or financial information obtained from any person and privileged or confidential;

(d) Is contained in interagency or intraagency memoranda or letters, including records of deliberations and discussions at meetings of the Committee and reports and documents filed by members or staff of the Committee that would not be routinely available to a private party in litigation with the Committee;

(e) Is contained in personnel, medical, or similar files (including financial files) the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy; or

(f) Is contained in or related to examination, operating, or condition reports prepared by, on behalf of, or for the use of any agency responsible for the regulation or supervision of financial institutions.

Except as provided by or pursuant to this part, no person shall disclose, or permit the disclosure of, any information of the Committee to any person, whether by giving out or furnishing such information or copy thereof, by allowing any person to inspect, examine, or reproduce such information or copy thereof, or by any other means, whether the information is located at the offices of the Board, any Federal Reserve bank, or elsewhere, unless such disclosure is required in the performance of duties for, or pursuant to the direction of, the Committee.

[32 FR 9518, July 1, 1967, as amended at 38 FR 2754, Jan. 30, 1973; 42 FR 13299, Mar. 10, 1977]

§ 271.7 Subpoenas.

(a) Advice by person served. If any person, whether or not an officer or employee of the Committee, of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, or of a Federal Reserve Bank, has information of the Committee that may not be disclosed by reason of § 271.5 or § 271.6 and in connection therewith is served with a subpoena, order, or other process requiring his personal attendance as a witness or the production of documents or information upon any proceeding, he should promptly inform the Secretary of the Committee of such service and of all relevant facts, including the documents and information requested and any facts that may be of assistance in determining whether such documents or information should be made available; and he should take action at the appropriate time to inform the court or tribunal that issued the process, and the attorney for the party at whose instance the process was issued, if known, of the substance of this part.

(b) Appearance by person served. Except as disclosure of the relevant information is authorized pursuant to this part, any person who has information of the Committee and is required to respond to a subpoena or other legal process shall attend at the time and place therein mentioned and decline to disclose such information or give any testimony with respect thereto, basing his refusal upon this part. If, notwithstanding, the court or other body orders the disclosure of such information, or the giving of such testimony, the person having such information of the Committee shall continue to decline to disclose such information and shall promptly report the facts to the Committee for such action as the Committee may deem appropriate.

PART 272—RULES OF PROCEDURE

Sec.
272.1 Authority.
272.2 Functions of the Committee.
272.3 Meetings.
272.4 Committee actions.
272.5 Notice and public procedure.

AUTHORITY: 5 U.S.C. 552.

SOURCE: 38 FR 2754, Jan. 30, 1973, unless otherwise noted.

§ 272.1 Authority.

This part is issued by the Federal Open Market Committee (the Committee) pursuant to the requirement of section 552 of title 5 of the United States Code that every agency shall publish in the FEDERAL REGISTER its rules of procedure.

§ 272.2 Functions of the Committee.

The procedures followed by the Committee are designed to facilitate the effective performance of the Committee's statutory functions with respect to the regulation and direction of open market operations conducted by the Federal Reserve banks and with respect to certain direct transactions between the Reserve banks and the United States. In determining the policies to be followed in such operations, the Committee considers information regarding business and credit conditions and domestic and international economic and financial developments, and other pertinent information gathered and submitted by its staff and the staffs of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (the Board) and the Federal Reserve banks. Against the background of such information, the Committee takes actions from time-to-time to regulate and direct the open market operations of the Reserve banks. Such policy actions ordinarily are taken through the adoption and transmission to the Federal Reserve banks of regulations, authorizations, and directives.

§ 272.3 Meetings.

(a) Place and frequency. The Committee meets in Washington, D.C., at least four times each year and oftener if deemed necessary. Meetings are held upon the call of the Chairman of the Board or at the request of any three members of the Committee. Notices of calls by the Chairman of the Board to other members are given by the Secretary of the Committee in writing or by telegram. Requests of any three members for the calling of a meeting shall state the time therefor and shall be filed in writing or by telegram with the Secretary who shall forthwith notify all members of the Committee in writing or by telegram. When the Secretary has sent notices to all members of the Committee that a meeting has been requested by three members and of the time therefor, a meeting is deemed to have been called. If, in the judgment of the Chairman, circumstances require that a meeting be called at such short notice that one or more members cannot be present in Washington, such members may participate in the meeting by telephone conference arrangements.

(b) Alternates. Whenever any member of the Committee representing Federal Reserve banks shall find that he will be unable to attend a meeting of the Committee, he shall promptly notify his alternate and the Secretary of the Committee in writing or by telegram, and upon receipt of such notice the alternate shall advise the Secretary whether he will attend such meeting.

(c) Quorum. Seven members (including alternates present and acting in the absence of members) constitute a quorum for the transaction of business; but less than a quorum may adjourn from time to time until a quorum is in attendance.

(d) Attendance at meetings. Attendance at Committee meetings is restricted to members and alternate members of the Committee, the Presidents of Federal Reserve Banks who are not at the time members or alternates, staff officers of the Committee, the Managers, and such other advisers as the Committee may invite from time to time.

(e) Meeting agendas. The Secretary, in consultation with the Chairman, prepares an agenda of matters to be discussed at each meeting and the Secretary transmits the agenda to the members of the Committee within a reasonable time in advance of such meeting. In general, the agendas include approval of minutes of actions; reports by the Managers on open market operations since the previous meeting, and ratification by the Committee of such operations; reports by Economists on, and Committee discussion of, the economic and financial situation and outlook; Committee discussion of monetary policy and action with respect thereto; and such other matters as may be considered necessary.

[38 FR 2754, Jan. 30, 1973, as amended at 44 FR 52823, Sept. 11, 1979]

§ 272.4 Committee actions.

(a) Actions at meetings. Actions are taken at meetings of the Committee except as described below.

(b) Actions between meetings. Special circumstances may make it desirable in the public interest for Committee members to consider an action to modify an outstanding Committee authorization or directive at a time when it is not feasible to call a meeting. Whenever, in the judgment of the Chairman, such circumstances have arisen, the relevant information and recommendations for action are transmitted to the members by the Secretary, and the members communicate their votes to the Secretary. If the action is approved by a majority of the members, advice to that effect is promptly given by the Secretary to the members of the Committee and to the Reserve bank selected to execute transactions for the System Open Market Account. All communications of recommended actions and votes under this paragraph shall be in writing or by telegram; provided that, in exceptional cases when that is not feasible, such communications may be made orally, either in person or by telephone, and the Secretary shall cause a written record to be made without delay. An action taken between meetings has the force and effect of an action at a meeting: Provided, however, That if a meeting is held before the execution of any operations pursuant to the action, the action is null and void unless it is ratified and confirmed by the Committee at such meeting.

(c) Delegations of authority. In special circumstances, the Committee may delegate authority to take an action, subject to such instructions or guidelines as the Committee deems proper. Such delegations of authority may be made to the Chairman; to a subcommittee consisting of the Chairman and the Vice Chairman of the Committee and the Vice Chairman of the Board (or in the absence of the Chairman or of the Vice Chairman of the Board the members of the Board designated by the Chairman as alternates, and in the absence of the Vice Chairman of the Committee his alternate); or to any other member or members of the Committee. An action taken pursuant to such a delegation of authority has the force and effect of an action taken by the Committee.

(d) Effective date. Committee action ordinarily is made effective as of the time it is taken because the nature of the subject matter and the action taken is such that the public interest and the proper discharge of the Committee's responsibilities so require. Occasionally, however, the Committee may specify that an action is to be effective at some different time.

§ 272.5 Notice and public procedure.

There ordinarily is no published notice of proposed action by the Committee or public procedure thereon, as described in section 553 of title 5 of the United States Code, because such notice and procedure are impracticable, unnecessary, or contrary to the public interest.

PART 281—STATEMENTS OF POLICY

Sec.

281.1 Purchase of Treasury bills.
281.2 Policy regarding the Government in the Sunshine Act.

§ 281.1 Purchase of Treasury bills.

The Federal Open Market Committee of the Federal Reserve System has directed the Federal Reserve Banks to terminate the policy of buying all Treasury bills offered to them at a fixed rate of ⅜ per cent per annum and to terminate the repurchase option privilege on Treasury bills. The new policy will apply to bills issued on or after July 10, 1947. Existing policy will continue to apply to bills issued prior to that date.

(Sec. 12A, 48 Stat. 168, as amended; 12 U.S.C. 263)

[12 FR 4543, July 10, 1947]

§ 281.2 Policy regarding the Government in the Sunshine Act.

On September 13, 1976, there was enacted into law the Government in the Sunshine Act, Pub. L. No. 94-409, 90 Stat. 1241 ("Sunshine Act"), established for the purpose of providing the public with the "fullest practicable information regarding the decisionmaking processes of the Federal Government * * * while protecting the rights of individuals and the ability of the Government to carry out its responsibilities."[1] The Sunshine Act applies only to those Federal agencies that are defined in section 552(e) of Title 5 of the United States Code and "headed by a collegial body composed of two or more individual members, a majority of whom are appointed to such position by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate, and any subdivision thereof authorized to act on behalf of the agency."[2]

The Federal Open Market Committee ("FOMC") is a separate and independent statutory body within the Federal Reserve System. In no respect is it an agent or "subdivision" of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System ("Board of Governors"). It was originally established by the Banking Act of 1933 and restructured in its present form by the Banking Act of 1935 and subsequent legislation in 1942 (generally see 12 U.S.C. 263(a)). The FOMC's membership is composed of the seven members of the Board of Governors and five representatives of the Federal Reserve Banks who are selected annually in accordance with the procedures set forth in Section 12A of the Federal Reserve Act, 12 U.S.C. 263(a). Members of the Board of Governors serve in an ex officio capacity on the FOMC by reason of their appointment as Members of the Board of Governors, not as a result of an appointment "to such position" (the FOMC) by the President. Representatives of the Reserve Banks serve on the FOMC not as a result of an appointment "to such position" by the President, but rather by virtue of their positions with the Reserve Banks and their selection pursuant to Section 12A of the Federal Reserve Act. It is clear therefore that the FOMC does not fall within the scope of an "agency" or "subdivision" as defined in the Sunshine Act and consequently is not subject to the provisions of that Act.

[2] Government in the Sunshine Act, Pub. L. 94-409, sec. 3(a), 90 Stat. 1241 (1976).

As explained below, the Act would not require the FOMC to hold its meetings in open session even if the FOMC were covered by the Act. However, despite the conclusion reached that the Sunshine Act does not apply to the FOMC, the FOMC has determined that its procedures and timing of public disclosure already are conducted in accordance with the spirit of the Sunshine Act, as that Act would apply to deliberations of the nature engaged in by the FOMC.

In the foregoing regard, the FOMC has noted that while the Act calls generally for open meetings of multi-member Federal agencies, 10 specific exemptions from the open meeting requirement are provided to assure the ability of the Government to carry out its responsibilities. Among the exemptions provided is that which authorizes any agency operating under the Act to conduct closed meetings where the subject of a meeting involves information "the premature disclosure of which would—in the case of an agency which regulates currencies, securities, commodities, or financial institutions, be likely to lead to significant financial speculation in currencies, securities, or commodities."[3]

As to meetings closed under such exemption, the Act requires the maintenance of either a transcript, electronic recording or minutes and sets forth specified, detailed requirements as to the contents and timing of disclosure of certain portions or all of such minutes. The Act permits the withholding from the public of the minutes where disclosure would be likely to produce adverse consequences of the nature described in the relevant exemptions.

The FOMC has reviewed the agenda of its monthly meetings for the past three years and has determined that all such meetings could have been closed pursuant to the exemption dealing with finanical speculation or other exemptions set forth in the Sunshine Act. The FOMC has further determined that virtually all of its substantive deliberations could have been preserved pursuant to the Act's minutes requirements and that such minutes could similarly have been protected against premature disclosure under the provisions of the Act.

The FOMC's deliberations are currently reported by means of a document entitled "Record of Policy Actions" which is released to the public approximately one month after the meeting to which it relates. The Record of Policy Actions complies with the Act's minutes requirements in that it contains a full and accurate report of all matters of policy discussed and views presented, clearly sets forth all policy actions taken by the FOMC and the reasons therefor, and includes the votes by individual members on each policy action. The timing of release of the Record of Policy Actions is fully consistent with the Act's provisions assuring against premature release of any item of discussion in an agency's minutes that contains information of a sensitive financial nature. In fact, by releasing the comprehensive Record of Policy Actions to the public approximately a month after each meeting, the FOMC exceeds the publication requirements that would be mandated by the letter of the Sunshine Act.

Recognizing the Congressional purpose underlying the enactment of the Sunshine Act, the FOMC has determined to continue its current practice and timing of public disclosures in the conviction that its operations thus conducted are consistent with the intent and spirit of the Sunshine Act.

REGULATION T—PART 220

Part 220 (Regulation T) was revised at 48 FR 23165, May 24, 1983. To facilitate an understanding of the new regulation, this comparison chart published at 48 FR 32978, July 20, 1983, provides a cross-reference of section numbers in the old Regulation T to their corresponding section numbers in the new regulation. This comparison chart set forth below serves as an aid to the user in tracing the regulatory treatment of specific issues addressed in Regulation T.

REGULATION U—PART 221

Part 221 (Regulation U) was revised at 48 FR 35076, Aug. 3, 1983. To facilitate an understanding of the new regulation, this comparison chart published at 48 FR 48797, Oct. 21, 1983, provides a cross-reference of section numbers in the old Regulation U to their corresponding section numbers in the new regulation. This comparison chart set forth below serves as an aid to the user in tracing the regulatory treatment of specific issues addressed in Regulation U.

Redesignation Table IV

REGULATION Z—PART 226

Part 226, Truth in Lending (Reg. Z.) published at 34 FR 2002, February 11, 1969, as amended, contained provisions relating to truth in lending and consumer leasing and was effective until October 1, 1982. At 46 FR 20892 and 20951, April 7, 1981, Part 226 was revised and a new Part 213, Consumer Leasing (Reg. M.) was added, both effective April 1, 1981. However, optional compliance with the revised and added regulations was provided for until October 1, 1982 and declared mandatory thereafter. (See 47 FR 756, Jan. 7, 1982).

In the redesignation table set out below, the "New section" column lists those provisions that treat the same subject matter as the old regulatory provisions, whether or not the substance of the rule is the same. Reference to a provision as "deleted" does not necessarily mean that the rule has changed; the old provision may be preserved in the commentary to the new regulation, or it may appear in Regulation M (Consumer Leasing, 12 CFR Part 213), in which case the Regulation M section(s) is listed.

List of CFR Sections Affected

All changes in this volume of the Code of Federal Regulations which were made by documents published in the FEDERAL REGISTER since January 1, 1973, are enumerated in the following list. Entries indicate the nature of the changes effected. Page numbers refer to FEDERAL REGISTER pages. The user should consult the entries for chapters and parts as well as sections for revisions.

For the period before January 1, 1973, see the "List of CFR Sections Affected, 1949-1963 and 1964-1972," published in three separate volumes.
